THE BARTLETT TRAGEDY

Both the Victims Well Known in Dunkirk, N. Y.

THE MURDERER'S EARLY LIFE

No Apparent Cause for the Triple Crime—Letters from San Francisco to the Bartletts' Friends Speak of the Couple as Living Happily Together.

DUNKIRK, N. Y., Nov. 1.—James H Bartlett, who shot and killed Lotta Carpenter, his wife's niece, wounded his wife, and then killed himself at his home in San Francisco on Sunday morning was born in 1847 in Leona, four miles south of Dunkirk, where his widowed mother, nearly 80 years of age, and a half brother, S. E. Bartlett, are now living. James spent very little of his life at home, his most important journey being as first assistant engineer with the Jeannette Polar expedition.

His wife was Miss Estella N. Lord, daughter of the late Daniel Lord, a hardware merchant of Dunkirk.

She was married to Bartlett on April 11, 1887, he having previously secured a divorce from his first wife, whom he deserted before making his voyage to the Arctic.

Immediately after the marriage they departed for the Pacific coast, where Bartlett had a Government appointment as inspector of coal at Mare Island and San Francisco. His wife's letters to her friends in Dunkirk have been filled with praise of her husband, whom she has always described as exceedingly kind and careful of her happiness.

A friend who visited her last spring reported them as a very happy couple, and the husband as devoted to the comfort of his wife.

Lotta Carpenter, the young victim of the bullet, was the youngest daughter of the late Charles Carpenter, whose wife was a sister of Mrs. Bartlett. She was a bright and pretty girl of 18 years. Three weeks ago a Dunkirk friend received a letter from Mrs. Bartlett, in which she wrote her usual praises of her husband, and said,

"Lotta is with us. She has come to stay and we have adopted her. She is a great comfort to us. She is so good and thoughtful of our wishes and Jim thinks so much of her. She is as our own daughter."

Lotta's father died in Omaha last summer and her mother is now living in Rock Springs, Wyoming, with her only son, Lord Carpenter, and her eldest daughter, Mrs. Clyde Carpenter, who is a school teacher.

Mrs. Bartlett's father, Daniel Lord, was one of Dunkirk's oldest citizens. He did a large hardware business and owned real estate, and the family had one of the pleasantest, most hospitable homes of the time. But the burning of his store in 1868 was followed by a series of misfortunes and he engaged temporarily in other business. He lost his life in December, 1868, in the collision of the steamers United States and America in the Ohio River, as he was on his way to visit his daughter in Evansville, Ind. His wife, who was a daughter of the late Erastus Tucker of Geneva, N. Y., died a few years afterwards.

Later Mr. Carpenter's family came to Dunkirk and remained for a time with Mrs. Carpenter's sisters, but soon after Estella's marriage to Bartlett they all moved West, having disposed of their Dunkirk property, excepting the homestead. This was burned in March, 1891. Last summer Mr. Carpenter died, and now the grievously afflicted family have this terrible blow to endure. To the mother of Mr. Bartlett the news is a terrible shock, as she idolized her wayward son.

A HAMLET WIPED OUT.

Every House in Newbuck Mountain, Pa., Destroyed by Fire.

HAZLETON, Pa., Nov. 1.—Early yesterday morning the house occupied by Andrew Sultz on Newbuck Mountain was discovered to be on fire. An alarm was promptly given, but the fire spread rapidly, the occupants being rescued with difficulty.

A high wind was blowing, and the drouth-afflicted village was without water. So quickly did the flames spread that the 14 houses composing the place were soon enveloped, and in two hours the little town was razed to the ground.

Nothing could be done by the people, and the sturdy miners sought only to save what household effects they could. Some succeeded in rescuing their belongings, but the greater number lost their entire furniture and clothing, practically all they possessed.

The houses were built and owned by the Mill Creek Coal company.

Incendiarism Rampant.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Nov. 1.—Another incendiary fire occurred here last night, being the fifth one since Saturday night. This fire originated in an empty house belonging to Dr. V. W. Mather, totally destroying it and three stables, with contents, making an aggregate loss of $3,000. The town seems to be infested with firebugs. There have been 20 incipient and successful fires within the past month.

The Water Declared Unfit for Use.

COATESVILLE, Pa., Nov. 1.—The residents of this place are much exercised over their water supply. The local Board of Health has had an examination made of the water in their reservoir and pronounce it unfit for use. Yesterday a party of engineers commenced to look into the matter of a new supply from Rock Run, a mile from the town.

Their Charred Bodies Found.

ST. JOHNSBURY, Vt., Nov. 1.—The bodies of James Mitchell and Mrs. Marshall have been found in the ruins of the Caldbeck building burned in Sunday night's fire. The two were seen at a window and urged to jump, but they refused for some reason or other and fell back into the flames before ladders could be secured and firemen get to them.

Ten Farm Buildings Burned.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 1.—Ten large buildings on the farm of De Hart Voorhees at Franklin Park, near here, were burned to the ground yesterday. Some of the machinery was saved. Much grain and wheat was lost. The origin of the fire is unknown. The loss is $10,000, partly covered by insurance.

REID AND DEPEW IN ITHACA.

The Candidate Says West, Northwest and New England Are Solid for Him.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 1.—Whitelaw Reid and Chauncey M. Depew spoke at a large gathering here last night. Among other things Mr. Depew said:

"I have nothing but kind words for my friend, Mr. Cleveland. I have known him a great many years.

"When he sent that message to Congress for free trade it was courage, but when he came to write his letter of acceptance it was not the same old Cleveland at all. It is not the Cleveland that I described in that speech which has been published in Democratic papers and about which so much has been said. The peculiarity of that speech is that I did not make it."

Mr. Reid, whose speech did not occupy over 30 minutes, said in part:

"I beg to say to you that, in my belief, with the possible exception of Nevada, the West and Northwest is solid. I beg to say to you that, on the other hand, the returns which the committee have indicate that, for the first time, New England is now solid."

Big Election Bets.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—Horace Disston, a prominent Republican of this city, has deposited $10,000 with a banking firm to cover a Cleveland bet of the same amount. It is said that the Gloucester magistrate, William J. Thompson, is on the Democratic end and to a very large amount. Magistrate Durham bet $10,000 with David McMahon, a contractor, in the Highway Bureau yesterday that Harrison will be elected.

Mr. Cleveland to Speak in New Jersey.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Mr. Cleveland in all probability will speak in his native State, New Jersey, before election. The report that he may do so has given rise to a desire for him to visit Connecticut, which he may yet conclude to do.

CHARLESTON'S CELEBRATION.

Her Gala Week Auspiciously Commenced—The Sumpter Bombardment.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 1.—Charleston's gala week was opened yesterday by the formal call of Commander Brownson of the Vesuvius upon the May or of the city. The officers of the warship were then escorted to St. Charles Hotel where they were cordially welcomed by the Gala Week association. They were afterwards driven around the city and last night witnessed the Venetian display and illumination which inaugurated the festival.

The city is decorated with the national colors from the Old Ramparts to the Battery. Incoming trains bring thousands to the scene. Bands of music are stationed at all the parks.

Much criticism is occasioned by the press despatch from Washington that the United States vessels would leave the harbor if any part of the programme involved the firing upon the Stars and Stripes. In this connection it is stated that the bombardment of Fort Sumpter next Thursday will be simply a pyrotechnic picture of an event that belongs to the history of this country.

There has been a great demand for United States flags for decorative purposes—so great that dealers have telegraphed to the factories to replenish their stock.

The presence of the United States warships in Charleston's harbor is such an unusual event that it constitutes the main attraction of the festival.

May Reopen the Schuylkill Canal.

READING, Pa., Nov. 1.—There is a rumor here, which appears to be well founded, that the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad company intends reopening the Schuylkill canal next year for an extensive traffic in coal, when a large number of boats will be added to the fleet now using this waterway. The proposed move, it is learned, is for the purpose of relieving the main line of the road, which has been so crowded for some time as to result in frequent obstructions of the tracks.

Murderer Lingo's Second Trial.

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 1.—The second trial of Francis Lingo, the negro who was convicted of the murder of Mrs. Annie Miller, near Merchantville, two years ago will begin here to-morrow before Judge Garrison in the Camden county Supreme Court. It is evident that the case will excite as much interest as did the first trial. The jurors will be deprived of their votes on Nov. 8.

Hazleton's Scant Water Supply.

HAZLETON, Pa., Nov. 1.—Much apprehension is felt here over the scarcity of water. Streams are almost dried up, and the reservoir is nearly empty. Water is allowed to run through the supply pipes only for a short time mornings and evenings. Industrial establishments using steam are embarrassed by the lack of water. Some of them have already been compelled to shut down.

Murderer's Case Appealed.

BALLSTON, N. Y., Nov. 1.—Justice Stover has denied the motion for a new trial in the case of Giacomo Martelle, who was convicted last Friday of the murder of Giovanni Percello, and sentenced to be electrocuted at Dannemora prison during the week beginning Dec. 11. C. H. Tefft, counsel for Martelle, at once served notice of appeal.

Losses of the Hartford Companies.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 1.—The losses to Hartford fire insurance companies by the great fire in Milwaukee are as follows: Hartford Fire, $50,000; National, $25,000; Ætna, $15,000; Phœnix, $45,000; Orient, $30,000. The Scottish Union and Lion companies, of Great Britain, whose agencies for the country are in Hartford, lose $20,000 each.

THE POLITICAL ARENA

"Cleveland Not In It," Say the Republicans.

WALKOVER FOR US, SAY DEMOCRATS.

Opinions of Distinguished Visitors at the National Headquarters—Big Election Bets—Magee's Efforts in Alabama—Secretary Foster Begins His Western Tour.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—A feeling of certainty of the success of Harrison and Reid pervades National Republican Headquarters to-day. The principal source of the increased confidence of the last two days is found in the results of Saturday's registration in the State of New York.

The last week of the campaign will be signalized by unflagging energy on the part of the campaign managers and greater activity all along the line. More speakers than ever will be at work in the doubtful States and the finishing blows of the campaign will be delivered with effect.

Ex-Senator Edmunds of Vermont in speaking of the prospects of the coming election, said: "All my information and all my belief and all my judgement and all my hopes are in favor of our success. For our cause is right and our candidates are right and I cannot believe that the people of the United States are either ignorant or crazy."

Chairman Carter has received a letter from Hon. John H. Finerty, of Chicago, in which he says: "My recent visit to Chicago for the purpose of registering has greatly raised my expectations of Illinois. I think the Gubernatorial issue is comparatively safe for us, and I never have had any doubt as to the favorable outcome of the electoral vote for the Presidency. There is everywhere a decided movement toward the Republican party among the Irish-Americans. Many of this class of voters have attended our meetings. Taken for all in all, I am most hopeful of victory."

Senator Paddock, of Nebraska, writes to Chairman Carter as follows:

"Nebraska has had during the past eight weeks the first active precinct-to-precinct canvass in its history. The State is surely safe for Harrison and Reid by from 8,000 to 10,000 majority. Thousands of the old soldiers will leave the People's party and return to their old allegiance, disgusted by the treatment of Gen. Weaver in the South.

"My advices from Kansas are that the Republican ticket will receive 15,000 majority. I consider the West safe for the ticket."

Hon. R. C. Kerens, member of the Republican National Committee has returned to National Headquarters from his western journey. He accompanied Gov. McKinley on his trip across Missouri.

"In the history of the politics of Missouri," said Mr. Kerens, "there has never been anything like the intense enthusiasm which marked Gov. McKinley's trip. At all the stations along the route he was greeted by immense crowds of people, and the speeches made by him and those with him were listened to with the eager interest that foretells conviction."

Col. Kezens was feeling very jubilant over what he considered certain indications of success.

DEMOCRATIC FORECAST.

Cleveland to Have at Least Eight Majority in the Electoral College.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—The managers of the Democratic National campaign expect to win the election with at least eight and possibly twenty-seven electoral votes to spare. They have refrained from making positive claims and giving figures until absolutely sure of the result.

To-day the managers at headquarters say that Cleveland and Stevenson are certain to get 231 electoral votes, as follows:

The Solid South	150
New Jersey	10
Indiana	15
Connecticut	9
Total	231

There are 444 electoral votes and 223 are necessary to a choice. The above estimate gives Cleveland and Stevenson eight votes to spare if all the other electoral votes are cast for Harrison and Reid. But the Democratic managers say that Weaver will get anywhere from thirty to fifty electoral votes, which will further reduce the votes of Harrison and Reid.

Hugh Wallace, National Committeeman from Washington, is at National Headquarters looking after the canvass on the Pacific slope. He says that Harrison and Reid will lose twenty votes to the fusion ticket west of the Rocky Mountains.

In several of the Pacific slope States the Democrats have combined with the People's party on electoral tickets for the purpose of cutting down the Republican vote in the Electoral College, and they are confident of getting twenty votes in that section.

In Minnesota the Democratic managers say Harrison will lose four votes, and they are confident he will lose Nebraska and possibly the Dakotas.

Magee's Efforts in Alabama.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 1.—Chris Magee, the Pennsylvanian, is here, and will remain until after the election. His mission is to endeavor to get the straight Republican ticket withdrawn so as to unite all anti-Democratic forces in support of the fusion ticket put out by the People's party, Kolbites and Mosely Republicans, in the hope of carrying Alabama for Harrison. The Stevens faction of the Republican party have not yet withdrawn their nominees, except in the Fifth Congressional District.

MRS. MAREAN'S CRIME.

Little Doubt That the Cambridge Matricide is Insane.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 1.—It is evident that Mrs. Mary Marean, who yesterday murdered her mother, Mrs. Brownlee, with a heavy iron furnace shaker, is insane, or was temporarily so when she committed the deed. The old lady's head was pounded almost beyond recognition.

Mrs. Marean says that early in the morning she and her mother were chatting pleasantly when the old lady kissed her and told her she was a very dutiful daughter. The murderess then said:

"As mother started to go up stairs. I walked up behind her and struck her on the head with a wrench."

After the police had a talk with Mrs. Marean, she apparently began to realize what she had done, breaking down and acting in a pitiable manner.

It was learned later on that the woman had a severe attack of the grip two years ago and never fully recovered from its effects. Of late she has shown signs of insanity, but did not seem violent and her mother had no trouble in controlling her.

The medical examiner of the district, as well as an expert on insanity, were notified of the murder and an examination of Mrs. Marean's mental condition was made.

She is about fifty years old, and is the widow of the late George D. Marean.

One of the neighbors says that Mrs. Marean came into her house and calmly informed her that she had killed her mother.

Her bearing was so composed and she seemed so unconcerned that the neighbor thought she was only joking, but upon Mrs. Marean insisting that she spoke the truth, the neighbor went to the Marean house and there found the corpse of Mrs. Brownlee.

The horrified woman quickly notified the police.

Mrs. Marean made no attempt to escape, and apparently took no interest in what was going on around her.

THE WATER FAMINE.

Situation Serious in Many Places in Pennsylvania.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 1.—Water is becoming a scarce article, owing to the continuance of dry weather. All over Western Pennsylvania much inconvenience is being occasioned by the drying up of the sources of supply, and the precious fluid has, in many instances, to be transported for miles. A heavy rainfall is, therefore, awaited anxiously.

Along the line of the Pennsylvania railroad between this city and Altoona the effects of the drouth are particularly felt.

Both the railroad and a number of towns between these points are experiencing the unpleasant sensation of having to hustle for their water supply. At two points on the Pittsburg division it is found necessary to bring water from miles away by trains. At Gallitzin, the highest point in the Allegheny Mountains, water is also at a premium these days, and the supply is brought from Portage, ten miles distant.

The city reservoir in Altoona is proving entirely inadequate to furnish the city. In fact, but a few inches of water is in it and the reservoir of the Pennsylvania railroad has been called upon.

The same story is told in other towns. In Greensburg the local water company is unable to furnish a full supply to its patrons, and many of them have been compelled to fall back upon their wells. Irwin is in the same condition, as the people of that place secure their water from the same company that supplies Greensburg.

Minister Washburn Resigns.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 1.—Hon. J. D. Washburn, of this city, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Switzerland, has sent in his resignation to the President, dating his letter Oct. 29. This is in accordance with a determination expressed some time ago, when he asked for leave of absence and returned to this country. He was appointed to the post March 11, 1889. His reasons for resigning are of a business nature.

A Camden, N. J., Vessel Wrecked.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—The schooner Mattie E. Hills, Capt. Ireland, bound for Newburne, N. C., with salt and molasses consigned to Roberts Brothers, of that place, has stranded at Currituck Inlet, N. C., and became a total loss, together with her cargo. The crew was saved. The lost vessel hailed from Camden, N. J., and was owned by Roberts Brothers. She was built in Salem, N. J., in 1874.

The Bark Tucker Arrives All Right.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Oov. 1.—The bark A. R. Tucker, of this port, about which considerable anxiety has been felt by her owners, has just arrived from Hudson Bay. She brings 250 barrels of whale oil, 4,500 pounds of whalebone, 260 pounds of ivory and four casks of furs. She encountered a succession of gales on her passage. She sailed from this port April 2, 1891.

Five Burned to Death.

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 1.—In an unknown manner the house of George Gage took fire yesterday, and Mrs. John Gage and her 6-months-old child, and also two children of Mrs. George Gage—aged 2 years and 5 days, respectively—were burned to death. John Gage inhaled the flames and will die. Mrs. George Gage, who is ill from confinement, is in a critical condition from the shock.

Defaulting Bank Clerk Arrested.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 1.—Women and wine caused Bank Clerk Charles Voight to steal $8,000 from the Wilkesbarre Savings bank. He escaped and has been at large a year, but yesterday was arrested in Elmira, N. Y. He had been living the life of a tramp, and traveled over the whole country to escape the detectives. He comes from a wealthy family.

Tided Over Their Financial Trouble.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 1.—It is announced that Marshall A. Phillips & Co., commission merchants in wool and yarn, of this city, have tided over their financial difficulties, having secured an extension of time from their creditors, and will not, therefore, make an assignment.

Congressman McDonald Very Ill.

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 1.—Congressman E. F. McDonald is resting easier this morning, but Dr. Henry says he is dangerously ill.

FAILED FOR MILLIONS

The Collapse of the Liberator Building Society.

A Deficiency of $15,000,000—Mrs. Deacon Sues Her Husband for Divorce, Alleging Cruelty—Gladstone May Not Attend the Lord Mayor's Banquet—Other Foreign News.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The collapse of the Liberator Building Society, simultaneously with the downfall of the London and General Bank, is likely to prove one of the most gigantic financial sensations of the generation.

The official receiver stated at yesterday's creditors' meeting that the Liberator Society owed the shareholders and creditors $16,565,000, while the reserve fund was only $450,000, and was little better than a mere book entry. The mortgages amounted to $17,115,000, and were at first supposed to be good assets, but investigation had shown that they were probably valueless, as $15,941,490 had been lent to three companies which are now in liquidation.

There were virtually no free assets, there being only $250,000 in sight with which to meet a deficiency of $15,000,000. The bulk of the money had been lent upon nothing better than third liens. It was absurd to talk about possible reconstruction of the Society, for there was nothing to reconstruct.

Criminal prosecution of the directors of the concern will be the next thing in order. It is said that J. Spencer Balfour, M. P., vice-president and real head of the concern, together with several of the directors, has pocketed hundreds of thousands of pounds in the shape of commissions which are now alleged to be illegal.

CREAM'S EXECUTION TO BE PRIVATE

No Opportunity Will Be Given for Farewell Demonstrations.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—It has been decided that the execution of Thomas Neill Cream, the convicted poisoner, will be strictly private. Only the officials whose attendance is necessary will be present, and there will be no opportunity for any farewell demonstrations on the part of the condemned.

Neill continues very morose, and is really beginning to believe that there is no chance for him to escape the gallows.

He has been carefully searched to see if he had any means of suicide hidden away, but nothing was discovered and the officials are convinced that he was confident of acquittal, and thought no precaution necessary.

The authorities are inclined to place very little confidence in Cream's supposed confession. They think it will be a good deal like the pretended confession left behind by the murderer Deeming, and which was destroyed after Deeming's execution. It is possible that the same course may be decided upon in regard to any papers left by Cream.

MRS. DEACON'S COUNTER MOVE.

She Sues Her Husband for Divorce Upon Charges of Cruelty.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—Mrs. Deacon, wife of Edward Parker Deacon, who shot her lover, Abelle, dead some time ago, has unexpectedly brought suit against her husband for a divorce on the ground of cruelty.

The object of Mrs. Deacon's move was to serve the notice after Mr. Deacon had started for Liverpool, where he was going to see two of his children on their way to America.

By serving the notice then it was hoped that Deacon would not be able to make an appearance in Paris to-morrow, and that the case would go against him by default.

Deacon, however, has not left London, and will appear in court on the day of the return of the writ.

TAKING CARE OF GLADSTONE.

Necessary to Nurse His Health With Delicate Heed.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The anxious care taken to nurse Mr. Gladstone's energies is evidenced by his declining to immediately accept an invitation to attend the inaugural banquet of Lord Mayor Knill on Nov. 8.

Sir Andrew Clark, Mr. Gladstone's physician, has prohibited his attending all evening meetings, and will not assent to his presence at the Guildhall banquet until the time approaches, when he will be better able to judge whether or not the Prime Minister should attend the banquet.

There is no precedent for the chief of the Cabinet absenting himself on the occasion of the Lord Mayor's banquet if he is able to appear.

Suggests a Composite Coin.

VIENNA, Nov. 1.—Dr. Theodore Herteka, political economist and writer on the subject of money, in a letter anent the Monetary Conference in Brussels this month, suggests the replacing of gold coins with coins composed of silver and gold, mixed in the proportion of six to one, on the basis of international agreement.

Honoring the Memory of Luther.

WITTENBERG, Nov. 1.—Emperor William and his wife, three of his sons, the Duke of York, and a number of other titled personages took part in the rededication of the church to the doors of which Luther nailed his thesis against Papal indulgences. A pageant in which royalty figured was one of the features.

Col. Dodds Takes Abomey.

PARIS, Nov. 1.—A despatch from Porto Novo states that Col. Dodds captured Hana on Saturday and Abomey on Sunday.

Godfrey Put to Sleep.

CONEY ISLAND, N. Y., Nov. 1.—The fight between George Godfrey and Joe Choynski last night at the Coney Island Athletic club resulted in a victory for the latter in the fifteenth round. Godfrey had the best of the fight up to the last round, when he became angry and started in to rush matters. Choynski was waiting for this very thing, and soon settled his man by a terrific blow on the jaw.

FREE TRADE IMPOSSIBLE.

(From Grover Cleveland's Letter of Acceptance.)

We anticipate with calmness the misrepresentation of our motives and purposes, instigated by a selfishness which seeks to hold in unrelenting grasp its unfair advantage under present tariff laws. We will rely upon the intelligence of our fellow-countrymen to reject the charge that a party comprising a majority of our people is planning the destruction or injury of American interests; and we know they cannot be frightened by the specter of impossible free trade.

"Do they not tell you that Grover Cleveland will carry this State by 10,000, but that they expect to defeat George T. Werts by money! Is not that on every lip! Does it not come to you from your Republican friends! Is this true! Is our liberty, is our right of suffrage, to be wounded and broken down in the person of the father of free ballots, and that by the introduction of large amounts of money in our State!—Attorney-General Stockton's Speech.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

Forecast Till 8 P. M. Wednesday: For New Jersey, Showers Wednesday; Variable Winds.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The gunning season opened to-day, and the woods and fields are full of hunters.

—The letter carriers made fast time this morning. The gates were all off and the dogs had gone hunting.

—The next regular examination for teachers' certificates for Union county will be held at Westfield on Saturday.

—Non residents are liable to a fine of $50 for hunting or fishing in New Jersey without first becoming members of a Game Protective society.

—A hot pin on the rear driving wheel of the fireman's side of passenger engine 620, east-bound, caused a delay of ten minutes at the North avenue station this noon.

—The vote on the Miller case yesterday was 8 for acquittal and 4 for conviction. The four for conviction were Doane, Cash, Dunham and Newman. Through inadvertence the vote as announced yesterday was a transposition.

—A lamp exploded in the apartments over Randolph's grocery at the corner of Madison avenue and Second street last evening. A still alarm was sent to Gazelle engine house, but the fire was subdued before the firemen arrived.

—Colyer & Co. have one of the best and largest assortment of clothing in the State, at their handsome store, 815 Broad street, Newark. They are famous for their honest dealing, and you can be sure that you get what you pay for at Colyer's.

—There was a rousing Democratic meeting at North Branch last night, at which ex-Sheriff Tunison was chairman. Addresses were made by Hon. J. A. Geissenhainer, Assemblyman Beekman, and James E. Martine. The meeting was a most enthusiastic one.

—The New York League of Unitarian Women will meet at the Church of the Messiah, New York, Friday, Nov. 4 at 11 a. m. The programme will include the reading of a paper by Dr. Emily Blackwell on "Heredity and Environment", to be followed by discussion. The members of the Plainfield branch of Unitarian and other Liberal Christian women are cordially invited, as well as others interested.

"A God-send is Ely's Cream Balm. I had catarrh for three years. Two or three times a week my nose would bleed. I thought the sores would never heal. Your Balm has cured me." —Mrs. M. A. Jackson, Portsmouth, N. H.

MAY CHANGE ITS SITE.

THE Y. M. C. A. HAS ANOTHER LOCATION IN VIEW.

Anxious to Build but See no Prospect of the Extension of Broadway for Some Time.

The Y. M. C. A. directors have at last become discouraged by the selfish and short sighted action of the property owners interested in the extension of Broadway, and distrustful of the possibility of the street being widened and opened into North Plainfield within a year or two at least.

They are, consequently, talking of a change of site for the association's handsome new building, and already have one or two other locations in view.

The directors have the money and are anxious to build. The association is sorely in need of a home of its own, and its work and growth is much hampered by its present quarters.

Therefore is it that the matter of another building site is just now the subject of much discussion by the directors of the Y. M. C. A.

CLEVELAND'S PENSION VETOES.

The Ex-President's Chief Clerk Tells of Them, and Others Speak at the Cleveland and Stevenson Club's Meeting.

The Cleveland and Stevenson Campaign club of this city is surely keeping things warm this year. There was another crowded meeting in its rooms last evening and great enthusiasm.

President J. A. Demarest introduced E. C. Perkins as the presiding officer who made a brief and brilliant speech that set before those present the candidates and the past and promised policy of their parties, in such a way that no honest lover of his country would hesitate about his choice, an instant.

Other speakers, were D. I. Murphy, formerly chief of the pension bureau under President Cleveland. He told of the pensions Cleveland vetoed—some being claims made by deserters who had subsequently fought with the rebel army, and others being claims that even Republican congresses had disapproved.

Leonard Cohen, of Westfield, and John T. Dunn, of Elizabeth, the assembly and congressional candidates also spoke and were enthusiastically received.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

The Misses Sutphen and Frank Clawson gave a Halloween party last evening.

Will Rockwell gave a dance to his friends at his home on East Front street, last evening.

Mrs. Abram Fine, of 200 West Front street, is in a critical condition from a second stroke of paralysis.

James E. Martine, of this city, was one of the speakers at a rousing Democratic rally in North Branch, last night.

A surprise party was tendered Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Coyne at their home in the Crescent apartment building, last evening, by a number of their many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton O. Barkalew took possession of their cozy home, 85 Duer street, yesterday, and commenced the pleasantest part of married bliss, housekeeping.

Otto Arens has purchased that very desirable residence site on the west corner of Park avenue and Arlington place, and contemplates erecting a handsome home thereon.

J. L. Hurlbut, D. D., has assumed the continuance of The Visitor, the little church paper founded and published by the Rev. C. B. Mitchell during his pastorate here.

Among the many who gave informal Halloween parties last evening in this city, were: Miss Jessamine Harte, Miss Florence Waring, Miss Marion Bowen and Masters Morris and John B. Dumont, jr.

Miss Lulu Raymond, who takes the leading part in the entertainment to be given under the auspices of the Plainfield Local Union of the Y. P. S. C. E., on Thursday evening, at 8, in the First Presbyterian chapel, is an elocutionist of unusual ability. You will regret it if you do not attend.

Good Charity Work by Juveniles.

At the recent fair at 81 East Second street $16 was cleared for the invalid boy. The managers used the money to buy woolen blankets, quilts, sheets, pillow cases and clothing for the poor little lad. The managers were Frank Dencklau, Dora Bennett and Lizzie Dencklau. They especially thank the stranger who came in late, bought up all the remaining goods, and distributed them among the children.

A Plainfielder Founds a New Town.

Jonas W. Lum, of Union, has sold his farm on Morris turnpike, to A. D. Thompson, of Plainfield, and Silas D. Drake has been engaged to manage its transformation into a beautiful park to be known as Hyde Park, and in the early spring large fine houses and a large country club-house will be erected.

Shiloh's Cough Cure.

This is beyond question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold; a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price, 50c. and $1. If your lungs are sore, chest, or back lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by A. D. Mallinson, 65 North Avenue, opposite railroad station. 5-16-y

I was so much troubled with catarrh it seriously affected my voice. One bottle of Ely's Cream Balm did the work. My voice is fully restored.—B. F. Lispenar, A. M., pastor of the Olivet Baptist church, Philadelphia, Pa.

SPEAKER BERGEN EXPLAINS.

He Concisely and Clearly Tells What Powers the "Coal Bill" Gave, and Why He and Others Voted For It.

The Democrats had a great time in Raritan last night. St. Bernard's hall was packed to the doors with the working people of Raritan who came to learn the truth as spoken by such a man as James J. Bergen.

Upon being introduced he was greeted with much applause as he is well liked in Raritan, and when running has always brought a majority out of the district. After talking at length upon the tariff, the speaker said he would like to explain to the people of Raritan what the railroad-lease bill, improperly called the coal bill, really was. He said that it was nothing more than what the P. R. R., the D. L. and W., and the N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R., had enjoyed for years.

The officers and directors of the C. R. R. of N. J., demanded the same privileges of the legislature as their rivals had, and it was with that idea—after the promise had been made by the leaders that the price of coal would not be increased—that the senate and house of assembly passed the bill. The high price of coal was not owing to the Democratic party but was kept at the top notch only as a political move, and after election coal would come down to a normal figure.

The explanation of Mr. Bergen was so clear and concise that it made many votes for the party in this vicinity. Raritan is Democratic stronghold as a rule, but as George A. Dilts who ran against Mr. Bergen for the Assembly one year ago has the nomination for Sheriff, and is very popular with the masses, the leaders saw fit to hold the big mass meeting in his town in order to turn back the "Doubting Thomases". Aurealis Stewart, of Connecticut, with a powerful stereopticon, illustrated the influences of the McKinley bill upon the interests of the laboring people. As an object lesson it was more influential and wide spreading than words could possibly be.

Music filled in the time between the speeches. Charles Winfield speaks there Thursday night.

A CURIOUS VERDICT.

The Jurors Wanted a Chemist to Decide Druggist Miller's Guilt.

The question in the Miller case yesterday was whether what the druggist sold was whiskey or a cough mixture. The stuff had not been analyzed, and none of the jurors was sufficiently familiar with the taste and smell of whisky to decide what the substance was. Therefore they drew up the following verdict, which will go on record as a curiosity of legal lore:

We, the undersigned, jurors in the case of the city of Plainfield against Frederick A. Miller, for the illegal sale of liquor, hereby find that if upon analysis contents of accompanying bottle contains a medical compound the defendant is not guilty; otherwise, guilty as charged.

Judge Codington very properly declined to accept such a verdict, and on the question of positive guilt the jury could not agree. There will be a new trial Monday.

Plainfield Improvements.

(Elizabeth Real Estate News.)

Improvements are being made on the Terrill road. From South avenue to the Jackson school house it has been covered with crushed stone.

The people living on Woodland avenue have had the pleasure of paying about one-half of the expense of having the avenue cut down to grade.

The gutters on Grant avenue from South Second street to West Front street, have been paved.

Runyon & Mills are building two $4,000 cottages.

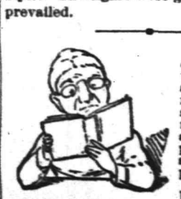
The gate receipts will be divided among the spectators.

Good Time at a "Smoker".

The "smoker" at the Crescent League club-house last night was enjoyed by a large gathering of men. Mr. Green made the address of welcome, Messrs. Barnes and Stevens sang, and the inimitable John Carney gave some very funny recitations. Jones and Leidy boxed four rounds in great shape, and Davis and Adams sparred two rounds in excellent style. The cigars were good, and mirth prevailed.



Doesn't "look" as she ought—the weak, nervous and ailing woman. As long as she suffers from the aches, pains, and derangements peculiar to her sex, she can't expect to.

But there's only herself to blame. With Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, she's a different woman. And it's a change that can be seen as well as felt. The system is invigorated, the blood enriched, digestion improved, melancholy and nervousness dispelled.

With the "Favorite Prescription," all the proper functions are restored to healthy action. Periodical pains, weak back, bearing-down sensations, nervous prostration, all "female complaints" are cured by it. It's the only medicine for women's peculiar ills and ailments that's guaranteed to do what is claimed for it. If it doesn't give satisfaction, in every case for which it's recommended, the money is returned.

Can something else offered by the dealer, though it may pay him better, be "just as good"?

ALL OPINIONS ASKED.

BOROUGHITES URGED TO BE PRESENT OR WRITE.

Mayor Saunders and the North Plainfield Council Want to Hear the Expression of all Interested For or Against, Before Voting on the Street Railway Franchise.

On Friday of this week the ordinance granting a franchise to the Street Railroad company to operate a road on Somerset street will come up for final passage before the North Plainfield council. Notwithstanding the fact that the matter has been fully advertised and invitations extended to the public to be present, it is desired to again urge all citizens of the Borough who are interested in the subject, either for or against the road, to be present on Friday next, as it is the intention of the Mayor to call for an expression of opinion from the citizens before the vote on the franchise is taken. Those who cannot be present or who do not care to be present will oblige the council by sending written communications on the subject.

Mayor Saunders at first thought of subjecting the case to a vote of the people, but those who consider the matter will conclude that such a course is not just or practicable. A man who owns no property should not have an equal voice with a property holder. A man who owns property in the Park should not have a vote equal to that of a property owner on or near Somerset street. Then, again, the question of how much property a man owns, and how far it will be affected, is one impossible to arrange on any fair basis which would give any value to a popular vote on the subject.

The Borough council proposes to specify a rail which will offer little or no obstruction in the street to the passage of vehicles or bicycles at any angle. This rail will be superior to the one now in use in Plainfield, and in view of the fact that there will be a single track it is believed that, notwithstanding the narrowness of Somerset street, the road will be in no way objectionable.

STAND BY THE TICKET!

A few days only remain before the date of the National, State and County elections, and it behooves every Democrat and lover of good government to urge and influence every voter to support the nominees which will be found at the head of these columns.

The election of Grover Cleveland and Adlai E. Stevenson to the Presidency and Vice-Presidency we believe to be an assured fact.

There is no question, either, about the election of Judge George T. Werts for Governor, if every Democrat will go to the polls and do his duty. With such a candidate against him as John Kean, jr., it seems positive that he will carry the grand old Democratic State of New Jersey by 10,000 majority. George T. Werts represents everything that constitutes good and honest government, while his adversary is known as connected with rings and corporations. Is it possible that the State shall go into the hands and under the rule of people who advocate John Kean, jr's election! We believe not, and when the smoke of battle has cleared away we predict that George T. Werts will have such a handsome majority for Governor as will surprise his opponents and delight his friends.

The advocates of good government must not lose sight of the fact either that the election of a Democratic congressman is a necessity toward perpetuating Democratic administration. While there may be those who feel aggrieved because their own favorite candidate did not receive the nomination, they must remember that John T. Dunn is a Democrat and has been chosen in Convention assembled, therefore he is entitled to the support of the Democracy. He is certainly qualified for the position and should be elected in this strong Democrat district, as, we believe, he will be.

In James J. Gerber for County Clerk the voters of this county have a man who has before served them in the official capacity of Surrogate. He then proved himself a capable servant of the people and is eminently fitted for the office of County Clerk.

Rowland M. Stover, candidate for Surrogate, is a gentleman well-known to the citizens of Plainfield and county as one who is well qualified and fitted for so important a position. He has before held offices of trust with credit alike to himself and constituents, and should be elected by all means to the important trust to which he has been nominated.

While the Third Assembly district is hopelessly Republican, there have been times in political years when the Democracy have carried it with good nominations. This Democratic year the name of Leonard G. Cohen, sr., is presented, and we can assure the people that he is in every way qualified to fill the important position assigned him.

And now Democrats and conservative citizens, you have a good ticket presented to you for your suffrages. Stop all bickerings and lay aside all differences and vote the ticket presented you, which, under the leadership of that grand National candidate, Grover Cleveland, is bound to win. Vote the whole ticket.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Mr. Robertson Writes.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—At the last meeting of the congregation of the First Presbyterian church to elect a pastor, there were many voters who were not present, there were voters present who did not vote, there were those present who were not voters; this, I think, on account of the want of an exact previous understanding as to who were voters, and second a failure to recognize voting in this matter as a religious duty (and not simply a privilege) that all those and only those who had a vote were directly concerned in and bound to perform.

In the understanding of the writer, each person, regardless of age or sex, who partakes of the Lord's supper in the First Presbyterian church, is a voter, whether he or she pay pew rent or not; and also, among non-members, each person, who is of age (regardless of sex), who pays his or her equal share of the pew rent of the seat he or she habitually occupies is a voter; and a voter must be present at the meeting to vote.

As the meeting is of a purely private nature, all others, I think, should be careful to remain away that evening.

As the object of the meeting is to provide that the pastor be surely elected by the accumulated private opinions of individuals,—that object would be better and more certainly accomplished, I think, by having the main vote a choosing of one man from among all the applicants for the position, (the man securing the majority of votes being elected,) than by centering the interest on one of the available men and putting the question as for or against that one.

In choosing one of all available, a unanimous vote could not be reasonably expected by the man receiving the call.

The writer does not know that the mode of procedure as laid down by the general assembly would permit this way of putting the question.

Immediately after the main question having been voted upon, the writer thinks it childish to put a motion to make the vote unanimous. The vote of those who do their whole duty in the matter is the mature result of their earnest and thoughtful consideration, and they would fail in their duty if they were to act against what, up to a few minutes before, they had believed to be for the best interest of all concerned, without any stronger reason for doing so than that others did not think as they did.

A reconsideration of their vote, based upon some subsequent information received, or some new light thrown upon old knowledge, would, of course, be a different thing; we should all be open to conviction that we were in the wrong.

Also, after the main question having been decided by ballot, it is absurd deciding a motion to make the vote unanimous (if such a motion be put) by an open vote.

Before the meeting, the matter should be discussed thoroughly around the family circle, but not in social or church circles; the voters should come, vote and go home, and give no intimation to any one, as to how they voted; and, if a voter finds himself or herself in the minority, he or she should secretly bow before the majority, and, no matter who is called, he should receive the earnest support of all whether at the meeting they voted for or against him. The majority rules: As far as the deciding of "which man" is concerned—INDIVIDUAL OPINION—After the decision is made—Concerted and unanimous support of the man selected. The methods of the political caucus are not in place.

Hoping that the above may do some little toward causing the result of the meeting to be an expression of the private opinion of each and every voter, I respectfully submit the above to the perusal of all interested. C. J. ROBERTSON.

The Last Week.

The last week of the Presidential campaign opens with a better prospect of Democratic success than has existed since the nominations were made.

The united front and determined spirit of the Democratic party in New York city and Brooklyn, as evidenced by the great meetings and the heavy registration, promise a majority for Cleveland and Stevenson much above the Democratic majority of 1888 or that of last year. Careful and well-informed politicians put the increase in the majority in these two cities over 1888 at 20,000. No intelligent politician believes that Harrison will get within 15,000 of as large a majority above Harlem as he received four years ago.

New York is always a doubtful State in Presidential years until the votes are counted. But the Democratic prospects of carrying it are to-day better than the Republican in the ratio of 10 to 7.

The Democratic prospects are even better in Indiana and New Jersey, and they are at least even in Connecticut. There is little danger of losing a single electoral vote in the South. There is a practical certainty of gaining at least four in Michigan and a strong probability of securing five in Minnesota.

The fusions and the unions at the West threaten the Republicans with the loss of forty-eight electoral votes. Some of the Northwestern States they are certain to lose with more electoral votes than they can gain from States heretofore Democratic.

The weak points in the Republican line are too many and too widely separated to be guarded successfully by any conspiracy of fraud or any outpouring of money. Never before have they had to fight to hold New England, to capture New York, to keep the West in line and to menace the solid South. The revolt against the Republican policy, begun in 1890 and continued last year, still extends over the whole country. There are no signs that the people have changed their minds. The elections of this year and in the coming over of prominent Republicans to the support of Cleveland indicate that the verdict of the last two years will be fully and emphatically confirmed next week.

Unless all signs fail the next President will be Grover Cleveland.—New York World.

Will Be Pleased With the Results.

(New York World Correspondent)

It is somewhat singular that those sagacious Republicans who have so many times run up against Mr. Ross, to their subsequent sorrow, in the Third Congressional district in general and in Middlesex county in particular, have never been able to learn that the ex-Congresseman is often the most busy when he is making the least noise. It is about as good a time now as any to remind them that Mr. Ross and his fellow-Democrats are quite in touch with the political situation in this county and are not worrying themselves in the least about the outcome. Probably no Democratic leader in the State has ever had a more faithful and reliable following than has Mr. Ross. He has attached the Democrats to him by consulting with them and listening to their suggestions and plans of campaign, and by giving them in turn the benefit of his own sagacious political understanding. So that, when he calls upon his friends to get into line, there is no holding back, but a vigorous and united cooperation. That is the situation to-day. It is very doubtful if the Democracy of Middlesex has been more thoroughly united in years than it is now.

When Mr. Ross heard that the Republicans were taking large blocks of stock in his indifference towards the Democratic ticket, he smiled and remarked sententiously:

"Well, you know I said some weeks ago that I was out of politics. I was then—for that time. Perhaps I should not say now that I am actively engaged in the campaign. Maybe Middlesex will not give as large a majority for Mr. Cleveland as it did four years ago, but I think the Democrats of the State will be very pleased with the report from this county on election night."

Uncle John Was Too Generous.

The Newark Advertiser says; "One of the oldest landmarks in the State has just been removed in Plainfield. It is Laing's Hotel, on West Front street. It has a history which is very interesting, going back for over seventy years. The property has been in the Laing family the greater part of that time. In the early part of the settlement of this place there were but very few houses here, and this building was one of the most prominent. It used to be a stopping place for the stage coaches on their way from New York to Philadelphia. 'Uncle John' Laing, as he was familiarly known, was the popular proprietor, and he was known from one end of the State to the other. At that time he was well-to-do, but his generosity was so great that his last years were spent in poverty, and when he died, he was known as a poor man.

"George H. Babcock, a wealthy citizen here, has recently bought the property, and intends to erect a handsome block of buildings."

The Outlook Bright.

"The Democratic outlook, if I may be pardoned for using the expression", said Chairman McDermott cheerfully, "is brighter than ever. I have always felt certain that the State was safe, but now I am assured that we will carry it by such a majority as will surprise everybody. Kean has no earthly show of winning, though one would imagine from the way he is spending money that he is very confident."

CONGREGATIONAL CONFERENCE.

Dr. Richards to Address the Autumn Meeting at Westfield To-Day.

The Northern New Jersey Conference of the Congregational churches are holding their autumn meeting to-day in the Congregational church in Westfield. The conference includes all the churches of North New Jersey, thirty in all.

The sessions are in charge of the moderator, the Rev. William Hayes Ward, D. D., editor of the Independent. The morning hours were occupied by reports from churches, delegates to the national council, and committees. The feature of the afternoon sessions, beginning at 2, is an address by a Presbyterian brother, the Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D., of the Crescent Avenue church, of Plainfield. His subject is "A Larger Parish". It is to be followed by a general debate. The afternoon session closes with what is called on the programme "An Ecclesiastical Clearing-House for New Ideas". This will be under the charge of the Rev. S. L. Loomis, of Newark, and promises to be as lively and full of business as a financial clearing house. At 1 this noon the women of the Westfield church served luncheon to the delegates.

COMMON ENOUGH.

But None the Less Terrible

All forms of headache are of a nervous character, and are caused by a weakness, irritation or disease of nerves of the head.

A headache should never be neglected, as it may lead to serious nervous troubles. To cure such cases it is absolutely necessary to use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

Many persons who suffer from headache have, by repeated failures to find relief, despaired of cure. To such we would say, by all means secure a bottle of this wonderful remedy, and watch its marvellous effects. It is the most perfect cure known for headache. Purely vegetable and harmless. Druggists, $1.00.

"I had sick headache for 14 years, and suffered untold agony and despaired of ever getting cured, having tried many physicians and many different remedies without any benefit. But I am now entirely cured after taking 3 bottles of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Carrie E. Russell, Carteret, N. J."

"For over twenty years my life was made miserable by frequent and terrible headaches. At times they were so severe I feared I would go insane. No one could suffer worse than I did. I bought Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and the very first bottle stopped the headache, and I never had any trouble with my head since that time. After suffering for twenty years I was cured by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Mrs. Mary Green, Basin street, Norristown, Pa."

Dr. Greene, the most successful specialist in curing all forms of nervous and chronic diseases, 35 West 14th street, New York, can be consulted free, personally or by letter. Call or write him about your case or send for symptom blank to fill out, and a letter fully explaining your disease, giving advice, etc., will be returned free.

THE GAMBLING MANIA.

Women and Men in the Billiard Halls of Paris.

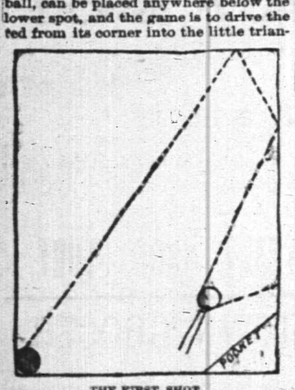
A New Game Played by Two Professionals —How to Lose a Small Fortune in a Few Hours—The Two Shots Explained.

American men in Paris always spend a good deal of their time sitting in billiard saloons. It isn't love for the game itself that drags them from other attractions to sit for hours on little cushioned seats and watch two men play, but, writes the Paris correspondent of the New York World, it is the opportunity which the game affords for gambling that attracts. The visitors do not play themselves; there are too many other things to do and see. But they go into these billiard halls, where there are a hundred seats or so around one table, and sit for hours day after day watching a game and betting on it.

A game lasts usually about three minutes and the average bet of each man on each game is $2, although a man can bet as much as he wishes.

The game is played in this way:

An ordinary table without pockets is used, and the game is played with only two balls, one red and one white. The red ball is jammed close into the lower left-hand corner of the table. Just across, in the lower right-hand corner, a line is drawn with a piece of chalk eight inches from the corner, marking off a little triangular space there, which is called the pocket. The men take turns in shooting. The white, or cue ball, can be placed anywhere below the lower spot, and the game is to drive the red from its corner into the little triangular space marked off, taking two cushions on the way. Nothing less than a two-cushion shot is allowed. The first shot is usually made as shown in the first picture, and men grow so expert at it that sometimes they put the red ball in and win on the first shot. This, however, does not occur oftener than once about every two hundred times. The first shot usually drives the redball up near the lower spot, and then three cushions are taken and the ball driven down towards the triangle pocket, as shown in the second picture.



THE FIRST SHOT.

The average number of shots required to put it in is five, and if the player does not succeed in getting it placed in ten shots the other man takes his turn; so that, taken altogether, the most shots during a game any one man can have is ten. It requires much more skill than is apparent on the surface to make the ball is to be driven [illegible] slowly in any given direction [illegible] struck exactly in the [illegible] it will go off at an angle.

Anyone who has played billiards knows how difficult it is to take [illegible] and strike a ball exactly [illegible] very easy to hit the ball—and [illegible] can do that—but it is very difficult to hit it just right. There is a range of three inches in striking the ball, but in striking it just right the range is not more than one-sixteenth of an inch.

The betting is done this way: The two players stand at opposite ends of the table with a box, and the visitors toss a coin—usually a ten-franc piece—at one end of the table or the other. When the amount of money at each end is evenly balanced the game begins. The house takes out twenty per cent. of the winnings as its fee, so if you win a ten-franc bet you get back as your winnings only eight francs.

Women as well as men crowd these places day after day. The quick action in the thing, the fact that the game is finished in less than three minutes usually, all suit the French taste—and the American taste as well. There is not much opportunity for crookedness among the players, because one can change his bets, and there is no object for one man or the other to throw the game. They are professionals, hired to play as well as they can. They are not allowed to bet themselves, and it is to their interest to play well. The better a man plays the more money he is paid. If he does not play well he is discharged. There are scores of these billiard-rooms all over Paris, and nearly all of them are crowded from noon until two in the morning.

A Costly Animal.

To keep a race horse in even moderate condition, with proper attendance, costs $1,625 a year.

BARREL CLOTHES-HAMPER.

A Neat and Handy Place to Keep Soiled Articles.

A very satisfactory receptacle for soiled clothes can be made by covering a barrel with what used to be called furniture calico, but is now sold under the name of comfortable print.

The barrels that pulverized sugar comes in are of good size for this purpose.

Carefully break off all nails that project, both on the inside and the outside. Line the inside of the barrel with smooth brown paper, or remnants of wall-paper can be used, using flour paste to fasten the paper in. Measure four pieces of print the depth of the barrel, allowing four inches extra for the frill at the top. Join the pieces and run a strong thread around the lower edge to draw it on; fold over two inches at the top and gather like the bottom. Draw this cover over the barrel, even the fullness, and secure it in place with small tacks. Place a two-inch band of silesia around the top and bottom to hide the tacks.

Cover the lid of the barrel inside and out with the print. Make a knob in the center of this lid by putting a screw thorugh the hole in a medium-sized spool and screwing it firmly in place. Cover the spool with silesia like the bands on the hamper.

This makes a neat and handy place to keep soiled articles, and each week, when they are removed, the hamper should be given a few hours' exposure to the sun and air.—Margaret Ryder, in Country Gentleman.

A Lost Opportunity.

Penelope—It's all over between you and Jack then?

Perdita—Yes. He proposed to me in swimming, but I had to say no. If I had said "yes," I'd have swallowed a lot of salt water.

Penelope—Oh, dear! why didn't you nod your head and say "um—hum?"—

Sympathetic Lawyer—My innocent client, gentlemen of the jury, has passed through many tribulations and trials—

Prisoner (interrupting)—Yes, boss, and the worst of it is I allus was convicted.—Texas Siftings.

Saw the Ballet.

Visitor—And so you went to the theater last week. What did you see?

Little Girl—Oh, there was lots of music, an' lots of bathing, but there wasn't any water.—Good News.

His Genius Ably Concealed.

"Why does Phathead say that he's a poet?"

"Because no one gets that idea from reading his poems." — Chicago News Record.

Encouraging.

Mr. Harvard (bashful and about to propose)—I—er—er—nothing!

Miss Vassar—Isn't that tautological? A repeating of words, you know!—Truth.

An Improvement.

He—We have a clock that says "Cuckoo."

She—We are going to get one that says: "What, must you go?"—Life.

STREATOR ON THE STAND

The Colonel's Version of the Punishing of Iams.

FIRST CONSULTED WITH HAWKINS.

The Doctors Were Ordered to See That No Physical Injury Was Inflicted—Col. Hawkins and Gen. Wiley Also Give Their Evidence.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 2.—In the Iams case Col. Streator was sworn and gave details of the movements of his regiment until it encamped. An aide-de-camp imformed him that Frick had been shot and was dead. Col. Streator went into his tent to dress, and then he heard: "Three cheers for the man that killed Frick."

He went out and asked who had made the remark, but no one answered. He ordered the men to their quarters.

Soldiers told him that the remark was made by "the man who had carried the log yesterday."

He then directed the men to form up. He said to each company that he did not think the man knew what his words expressed. He would rather have the man acknowledge that he did it, even though he knew him.

At Company K Iams said: "Colonel, I did it."

The Colonel then said: "Young man, I can't believe that you want to voice the deed of an assassin."

Asked why he did it, Iams said it was because he did not like Frick. He was arrested and sent to the guard house.

Col. Streator then testified to Iams' previous misconduct. He told how Iams had deserted his post when doing guard duty; how he had slept on his post and when accused had made false statements and had been punished by carrying a heavy log.

"After Iams admitted making the remark which led to his punishment," said Col. Streator, "I went to Col. Hawkins. We then decided on the form of punishment. I did not want to do anything until the Captain of Company K could be seen. Col. Hawkins said: 'You know your duty as a soldier.' I then directed that Iams be hung up by the thumbs. I told the surgeons to see to it that no physical injury be inflicted.

"One of the doctors came to me and asked me how long Iams should be kept hanging. I replied, 'Doctor, that rests with you.' The doctor then said that Iams had taken a chew of tobacco and it had made him very sick. I told him then to use his own judgment. The doctor left me and went directly to the guard tent and Iams was cut down."

Col. Streator next read the official report which he had made at the time to Col. Hawkins. The report was returned with the necessary official endorsement and an order from Major-Gen. Snowden that Iams be discharged in disgrace, that his head be shaved and that he be drummed out of camp. This order came from Col. Hawkins and was obeyed.

Col. Streator concluded his testimony by saying that on the day of the hanging of Private Iams by the thumbs it was reported to him that two other soldiers had also made mutinous remarks. One said, referring to Frick's supposed death, "It won't make much difference," and another, "There won't be many tears shed." He talked to them privately, and they expressed sorrow and retracted.

Col. A. L. Hawkins gave testimony in his own behalf and related stories of similar and even more severe punishment inflicted for insubordination during the Civil War. Iams, Hawkins said, was not hung up in the usual way, because he could rest his feet on the ground, whereas the usual manner is to have the feet barely touching the ground. These punishments, he said, were not brutal, but necessary for good discipline.

These punishments are still in vogue in the regular army when it is in active service.

Attorney Frank P. Iams wanted to know where Hawkins got the information that Frick was a law-abiding citizen, as was stated in his order regarding Private Iams' punishment and discharge.

The Colonel had no positive information on the subject, but he thought so. Attorney Iams also wanted to know why regular discharge papers had not been given to Private Iams.

Col. Hawkins replied that it [illegible] necessary in this case. The attorney assumed the position that positive malice was thus shown, as the law specifically provided that regular discharge papers should be given to all soldiers on leaving the ranks.

Col. Hawkins then told of the letter he had received in reference to the trial of duty at Homestead. On the night private Iams was punished a message was flashed from division headquarters at Homestead to Col. Hawkins' headquarters, saying:

"Frick shot by a striker. Great excitement at Homestead and Pittsburg. Be on the alert." Col. Hawkins ordered the guard doubled and gave orders to have all the men in camp. A second order was also sent, said: "Frick is dead. Great excitement in Homestead. Large crowds of men surging through the streets of Pittsburg. Be very vigilant."

Col. Hawkins ordered increased vigilance. While camp was in the excitement proposed three cheers for the man who shot Frick. Lieut.-Col. Streator reported to him that an attempt had been made in the Tenth Regiment to incite mutiny, and that he was investigating the matter.

He reported the arrest of Iams and in a talk about proper punishment Col. Hawkins said to him: "Colonel, you know your duty as a soldier." He did not tell him what to do with Iams, but approved what he did afterward. The situation was critical and prompt measures needed.

Gen. John A. Wiley gave evidence on the rendezvous and orders issued to his brigade.

Perils of the Gloucester Fisheries.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Nov. 2.—The annual resume of the loss of life and property in the Gloucester fisheries shows a loss of 12 vessels, aggregating 77,791 tons, valued at $50,000 and insured for $38,237. No lives were lost by the wrecks, but 18 fishermen lost their lives by the capsizing of their dories, five by going astray in fogs, five knocked overboard and eight washed overboard, and 10 by other causes, making a total of 46.

BIG BLAZE IN CHICAGO.

The Athletic Association's New Building, Under Construction, Destroyed.

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—The beautiful new home of the Chicago Athletic Association, on Michigan avenue, between Washington and Madison streets, was destroyed by fire which started shortly after 2 a. m.

The building when completed would have been the finest athletic club house in the world and probably the most magnificent club building of any character. The contemplated cost was $500,000.

The loss on the building is estimated at from $75,000 to $100,000.

Probably as heavy a loss as that upon the club has been inflicted upon the panorama of the Chicago fire one door south of the athletic building.

This immense cyclorama cost $250,000 and tons of water has been thrown amongst its fragile beauties. Just what the loss will be, S. S. Burr, the manager, declined to discuss, but he shook his head when $80,000 was suggested.

One of the officers of the Athletic Association, who was early on the scene of the fire, hinted at incendiarism.

With the exception of the steamfitters, all the building trades were called off the new athletic building Monday afternoon by the business agent of the Building Trades' Council.

The trouble grew out of the employment of non-union men, and originated with the electrical workers.

It is known that plasterers had been at work in the seventh and eighth stories, and when they left in the evening had left salamanders burning to dry their work. It is probable that the fire originated from the salamanders.

BIG SYMPATHETIC STRIKE.

The Various Departments of the Building Trade in New York at a Standstill.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—The gigantic strike which has been threatened for the past week of all the building trades in sympathy with the striking electric wiremen has assumed shape, and thousands of workingmen are idle.

The proffered aid of the Walking Delegates of the Building Trades' Union was accepted by the Electric Wiremens' Union, and a general sympathetic strike was ordered.

John Yates, Secretary of the Executive Committee of the Electric Wireman's Union, said that he believed that fully 7,000 men were now out in consequence of this last move.

It is impossible to estimate accurately the number of men who have gone on a strike in the building trades, and nothing can be learned definitely until the walking delegates report at the strikers' headquarters.

It is believed that within a few hours work in the various departments of the building trades in this city will be at a standstill.

RAILROAD CONSOLIDATION.

The Fitchburg Line Swallows Up Two Other Companies.

ALBANY, Nov. 2.—The Secretary of State placed on file yesterday a certificate of consolidation of the Fitchburg railroad company of Massachusetts, the Boston, Hoosac Tunnel & Western railroad company and the Troy, Saratoga & Northern railroad company of this State. The new corporation is to be styled the Fitchburg railroad company. The roads form a continuous and connecting link.

The directors for the consolidated company for the first year are the following: Henry S. Marcy of Belmont, Mass.; Robert Codman and David P. Kimball of [illegible] Rodney Wallace and Charles T. FREE TRADE IMPOSSIBLE.

(From Grover Cleveland's Letter of Acceptance.)

We anticipate with calmness the misrepresentation of our motives and purposes, instigated by a selfishness which seeks to hold in unrelenting grasp its unfair advantage under present tariff laws. We will rely upon the intelligence of our fellow-countrymen to reject the charge that a party comprising a majority of our people is planning the destruction or injury of American interests; and we know they cannot be frightened by the specter of impossible free trade.

"Do they not tell you that Grover Cleveland will carry this State by 10,000, but that they expect to defeat George T. Werts by money? Is not that on every lip? Does it not come to you from your Republican friends? Is this true? Is our liberty, our right of suffrage, to be wounded and broken down in the person of the father of free ballots, and that by the introduction of large amounts of money in our State?—Attorney-General Blockton's Speech.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

Forecast Till 8 P. M. Thursday: For New Jersey; Rain; Colder on Thursday; High Northeasterly Winds.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—There will be a devotional meeting at 3:30 to-morrow afternoon in the W. C. T. U. rooms.

—The regular sewing meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary society will be held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church, Friday afternoon.

—The Democrats of New Market will have a rousing ratification meeting to-morrow night. Good speeches, and music by the band, is the programme.

—Before his departure, the Rev. Charles B. Mitchell of the M. E. church, gave photographer Langhorne some sittings that resulted in very desirable pictures.

—Complaint is made of the macadamizing of sidewalks on Westervelt avenue near Jackson. The stone used is very rough and sharp, and cuts shoes to pieces. A top dressing should be laid.

—Cranford has decided to take twenty-five fire hydrants from the Union Water company at an annual rental of $25 each. That's $10 a hydrant more than Plainfield pays the same company.

—The fall meeting meeting of the Plainfield City Union of King's Daughters will be held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church, to-morrow at 3. All members of the order are cordially invited to be present and to remain to an informal tea.

—Joseph W. Ballantine has been re-elected chairman of the Somerset County Democratic committee and C. V. D. Corle secretary. L. V. Kline, of North Plainfield, has been elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of John Becker, jr.

—The long-continued dry spell has made the fallen leaves so crisp that every footstep makes a rattling noise that scares game, and therefore rabbit hunters yesterday did not have much luck. Besides, moisture is needed for a good scent, and under the circumstances the dogs are not to be relied on.

—William H. Brower & Sons, of Broadway and Fifth avenue, who were the florists that made so grand a display in the way of decoration at the recent Squires-Howard wedding, will exhibit a vase and a bouquet at the Madison Square Garden Friday. Last year the firm was awarded first prize for the handsomest table completely furnished, set and decorated.

GROOM 19, BRIDE 15.

ABRAHAM AND LILIAN WEDDED LAST NIGHT.

The Rev. Cubberly Ties the Knot, the Band Turns Out and Plays, While Burning Leaves and Fire-works Light All the Sky Ablaze.

The inhabitants of New Market were aroused somewhat from their slumbers last night, and the quietude of that little village was stirred to a considerable extent, from which all hands have not yet fully recovered.

At the home of the bride occurred the marriage of Miss Lilian Mackland to Abraham Nelson, both of New Market. The bride is 15 and the groom 19, and both are well-known young people of their native place as well as Plainfield. It was a quiet wedding—or at least so intended to be. It, however, turned out otherwise.

Friendship band of New Market attended a political meeting in the village early in the evening during which time the rumor spread that young Abe Nelson was to be married. He is a member of the band, and as he did not make his appearance with the others little doubt was left in the mind as to the truth of the report. Therefore at 9 the musicians marched to the bride's home and serenaded the new couple. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson came out and invited the band in where they were treated in royal fashion. In return the band played everything in its repertoire four times over and kept the town awake for hours.

The couple were married by the Rev. J. A. Cubberly, pastor of the New Market Baptist church. It was a very pretty home wedding. Among the few relatives and friends present were: Mr. and Mrs. Mackland, parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. J. Y. Rupple, Mrs. Nelson, mother of the groom, and Mr. Nelson, grandfather of the groom, Miss Nelson and Miss Lillian Waglow, all of New Market.

After the ceremony a delightful supper was served. Throughout the evening there were bon-fires and pyrotechnics ablaze outside, enlivening the occasion. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson will reside with the bride's parents for the present. They have the best wishes of a host of friends. The groom was for some time in the employ of Dickinson, the Plainfield jeweler, but left to accept a more lucrative position in the Pond works, where he is still engaged.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

H. P. Reynolds is recovering steadily and satisfactorily.

Bishop John Vincent will be the guest of Mulford Estil, at dinner, to-night.

Miss Minnie Wyckoff, of Bedminister, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hodge, at their home on Somerset street.

Arthur W. Tyler, who instituted the public library in this city, is visiting his relative, Col. Mason W. Tyler.

Richard Coriell, of Liberty street, who has been so seriously sick for some time, is no better, and his death is expected any time.

District Deputy Grand Master Anthony Schoder visited Jerusalem lodge last evening. The E. C. degree was worked on a new candidate.

The Newark Evening News rightly says that John H. VanWinkle of Plainfield is one of the most popular members of the Union county bar.

Mrs. Abram Fine, of 200 West Front street, who was stricken with paralysis on Saturday, is slowly sinking and no hopes are entertained of her recovery.

Miss Mamie Titsworth, of Dunellen, eldest daughter of the late Dr. Titsworth, will be married to-morrow evening to Prof. Green, of New York State.

Mayor Saunders will be one of the speakers at the North Plainfield Democratic association rooms to-morrow evening. It will be the last meeting of the association before election.

Thomas Caulfield died yesterday at the home of his parents, 67 West Third street, in the seventh year of his age. Funeral services will be held at the house to-morrow afternoon at 2:30.

William Cuthbertson, brother of Mrs. Charles W. Runyon of this city, and son of conductor Alexander Cuthbertson of the 12:56 Royal Blue Line train from Plainfield to New York, is dangerously ill of typhoid fever at his home in Philadelphia.

The fall meeting of the Plainfield city union of King's Daughters will be held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church to-morrow afternoon, at 3. All members of the order are cordially invited by the secretary, Louise K. Green, to be present and remain to an informal tea.

Fred Jones has a new dog of which he is very proud. He brought it with him from Brooklyn, Monday, and intends to use it to keep the boys away from his best girl. James J. Corbett has the only brother of the dog, and values it highly. Its breed is bull-terrier all through.

Miss Annie Oakley, (Little Sure Shot) America's representative lady shooter, has returned from Europe with her manager, Frank E. Butler, after a most successful tour of three years, and intends purchasing and settling on a small farm near Plainfield, if she can find a suitable one. This little lady has many warm friends here.

WESTFIELD'S BOY FIREBUG.

County Detective Keron Clears Up the Mystery of Incendiary Barn Burning.

The people of Westfield for the past month have been alarmed by the number of fires in the village, all of which had the appearance of being of incendiary origin.

On the 20th of October the barn of ex-surrogate Addison S. Clark was burned, and a few nights later that of Oliver M. Pierson. They were both large buildings, filled with grain and stock. Two smaller barns were destroyed, and a horse and wagon were consumed.

Prosecutor Marsh's attention being called to the matter, he notified county detective Keron, who on Monday afternoon went to Westfield, and in his investigations located the perpetrators of the crimes, and obtained a confession from the ringleader and prime instigator, a boy of the name of Charles P. Donnelson. He is only twelve years of age, but has a bad reputation. He was about a year ago sentenced to the State Reform school by Judge McCormick.

In the latter part of September the boy's mother obtained his release from the institution on the promise of his reformation. This clemency to the lad, however, was a mistake, and from the commission of the petty crime of which he was accused, he has now developed into a greater criminal.

He made a confession and said he fired the barns "to make a light and see a run of the firemen."

His confession makes as his accomplices his brother Fred. and a boy of the name of John Tobin. They are both much younger, and the officials have decided that it is not wise to prosecute them.

Charles Donnelson was, however, arrested and he will be sent back to the Reform school.

BY THE WAY.

—Weather permitting, the Street railway company will run their cars up East Front and through Peace street, to-morrow.

—The Democratic candidates of Somerset county will all be present at to-morrow evening's meeting of the North Plainfield Democratic association.

—Residents living on South Second street can boast of having coal free of charge. Young and old were seen this morning helping themselves off the cars.

—The trial of Michael Watson for illegal liquor selling is again adjourned for a week because of the absence in Trenton, this morning, of the corporation counsel.

—Thomas Carty has leased two of the fine new stores at Central avenue and Second street, and will open a first-class grocery establishment therein, as soon as completed.

—Hank Huff was found drunk on Front street last night at 12, and told to go home. He refused and the police took him in. This morning judge Codington fined him $5 which he paid.

—At the court holding session in Vincent chapel and connected with the M. E. church, a case of horse stealing will come up Friday evening at 8. Judge Codington, with a mixed jury, will sit on the case.

—An entertainment similar to the one given by the Crescent League, at its clubhouse, last Monday evening, will be given at the same place next Monday. The members have the privilege of inviting their friends.

—Last night about twenty of the young people of Evona met and organized a society under the name of the Evona Social club. The purpose of the members is to meet every fortnight, play games and enjoy themselves generally.

—There will be a bowling match on the Crescent League alleys this evening by the following members: Thiers, Vail, Wood, Davis and VanWinkle against Hallock, Lyman, H. Doane, Haven and Barnes. Game called at 9.

—The Borough committee on the Duer street extension met yesterday. Maps were ordered made by F. A. Dunham. The committee are pushing the matter as rapidly as possible, and are proceeding strictly according to the law.

—George Conover, the North Plainfield liveryman, has leased A. D. Thompson's stables, 31 North avenue, opposite the railroad station. He has a new stock of horses and wagons, and makes a specialty of gentle horses for ladies driving. He has a hack at the station at all hours, or can be reached by telephone call, 44.

—Mr. Demarest takes pleasure in announcing to the citizens of Plainfield, a new course of the delightful and instructive lectures of H. H. Ragan, at Music Hall, beginning the evening of the 16th inst. Those who have attended the former lectures by Mr. Ragan will need no further announcement to secure their patronage. Each lecture was received with increasing enthusiasm, and there was a sense of gratitude to the management, freely expressed, for having secured such an intensely interesting and profitable series of entertainments. The present course, as advertised, promises to be equal if not superior in interest to all preceding efforts, as it will include Paris, the Magnificent, Shakespeare & the Avon, The Hudson, Lake George & the Adirondacks, and Treasures of the Rockies. This assuredly promises varied and delightful entertainment.

You're through with Catarrh, finally and completely,—or you have $500 in cash. That's what is promised you, no matter how bad your case or of how long standing, by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

Catarrh can be cured. Not with the poisonous, irritating snuffs and strong, caustic solutions, that simply palliate for a time, or perhaps, drive the disease to the lungs—but with Dr. Sage's Remedy.

The worst cases yield to its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties. "Cold in the Head," needs but a few applications. Catarrhal Headache, and all the effects of Catarrh in the Head—such as offensive breath, loss or impairment of the senses of taste, smell and hearing, watering or weak eyes—are at once relieved and cured.

In thousands of cases, where everything else has failed, Dr. Sage's Remedy has produced perfect and permanent cures. That gives its proprietors faith to make the offer. It's $500, or a cure. They mean to pay you, if they can't cure you.

THAT NEW ENGINE HOUSE.

Four Architects in Competition to Erect at Last a Public Building of Credit to the City.

Councilmen Erickson, Marsh and Bird composing the fire department committee, received on Monday night plans in competition from architects Marsh, Clum and Foegate of this city, and Barlow of New York, for the new engine house that the city proposes to erect on Second street between Park avenue and Peace street, on the lot purchased after the sale to G. H. Babcock of the present location of No. 2's house on Front street. No decision will be made for some days yet. This committee has a chance to erect a public building that will be a credit to the city. The people trust they will avail themselves of the opportunity.

PLAINFIELD'S REGISTRATION.

Almost Half the Increase in the Whole City, Shown in the Fourth Ward.

Yesterday was the last day of registry in Plainfield, and the books closed with an increase of 613 over the total of four years ago. The comparison of the present and the two past presidential years, is given below. It will be noticed that in 1892 the fourth ward increase is more than double any other ward:

SEWELL'S PLANS AND TOOLS.

Here's the Reason the Railroads are Unitedly Supporting Johnnie Kean and Other Republican Nominees.

It is said to be for Boss Sewell that he has with great ability combined in favor of his friend, Harrison, and his tool, Kean, the active efforts of every railroad corporation in the State of New Jersey.

When a common purpose animates the Reading railroad, which wanted to lease the coal roads, and the Pennsylvania railroad, which opposed that lease; when those who profited by the Coal Combine, and those who would have lost by it, are united to defeat the Democratic party, it is not difficult to discover the animating cause.

The railroads are essentially selfish.

Outside of business rivalry, they have a common aim, and that is to hold their own supremacy over other interests and other forms of business.

The railroads have but partially assented to the law which compels them to pay a decent proportion of the taxes. They hate Governor Abbett who pushed that law to a successful culmination; they desire to have that law modified.

Mr. Franklin Murphy, of the Republican State committee, has urged with considerable force the doctrine of the Republican State platform that the people pay the railroad taxes; and the Republican papers have laid the ground for a repeal of the railroad tax law by cunning arguments against it as only another method of taxing the people and property of the State.

General Sewell and the Pensylvania railroad never accepted the new law as an effective amendment of the charter of the United companies, but have always paid the taxes under that law, under protest.

Now that Sewell is in control of the Republican machine in New Jersey, he nominated for Governor John Kean, a creature and beneficiary of the railroad corporations of the State; he nominates for Senator and Assemblymen upon the Republican ticket those, and those only, whom his own experience shows he can control.

Having done this, he shows to the railroads that their interests will be best served by electing John Kean as Governor, and a Legislature which will send Sewell to the United States Senate, and be otherwise pliant to his control when in his old place—the railroad lobby.

He does this the easier because the record proves that George T. Werts is an independent man, uncontrolled by the corporations, and intent only on doing his duty to the whole people; and because a Democratic Legislature first forced the railroads to their duty and have since held them there.

This is why the railroads are unitedly supporting the Republican nominees in New Jersey, and the same fact furnishes enforced reasons why the people in self-defense should elect a Democratic Governor and Legislature.—True American.

A PLAINFIELD CAPTAIN WITH FEW EQUALS.

Young Waring Destined to be Heard From Next Year in Some Crack College Team.

A despatch from Worcester says that the Worcester Academy foot-ball team of 1892, of which L. E. Waring of this city is captain, bids fair to be one of the finest foot-ball teams placed in the field by any "prep" school in New England. The team is composed of large men, the line averaging 164 pounds and the backs 147 pounds. The team is being coached by C. J. Stone of Harvard and H. W. Poore of Bowdoin, one devoting himself to the line and the other to the backs.

The school is very fortunate in having such a fine captain in young Waring, who has very few equals in any school in New England. He thoroughly understands every point in the game, and has his men under complete control. Next year he will undoubtedly be heard from in some college, as he has the stuff in him for a Varsity man, his only drawback being his weight.

Says Kean's Money Is Buying Up Foreigners.

The Newark Evening News is a John Kean paper, yet it says: "There was a big rush for naturalization papers this morning at the County Clerk's office at Elizabeth. A noteworthy feature is the large number of Poles, Hungarians and Italians that are being made voters.

"The Republicans seem to have captured most of these new voters, as they come to the Clerk's office in squads of about half a dozen each in charge of a trusty agent, who presents for each of his men cards issued by the Republican County Committee. Never before has there been such a rush for citizenship papers. It looks as if the Republicans are making big inroads in the ranks of the new voters this year, chiefly those from Italy and Russian-Poland. The Republican agents seem to be plentifully supplied with money and appear to have great control over the men they bring to be naturalized. In every case the agent in charge of a squad is of the same nationality as the parties he is looking out for."

HOW DIGNITARIES WERE BROUGHT.

Magnificent Trains Run Over the Pennsylvania System.

One of the most important and successful features in connection with the dedicatory exercises of the World's Fair grounds, and one which fully illustrates the wonderful progress which the country has made within the last half century, was the movement made by the Pennsylvania Railroad company of the cabinet officers, the supreme court justices, and the diplomatic corps from Washington to Chicago and back. It required three special trains to perform this function, and vice-president Frank Thomson, to whom the credit of the achievement is due, made requisition on the Pullman Palace Car company for the finest equipment which those famous car builders could produce. The result was a triple section train such as has never before glided over the rails in any country. A crew of twenty-five persons, including stewards, cooks, waiters, porters, maids, electricians and machinists, in addition to the usual quota of trainmen, was required to insure perfect service. The outfit resembled in a somewhat lessened degree the personal equipment of an ocean greyhound, of which the trains were a duplication on land.

These trains were provided and tendered for the use of the distinguished guests of Chicago by Vice-President Thomson. They were run from Washington to Chicago as sections of the regular "Chicago Limited", of which they were duplicates, and they conformed to the regular schedule of that train. With the thorough organization of the Pennsylvania Railroad company and its splendid system they came through the entire distance, on the special schedule time arranged for them, without accident or delay of any kind, and this in the face of extraordinarily increased passenger traffic. The great line is in such excellent physical condition, so well protected by the safeguards of modern invention, and so perfectly managed by a corps of men who have been educated and trained under the eyes of its high officials, that a movement of this kind, extraordinary as it may appear to the public, was effected without interfering in any manner with the routine of everyday traffic.

It is safe to say that while no other country in the world would be able to move the entire organization of its government a distance of one thousand miles, so there is no other railroad company which could grapple with such a problem and solve it with the ease to the persons in interest and the credit to itself that has distinguished this achievement of the Pennsylvania railroad. It reflects the utmost credit on Vice-President Thomson, who planned, and his associates, who executed the brilliant feat of railroad transportation, and holds out a bright promise of equally successful work when the resources of this line will be drawn upon next year to furnish adequate transportation facilities to the hosts who will visit the world's greatest fair.

WARE THE WOLVES.

A Republican success on the State ticket means that New Jersey will again be cursed with a Republican State legislature. But surely our people cannot have forgotten that such an assembly in 1888 was by far the worst in the way of corruption and political rottenness that this (or any other State) ever saw. The same set of men, under the leadership of Gen. Sewell, is again seeking to get rich at the expense of the taxpayer and by the same means. This damning evil can be averted only by snowing Mr. John Kean, jr., under and triumphantly electing Judge Werts and the entire State Democratic ticket. If not, then those whose fault it is will have no reason to complain when they find themselves devoured by the ravening wolves to whom they have delivered the State and its inhabitants as a prey. If Jerseymen are wise, they will not give the greedy crew a chance to exist.—Elizabeth Herald.

Republican Boodle.

It is claimed that the Republicans will have $600,000 to spend in the State of New Jersey on the election. Thanks to the Ballot Reform law which Judge Werts drew and a Democratic Legislature passed, they will not be able to make the corruption fund help them as much as they hope. Some "smart politicians" may line their pockets with some of the boodle, but the Democrats will watch the ballot boxes, and see that Cleveland and Werts get pluralities in the State. It would be a shame and disgrace if New Jersey should go behind her traditional record politicially. All friends of honest government should be on the watch for the boodlers, and give them a little benefit of Judge Wert's Ballot Reform law.

The New Piccadilly Overcoat.

Every year the fashion plate comes out with the same old style of overcoats, cut long, cut short, cut medium, so that it is more the idea of the wearer than the skill of the tailor in furnishing a handsome overcoat.

This does not satisfy Watson and Company of Newark, who want to give their customers something entirely new and different from what they can find elsewhere.

They have hundreds of the cut long, cut short, cut medium overcoats like others have, only they are made up in better form; but they have also the advance styles of the new Piccadilly overcoat at $15, now the coming garment, which next year everybody will want.

You many see one in some of their Broad or Market street windows, but it is no sure thing, as they are picked up as fast as their tailors finish them, and they cannot hurry them, as among all their skilled cutters they only have one man who has the knack of cutting them correctly. Let somebody try to copy these new Piccadilly overcoats, or try to cut them by machine, and see if they do n't wish they had let Watson and Company have the market on them this year, which they are likely to have any way.

I suffered for two weeks with neuralgia and Salvation Oil gave me immediate relief. Mrs. William C. Bald, Mosher st., Baltimore, Md.

THE OVERPOWERING ISSUE.

Mr. Cleveland Tells That it is the Saving of the States From a Drenching of Bribery and Corruption.

Grover Cleveland made a great speech last night at the business men's monster rally at the Lenox Lyceum in New York. He emphasized the declaration that there is only one issue now before the people—the issue of honesty—the saving of the States of New York and New Jersey from a drenching of bribery and corruption. The tariff and the force bill are not in it. Men of integrity, however, are united to save the republic.

Ex-President Cleveland speaks well. Even while he was speaking the reports were circulating that the Republicans were still piling up the money to purchase the votes of the people. The New York World to-day gives the figures of the fund that has been raised for use in New Jersey. Gen. Sewell expects to have spent $600,000 here by the time the sun goes down next Tuesday. He has already got $40,00 from the National committee and has been promised $60,000. Johnie Kean, the railroad candidate for Governor, has spent $75,000, and there is plenty more where that came from. Still for all that the Democrats are not alarmed in little New Jersey. They set the majority for Cleveland at 8,000 and for Werts, their candidate for Governor, at 5,000, and they will get it, too.

LOCAL HUNTERS' LUCK.

The Rabbits so Thick They Trip Up Freeholder Vanderbeck, but Charley Smith's Disgusted.

Freeholder Vanderbeek and his nephew "Andy" killed thirteen bunnies with their little shot-guns near South Branch, Tuesday. They report the rabbits so thick that the little fellows tried to trip them up. The grounds they shot over are posted, so do n't all rush to South Branch.

Charley Smith and a quintette of friends returned from a day's shoot at Chester, Morris county, Tuesday night, disgusted with the results of their efforts. They intended to stay three days. They report the game all shot off, and yet no arrests are made of pot hunters.

The gunning season opened Tuesday, and the woods were full of shooters, who report, however, a scarcity of game. Also, the weather being so dry, it was almost impossible for trained dogs to take scent. We hear it frequently urged that a law be enacted prohibiting the shooting of game for a term of years to replenish the shooting grounds. Whether such a law would be beneficial or not, is a question. There is plenty of law now to apprehend and punish pot hunters and violators of the law, if it was only enforced. This would give the game a chance to increase, and furnish pleasure to the true sportsman.

There are more farmers' lands posted this year in the State than in any previous ones. The reason is that hordes of gunners run over the farmers' lands, tearing down fences and destroying other property, which has incensed the owners to such an extent that they propose to enforce the law on trespass, reserving the shooting privileges for their friends. Many have become members of game protective societies, which gives them power to arrest without warrant any person violating the game or fish laws. A non resident has no right to shoot or fish in this State unless he first becomes a member of a game protective society under a penalty of $50. The law should be more rigidly enforced and there would be fewer fences torn down.

GOT OFF VERY EASY.

"Corkey" Goodwin Pleads Guilty to a State Prison Offence, but is Only Fined.

Last Friday evening just after sunset, a young married woman living in the "8 Row" at Evona, was walking along the road near her home when she met John Goodwin of this city, alias "Corkey".

He had been driving a customer home in one of Roberts' carriages and was returning alone. He had stopped his horses and stood near the fence when the woman approached. His actions and suggestions to her were such that she almost fainted from fright, but her screams were heard by Joseph Krewson and others whose speedy arrival saved her from further indignity.

Upon her complaint Monday, Goodwin was arrested and arraigned before the city judge this morning. He plead guilty but said he was so intoxicated that he had no recollection of the occurrence. His sentence was $20 or 20 days. He will try and pay the money.

Halloween Pranks.

The hoodlums of the town were unusually rampant Monday night. Householders who had not taken precautionary measures, yesterday morning found their gates and other outdoor portables in all sorts of queer places, or they found them not at all. Even wagons left standing outside sheds were dragged long distances away. Queer tricks were practiced until midnight.

—A party of bowlers from this city went to Dunellen last evening, and bowled two games on the alleys at Taylor's hotel. There was much enthusiasm manifested. The Plainfielders won both games by the scores of 1,313 to 1,020, and 1,320 to 1,013. There were two five frame games rolled afterward. The first, between MacIntyre and Taylor, was won by MacIntyre, 79 to 67. The second, between Petrie and Young, was won by Petrie, 88 to 72.

WOMAN OF FASHION.

The Gay Panorama Seen on Matinee Day.

What Sort of Gowns Women Are Wearing—Some Queer Combinations in Color—Some Seasonable Advice to Puzzled Womankind.

[COPYRIGHT, 1892.]

Have you ever stood and watched the brilliant throng of matinee-goers on a bright October afternoon? No? Have you never seen the gay procession passing Broadway and Madison square? You may come, then, and take your stand right here, where it's a trifle secluded and where nobody will suspect we're taking notes. Now, isn't it pretty? To be sure, a cultivated taste might be offended by some of the outer combinations; but then, if one does not particularize, but is content to survey the panorama as a whole, one is pretty sure to be charmed, to be interested, to be almost fascinated by the sight. I know that it is one we women never tire of, and one which, I believe, the men take still more delight in—judging from the appearance of club windows—in spite of their protestations against the present ridiculous styles. Even a fashion writer who never does anything or goes anywhere without giving two-thirds of her attention to what the women are wearing, and only the remaining third to what may be going on, is still able to view a throng of brightly dressed women without weariness.

But we are letting the people pass without looking at them. That will never do. This fair lady, for instance, in the striped black and white satin is worthy of mention. The stripes are fine and hang straight, and she has three little satin ruffles at the edge of the skirt—two black and a white one between. Her bodice has a pretty yoke of satin that has a much broader stripe, which runs across instead of down. The little friend that walks beside her wears a long Russian blouse of darkest purple, not quite the royal shade—a little darker. She is so short and the blouse is so long that the skirt beneath is scarcely seen. The royal effect of the purple is heightened by a massive gold belt which sparkles where the sunlight catches it. The edge of the blouse and the neck are profusely adorned with gold and silver passementeries. The girl might look queenly if she were only tall, but alas! I'm afraid she only looks a trifle ridiculous.

What do you think of this woman just behind? Surely she is regal enough in her black velvet bodice, with that yoke all set in rhinestones. Let me see; how many are there? Twelve rows across both back and front, ten in each line. That makes two hundred and forty. Then there are a few more on each shoulder. No wonder she scintillates and sort of dazzles one. Does she look pretty? Well, not exactly; only startling.

Here's a girl that really does look well. Her dress is of some very soft material—we're too far away to see what—of a pale gray shade. It clings, and very closely. There's a dainty puff of pure white velvet at the skirt's edge; the bodice of gray turns back an immense revers of white velvet, and has a narrow white chiffon front. Her big hat of white beaver is all plumes and aigrettes and velvet—everything the one spotless color, not even a touch of gray or of gold.

SCARLET AND JET WRAP.

Her companion is robed all in green—no, not quite all, there are a few touches of black about her. The green skirt is velours, and opens in front over a green satin of the same dark shade, trimmed with black passementerie bands. Her bodice also turns back from a vest of green satin, in revers of the same. Her empire belt is of black velvet, and the very short and full cape, with deep turned down collar, is almost covered by black passementeries.

But, oh! just look at this next gay figure! Isn't she bright, though? Her gown—or all there is to be seen of it—is quiet enough, with its moire and satin stripe in black, and its three tiny ruffles at the edge. But just look at her long cape, in the brightest of scarlets one ever saw. It's most pretty at the neck, too, quite unique, with its high black lace collar that meets the lace ruffle laid around the neck and falling over the shoulders. In the front, you see, this lace is brought all the way down to the edge of the cape in fancy gathers, but in the back, now that she has passed, we see that it is only laid around once, and that the collar and the ruffle are united by a fine jet ornamentation. The back of the wrap has also two wide bands of jet which stand out well on the bright scarlet.

Here comes a pretty blonde in turquoise blue and dark green. Have you seen the new green and blue combinations? There are a great many of them, and they strike you first as being rather queer; but after you've looked at them awhile you begin to feel reconciled, and to think that perhaps after all they may be pretty. But this girl hasn't any of these new shades; her gown is a pale turquoise, and is richly trimmed with a broad band of dark green ostrich feathers. There is a good deal of the ribbon arrangement on the waist, very much after the summer style, and a watteau back of blue trailing only slightly, and almost covered up by the broad edges of a dark green ribbon bow. Her hat is very tiny, all made up of forget-me-nots. Her costume isn't quite the thing for Broadway in the afternoon, but she seems oblivious of this, and saunters carelessly along, letting her train drag whithersoever it will.

Another violet costume. What's the matter? Has purple suddenly become the style without anyone knowing it? It's a redingote directoire, this one, all in velvet, and opens in the back over a bengaline of faint Nile green. We can catch a glimpse of a small ruffle at the bottom, caught with a fine roll of green crepe. The front, too, is the same delicate shade, and has a bodice that seems to be all crepe, confined at one side in a great gold buckle. The redingote has a short pelerine, that stands very high at the shoulders, in consequence of the full velvet sleeves beneath. How the people do stare at her! No wonder she gets impatient at the little dog who refuses to keep pace with her quick, rather reckless step, and no wonder the color mounts to her cheek as she gives his chain an angry pull. Who could be calm and unflurried, I should like to know, robed thus on a crowed thoroughfare? Even her hat is dark violet with pale green tips and gold ornaments.

Ah! here come two bright-looking maidens. They're sisters, one can tell by looking them; both dark, both warmly tinted. The one nearest us is the more attractive. She is robed in a stone-colored gown lightly dotted with dull pink, and touches of pink come out all over her. There's a dull pink ruffle on her skirt; there are great dull pink and stone-colored bows on her shoulders; there's a pointed bodice of dull pink and stone-striped ribbon, and her hat has one touch of pink velvet a trifle brighter, set in a mass of stone color. In her hand she carries an immense bunch of pink roses. How fair and fresh she looks; don't you think so?

Her sister serves as a good foil, with her dark olive dress that has stripes shading off into black and her black hat.

And now, after looking at all these, can you tell what is the style? It is a question that is just now puzzling a great many people, and people, too, that ought to know. One says it's Russian, another says it's empire, another freely acknowledges that she doesn't know. And this last, having thus sensibly made up her mind, proceeds to select from the numerous fads and fancies those things which shall best suit the particular gown she is making for a particular person.

And that, my fair reader, is precisely what I should advise you to do. If you think the empire or one of its numerous modifications will be most becoming to you, you are perfectly safe in getting it. If you prefer a Russian blouse, you will not be a bit old-fashioned in wearing that; and you may select almost any fantasie from any costume you see, and adapt it to another, so long as it be done gracefully and in good taste. It's a broad field, and you may gather a great deal of material, only use common sense in combining it.

EVA. A. SCHUBERT.

Buttons and Combs Made of Blood.

There is a large factory at a small town near Chicago employing about 100 to 150 workers, which is wholly given over to the manufacture of useful articles from waste animal blood. At certain seasons of the year this unique factory uses from 10,000 to 15,000 gallons of fresh blood per day. It is first converted into thin sheets by evaporation and certain chemical processes, and afterwards worked up into a variety of useful articles, such as combs, buttons, earrings, belt clasps, bracelets, etc. Tons of these articles are sent to all parts of the world every year from this "bloody" Sucker state manufactory.

Missouri Monstrosities.

Missouri City, Mo., has a cat with eight legs and four tails; Moberly, Mo., has an albino with pink eyes and white, kinky hair; Springfield, Mo., has a 10-year-old boy who weighs 180 pounds and has two extra fingers and two extra toes; a Daviess county (Mo.) farmer has some corn seventeen feet six inches high, eleven feet to the first ear; a Bates county (Mo.) farmer has some squashes that weigh more than 100 pounds each. It's a great season for freaks in old Missouri.

"CONFIDENCE BEGETS LOVE."

CHILD. "Gran'ma, kiss me good-night. Sister is asleep, but we so love to hear you tell of all the ladies that call you Mother."

MRS. PINKHAM. "Yes, darling, when you are older perhaps you may do as I have done."

CHILD. "Everybody loves you, gran'ma; I wish everybody would love me."

MRS. PINKHAM. "Everyone will love you, my child, if they can confide in you."

The above dialogue tells its own story; even the little child, without knowing why her grandmother is so universally loved, sees in her face a light of intellectual sympathy that satisfies her. That sympathy has extended itself all over the world, for wherever civilized women exist, Mrs. Pinkham is known and reverenced.

DRAWING TO A CLOSE

The Iams Case May be Concluded To-day.

DR. ULLUM GIVES TESTIMONY.

Said That He Told Iams to Feign Sickness so That the Regiment Would Have the Idea He Had Been Severely Punished--Iams Threatened to Shoot Colonel Streator.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 3.—The testimony of Dr. Ullum of Waynesburg, Assistant Surgeon of the Tenth Regiment, in the Iams' trial, created quite a sensation. Dr. Ullum said that the first he knew of the proposed punishment of Iams was when Dr. Neff ordered him to go along to assist in administering the punishment.

"I refused to go at first," said Dr. Ullum. "We argued the matter for some time and then Col. Hawkins came along. The Colonel told me I did not understand my duty; that I was not to assist in administering the punishment, but to seeno harm came to Iams. Dr. Neff and I came to the conclusion that Iams should not suffer. The orders were that he should be allowed to hang as long as he could stand it.

Dr. Ullum also stated that when Iams was cut down he told him to feign sickness so that the regiment would have the impression that he had been severely punished.

E. E. Robbins, counsel for the defendants—what did you tell him that for?

Dr. Ullum—Well, I did not believe in that kind of punishment.

"You sympathized with him because of your long acquaintance with him?"

"No, sir; I sympathized with him just as I would have for any other human being."

On the following Monday Iams told Dr. Ullum that he intended to shoot Col. Streator, and the witness reported the matter to Col. Streator and told him that he should leave Homestead for his own safety, but the Colonel laughed at the matter.

Capt. Cuthbertson, the officer of the day when Iams was punished, said he gave Iams the chew of tobacco which he is alleged to have swallowed for the purpose of making him sick.

Surgeon-Major Neff had charge of the punishment. He said his orders from Col. Streator were to cut Iams down before he was injured permanently. He would have cut him down before he did if Iams had indicated that he was suffering much.

It is expected that the case will go to the jury this afternoon or to-morrow.

SMALL BETS SCARCE.

A Strange Feature of the Present Campaign.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—The most remarkable feature of the present campaign is the almost total lack of small bets among the masses of the people. What are called friendly bets are scarce. This is accounted for by the circumstance that there is less enthusiasm over the election in a spectacular way than has been the case heretofore.

Parades, and especially demonstrative torchlight parades, are, as a rule, prolific of bets, according to old campaigners, and there have been none to speak of this year.

It has usually been the case that the pool sellers, small bookmakers, and others have placed considerable money. This election they have not done so. They are not even taking coin at the rooms in Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth streets and other places where they often were willing to make commissions in placing cash on elections or any other events.

The exchanges and poolmen without offices are sticking to horse race betting exclusively, for they have noticed no opportunities to make money in placing election bets.

THE EARTHQUAKE CELEBRATION

Bombardment of Fort Sumter To-night —No Flags to be Borne.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 3.—The earthquake festival is growing to enormous proportions. Last night the city was practically turned over to the wheelmen of the South Atlantic States. Nearly 500 wheels with lanterns were in the procession. Charleston was specially illuminated for the occasion and more than 40,000 people witnessed the parade.

The bombardment of Fort Sumter tonight will be the crowning event of the week. In order to avoid any misunderstanding, orders have been issued to the participants in the pyrotechnic display that no flags of any kind are to be borne, either in the procession of monitors or in the pyrotechnical floats which will be engaged in the display.

Boyish Prank Ends in Death.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Edward O'Leary, 15 years old, James Healy of the same age, and a 13-year-old boy named John Heffron, went hunting yesterday. On the way home Heffron ran behind a shed in the rear of the Heffron residence, and holding out his hat, dared O'Leary to shoot at it. O'Leary fired and the hat disappeared. On going behind the shed the boys found Heffron dead with a bullet through his skull.

Passenger Killed on the B. & M.

ST. JOHNSBURY, Vt., Nov. 3.—A misplaced switch in the Boston & Maine railroad yard caused a fatal rear-end collision yesterday. A freight train of 21 cars crashed into a passenger train on a side track, instantly killing the only occupant of the passenger train, Mrs. Richard Rogers, of West Concord, aged 45. The Boston & Maine rolling stock was damaged $3,000.

SMASHUP ON THE FORT WAYNE.

Two Express Trains and a Freight in a Wreck at Allegheny.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 3.—A disastrous wreck occurred on the Fort Wayne road at the Washington avenue crossing in Allegheny about 1 a. m. when No. 66 fast freight from the East was hit by the Keystone express from Chicago, due at 12:50, smashing six freight cars and badly wrecking the engine of the express.

In the confusion which attended the accident no precaution was taken to flag the fast express No. 1 out to Chicago, and the train running at terrific speed, crashed into the first wreck, completing a blockade of three tracks.

Engineer Harry Sauerbeck, of No. 1 express, had not time to jump from his cab and was badly crushed. He was taken out a few minutes later and sent to his home on Allegheny avenue.

The fireman, whose name and residence was not learned, jumped from the cab just before the engine struck the wreck, and was badly hurt by falling on the ties.

The engine of No. 1 express was entirely demolished while the contents of the broken cars were scattered around over a great deal of ground.

The passengers in each of the express trains were badly shaken up and many of them rushed out on the tracks in their night clothes.

Some of them received slight injuries.

After about one hour's delay other engines were secured and the tracks cleared sufficiently to allow the passenger trains to proceed on their way.

BLACK HORSE DEFIANT.

The Navajo Chief Refuses to Allow Indian Children to Go to School.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—D. L. Shipley, United States Indian Agent, from Fort Defiance, A. T., under date of October 30, telegraphed Commissioner Morgan, of the Bureau of Indians, that while on a visit to Round Rock to secure Navajo children for the Indian school on the reservation he and his party were intercepted by Black Horse, the chief adviser of the Navajoes, and forty followers, who refused to allow the children to be taken to the agency school although the parents' consent had been obtained.

When told by the agent that sooner or later the children would be compelled to attend school, Black Horse and several of his party laid violent hands on him, intending to kill him, but friendly Navajoes interfered.

At the same time a scout in Agent Shipley's party was assaulted and beaten so severely that his condition is critical.

Under threat of being killed, and powerless to defend themselves, Agent Shipley and party promised Black Horse that they would ask for no more children from that part of the reservation for instruction in the schools.

Agent Shipley requests the aid of troops to force Black Horse and his followers to give up the children.

Commissioner Morgan in discussing the occurence to-day, said that there were 3,000 Indian children of school age and they have a government boarding school on the reservation which is well-equipped, comfortable, and the agent has been instructed to fill the school with children in accordance with the law.

THE PRESIDENT RETURNS THANKS

Public Acknowledgment of the Numerous Cards of Condolence.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The President has made public the following card in response to the innumerable letters and telegrams of condolence and sympathy received by him during the past few weeks.

"The expressions of sympathy with me and with my family in our great sorrow, from individuals, from societies, from church conventions, from public meetings, from political clubs and committees of all parties, and indeed from all our people, have been so tender and so full of respect and love for Mrs. Harrison that I reluctantly abandon the purpose of making a personal acknowledgment of each.

"We are grateful, very grateful, for this great cup of goodwill and for your prayerful intercessions. May God give to each of you in every trial that grace and strength which you have asked for us."

Coal Combine Bill Not Stolen.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Gov. Abbett, of New Jersey, was seen at his office in this city yesterday regarding a published despatch from Trenton, which stated that the original draft of the famous coal combine bill and the message of Gov. Abbett vetoing the same are missing from the State Library. The Governor branded the matter as a lie, and said that he felt satisfied that the bill is still in the keeping of Col. Hamilton, the State Librarian.

John Kean, Jr., at Princeton.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 3.—John Kean, jr., the Republican candidate for Governor, and Franklin Murphy, Chairman of the State Republican Committee, addressed the Republican Club here last evening in the Gymnasium. The building was fairly well filled and the words of the speakers were warmly received. Both spoke on State issues and expressed themselves as confident of a Republican victory at the polls next Tuesday.

The Woman Died of Starvation.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 3.—Coroner Browne held an inquest last night on the case of Mrs. Charles Whyle at Pompton, who it is stated died of starvation. The verdict of the jury was to the effect that the woman died of malnutrition and censured her husband for not providing food. Drs. Brown, Colfax and Morgan held an autopsy and found not the slightest trace of food in the stomach or intestines and the organs mentioned filled with sand.

RIOT RIFE IN GRANADA

Caused by the Queen's Failure to Unveil a Monument.

THE THIRSK RAILROAD WRECK

Ten Killed and Twenty Hurt—Another Wreck Near Liverpool—Mrs. Deacon's Latest Move Balked -- French Operations in Dahomey—Other News by Cable

GRANADA, Nov. 3.—The failure of the Queen to come here to unveil the Columbus and Isabella monument has caused intense bitterness. Great sums had been spent in preparing for the royal party and the excuse found in the King's illness does not satisfy the people.

Last night people gathered in the streets near the monument, and, after holding a short meeting, began to riot and pillage the neighborhood. The royal tribune was burned and the covering was torn from the monument.

The house of the local Conservative leader was stoned and an attempt was made to fire it.

Most of the crowd were provided with whistles and horns which they had intended to use when the Ministers arrived, but the latter, having learned of the rioting, have not started from the capital.

The triumphal arches have been torn down, and the octroi offices have been burned. People everywhere are shouting "Long live the Republic."

The police have charged the mobs repeatedly, and many have been injured.

THE THIRSK DISASTER.

Ten Killed and Twenty Hurt—Accident at Liverpool.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Latest reports of the Thirsk railway accident state that 10 were killed and twenty were injured. Most of the injured will recover within a few days. Several, however, sustained severe burns or fractures of bones.

The switchman supposed to be responsible for the accident has been suspended.

The accident occurred near Thirsk, in Yorkshire, early yesterday morning.

The east coast express train for London left Edinburgh at 10:30 p.m. Tuesday. The express train being unusually heavy, was divided in two sections. The first section proceeded safely to London, arriving at the usual hour.

The second section had over 100 passengers on board, including several noblemen and other distinguished people. The train swept safely through southern Scotland and the extreme north of England.

A thick fog prevailed, and it was difficult for the driver to discern the signals.

Approaching Thirsk the fog was thicker than ever, and at a point about two and a half miles north of that town the signals were entirely obscured, and the express train collided at full speed with a goods train on a siding at Manor House.

The wreck of the express train was complete. The engine, smashed and dismantled, with the carriages after it, toppled over into a field next to the track.

The carriages were broken and jammed together, and most of the passengers were caught in their compartments, as in so many traps.

The wreck took fire instantly from escaping gas, and the smoke and flame, and the shrieks of the dying and wounded made a horrible scene.

Those who managed to extricate themselves uninjured hastened to assist others who were yet alive and caught in the wreck.

It was difficult work, owing to the way in which the carriages were crushed together, and the trouble in opening compartment doors, fastened after the usual British fashion.

Men and women could be heard shrieking for assistance, and one man who was slowly being burned to death, and who could not get out, begged the rescuers to kill him.

The fireman of the train was killed, but the engineer, who jumped at the instant of the collision, escaped with a broken leg.

The Marquis of Tweedale and the Marquis of Huntly, the latter a Lord-in-Waiting to Queen Victoria, were on board the train. The Marquis of Tweedale escaped uninjured, and although an elderly gentleman, he did active service in assisting to rescue others.

The Marquis of Huntly was bruised and had a thumb broken, but suffered no other injury.

Captain Duncan McLeod, of the Forty-second Highlanders, is among the killed.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Another railway accident is reported, this time from Liverpool.

A train on the Mercey railway, loaded with passengers, many of whom had been on the Birkenhead ferryboat when it collided with the ship Eurydice, was leaving the ferry station when it ran into an engine and was badly damaged.

Three passengers were killed and about fifty injured, and some of the injured will die.

When passage on another train was offered to the passengers who were uninjured many of them, having been in the ferryboat collision and the railway collision on the same night, thought it would be unlucky to continue their journey just then and refused to do so.

A British Warship Ashore.

MADRID, Nov. 3.—Despatches from Ferrol state that the British warship Howe, Capt. Alexander P. Hastings, is ashore on the Peregrino reef at the entrance to the port. The stores are being removed. Numerous efforts to get the warship off have been unsuccessful. She is thought to be severely injured, and she may be a total loss. She went on the reef in a fog.

BEHANZIN EXECUTED.

The Dahomeyan King Put to Death—Whites Fighting the French.

PARIS, Nov. 3.—A despatch from Porto Novo states that a Dahomeyan chief who was captured by the French says that the Dahomeyans are led by 200 white men. He gives the names of many Belgians and Germans.

The despatch adds that after the French captured Abomey another King succeeded Behanzin, who was put to death for his crimes.

Mail advices state that while the French gunboat Opale was returning from Kobe on Sept. 30 it was suddenly attacked near Donkoli by 600 Dahomeyans armed with quick firing rifles. Three of the French on the gunboat were killed and a number wounded.

The Opale shelled all the villages along the river. The next day 200 sharpshooters surprised Donkoli. The Dahomeyans fled, leaving many dead behind them.

Transports bearing the invalids and wounded French troops were arriving at the coast daily. The hospitals at Porto Novo were crowded and vessels in the roadstead had been chartered to accommodate the wounded.

If the government receives a despatch before the meeting of the Chamber of Deputies to-day announcing the entry of the French troops into Abomey, the capital of Dahomey, a bill will be introduced for the striking of a medal to commemorate the campaign.

Colonel Dodds, commander of the French forces operating in Dahomey, will be promoted to a General and will be made an officer of the Legion of Honor.

MRS. DEACON BEATEN.

Her Divorce Petition Dismissed and the Eldest Child Taken from Her.

PARIS, Nov. 3.—Mrs. Deacon is defeated in her bold move to steal a march on her husband by a divorce suit in Paris. Mr. Deacon was on hand when the case came up, and confronted his wife in the tribunal of the Seine. Mr. Deacon came out of the ordeal triumphantly.

The President of the tribunal not only dismissed Mrs. Deacon's petition, but severely censured her for having made frivolous charges against her husband with the object of procuring a divorce while herself under charges of the gravest character.

The court then gave orders that the eldest child, now in a convent, where it had been placed by Mrs. Deacon, should be delivered to Mr. Deacon.

This latter position of the court's decree was a crushing blow for Mrs. Deacon, who seemed deeply affected, and looked appealingly at her husband. It was all the more crushing because entirely unexpected, as Mrs. Deacon had supposed that the utmost that would be done by the Seine tribunal, in the event of an adverse judgment, would be to dismiss the case and leave the whole issue to be decided at Aix. Mrs. Deacon, by bringing the Paris suit, thus brought disaster upon herself.

LOOTED THE BANK.

Desperadoes Make a Haul in a Little Kansas Town.

DODGE CITY, Kan., Nov. 3.—About 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon three mounted men rode slowly into Spearville, a little town seventeen miles east of here, and halted in front of the only bank in the town.

Two of them went inside, and, placing a Winchester under the nose of Casier Baird, who is a cripple, compelled him to hand over all the cash on hand, about $10,000.

They went out, mounted their horses, fired several shots in the air and galloped out of town, going south.

As the robbers ran out of the bank and jumped into their saddles a party of hunters came along and learning of the bold robbery opened fire on them. About fifteen shots were exchanged, but no one was hurt on either side.

Soon after the robbers departed they were overtaken by a mounted posse which had started in pursuit.

Another running battle ensued, in which many shots were exchanged, but the robbers managed to escape. It is not known whether any of them were wounded or not.

Parties left Dodge City on the Rock Island, which runs south of Spearville, to intercept the robbers.

Several large posses, headed by the sheriff and others, have gone in every direction.

Sheriff Beeson was notified at once and he, with a posse started in pursuit.

Spearville is a quiet town, and it being a cold, raw day, but few people were on the streets.

The robbery, no doubt, had been planned beforehand and a quiet day selected.

His Record Convicted Him.

TRENTON, N.J., Nov. 3.—William Davis, alias James Smith, the young man arrested in Gloucester City for attempted burglary and in whose posession 23 counterfeit half dollars were found, was placed on trial yesterday. The evidence that he was in guilty possession of the spurious coin was not strong, but when he admitted that he had already served an eight year sentence for highway robbery, the jury convicted him and he was sentenced to five years in the Hudson county penitentiary.

Is Attorney-General Miller to Retire?

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3 — A despatch from Indianapolis, Ind., says: "Attorney-General Miller will retire from the Cabinet soon after the election, whether Mr. Harrison is re-elected or not. He has formed a law partnership in this, city his former home, and will move back here about the first of January. The friends of the Attorney-General here say that official life has never been congenial to him. Furthermore, he feels that his law practice here will be much more lucrative than the official position."

United States Must Soon Reply.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Minister E. J. Phelps of Vermont, Mr. James C. Carter of New York and Judge Blodgett of Chicago, counsel for the United States in the Behring Sea case, were closeted with Secretary of State Foster all day at the State Department. The sixty days within which the United States must file its case by the terms of the treaty expire on the seventh of next month, and the consultation was over the first rough draft of the United States' reply.

—The Coney Island Athletic Club has decided to offer a purse of $26,000 for Hall and Fitzsimmons, and one of $30,000 for Corbett and Mitchell. The club will also allow Hall and Mitchell $1,000 each for expenses, the latter to be payable in America.

LINGO'S SECOND TRIAL

Mrs. Miller's Alleged Slayer Again in Court.

SAME LINE OF DEFENSE ADOPTED.

It Is Based on the Theory That the Woman's Husband Killed Her--Miller on the Stand--Story of the Crime and Previous Trial.

CAMDEN, Nov. 3.—The second trial of Francis Lingo, colored, for the murder of Mrs. Annie Miller, near Merchantville, N. J., is now in progress here.

The murder was committed on Sept. 25, 1890—over two years ago. The murdered woman was the wife of John Miller, a farmer living near Merchantville. She had walked to Moorestown, and was returning to her home by a short cut through the brush. She was seen to enter the woods and at about the same hour Lingo was seen entering at a point not far distant. Next day the woman's dead body was found. She had been assaulted and murdered.

Lingo was immediately arrested, and in March, 1891, after a trial of sixteen days, was convicted of murder. His counsel carried the case to the Supreme Court, and it was heard by Judge Beasley, who made a remarkable decision. He announced verbally from the bench that the application for a new trial was denied, yet within ten days he filed a writ granting a new trial. He transferred it from the criminal courts and put it on the Supreme Court calendar, to be tried by Judge Garrison. Since then Richard S. Jenkins, who prosecuted at the first trial, and Dr. Formad, who gave expert medical testimony, have died.

Lingo pleaded not guilty yesterday. A jury was secured during the day, and the trial begun. The only witness put on the stand was John Miller, the murdered woman's husband.

It will be remembered that at Lingo's previous trial the defense was that Miller killed his wife, and the same line of defense will be adopted at the present trial. Miller detailed his search for his wife on the night of the murder and the following day, ending with the discovery of her dead body by a party of men.

LIEUT. SCHWATKA A SUICIDE.

The Famous Arctic Explorer Ends His Life at Portland, Ore.

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov., 3.—About 3 a. m. Lieut. Frederick Schwatka, the famous Arctic explorer, was picked up on First street in an unconscious condition.

Beside him lay a bottle of laudanum.

A patrol wagon was called and the Lieutenant was removed to the police station, where he soon died.

It was undoubtedly a case of suicide.

Frederick Schwatka was born at Galena, Ill., Sept. 29, 1849. He graduated at West Point in 1871, was appointed second lieutenant in the Third cavalry, and served on garrison and frontier duty until 1877. He also studied law and medicine, being admitted to the Bar in Nebraska in 1875, and receiving a medical degree from Bellevue Medical college, New York, in 1876.

On June 19, 1878, he sailed for King William's Land, returning on Sept. 22, 1880. He discovered and buried many of the skeletons of Sir John Franklin's party, and removed much of the mystery of its fate. He commanded an Alaskan exploring expedition in 1884 and another in 1886.

In August, 1884, he resigned his commission as first lieutenant of the Third cavalry, to which he had been appointed in March, 1879. He was the author of a number of works relating to his explorations and discoveries, and had received many medals from scientific societies, of several of which he was an honorary member.

NARROW ESCAPE OF PASSENGERS.

A Runaway Car That Came Near Wrecking an Express.

HAZLETON, Pa., Nov. 3.—As workmen were moving a gondola loaded with lumber at Jeanesville before beginning to unload it, the brakes broke and the car ran down a heavy grade and from the switch jumped to the main track of the Lehigh Valley railroad, although efforts were made to derail it.

The men jumped and escaped. The car gained in speed and passed down the grade at Hazle Creek at lightning rapidity. Luckily the express train was a few minutes late and a message reached Weatherly in time to hold it.

A moment later the runaway car was seen thundering down the track and when it reached the heavy grade entering Weatherly it jumped the track and was smashed to pieces

But few of the passengers on the express train knew of their narrow escape.

Burglars at Corinth, N. Y.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Nov. 3.—The hardware and furniture store of Brace & Kimball at Corinth, Saratoga county, was burglarized last night. The safe door was blown from its hinges and $50 in cash besides several gold watches and a large amount of jewelry taken. A neighboring blacksmith shop was broken open at the same time and a lot of tools were stolen.

Float and Cars Sunk.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Two of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's floats, carrying twenty-four cars of merchandise, and towed by the tug-boat Pittsburg, were run down opposite pier 4 at an early morning hour by the North German Lloyd steamer Kaiser Wilhelm II. The floats and cars were sunk. The loss could not be ascertained.

Escaped Jailbird Recaptured.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Nov. 3.—William Morand, who was arrested by Roundsman McCabe for highway robbery, has been identified as William Kelly, alias Bolla Kelly, who was arrested at Carmel, Putnam county, for a similar offense and broke jail there. He is held pending the arrival of the Putnam county sheriff.

(From Grover Cleveland's Letter of Acceptance.)

We anticipate with calmness the misrepresentation of our motives and purposes, instigated by a selfishness which seeks to hold in unrelenting grasp its unfair advantage under present tariff laws. We will rely upon the intelligence of our fellow-countrymen to reject the charge that a party comprising a majority of our people is planning the destruction or injury of American interests; and we know they cannot be frightened by the specter of impossible free trade.

"Do they not tell you that Grover Cleveland will carry this State by 10,000, but that they expect to defeat George T. Werts by money? Is not that on every lip? Does it not come to you from your Republican friends? Is this true? Is our liberty, our right of suffrage, to be wounded and broken down in the person of the fathers of free ballots, and that by the introduction of large amounts of money in our State?—Attorney-General Blackett's Speech.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

Forecast Till 8 P. M. Friday: For New Jersey, Light Showers, Variable Winds, and Dense Fog, Followed by Clearing Weather; Stationary Temperature; Southwesterly Winds.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The amount of bills ordered paid by the public library directors last night was $886.13.

—The biggest awning in town was wrecked by the wind in front of Packer's furniture emporium to-day.

—This morning building-mover Jenkins started the old Laing's Hall building towards its final resting place near the brook.

—The sum of $400 was appropriated by the public library directors from the moneys now on hand, for the purchase of books, last night.

—Plainfield people don't often have a chance to hear so good a reader read from such good works as Thomas Nelson Page at the Seminary to-night.

—To-morrow evening, at the rooms of the Cleveland and Stevenson Campaign club, 59 Broadway, there will be addresses by leading speakers.

—That now grown up and charming soubrette, Dottie Pine, with a fine company including Mrs. George Knight, will play that new farce comedy, "The Kid", at Music Hall next Wednesday evening.

—There will be a sweepstake race of $100 per side, between three gentlemen's horses from Perth Amboy at the Plainfield Driving park, Friday, Nov. 4, at 2 p. m. A great deal of money is bet on the result.

—Car No. 1 of the Plainfield Street Railway company, with motorman McDowell and conductor Huxley, was the first to run over the extended line to the railroad station, this morning. The trip was made at 10:30.

—The Ladies' Aid Society of Hope chapel will give an entertainment in the chapel this evening. An interesting programme has been arranged for the occasion, the proceeds of which will go towards furnishing Bibles for the chapel.

Property Improvements.

Westervelt avenue is to be considerably improved. The dwellings standing between Orange and Front streets are to be moved back or torn down altogether, and a sidewalk is to be laid on that side of the street, where none has hitherto existed. The property there is all to be greatly improved. Two new houses are already going up, one at the corner of Orange street, and the other back of it. With these improvements Westervelt avenue will have an entrance from Front street worthy of the handsome and well-kept residences farther up.

BY THE WAY.

—The street cars now run regularly to the North avenue station terminus.

Shiloh's Cough Cure

This is beyond question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold; a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price, 50c. and $1. If your lungs are sore, chest, or back lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by A. D. Mallinson, 65 North Avenue, opposite railroad station. 5-16-y

HOLY CROSS CHOIR HOME.

After a Rough Sail Through the Sound From Naugatuck, They Reached Plainfield Yesterday Afternoon.

The Holy Cross church choir returned yesterday from their visit to Seymour and Naugatuck, Conn., well, happy and covered with glory. Monday evening they sang a veeper service in Trinity church, Seymour, a very pretty old-fashioned edifice with a modernized chancel and a quaint little gallery, over which the Rev. J. B. Shepherd presides as rector. The church was crowded to its utmost capacity, and the service, perfectly rendered of course, was a revelation to the good Sagmourites, who do not enjoy such a treat every day in the year.

Naugatuck was reached Tuesday morning and a choral communion service given at eleven o'clock in St. Michael's church. The afternoon was spent in seeing the town and in rehearsing for the evening, when Choirmaster Miner's other choir, (St. Michael's Own), united with the Plainfield boys in giving the Naugatuck people a grand musical treat. The church was filled to overflowing, and the service was an overwhelming success.

In the absence of the Rev. J. W. Ellsworth, the Rev. Mr. Randall of St. Andrew's church, Meriden, conducted the services at St. Michael's and complimented the choir heartily upon their excellent work.

At both Seymour and Naugatuck the Plainfielders were quartered on the good townspeople and royally entertained. They left Connecticut yesterday morning by the very earliest train, and, after a rough and tumble sail down the Sound, reached home about noon.

THE PRESIDENT'S ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

He Expresses His Gratitude to the Plainfield Cleveland and Stevenson Club and Others.

President Harrison requests the publication of the following card:

"The expressions of sympathy with me and our family in our great sorrow, from individuals, from societies, from church conventions, from public meetings, from political clubs and committees of all parties, and indeed from all our people, have been so tender and so full of respect and love for Mrs. Harrison that I reluctantly abandon the purpose of making a personal acknowledgement of each. We are grateful, very grateful, for this great cup of good will and for the prayerful intercessions. May God give to each of you in every trial that grace and strength which you ask for us.

"BENJAMIN HARRISON."

MANLY WORDS.

[From Judge Werts's Letter of Acceptance.]

"Being thus free to act, I am constrained to make personal sacrifice which acceptance of this nomination may involve. I have been accustomed to regard the request of the Democratic party as a command, and in that spirit I am impelled to accept the nomination you tender me. I trust I realize the responsibility to be assumed, should the people ratify our action. I shall, in that event, assume the duties of Governor unpledged and unrammeled in every respect, and with the sincere intention to administer that high office as 'a public trust' for the good of the Commonwealth, and not as a party or factional perquisite."

TRUTH STRANGER THAN FICTION.

A True Story from North Carolina.

Some one has said that "the true and the false speak the same language." But there can be no doubt that this speaks with the true ring to it. Letter from Mrs. J. M. Holleman, proprietress of "Hotel Holleman," Apex, N. C.—"My son Harvey had scrofula from the time he was three years old until he was seven. We had the best doctors that the country afforded, yet he was given up to die, several times. Some one recommended Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. After taking five bottles he was well enough to get about, and has mended so fast that he is now enjoying good health."

Find a remedy for scrofula—something that purifies the blood, as well as claims to. That, if it's taken in time, will cure Consumption, which is only lung-scrofula.

Dr. Pierce has found it. It's his "Golden Medical Discovery." As a strength-restorer, blood-cleanser, and flesh-builder, nothing like it is known to medical science. For Scrofula, Bronchial, Throat, and Lung affections, Weak Lungs, Severe Coughs, and kindred ailments, it's the only remedy so sure that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, you have your money back.

HOW HE SEIZED IT.

THUS CAME KEAN'S GRIP ON THE PLAINFIELD WATER CO.

Col. Moore, the Contractor, Admits He Was Frozen Out; and it is Said There Was a Proposal Which His Refusal to Comply With, Placed Him at the Mercy of the Man Who Lent Him Money.

The New York World of to-day gives the following account—most of which has already appeared in THE PRESS—concerning the way John Kean, jr., froze out Col. C. K. Moore, the contractor, and seized the plant of the Plainfield Water company.

There has been much speculation for some time in business and political circles in Elizabeth over how John Kean, jr., now Republican candidate for Governor, managed to get possession of the Plainfield Water company and freeze out its original projector, Col. Charles K. Moore, of Fanwood, who was the engineer and contractor of the enterprise.

A gentleman who was conversant with the inside workings of the company gave to a World reporter yesterday a statement in regard to the way the New Jersey monopolist operates when he wants to "scoop in" a prospective rival and how he deals with municipalities from which he wants favors.

"John Kean, jr.," said this man, "went on the bond of the Plainfield Water Works company, which had made a contract with the city authorities of Plainfield to supply the place with pure water to be brought from artesian wells at Netherwood. The water company then made a contract with Col. C. K. Moore to have him construct works in accordance with its contract with the city of Plainfield.

"As I understand it, Col. Moore made an arrangement with John Kean, jr., by which Kean was to furnish the necessary capital to carry out the bargain. But upon investigation the probable enormous revenues to be derived from the works, Mr. Kean proposed to Col. Moore to break his contract with the city, as he (Kean) could obtain control of an old charter whereby he could take possession of the streets in Plainfield and lay the water mains in them without paying the city one cent for the privilege.

"Kean, also, it is alleged, intimated to Col. Moore that one of the Plainfield councilmen was a member of the old charter company and thought this man could be relied upon to aid in the scheme to outwit the Plainfield city authorities.

"The records will show that, in consideration of the award of the contract to him, Col. Moore paid into the city treasury of Plainfield $6,000, in accordance with the terms of the contract.

"I have heard Col. Moore say that Mr. Kean declined to carry out his agreement with him, but wanted Col. Moore to refuse to make final payment to the city of Plainfield, and to spring the old charter on the city authorities. This proposition Col. Moore, I am informed, absolutely refused to sanction, on the ground that it was a violation of a contract made in good faith with the city officials.

"From what I have been led to understand Mr. Kean, or his Elizabeth bank, advanced $5,000 to Col. Moore, in accordance with the agreement entered into between the two men, but when Col. Moore declined to approve the peculiar arrangement by which the city of Plainfield might be mulcted out of a large sum, Mr. Kean's bank brought an action against Col. Moore for the recovery of the face of the note given by him for the $5,000 that the bank, or John Kean, jr., which amounted to the same thing, had advanced. This suit is a matter of record in the courts.

"To prevent carrying out the waterworks contract with Plainfield an action was begun and Col. Moore's company was certioraried on the ground that the law under which it was organized was unconstitutional.

"This action precluded Col. Moore from raising money in any other quarter, and he was literally frozen out and obliged to dispose of his sources of supply, namely, the Netherwood wells, from which Kean, jr., into whose hands they fell, is now partly supplying Elizabeth with water on John Kean, jr.'s, own terms.

"Col. Moore, I think, will fully bear me out in all these statements."

The reporter next called on Col. Moore at his home on North avenue, Fanwood, to obtain a corroboration of the story and found him very reticent at first. When the foregoing interview was read to him he asked, who seemed to know so much about the causes that led to a change in the management of the water-works. This information the reporter could not give him, as the gentleman who made the statement did not want his named mixed up in the affair.

Col. Moore was then asked point blank by the reporter if the statements read to him were facts and he replied:

"That's a pretty broad question and I do n't care to say much on the subject, as there are several matters in that story of which I have no personal knowledge. I do not remember having made the statements attributed to me in the above interview."

Upon Col. Moore being pressed, however, for a definite answer as to the truth or falsity of the story, he paused a moment and then replied:

"Well, to be entirely frank about the unfortunate matter, I must confess that the statements as made to you in regard to the affairs of the Plainfield Water company are correct."

I was so much troubled with catarrh it seriously affected my voice. One bottle of Ely's Cream Balm did the work. My voice is fully restored.—B. F. Liepsner, A. M., pastor of the Olivet Baptist church, Philadelphia, Pa.

KINSMAN STOPS THE TRAINS.

The Noted Plainfield Electrician's Block System Works Whether Signal Men Sleep, Flag Men Are Color Blind, or Engineers Drop Dead.

The Kinsman Block System company that was incorported under the laws of the State of New Jersey, as announced at the time in these columns, was organized for the purpose of introducing the automatic devices for controlling the movement of railway trains invented by Frank E. Kinsman of Sherman avenue, Plainfield, into general use upon the railroads of the United States.

The Kinsman Block system may be briefly described as a combination of devices for preventing one train from entering a block within which another train is located, by automatically shutting off the steam and turning on the air-brakes or reversing the engine. It does for the engineer what the air-brakes do for the brakeman.

The devices used are simple and the expense of application moderate. It can be used in conjunction with existing signaling systems or quite independently of all signals.

It will work in all kinds of weather and under all atmospheric conditions.

It secures what has heretofore been an impossibility—perfect safety in darkness, fog and blinding storms.

It can be used simply to protect such dangerous points as switches, curves, cuts, tunnels, terminals and junction points, or for a complete block system over an entire line.

Upon the portions of a road equipped under the Kinsman system all forms of collision are prevented; also all accidents due to misplaced switches, broken rails, or open draw-bridges.

The foregoing claims may be looked upon as sweeping, but the company are prepared to give a practical demonstration of their entire correctness to any one interested.

Year after year improvements have been made in the construction, equipment and management of railroads. In every department wonderful advances have been made. The link and pin have given way to the automatic coupler, which, with its strong platform and the vestibuling arrangement, have made telescoping almost an impossibility; the strap rail and the light iron tea rail have been superseded by heavy steel rails laid upon roadways which are marvels of engineering skill in alignment, grades and construction; the wonderful air-brake has superseded the weak and inefficient handbrake; the movement of trains is regulated by telegraph from central despatching offices, where formerly trains ran on chance; and on the best roads expensive and ingenious signaling systems have been put in use.

But, notwithstanding all these improvements, our railroads are still liable to dreadful accidents due to the fact that the trainmen are dependent upon their eyesight alone to determine the conditions are favorable for the safe conduct of the trains committed to their care.

The most perfectly appointed and equipped train running upon a perfectly constructed roadway, with its movement directed by a perfect system of despatching and signal blocking, is still dependent for its safety against collisions, obstructions on the track, broken rails or open draw-bridges, simply upon the proper giving and receiving of signals and upon the prompt and unerring action of the engineer. While there has been progress along all other lines, there has as yet been no method of protection against carelessness on the part of trainmen, or temporary color-blindness, sudden sickness, or death of the engine driver.

The whole signaling apparatus of to-day is simply an improvement in form and application of the man with his red flag, of the earliest days of railroading. While signals will probably always be useful upon railroads, it is a fact that a signal will not of itself stop a train—it must be observed and obeyed; per contra, a signal not given, or a signal obscured by fog, leaves the most careful engine driver in an utterly unprotected position. It would not be necessary to dwell on such self-evident truths were it not a fact that an important proportion of all accidents is due to such causes.

The Kinsman system steps in at this hitherto unprotected point and protects absolutely, quietly and, compared with the results accomplished, inexpensively against the dangers which lie out of sight, around the curve, in the tunnel, at the crossing of other railroads, in the seemingly perfect but broken rail, in the unlocked but seemingly closed switch or draw-bridge, in the brain and hand made careless by long familiarity with danger or by drink, in the hand palsied by long hours, by sudden sickness or by sudden death.

This system can be used in connection with any of the principal interlocking and signal systems to great advantage. It has been put to practical test on the Fitchburg railroad, and approved by the president, general manager, superintendent and all others interested.

Take Care to Elect the Democratic Legislative Candidates Also.

As the Senate of the United States is at present constituted it stands 47 Republicans to 41 Democrats. A change of only three would see a tie. With a Democratic Vice-President in the chair the Senate would be Democratic. By taking care to elect Democratic candidates for the legislature New Jersey can secure a United States Senator of the proper stripe in 1893, and thus do her part toward making both Senate and House Democratic.

Athletes of the Present Day.

J. E. Sullivan, Secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union, President of the Pastime Athletic Club and athletic editor of The Sporting Times, writes:

"For years I have been actively connected with athletic sports. I always found it to my advantage to use ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS while in training, as they quickly remove soreness and stiffness; and when attacked with any kind of pains, the result of slight colds, I always used ALLCOCK'S with beneficial results. I have noticed that most athletes of the present day use nothing else but ALLCOCK'S PLASTERS."

DISGRACEFUL FEMALE FIGHT.

The Husband of the Victor Proud of His Wife's Achievement.

A shameful row occurred last night about 6 o'clock between two females, Mrs. Ollie McIntosh and Mrs. Phil Zimmer. It took place in Frank Cullen's grocery store, and happened in this way: Mr. and Mrs. Zimmer were on their way there when Mrs. McIntosh saw them and used insulting language to both of them. At that she ran into the store and stood holding the door so that the other parties could n't enter, but later she left the door and exclaimed "Let them come in and see what they can do." Then both entered and Mrs. Zimmer struck her opponent a blow on the face that sent her to the other end of the store. Then Mrs. Zimmer went at her again and beat her unmercifully, and only for Maggie Revelles, the clerk in the store, who stopped the the fight, Mrs. McIntosh might have had worse than she got. Phil Zimmer, husband to the one that did the beating, when the fight was over shouted out: "Now she is my wife, and I am proud to walk with her!" Mrs. McIntosh and Mrs. Zimmer have for a long time been the greatest of friends until lately. Tuesday both of them stood out on the street calling each other names. Warrants are to be issued for the arrest of Mr. and Mrs. Zimmer. If Mrs. McIntosh had kept her tongue silent last night the row would not have been precipitated.

ANOTHER NEW PASTOR.

Rev. C. E. Herring to Officiate in the First Presbyterian Church.

As has been predicted in these columns, the new pastor of the First Presbyterian church will be the Rev. Charles E. Herring, formerly of Harlem, N. Y.

The congregation met last night and voted unanimously on first ballot to call that divine.

The meeting was a very pleasant one, and closed with the long-metre doxology, which was very heartily sung.

There is no doubt that Mr. Herring will accept the call, and begin his pastorate here very soon.

Mr. Herring has preached here several times, and is already popular. He is a clergyman of brilliancy, scholarship and power, and is said to resemble Dr. Shaw in portly stateliness.

THE TOMB.

Mrs. Emma T. VanWinkle.

The mortal remains of the late Emma T. Judson, beloved wife of counselor John H. VanWinkle, were laid away to their final rest yesterday afternoon.

The funeral services took place at the residence of Mr. VanWinkle, 19 Duer street. The house was thronged, and many were unable to gain admission. The Rev. Cornelius Schenck spoke feelingly of the beautiful Christian virtues of the departed, and held up her life as a guide for all. Mrs. E. H. Bird and Messrs. Elmer E. Runyon and Nelson Runyon sang two sweetly soleman hymns, "Asleep in Jesus" and "Abide in Me".

The pall-bearers were ex-city-clerk J. B. Coward, ex-city-judge Nelson Runyon, G. L. VanEmburgh, W. A. Woodruff, A. Swaim and O. W. Dunham.

The floral tributes at the funeral were very beautiful. They includded a pillow with the inscription "At Rest", a large crown surmounted by a small cross from the Ladies' Christian Work society of the Trinity Reformed church, of which she was a member, a wreath from Mr. VanWinkle's class in the Sunday-school, a beautiful arrangement of flowers from friends in Washington, and four large clusters of roses, Japanese chrysanthemums, and pinks.

The body was interred in the family plot, North Plainfield cemetery.

Mrs. Mary Chandler.

The Rev. Dr. Lowry officiated yesterday afternoon at the funeral of Mrs. Mary Chandler, at the residence of her son-in-law, D. L. Hulick, 35 Jackson avenue. The departed was a member of the Park Avenue Baptist church. The remains were laid away in the Evergreen M. E. church cemetery. The bearers were three sons, John, William and Forrester, and son-in-law I. W. Pangborn.

He Understands the Law.

The Elizabeth Journal attempts to belittle the fitness of the Democratic candidate for surrogate, Rowland M. Stover of this city, by stating that he is unacquainted with New Jersey law. Well, if that is not the smallest hole to crawl out of! The Elizabeth Herald tells the truth as follows:

"Our candidate for surrogate is a highly educated gentleman, the author of several works upon law and its practice. He is now engaged on legal work for the bar of New York. He is a good lawyer, a gentleman, a good citizen and a good and loyal Democrat and should receive the vote and the assistance of every Democrat in Union county. There are enough Democrats in Union county to elect the whole ticket and it should be voted straight by every Democrat and by every Republican who is in favor of reform."

—It 's hard to believe, but it 's a fact, nevertheless, that 86 cents buys a first-class silk umbrella, with hard wood handle, at G. L. VanEmburgh & Son's, Front street, opposite Park avenue.

Hensel Reserves Decision.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 3.—Attorney-General Hensel yesterday heard argument at the Lafayette hotel for a suggestion for a writ of quo warranto to show cause why the charter of the Order of Tonti should not be vacated and the affairs of the Order wound up. The Attorney-General, when the argument was concluded, said that he would announce his decision as soon as possible.

Edwin Booth to Return to New York.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Nov. 3.—Edwin Booth has decided to return to New York to-day, where he can consult with his family physician. The aged and enfeebled actor has not been getting along as well as he expected, and for this reason he is to return to New York. While in the city he will be at the home of his son-in-law, Mr. Crossman, and not at his rooms at the Players' Club.

RINGING WORDS

From a Prominent and Eminent Divine.

Statements that are True and Straight to the Point.

Read What He Says, For His Words are of Great and Peculiar Interest.

No one knows better than the faithful pastor the great value of sound physical and nerve strength. The strain upon brain and nerve, the physical exhaustion following excessive work, the responsibilities and sympathies with afflictions and the myriad cares make the earnest preacher's duties arduous and wearing in the extreme.

We do not wonder, therefore, at the strong and ringing words of praise which the eminent divine, Rev. C. D. B. Meacham, gives that most wonderful of medicines, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. When he was run down in health weak in nerves, prostrated in strength, and with his blood badly impaired, he was restored to sound and vigorous health by this marvellous health renewer.

Here are the exact facts in his own words:

"I am very glad to say in regard to Dr. Greene's great remedy that when my blood was badly impoverished by an old scrofula humor, and my nervous system was greatly impaired, Dr. Greene's medicine gave me wonderful relief.

"At the present time my health is as good as at any time in my life, and my confidence in Dr. Green's remedy is constantly increasing.

REV. C. D. B. MEACHAM,
Pastor Baptist church, Townshend, Vt."

We have published the testimonials of vast numbers of people who were cured by the use of the great discovery, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, but we take more pleasure in giving to the world Rev. Mr. Meacham's own words in regard to the wonderful benefits he received from this valuable remedy, because we realize that the earnest words of a minister will have great weight with sufferers from disease, and everybody who reads his convincing words in regard to the sure and remarkable curative powers of this medicine will lose no time in securing a bottle and thus obtain a cure.

It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless, and is kept by all druggists at $1.00.

Its discoverer is the well-known Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th st., New York, who gives consultation and advice free to the sick, personally or by letter. The sick should use immediately Dr. Green's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, for it is not only the best remedy ever discovered, but those using it have the privilege of consulting Dr. Greene concerning its effects, their health, etc. This fact alone guarantees the assurance of cure. If you need a medicine do not fail to take this best of all remedies.

JUDGE ALLEN B. MORSE.

The Democratic Candidate for Governor of Michigan.

Judge Allen B. Morse, the democratic nominee for governor of Michigan, has been a member of the state supreme court for several years, and is one of the most popular men in the state. He was born in Otisco, Ionia county, Mich., January 7, 1839, and is the eldest of nine children. After a two years' course of study at the Michigan State Agricultural college he began the study of law. In 1861, at the outbreak of the civil war, he enlisted in the Sixteenth Michigan infantry. In December, 1863, he was transferred to the Twenty-first regiment, and after the battle of Chickamauga was made acting adjutant general on the staff of Col. F. T. Sherman in Sheridan's army. At the storming of Mission Ridge he lost an arm. He took part in the battles of Hanover Court House, Gaines Mill, Manassas, Antietam, Chickamauga, as well as many skirmishes. On retiring from the staff he received a strong testimonial from Col. Sherman to his gallantry and distinguished services, which was indorsed in terms of high praise by P. H. Sheridan. Returning home he resumed the study of law, entering upon its practice in 1865, and being elected prosecuting attorney the following year. In 1874 he was elected to the state senate by a large majority, and served in that body upon the committee for constitutional amendment. In 1878 he was an unsuccessful candidate on the democratic ticket for attorney general. He was elected a justice of the supreme court of the state in 1885 by a majority of 29,031 votes, and was the same year appointed chief justice by Gov. R. A. Alger, to fill the vacancy from October 1, 1885, to January 1, 1886. Judge Morse was placed in nomination for the vice presidency at the Chicago convention and received a flattering vote.

A PRECIOUS STATUE.

One of Montana's Unique Exhibits at the World's Fair.

The largest statue ever made of pure silver will stand on the largest gold brick ever made in the mining exhibit in the Montana building at the Chicago exposition. The design is by Sculptor R. H. Parke, of No. 1843 Michigan avenue, who will go to New York to see Ada Rehan, the leading lady of Daly's company, after whom the massive piece of silver statuary is to be modeled. The figure will be eight feet high and the silver in its makeup will be worth $50,000. The gold brick upon which it stands is to be worth $250,000.

The sculptor will have the model finished about January 1 and the silver statue will be ready for exhibition about April 20, and when the work is done the sculptor will be paid $10,000 for his work.

The size of the statue is to be one of its remarkable features. No figure of solid silver over four feet high has ever been made. No solid piece of gold worth a quarter of a million dollars has ever been cast. The scales of justice are to be weighted with gold and silver coin, on one side gold, on the other silver. There will be inscriptions on the sword, too, but they have not been chosen yet.

Things to Be Avoided.

Mauve, Nile green, rose pink, clear white, steely gray, yellowish tan and sky blue when of a sallow complexion. Plaids, broad stripes and light colors when short and stout in figure. Flaky skirt trimming if under five feet four inches in height. Hairline stripes, plain skirts and flat vests when thin and slender in person. Turn-over collars when possessed of a long, thin neck. Collars without a finish in the way of a white cord, plaited ribbon, folds, etc., when of a dark or sallow complexion. Dirty white kid gloves on a rainy day or while traveling. Over-trimmed dresses and hats for traveling, also trains on traveling or tailor-made gowns.

Curiosities About Languages.

Almost a third of the total population of the globe—a round 400,000,000 human beings—speak nothing but the Chinese and allied languages. One hundred million more speak Hindoo only, and 95,000,000 speak English. The Russian language is fourth on the list, being the mother tongue of 89,000,000 people. The German is a good fifth and is used by 57,000,000 tongues, France coming sixth on the list, in which it was once first. Spanish is used by 48,000,000 people in Europe and the three Americas.

SOME NEW COLORS.

Light Shades Will Be Exceedingly Popular This Winter.

French color cards of millinery fabrics for the coming season display much lighter shades than those usually worn in winter. The leading series of six shades gradually darkens from pale rose to deep Provence red, through azalea pink, rose-geranium and peony, followed by three metallic gray shades, familiarly known last year as argent, nickel and platina, while, as a matter of fact, steel grays are much more largely represented in the new importations. Next there is a new pale green shade called angelique, which combines charmingly with dark murier, or mulberry-leaf green, and the still deeper roncs, or brier green. The shades that experienced buyers mark as most popular in Paris are eminence or bishop's purple with a reddish tinge, and a lighter shade, called page-purple, not unlike the pinkish hues of mauve and of the violet now so fashionable. New dahlia shades are almost as bright as cherry red or magenta. The brown series begins with a pale amber hue, aptly called champagne, and deepens through tabac and chestnut to loutre, which is seal and otter brown. Beige and castor, the light browns of last seasons, promise to remain in favor. All the old blues reappear, and to these are added a dark gray-blue marked Iceland, a pale tint called petit duc, and the well-known peacock blue, which is almost green. Diavolo is a dull yellowish red, while Mephisto is a glowing, brilliant tint. An observer looking over large importations of selected fabrics finds the preference given to eminence purple, pinkish tan or apricot, reseda, emerald and myrtle green, then beige, castor, marron brown, cardinal and black.—Harper's Bazar.

The FRIGHT of lard manufacturers at the wonderful success of COTTOLENE is one of the strong evidences of its value to housekeepers. The REASON of this success is that COTTOLENE is a BETTER shortening for ALL cooking purposes than has EVER before been produced, and has NONE of the objectionable features indispensably connected with lard. The HONEST MERIT of COTTOLENE explains its success. Imitations but certify the value of the genuine, made only by

DAYS OF '63 RECALLED

A Counterfeit Sumter Bombarded With Fireworks.

CHARLESTON'S BIG NAVAL DISPLAY.

No Sentimental Significance in the Event—Use of Flags Strictly Prohibited—The Effect Very Realistic—The Earthquake Festival Ends To-night.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 4.—More than 60,000 people witnessed the grand naval display of the Earthquake Festival last night. Of this number about 50,000 lined the high sea wall and the remainder witnessed the bombardment from steamer and sailing vessels and small craft in the harbor.

It was a perfect Charleston night and the arrangements for the display worked without a hitch. Fort Sumter built on lighters was anchored in the inner bay as were miniature representations of the batteries on Morris Island.

The First Regiment of Artillery of the State National Guards, three batteries manned the city sea wall representing the batteries of Sullivan Island.

Tug boats represented the attacking fleet. The bombs used in the affair were manufactured especially for the occasion and produced realistic effects. There was no sentimental significance in the display, the only interest attaching to it being the fact that the event which occurred April 5, 1861, was the first engagement during the war in which the new ironclad warships came in collision with a fortress or masonry.

The peculiar topographical surroundings of this harbor rendered such a display exceeding interesting.

At 8:15 o'clock the first shot was fired by a battery from the suppositious Fort Moultrie at the fleet of tug boats which sailed down the bay.

This was replied to by a boat representing the Weehawken, and then for two hours the pyrotechnic firing was kept up with a fidelity to detail which was really wonderful.

The officers and crews of the United States war vessels and the revenue cutters witnessed the display from the decks of the vessels and were delighted. No flags were used.

The celebration will wind up to-night with a grand ball tendered to the officers of the fleet and the finest display of fireworks ever seen in the South.

The fleet engaged in the fight in 1863 was composed of the Weehawken, 2 guns, Capt. John Rodgers; Passaic, 2 guns, Capt. Percival Drayton; Montauk, 2 guns, Capt. John L. Worden; Patapsco, 2 guns, Commander Daniel Ammen; Flagship New Ironsides, 16 guns, Capt. T. Turner. Catskill, 2 guns, Commander Rodgers, Nantucket, 2 guns, Commander D. McN. Fairfax; Nahant, 2 guns, Commander Downes; Keokuk, 2 guns, Commander A. C. Rhind.

The Canandaigua, the Housatonic, the Unadilla, the Wissahickon, and the Huron were off the bar, but were not engaged. The fight began about 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The first shots fired at the fort came from the leading monitor, the Weehawken.

One passed over the heads of the men standing ready to fire the barbette guns of the right flanks on the fort, and cut a clean hole through the regimental Confederate flag flying on the George Wall, piercing it near the crossing of the two cannons in the centre of its field.

Not much damage was done to either fleet or the fort. The Keokuk seems to have had some defect in her build. Commander Rhind, however, seemed determined to test her fighting capacity to the utmost.

When the turn in the channel was reached he came "bow on" to the fort, receiving the concentrated force of all the guns that could be brought to bear from that port and from Sullivan's Island. He was silenced after firing three shots. The position taken seemed to him to be about 550 yards from Sumter.

To those in the fort it appeared to be hardly less than 900 yards. At the end of 25 or 30 minutes he was glad to escape without being captured or going down. His vessel was struck 90 times in the hull and turrets, and 19 shots pierced her through. The turrets were penetrated by rifle bolts and 10-inch round shots. Riddled as she was, it is matter of wonder how she escaped with her engines in condition to take her out of the fight.

That night she sank off the southern part of Morris Island.

The following is a statement showing the number of shots fired, and the casualties:

Confederate Posts—Number of guns engaged, 76; shots fired, 2,206; killed, 4; wounded, 10; nearly one-fourth were smooth-bore 32-pounders, of no value against armored vessels.

Federal Vessels—Number of guns engaged, 23; shots fired, 439: killed, 1; wounded 22.

Ex-Gov. Campbell Confident.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Ex-Gov. Campbell has returned to New York from a tour of the Western States. Speaking of the outlook in the West, he says: "Indiana will certainly cast her vote for Cleveland, and I am willing to stake some money on the issue there. So far as Illinois and Wisconsin are concerned, the Democrats have an even chance. I am not posted on the situation in the other Western States. Wherever I have been I have found the Democrats unusually active and confident."

Thompson's Big Offer.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 4.—Wm. J. Thomson, President of the South Jersey Jockey Club, Gloucester, N. J., placed a check for $10,000 in the hands of Wm. M. Singerly, as a bet on Cleveland's election against a like amount. Magistrates Durham and Ahern will put up on Harrison. The race track magnate offers to bet $40,000 as follows: $20,000 even that Cleveland will be elected; $10,000 to $6,000 that Cleveland will carry New York and $10,000 even that Cleveland will have 5,000 majority in New Jersey.

A Counterfeiter Sentenced.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 4.—Jonathan Hughes, a Philadelphia crook, who has served several terms for counterfeiting, was tried in the Federal Court yesterday for passing counterfeit money and was sentenced to a term in State prison. For years he was an accomplice of "Gopher Bill," of Philadelphia, and has done time in the Eastern penitentiary. He has spent altogether 14 years in confinement.

PRIVATE IAMS' CASE.

A Number of Officers Style His Offense as Mutiny—Summing Up.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 4.—Charles Hatfield, hospital nurse for the Tenth Regiment, was the first witness in the Iams case today. He said he saw Iams strung up, and the cord was not taut at any time. Iams swallowed a chew of tobacco, and, when asked why he did so, said: "I did it to fool the doctors. I had a purpose." Iams became sick after swallowing the tobacco.

Edward Dougherty and William Berry Hill testified that Iams' punishment was not severe.

General C. L. Fitz Hugh testified that Iams' conduct was insubordination or mutiny, and that the punishment was "mild for the offense." Under such conditions it was usual for an officer to act on his own judgment. In emergencies the officer was the sole judge of punishment.

Colonel Norman W. Smith said he would consider the offense charged to Iams as "mutiny." The punishment was mild.

Major J. F. Denniston called Iams' offense "high insubordination."

Iams was put on the stand and denied that he had taken a canteen from his coat after punishment, or had swallowed the tobacco.

Counsel for the defense offered to submit the case without argument, but Judge Porter said the prosecution was not bound to agree to that.

Attorney Iams said that the counsel for the Commonwealth preferred to address the jury.

The court then allotted each side an hour and a half.

Mr. Braddock then spoke to the jury from 4 until nearly 5 o'clock, when court adjourned until this morning, when argument was resumed.

LOVE LAUGHS AT OBJECTIONS.

A Young Couple of Kingston Determined to Marry and Did.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 4.—The elopement of Miss Rosie Pinner, an attractive Jewess of 17, with Louis Wimpleberg, a young man of her own faith, Wednesday evening, has created considerable talk here. The match was opposed by the young lady's widowed mother, owing, chiefly, to the fact that the would-be husband was a saloonkeeper.

The lovers were not to be outdone, so they held clandestine meetings, during one of which the elopement was decided upon.

They went at first to a rabbi, but he, being aware of the mother's objections to the match, refused to perform the ceremony.

They then hastened to Judge Duboise's office, where the knot was tied.

The couple went to New York to spend the honeymoon. The young bride has written, asking her mother's forgiveness.

THE KILLING OF THE AZTECS.

President Diaz Explains the Situation as Rebellion Against the Government.

CITY OF MEXICO, Nov. 4.—President Diaz says the trouble at Tomaschie was not one of taxes. The Indians refused to recognize any authority except that of the so-called Saint Colora.

Gen. Rancel went with a small force to compel obedience, but the fanatical Indians, relying on the aid of their saint, fought desperately and defeated Rancel.

Then the government sent 600 soldiers against the Tomaschians, who had fewer than 100 fighting men, and lost 47. The government lost more than 100 killed and wounded.

The affair was local and religious, and is now ended.

Minister Egan Denies a Story.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—"The report telegraphed from Indianapolis that I was insulted at a meeting there last Saturday night," says Patrick Egan, "was quite amusing. I was in New York at that time. I was obliged to decline the invitation to speak in Indianapolis on account of a severe cold. Either the correspondents who sent out those reports were deceived in some way or sent them with a malicious purpose. I have not spoken anywhere for a week."

Will Not Abandon the Lehigh Canal.

MAUCH CHUNK, Pa., Nov. 4.—The report that the Lehigh Coal & Navigation company intended to abandon the Lehigh Canal is incorrect, and the indications are that more coal will be shipped by canal than ever. The coal pockets or shutes through which coal is loaded into the canal boats at Coal Port, the head of the Lehigh Canal, two miles abo this place, are being entirely rebuilt and remodelled.

Cotton Crop of '92.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 4.—Henry M. Neil, the well known statistician estimates the cotton crop of 1892 at 7,100,000 bales, maximum, exclusive of old cotton. In the event that the Texas yield falls below 2,000,000 bales, he believes the cotton crop may not reach even 7,000,000 bales.

A Missing District-Attorney.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 4.—Charles W. Holbrook, district-attorney of Monroe, mysteriously disappeared from his home four weeks ago, and nothing has since been heard of him. It is said he speculated heavily in Wall street. Numerous clients are looking for him.

Fall Brook Switchman Killed.

CORNING, N. Y., Nov. 4.—Ira Miller, a Fall Brook railway switchman, was struck on the head by a flying coupling pin in the yards of that railway yesterday and the side of his skull was crushed into the brain causing his death.

BETTING IN BRIDGEPORT.

Little Money Being Put Up on the General Result.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Nov. 4.—Betting on the election has been slow here. The largest bet yet made is $500 even on the general result, and it was made yesterday between Editor L. C. Prind of the "Morning News" and Chief of Police Rylands. Mr. Prind bets on Harrison and the money is held by James Coughlin.

There is a pool of $60,000 bet on Harrison in large and small sums. W. E. Burnham has wagered $200 even on Harrison with ex-City Clerk Fred Mullens. John Ford offers to bet $500 to $600 that Connecticut will go for Cleveland. He also offers $500 to $400 on New York State going Democratic. He refuses to bet on the general result.

Dennis Downes says he will vote for Cleveland, but will bet $200 that he is defeated. He bet $100 on Harrison last night.

A few Democrats claim that there will be no election by popular vote, but that Cleveland will be elected by the House. They are willing to back up this statement. James Falley will wager $5,000 on it.

On the State election the Democrats are confident and are willing to wager heavily, but although there are many offers but few bets are being made.

The Republicans and Democrats both claim the Fourth Congressional district.

CROOKEDNESS IN CHICAGO.

Mayor Washburne Investigating the Water Department of the Windy City.

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—Evidence of seeming irregularities of the grossest sort in the management of the city water office have been discovered by Mayor Washburne and Commissioner of Public Works Aldrich.

A thorough examination of that bureau and a sweeping investigation of the books have been ordered by the Mayor. One or more of the officials of the department may be suspended from their positions before to-night.

If the experts' inspection of the office should confirm the facts given to Mayor Washburne, there will be a wholesale clearing out in the water office, and criminal prosecutions may be instituted.

FIERCE FOREST FIRES.

Over 30,000 Acres Already Burned Over at Waterford, Pa.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Nov. 4.—Over 30,000 acres of timber have been destroyed by forest fires that have been raging on the mountains above Waterford.

The flames show very little abatement, notwithstanding the rains that fell Wednesday afternoon.

Very little progress is being made by those who are endeavoring to arrest the flames. It is the most destructive fire known to have occurred in the mountains for thirty years.

A small herd of cattle, two goats and one sheep, perished last night.

So far keeping the fire away from the farm buildings, the people have been successful.

The fire started above Kecksburg, and is slowly pushing its way north.

STRUCK BY AN EXPRESS.

Fatal Accident to an Aged Couple at Painted Post, N. Y.

CORNING, N. Y., Nov. 4.—A shocking accident occurred at Painted Post last evening.

As Rev. J. C. Bradbury, a retired Methodist preacher, and his wife, both over 70 years of age, were crossing the Erie racks, Mrs. Bradbury's foot was caught between a rail and a plank, and before Mr. Bradbury could release her both were struck by a fast express train.

Mrs. Bradbury was instantly killed, and her body was horribly mangled. Mr. Bradbury was badly injured, and may not survive the result of the shock and injuries.

He was one of the best known Methodist ministers in this section.

FOR ILLEGAL REGISTRATION.

Twenty-seven Paupers from Randall's Island Arrested.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—A number of deputy marshals went to Randall's Island last evening and arrested 27 of the inmates of the pauper institution there for illegal registration. The deputies had warrants for 58 men, but failed to find the others.

The prisoners were brought to this city and locked up in Ludlow street jail.

Frank McCabe and Louis Sweig were arrested in this city last night for illegal registration. They were also locked up in Ludlow street jail.

Enticed Away from New York.

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—Two 17-year-old girls, Bertha Cisco and Grace Smith, are held in the annex of the Harrison street station, having been rescued by the police from Blanche D'Orsey's resort on Custom House place. The D'Orsey woman made the acquaintance of the girls in New York city, and by fair promises of easy employment, fine clothes, and plenty of money induced them to accompany her to Chicago. Since their arrival here they have been closely guarded and not allowed to leave the house. The girls are anxious to return to their parents in New York city, but will be detained as witnesses against the D'Orsey woman.

Lingo Trial.

CAMDEN, Nov. 4.—The afternoon session of the Court of Oyer and Terminer at the trial of Francis Lingo for the murder of Mrs. Annie Miller, was devoted to the cross examination of John Miller, husband of the murdered woman, by ex-Judge Westcott. From the questions asked it was shown that the attorney of the accused negro was endeavoring to lay a foundation to criminate Miller.

BREAD RIOTS IN SPAIN

Starving Workmen Plunder Shops and Bakeries.

ANARCHY REIGNS IN CACERES.

Poet Morris Refuses to be Laureate—Swinburne Will Not be Asked at Present—Restricting Belgian Suffrage—Patron Saint for Americans—Cable Notes.

MADRID, Nov. 4.—Rioters have been in possession of Caceres, near Trujillo, since Wednesday. The recent rise in the price of bread has caused much suffering among the workers in the cloth, leather and linen factories.

Yesterday agitators called a meeting of workingmen in the old town, and some 1,200 men and boys attended it. The speakers urged the people to plunder the shops and bakeries.

The efforts of the gendarmes to disperse the workingmen culminated in a fight. Three of the gendarmes were severely wounded with stones and knives, and eight rioters were seriously injured.

The gendarmes were repulsed, and the workingmen began attacking the bakeries. The bakers had barricaded their doors, and in only one case was the barricade forced and the shop plundered.

Elsewhere the rioters smashed all the windows.

Several men were knocked senseless with stones, and two women, entirely unconcerned in the demonstration, received injuries, from the effects of which they will die.

The rioters are still parading the streets, smashing windows and plundering small shops. They threaten to fire the bakeries. The police have called for help from Trujillo.

REFUSED THE LAUREATESHIP.

Morris Will Not Accept the Honor—Swinburne Not to be Asked.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—Notwithstanding the qualified denial by William Morris, the Socialist poet, that he had been offered the post of Poet Laureate, it has been ascertained that Mr. Gladstone delegated Professor Bryce to make the offer to Mr. Morris, and that the latter declined it.

It is said that Mr. Gladstone prefers for the present to avoid offering the honor to Swinburne, probably because Swinburne has been opposed to Irish Home Rule, and also because Swinburne is said to have shocked Mr. Gladstone, as well as the royal family, by a poem about a year ago, in which he advocated the assassination of the Czar of Russia.

Restricting Belgian Suffrage.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 4.—The standing committee of the Chamber has endorsed household suffrage by a vote of 13 to 8, thus showing that the two-thirds necessary to amend the Constitution probably could not be secured in the Chamber. The announcement of the vote in committee has caused great discontent among the lower classes, and throughout the Kingdom notices have been given by workingmen's committees that meetings will be held on Sunday to protest against the attitude of the parties of the bill.

A Patron Saint for Americans.

ROME, Nov. 4.—The Pope intends to address a letter to Cardinal Gibbons on the occasion of the Episcopal Congress, which is to be held in New York on Nov. 10. In this letter the promise will be renewed that the Holy See will press forward the beatification of Christopher Columbus, in order that the Church of Rome in America may have a patron saint.

Egan and Curtin Will be Freed Soon.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—A Cabinet council will be held to-day to decide whether or not some of the Irish prisoners shall be released. The "Central News" says it has reason to believe that Egan and Curtin, alias Kent, will be the first ones to be released, and that they will be released shortly.

Is the Lord Mayor of London Doomed?

LONDON, Nov. 4.—The refusal of the leading Ministers to attend the inaugural banquet of Lord Mayor Knill is interpreted to forestall a new city corporation, the administrative functions of which will be superseded by the London County Council.

HANGED HER CHILD BY THE THUMBS

A Mother Accused of Torturing Her Offspring for an Hour.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 4.—Mrs. Kate Lorenzo, of No. 1011 South Clinton avenue, has been held for the grand jury, charged with having hanged her three-year-old child up by the thumbs for an hour.

During that time, it is said, she frequently struck the child with a stick.

The child's cries were heard by neighbors, who informed the police, and an officer cut it down.

Inferior Boiler Plate Made at Homestead.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 4.—Gen. Dumont of Washington, supervising inspector of steam vessels, and John Fehenbatch of the Ohio district were in Homestead yesterday on official business. A large amount of boiler plate made at Homestead for shipment to Cleveland, for use in the construction of marine boilers, was inspected and found to be of lower tensile strength than was stamped on the plates. The matter was reported to Gen. Dumont, and has been under investigation for three months.

Big Fire at Newark.

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 4.—Fire broke out shortly before noon in the four story brick building, at the corner of Railroad Avenue and Mechanic street, occupied by the American Hat Machinery Band Supply company, the Hedges and Brothers and the Blairsdell and Neck Iron Works, and other concerns. The building was consumed with contents. Loss $30,000.

Gov. Flower to Speak and Vote.

ALBANY, Nov. 4.—Gov. Flower expects to speak at Peekskill to-morrow night and Poughkeepsie to-night. The Governor will vote in New York City. He and Senator Hill will receive the election returns by special wire at the Executive Chamber Tuesday night.

$500. Given IN Christmas Presents.

Competition open to Women Only.

For the best and most effective article, suggestion or phrase for popular use in advertising the merit of Cleveland's Baking Powder, a present of $200 will be given; for the ten next best $20 each; and for the ten next best $10 each. Experience in writing advertisements is not necessary. A simple statement, a happy expression or even a suggestion may prove the best.

Conditions:—Competition open to women only. Contributions must not contain over 200 words. Verses if sent must not contain over six lines. Write your suggestion on one sheet of paper, your full name and address on another, and mail as below. All communications must reach us by December 24th. The awards will be made as soon thereafter as possible.

Address Secretary of Cleveland Baking Powder Co., 81 Fulton St., New York.

Some Facts that may give you a hint or suggestion:

Cleveland's baking powder is perfectly pure and wholesome.

It does not contain alum, ammonia or any other adulterant.

Everything used in making it is named on the label.

Consumers know exactly what they are eating.

It is the strongest of all pure cream of tartar powders.

A rounded teaspoonful will do as much as a heaping one of any other.

Food raised with it does not dry up quickly, as when made with other powders.

It is more convenient and more economical than the ordinary cream of tartar and soda.

The latest official reports show it to be first class, and first in its class.

The U. S. Government buys it for the Army officers.

Government Chemists, State Assayers and other official authorities testify to its superiority.

Writers on domestic science, as Marion Harland, Mrs. McBride and Mrs. Parker, endorse it.

Teachers of cooking, as Mrs. Lincoln, Mrs. Rorer and Mrs. Dearborn, prefer it.

These are some of its points of excellence; others may have occurred to some of the thousands of women who are using it every day. Other facts are given in our cook book. Mailed free.

THE FINAL CONFERENCE.

New York Democratic Leaders Compare Notes and Go Home to Vote.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—At the final conference of the Democratic State leaders at the Hoffman House yesterday, Chairman Murphy, of the State Committee, Chairman Sheehan, of the Campaign Committee, and Clerk Charles De Freest compared notes.

They agreed that the fight in this State was won, and that all that remained to be done was to get out the vote on Election day. None of them had any doubt of the result, and they are of the opinion that the majority of Cleveland in the State will not be less that 20,000.

Last night Lieut.-Gov. Sheehan started for his home in Buffalo to remain until Election Day. Chairman Murphy returned to his home in Troy. Clerk De Freest will remain on duty at State headquarters until Election day, when he goes home to vote.

Lieut.-Gov. Sheehan will vote early Tuesday morning, and will then take the first train for this city. He will be at State headquarters Tuesday night.

Tug and Scow Sunk.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—During the dense fog which prevailed over the rivers and bay here during the night the tug boat James A. Dumont collided with a garbage scow when near the Brooklyn shore in New York Bay. Both crafts were so badly hurt that they sank immediately. The crews of the tug and scow were saved with difficulty. The tug was valued at $6,000.

Weathered the Gale Under Water.

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—The Baker submarine torpedo boat arrived here yesterday from Detroit four days overdue. She was in tow of a tug and weathered the heavy gale of Friday night by dropping ten feet below the surface. She was raised once in two hours for fresh air.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

FREE TRADE IMPOSSIBLE.

(From Grover Cleveland's Letter of Acceptance.)

We anticipate with calmness the misrepresentation of our motives and purposes, instigated by a selfishness which seeks to hold in unrelenting grasp its unfair advantage under present tariff laws. We will rely upon the intelligence of our fellow-countrymen to reject the charge that a party comprising a majority of our people is planning the destruction or injury of American interests; and we know they cannot be frightened by the specter of impossible free trade.

"Do they not tell you that Grover Cleveland will carry this State by 10,000, but that they expect to defeat George T. Werts by money! Is not that on every lip! Does it not come to you from your Republican friends! Is this true! Is our liberty, our right of suffrage, to be wounded and broken down in the person of the father of free ballots, and that by the introduction of large amounts of money in our State!—Attorney-General Stockton's Speech.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

Forecast Till 8 P. M. Saturday: For New Jersey, Cloudy, Occasional Light Showers; Fog Over the Coast and Sound; Stationary Temperature; Clearing Saturday Afternoon, Winds Becoming Northwest.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The grocery stores will be closed all day of Tuesday nxet.

—There were 24 speakers at the young men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. rooms last Sunday.

—Just read the prices you can buy goods for at the United Tea and Coffee Growers' association.

—Two women and one negro were fined a total of $7, for stealing coal from the tracks, by judge Codington this morning.

—The report of the Boys' club for the month of October is as follows: Number present during month, 1,732; average, 67; largest attendance, 181; smallest attendance, 14; number of visitors, 111.

—A horse attached to a buggy took fright at a trolley car yesterday, backed up on the curb, wrecked a wheel of the vehicle, and dumped the young man and woman unceremoniously from the vehicle into the street. No one was hurt.

—The experiment of putting up the Governorship of New Jersey for sale to the highest bidder has often been tried by the Republicans but never succeeded. Cornelius Walsh, John I. Blair, Frederick A. Potts, Burd Grubb are only predecessors of John Kean and the most of them much better men.

—The Coal Barons are fighting the Democratic party because a Democratic Governor refused to sign a bill which they wanted; and some fools are asking the people to oppose the Democratic party because the price of coal has been raised by the Coal Barons, despite the objections of the Democratic Governor.

—All can heartily endorse the following from the Elizabeth Herald: "Mr. James J. Gerber, the candidate of our party for the office of County Clerk, is in every way an admirable nominee, and should be elected by the vote of every true Democrat. Mr. Gerber is well known as one of the best Surrogates we ever had. He is a lawyer in active practice and knows thoroughly what the workings of the County Clerk's office should be; in other words he is the right man for the office."

POPULAR SABBATH LECTURES.

Dr. Hurlbut to Tell Why We Believe the Bible.

The people of the M. E. church are to have a course of popular Sunday evening talks on "The Reasons Why We Believe the Bible", given by Dr. Hurlbut. Each address will be half an hour in length, and will be illustrated upon the blackboard, in order that the eye may aid the ear in apprehending and retaining the truth. The subjects will be as follows: Nov. 6, "A Three-fold Cord." Nov. 13, "Four Pillars of Testimony." Nov. 27, "A Divine Book and a Divine Being." Dec. 4, "A Cloud of Witnesses."

Dr. Hurlbut says; "We hope to give to those present on the last evening, a syllabus of the entire series of lectures, containing all the points, in printed form. Let all our congregation and all their friends be present at these popular evening addresses. We hope that they may be found interesting, and we are sure that they will be profitable."

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Counselor John H. Jackson is in New Hampshire on business.

Mrs. J. Stephenson of West Front street has returned from Brantingham, N. Y., and will remain here until Dec. 1, when she will return to Brantingham for the winter.

A young Democrat arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Debele, on the Craig farm, Rock road, yesterday morning at 10. He is a bright little fellow, but arrived too late to register his vote for Cleveland.

The Rev. Charles E. Herring was seen yesterday by J. M. Bettman, one of the officers of the First Presbyterian church, and will in a few days accept by letter his call to that pastorate. He will be here to-night at the preparatory service, and next Sunday will officiate at the administration of the Lord's supper.

George Washington DeMeza has been spending two days at Trenton. He went there a plain citizen, and came back last night a full-fledged attorney-at-law, having passed a highly creditable examination, and being admitted to practice at the New Jersey bar. Judge Buchanan complimented him on his excellent rank.

Edward Winter, of the firm of Schepflin & Co., died early this morning in his fiftieth year, after an illness of a few weeks. He was a man of high moral worth and sterling integrity, and was of high repute in the business world. He will be greatly missed from his wide circle of friends and acquaintances. He was a consistent member of the M. E. church.

Success of Local Sportsmen.

Judge Codington shot five rabbits yesterday.

Irving Stelle bagged a number of fine quail.

James Blair of Plainfield and Tom King and John L. Force of Bound Brook got fifteen rabbits in a hunt at Clinton.

Bowling.

The Crescent League bowling last night resulted as follows:

Haven	130	Jones	157
Teel	161	Buckle	118
Dunham	198	Hawkins	162
Woolston	156	VanWinkle	166
Petrie	128	Whitney	144

Had Her Assailant Arrested.

As a result of the fight between females told of in these columns yesterday, Mrs. Philip Zimmer was arrested and held by justice Nash in $50 bail, to await the action of the grand jury, for assault on Mrs. Charles McIntosh. Dr. Jenkins gave bonds.

BY THE WAY.

—A flower show will be held next week at 17 Cresecent avenue.

—Jamee Mullin, intoxicated and disorderly, was fined $4.50 by judge Codington this afternoon.

—Ex-Secretary Charles S. Fairchild will speak at the mass meeting in Music Hall, Monday evening.

—The Democrats will all rally over the brook this evening and hear the Somerset county candidates speak.

—Edsall says he has just received a new lot of Brussels carpets, the prettiest styles ever shown in Plainfield at the price, made, laid and lined free of charge.

—There will be no meeting of the Cleveland and Stevenson Campaign club to-night. All its members will join with the Democratic association of North Plainfield in the rally over the brook.

—The Fourth Ward Athletic club will give their first annual ball at St. Mary's hall next Monday evening. The committee are Moee Quaas, Fred Miner, David White and Samuel Flynn.

—While the Republican Wheelmen's club was standing at Grant avenue, last evening, John P. Emmons came near losing his wheel. Just as he started to mount the machine slid from under him and came nearly falling beneath one of the trolley cars that was passing up the avenue.

Do not let your dealer palm off on you any new remedy for colds. Insist on having Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

The readers of our publications are requested to use Salvation Oil for any and all pains. It is a sure cure. 25 cents.

Shiloh's Cough Cure.

This is beyond question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold; a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price, 50c. and $1. If your lungs are sore, chest, or back lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by A. D. Mallinson, 65 North Avenue, opposite railroad station. 5-16-y

I was so much troubled with catarrh it seriously affected my voice. One bottle of Ely's Cream Balm did the work. My voice is fully restored.—S. F. Lingener, A. M., pastor of the Olivet Baptist church, Philadelphia, Pa.

A KING'S DAUGHTERS' BED.

Unfortunates Will Enjoy Its Comforts at Muhlenberg.

The fall meeting of the Plainfield city union of King's Daughters, held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church yesterday afternoon, was well attended by the King's Daughters of this city. The chairman, Mrs. Meade, presided, opening the meeting by reading a selection from the Scriptures, followed by prayer and remarks. The secretary then read the minutes of the meeting held in the spring, also the treasurer's report. The union decided to establish a hospital fund, the secretary reporting that $150 had already been pledged by the different circles and that a bed had been endowed at Muhlenberg Hospital to be known as the King's Daughters' bed. At the close of the meeting all were invited to remain and partake of the refreshments prepared, at which all formality was thrown to the winds and greetings were exchanged.

HYMENEAL.

Green—Titsworth.

The Dunellen Weekly Call reports that a very quiet but pretty chrysanthemum wedding took place Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock, at the residence of the bride, between Mary Titsworth and Prof. D. I. Green, of Alfred Centre, N. Y., the Rev. L. E. Livermore officiating. Wm. Titsworth, of Plainfield, acted as best man, and Miss Maud, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, with the bride's two cousins, Ferdinand and Elminoe Titsworth, each holding a basket of flowers. The bride wore a pretty costume of white. After a wedding breakfast and the congratulations of their friends they departed for a short wedding trip which will terminate in Baltimore where they make their future home. The presents were numerous and in great variety, and the newly-married couple have the best wishes of a host of friends.

Surprise Party.

Percival Davis was pleasantly surprised at his residence on Third street at 8:45 last evening, when a party of his young friends gathered there and tendered him greetings. The surprise was a complete one. The guests, some 30 in number, had a pleasant time playing games, etc. Refreshments were served about 12. The party broke up at 2 in the morning. Those present included the Misses Minnie VanDyke, Gussie DeForrest, May Thompson, Ida Morning, Cora Force, Sadie Naylor, Etta Connett, Belle Bowman, Kitty Alberts, and Masters Percival Davis, Albert Naylor, Harry DeHart, Harry Foose, Victor Lorton, William Alberts, James Reed, George Taylor, Thomas Randall, Gillard Apgar, and others from Scotch Plains and Fanwood.

Dr. Hurlbut's Estimate of Dr. Mitchell.

(From The Visitor.)

The Rev. Charles Bayard Mitchell, Ph D., who has been for four years our pastor, left us on Monday, Oct. 31, to take charge of the Grand Avenue Methodist Episcopal church in Kansas City, Missouri. His ministry among us has been faithful, single-hearted and able. He has commanded our respect, and has won our hearts. His work has been abundantly successful and he leaves the church in every respect far in advance of its condition when he came among us. We part from him with unfeigned regret, but send our best wishes and prayers that he may enjoy the same success in his new and larger field of labor.

That Club of Young Democrats Is Alive.

The Evening Post says: "The total registration in Plainfield this year is 2,996, against 2,383 last year, and 1,837 in 1884. The increase is credited to the efforts of the Cleveland and Stevenson club, which has been doing effective Democratic work. Many of their accessions are new voters. Plainfield is a Republican stronghold, but the outlook favors a large vote for Cleveland."

Welcomed to the Borough.

[Dunellen Weekly Call.]

Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Moffett returned from their wedding trip Sunday. They had a delightful tour through New York State and will take up their residence upon the Sandford property, where Mr. Moffett has resided. Mrs. Moffett was a Miss Marian L. Bunyon, of Plainfield. Mr. Moffett is of the firm of Moffett and Powers, a popular and prosperous law firm of that city.

A Father's Fears Allayed.

Ida—Did you see my father?

Walter—Yes. I told him I had come to ask of him the greatest blessing a young man could ask—his daughter's hand.

"And what did he say?"

"He seemed much pleased. Said he was afraid, at first, I wanted to borrow some money."—Demorest's Magazine.

Both Are Engaged.

Gasket—I hear that you and Miss Scadds are engaged.

Spatts—Yes; she is to be married next week, and I am to be married in about a year.

Gasket—Explain, please.

Spatts—She is to marry young Mumm, and I am to marry sweet Nellie Fondleb.—Truth.

Set right—all the proper functions of womanhood. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the remedy. It regulates and promotes their action, and removes the obstructions and suppressions which cause trouble and misery. At the two critical periods in a woman's life—the change from girlhood to womanhood, and, later, the "change of life"—it is a perfectly safe and an especially valuable remedial agent, that can produce only good results.

It's a powerful, invigorating tonic, and a soothing and strengthening nervine; a legitimate medicine—purely vegetable, perfectly harmless—and carefully adapted, by an experienced physician, to woman's delicate needs.

For all the derangements, irregularities, and weaknesses peculiar to the sex, the "Favorite Prescription" is a remedy so certain that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't give satisfaction in every case, the money is returned. No other medicine for women is sold in this way. No other medicine can be

THE PRESS Is Truly Democratic—It Prints for All.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—After reading the Evening News of Monday, which is a professedly temperance paper, and looking in vain for that part of Dr. Mitchell's farewell sermon which related to the saloon I was most agreeably surprised to find in a Democratic paper like THE PRESS so accurate an account of the whole of that sermon, especially the temperance or prohibition portion of it. Thank you, Mr. Editor, for "Fair Play" which ought to be dear to every American heart.

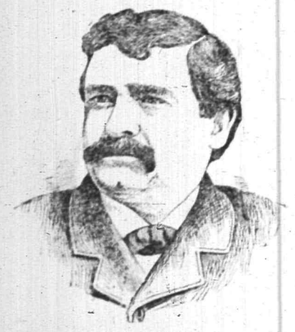
THE NEXT CONGRESSMAN

A HISTORY OF THE LIFE OF THE HON. JOHN T. DUNN.

Deserves Election from His Party—A Self-Made Man He Has Done Much for Elizabeth and the County—The Interests of the District Will Be Safe in His Hands.

(From the Elizabeth Herald.)

Every man in Elizabeth should in the interest of our city vote for Hon. John T. Dunn. His services to this city, county and State are matters of record for which services our citizens should feel grateful, and of which he is justly entitled to be proud. The people of the Oranges remember his services to them when he was in the Legislature and when he was Speaker of the House of Assembly. We clip the following from the souvenir of the Orange Democratic society:



JOHN T. DUNN.

John T. Dunn is accounted one of the most level-headed and eminent Democratic leaders in New Jersey. His record is one of remarkable success from the beginning up to the present, showing phenomenal energy, perseverance, character and ability.

He came to New Jersey in 1845, at the age of seven. His mother died when he was but four years old, while his father, who was without a trade, had the care of five others besides John, and being unable to take care of them all, the family became separated, each being obliged to take care of himself. John was put with a farmer, who engaged to give him three months' schooling each year until he arrived at sixteen. The father went to another part of the country, and the lad did not see him again until nearly eight years afterwards. The farmer neglected his part of the contract, so that when he left the farm he did not know the alphabet.

In the meantime, when about 11 years of age, being unable longer to endure the hardships and abuse he was subjected to on the farm, he ran away and shipped from where Atlantic City now stands, as a cabin boy on a vessel trading with the West Indies. When about thirteen years of age an older brother found him on the vessel, on its return to Philadelphia, and took him to Gloucester City, where he was employed as a bobbin boy in a factory. At about the age of sixteen he left the factory and went to learn iron moulding with the firm of Walker & Leeman. When about nine months at that trade the foundry burned down and was not rebuilt.

He then turned his attention to the trade of brass turning and silver burnishing with the firm of Knight & VanKirk. The death of one of the partners soon afterwards threw him out of his trade, but determined to have a trade, he took the next best thing, that of painting, and while an apprentice at that trade, learned his first lessons in the alphabet, and with he aid of the men in his shops, who were very anxious to assist him, he soon became master of reading, writing and arithmetic, and as he says himself, he has been from then until now a close student, Sundays, holidays, and all his evenings were devoted to study, so that at the age of twenty-one, with such aid as he could get from his associates and the men in the employment with him, he thoroughly mastered the English language. He was delighted with history; and using his own language, his education opened up to him a new world, the enjoyment of which no amount of money could purchase, had he the power to part with it for a price.

The Douglas campaign found him an ardent supporter of the "Little Giant's ideas", and he spoke at Norwich on the same platform with Mr. Douglass. Mr. Dunn, though a boy, comparatively speaking, was one of the vice-presidents of the meeting. He spoke in many of the Connecticut towns for Douglas. After the campaign was over he had made all his arrangements to study law. H. L. Reed, one of the principal men in Jewett City, took an interest in him and invited him to his own house, to enable him to finish his grammar under his instructions.

Mr. Dunn's close application to study affected the glands of his eyes; he was obliged to go under a course of treatment with Professor Pepper, of the University of Pennsylvania. In the latter part of 1862 he went into business and made a moderate fortune, after which he went to the East and married a Massachusetts girl, whom he took to Alexandria, Va., where he was in business.

He was elected an Alderman of Elizabeth in 1878, notwithstanding a determined opposition.

He was four times elected to the Legislature of the State of New Jersey and was Speaker of the House of Assembly in 1882, where he made a splendid record. He is a successful practicing counsellor-at-law and no man, however poor, has been obliged to leave his office for want of money if his cause was a just one.

Mr. Dunn is a brilliant man in every respect, and to know him is to esteem him for the many good qualities of his mind and heart. His Democracy is of that sturdy, independent mould always found in self-made men, and having sprung from the people, none better than he can appreciate their needs and the justice of their demands. His candidacy for Congress at the present time is hailed with delight by his friends and it is claimed that there is no doubt of his triumphant election.

Elizabeth is proud of Mr. Dunn as a Democrat, faithful and loyal, at all times to his party and to duty, even under the most trying circumstances. Every falsehood uttered against him to the contrary notwithstanding. He was the faithful friend of Elizabeth and Rahway in their darkest days, and some of those who are denouncing him because he is a representative Democrat were the loudest in his praise.

Why do not some of those people who are pandering to passions, to prejudice and to ignorance show a single mistake in Mr. Dunn's long record of service to the people, to the Democratic party of our city, county and State? Democrats do not misled by Republican falsehood. Mr. Dunn is deserving of the support of every man who loves honest effort and the success which follows it.

NOTES FROM "THE VISITOR".

Interesting Paragraphs from the M. E. Church Paper.

We learn that the ladies of the Park Place chapel are preparing for a delightful entertainment on Thanksgiving evening November 24. Keep the date in mind and reserve the evening from other engagements.

The Senior and Junior departments of the Sunday-school in Vincent chapel will hold a social entertainment Tuesday evening, Nov. 8, "election evening". It promises to be a pleasant gathering, and all the young people will be glad to be present.

We learn from the religious census of the United States, which has been tabulated by Dr. H. K. Carroll, Chief of this Bueau, that there are in the State of New Jersey 95,595 Methodists, constituting one-seventeenth of the population. Of these 2,371 are in Union county.

We take pleasure in announcing that on Sunday, Nov. 20, our pulpit will be supplied, both morning and evening, by Dr. S. F. Upham, Professor in Drew Theological Seminary. We have heard him before, and all will be glad to hear him again.

The thermometer of a church's spiritual state is guaged by the prayer-meeting. A church might have a large congregation on Sunday to listen to a popular or sensational preacher, yet be spiritually dead, or at least not more than half alive. But no church was ever in a dull, lukewarm, unspiritual state with a large attendance at the prayer-meeting, and no active, fervent church ever had a small, feeble prayer-meeting. The attendance and the interest of the prayer-meeting form an accurate test of the true state of the church.

Runs Away to Join Her Lover.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Nov. 4.—Miss Annie Newman, daughter of Michael Newman of West Third street, has run away from here to join her lover in Denver. She is 16. Her father objected to the attentions of Charles Keller, a young cigar dealer in town. Two months ago the young man went West and the girl's father thought she would forget him. She disappeared about a week ago and word has just been received that she has joined her lover in the West.

Firebugs in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 4.—A band of firebugs and robbers invaded West Philadelphia yesterday morning. Between 1 and 3 o'clock they set fire to four places within a radius of half a mile, two of which were burned to the ground, while the others were discovered in time to save them from total destruction. While this section of the gang were at work with their firebrands, a number of residences were entered and robbed.

Manufacturers Increase Wages.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Nov. 4.—The manufacturers at a meeting yesterday voted to increase the wages of weavers to 21 cents per cut and all other department in proportion. This is practically an advance of 7 per cent. and restores wages to the standard of 1884. The vote was almost unanimous and was voluntary on the part of the manufacturers.

Edwin Booth in His Old Quarters.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Edwin Booth, the actor, is now comfortably installed in his apartments at the Players' Club, where he intends to remain indefinitely. Mr. Booth is still in a very weak condition, but it is authoritatively stated that the reports of his recent illness were very much exaggerated. Mr. Booth's plans for the future are not known.

Drought Not Yet Broken.

READING, Pa., Nov. 4.—Rain fell here for several hours yesterday. Nothing but several rain of three days will replenish the water supply of this section of the state. Many springs and wells are dry and the farmers continue to suffer great inconvenience.

No Indian Outbreak Apprehended.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Relative to the published statements made by Miss Emma C. Sickles, implying a threatened Indian outbreak, owing to the alleged action of the Indian Office in regard to an Indian exhibit at the World's Columbian exposition, it is said that no such outbreak is apprehended, that there is no occasion for it, and that no foundation exists for Miss Sickles' statement.

Canada Alarmed Over Cattle Restrictions.

OTTAWA, Nov. 4.—The Canadian Government is alarmed at the steps taken in England toward scheduling Canadian cattle when imported into Great Britain, as a guard against disease. Thirty two per cent. of Canadian exports during the past quarter were under the headings of animals and products.

McKINLEY THE CHAMPION FALSIFIER.

He Reiterates His Falsehood About Gold Coming Into the Country.

Governor McKinley has been trying to palm off in the east some of the wild falsehoods with which he stuffed the Nebraska farmers in August. Here is an extract from the New York Tribune's report of his speech in Newark, N. J.:

"They [the Democrats] said that that law would keep us out of the foreign market, but our foreign trade in the last twelve months has exceeded that of any previous year in our history. Our exports amounted to $1,890,000,000. Europe paid us $230,000,000 in gold to satisfy the balance of trade in our favor. I wish every voter could read the history of his country before next election day."

The reports of the United States treasury—which anybody can get and read for himself—shows that our exports were not $1,890,000,000, but that they were $1,030,000,000. Our imports were $827,000,000. What McKinley did was to add the imports and exports together, throw in just $33,000,000 extra and call the whole thing exports.

Equally false is his statement as to gold coming into this country "to satisfy the balance of trade in our favor." In Boston he stated the amount of gold thus received by us last year at $240,000,000; at Newark he scaled down his falsehood by $10,000,000; but he is still as far from the truth as ever. The treasury report gives our imports of gold as $49,699,454. But this report shows that in the same time we actually exported $50,195,327 in gold, or an excess of $495,073 over our imports.

If McKinley meant to include silver in the term "gold," the treasury report is still more strongly against him. Our gold and silver imports were $69,654,540, and our exports $83,005,886, or an excess of exports over imports amounting to $13,351,346.

McKinley is fast becoming the champion falsifier of his time. He well deserves the following language recently applied to him by the eminent statistical writer, Edward Atkinson, for another of his fabrications: "Can we justify the integrity of a speaker who stuffs a speech with such rubbish, except by losing all respect for his intelligence? McKinley's speeches are full of such blunders as this, proving that he has himself no real knowledge of the subject with which he deals."

WHY HE REJECTS HARRISON.

William Dudley Foulke Tells Why He Cannot Vote Again for Harrison.

William Dudley Foulke, of Indianapolis, who voted for Harrison in 1888, has broken with his party and is making speeches for Grover Cleveland. He states his reasons for the change as follows:

I do not want for president one who has secured his own nomination by a convention composed largely of his own officeholders, and who conducted his own campaign for renomination by wire from the White House.

I will not vote for a president who has declared that only the interests of the public service should suggest removals from office, and who removed Pearson and Burt in New York and Corse and Saltonstall in Boston to make way for politicians.

I will not vote for a president who declares that fitness and not party service should be the essential test in appointment, but who selects such men as David Martin and Sheriff Leeds, of Philadelphia; MacFarland, of Indiana, and ex-Governor Warmoth, of Louisiana, to help him in carrying on the government.

I will not vote for a president who disposes of a cabinet office to a man who raises a vast campaign fund, and who had not shown any previous qualifications for political preferment.

I will not vote for a party which taxes the many for the benefit of a few, and invites other countries to the Columbian exposition to encourage mutual trade and then raises the barriers of McKinleyism to prevent such trade.

I will not vote for a party which makes its tariff policy the means of raising an enormous campaign fund to corrupt and debauch the suffrage.

I will not vote for a party which urges tariff legislation for the benefit of the laborer and then gives its profits to the manufacturer, and fails to protect the workingman from the competition of the immigration of the cheapest labor of Europe.

Not a Schedule, but a Principle.

The protectionist says with strange inconsistency: "We do not wish protection against all countries. We do think that some things may be cheapened without much harm—sugar perhaps—and so we will pass a law giving the president power to declare reciprocity with some nations and under some conditions."

The Democrat says: "If a little reciprocity is well, more is better, but our merchants and farmers do not need to be taught by a president, however able a lawyer he may be, with whom it is best to trade or what things it is well to get cheap. Let them alone, and the combined wisdom of their experience will work out far better results than can any congress, president or governmental agency whatever."

It must not be supposed that the Democratic party, if it comes into power, will not recognize existing conditions created by past tariff laws or "will seek to enlarge the atmosphere of liberty otherwise than by resistance to new encroachments and by patient and statesmanlike endeavor to remove wherever practicable the restraints of regulation." Such has been its course in the past, and such it will be in the future. All attempts to create alarm lest changes be inconsiderately or violently made in tariff schedules are insincere and disingenuous. The Democratic convention, like the Republican, "did not adopt a schedule, but a principle."—Ex-Secretary Charles S. Fairchild in Independent.

MAY SEVER RELATIONS

China Said to be Getting Tired of This Country.

MINISTER TSUI PREPARING TO LEAVE

He Has Not Called at the State Department for Months—"There Are Other Ways of Treating the United States Besides Retaliation."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Notwithstanding the published statement that the Chinese Government has appointed a new Minister to this country to succeed Mr. Tsui Kwo Yin, there is not a single indication of such a thing on file at the State Department, nor has our Minister at the Chinese court informed our government of the proposed change. The Chinese Legation here has no official advices of a change, and so the matter stands in the public view.

The departure of the Chinese Consul-General, Mr. Shen Woon, from New York has put a somewhat new phase on the affair, and the intimation that Minister Tsui is preparing to leave adds to the rumor. It is intimated in diplomatic circles that China is preparing to sever her diplomatic relations with the United States; that Mr. Shen Woon's departure is the first move; that Mr. Tsui will withdraw, and instead of a new Minister being appointed, the Legation here will be left in charge of a charge d'affaires.

The relations between the United States and China have been somewhat strained ever since the Blair incident. That ended, it will be remembered, by a very sharp letetr from Acting-Secretary Wharton to China and the resignation of ex-Senator Blair. Then came the Chinese Exclusion act and the correspondence between Mr. Tsui and his government. Although never fully published, enough of this correspondence got into print to show that China intended to act in the matter. The Chinese are always slow, but the last letter to Mr. Tsui contained a sentence which is now considered significant. It read: "There are other ways of treating the United States besides retaliation," and it was then interpreted to mean a severance of diplomatic relations.

Of late the newspaper attacks on Mr. Tsui in relation to the visit of a New York lawyer here has added to the Minister's discomfiture. But the most significant straw in the whole matter is that of late the Chinese Minister has not appeared in any of the diplomatic relations with the United States. He has not called at the State Department for months, and he did not go to Chicago to represent his country at the World's Fair dedicatory exercises, but sent his first secretary, who will be charge d'affaires if he withdraws.

These facts are therefore causing the talk of a probable severance of diplomatic relations between China and the United States.

A GREAT GAS FIND.

Immense Pressure Discovered on a Farm Near Manordale, Pa.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Nov. 4.—New life has been infused into the natural gas business in the famous Murraysville region, the original source of supply for Pittsburg. Duff Brothers of Pittsburg, who have been drilling a well on the Cline farm near Manordale, have struck an immense pressure of gas in the fifth sand, 2,240 feet below the surface, or about 400 feet below the original Murraysville sand, which supplied Pittsburg for years.

The well shows a pressure of 500 pounds a minute, and when properly tested will be increased to 600 and possibly 700 pounds. The well is located about midway between Murraysville and Grapeville. The sand is about thirty-five feet thick.

Prominent gas men say this well will open a new field and will insure plenty of gas for years.

Hunting Pigs and Goats in Far-Away New Zealand.

Hard Tramps Through Field and Forest —The Viciousness of Wild Boars—A Breathless Moment—Tragedy in Hunting on Horseback.

[Special New Zealand Letter.]

It was a party of four sturdy young fellows who found themselves after a weary and dangerous journey of six days' from Westport on the top of Mount William, of the southern Alps of New Zealand, in November, 1887.

They had pitched their tent in a gully that seemed to have been the refuge of mosquitoes for centuries, but by lying close to the fire and smoking heavy tobacco they managed to get a little rest. They had brought four dogs with them for the purpose of hunting the pig, but whether it was advisable to take them after the goats was a matter of much discussion. Finally it was agreed upon to leave them tied up at the tent.

Early in the following morning they set out and soon found that a herd of goats had lately been near their last camp. They hastened on in pursuit through a wild, weird country. Sometimes they struggled through a dense forest with thick underwood that greatly impeded their advance and tore their stout buckskin clothing into shreds. Low-growing, beautiful ferns, rough, gigantic brakes and millions of parasitical plants with white and red flowers surrounded them on every side, while a hundred singing birds warbled and flitted merrily from tree to tree. Then again they would be forced to creep on hands and knees over and under immense bowlders, or, with the greatest difficulty, to round a craggy precipice, where the slightest giddiness meant a horrible death in the chasm that waited silently below to destroy the men who had dared to tempt its cruelty.

But suddenly dangers were forgotten, for beyond a sharp turn, and about half a mile away, a herd of goats was seen lazily picking up a little food or chewing their cuds; several little kids gamboled about in the heyday of youth and carelessness, while a noble specimen of a buck stood contemplating his kingdom. Approaching warily under shelter of trees or rocks, and against the wind, we could see that he was a magnificent creature, standing over four feet high, with colossal ringed horns of about twenty inches in length; his beard was only a few inches from the ground, and a straggly black and white coat of long hair gave him a formidable appearance and made him look much larger than he really was. Our eyes watered with delight as we took stock of him, and each mentally determined to secure the prize. As we came slowly nearer and nearer the "billy" became more and more suspicious of some unseen enemy who was threatening the safety of himself or some of his subjects. He sniffed the wind, looked up and down and all around, walked majestically hither and thither, while his family rose and followed. Something had frightened him; what could it be? Look! they are scared and are scampering off.

An expletive escapes each man's lips as we find all our hopes so rudely shattered. But what was the cause? See, there it is. "Well, I'm blest," exclaimed Jack Pettit. "Look, Nero's got loose and has followed us." Sure enough, there was the dog. Every gun was leveled at the poor panting beast to punish him for his faithfulness, but better impulse saved him. No more work for that day. We slept on the spot. In the morning we secured Nero more firmly and started out again. After two hours' perilous walking we again sighted the same herd. We came upon them unexpectedly in a patch of small scrub three hundred feet away on the side of a precipice that ran down to a sparkling cascade. The scrub prevented us from using our old-fashioned muzzle loaders, so we quietly and carefully cut pieces of the ti-ti tree, and forming them into a kind of bower that hid us from sight slowly and cautiously advanced. Each of us wished to get the buck for the sake of his horns, so we cast lots for the first shot. George Williams won. Inch by inch, and foot by foot, nearer we drew while the stones disturbed by the goats above rattled not over pleasantly down upon us and threatened an avalanche. The wind was blowing strongly against us. Everything was in our favor. Now we are only one hundred yards away.

A little nearer and we are all right. Keep cool, boys, and don't get excited. Now is the chance! There are seven goats just ahead of us, and in their midst stands the lordly male. Now every gun is thrown to the shoulder. No missing them this time. George has the first shot. He seems a little nervous. He fires, and down drops the she goat on the right of the buck. Ere our astonishment is over Kerrigan has fired and brought down the buck. Two more reports and two more goats fall, cleanly shot. The others have disappeared.

After three days' hunting we left this field of danger and sport to seek another.

Accompanied by our dogs we started across the ranges for Motucka valley, between which and us many wild pigs scour the forest and field. On our journey, which lasted a week, we dined daily on royal fare. A young kid would serve us better than the most dainty dish of venison, while pigeons, kakas and tuis formed a meal fit for a Lucullus.

Now for the pigs. A few years ago the descendants of Capt. Cook's gift to the Maoris became so numerous in this fertile land that they caused a serious annual loss to the farmers. For in their search for roots they destroyed the grass and hence the food of sheep and cattle. A bonus was offered of half a crown—a little more than half a dollar for every pig. This reward aroused the slumbering energies of natives and hunters and hundreds of pig killers made a handsome living. Their method was to hunt the pigs with dogs trained to fly at the grunters and hold them by the ear until the hunters could give the struggling beasts the coup de grace by sticking them to death with a long pole belted at the end with a short heavy piece of iron or steel.

Now, however, the pigs are not so numerous, although there are plenty for sport. We had provided ourselves with hunting spears and determined to have as much fun as possible. On the eighth day, as we were meandering through the brush with our dogs at our heels, we were startled by a porkine grunt in our vicinity. The dogs broke away at once to a large clump of thorny bush and out rushed a big sow with a litter of squealing young. She dashed straight at the first dog, but not being the kind of game we sought we called off the dogs. The mother, by the love of offspring infuriated, bit, smashed and trampled maliciously around. Her cries brought help in the shape of two huge brown and black boars. What savage-looking brutes they are! How quickly they cover the intervening distance! Large flakes of foam fall from their jaws and bespatter legs, face and breast, and their eyes gleam with a wicked flash. Ha, that is the kind of game we want. The dogs recognize a higher and mightier foe and go for the boars. Each of the dogs springs at an ear, but both are thrown off as if they were rats.

Men and hounds feel that there is to be a warm struggle. We have cast our guns and other impediments from us and abide our time, spear in hand. The boars strive to slash the dogs with their long curled tusks, but the hounds nimbly evade them, at the same time biting at the flank and ear of the pigs. The latter see us and make desperate efforts to shake off the dogs and attack the men. The excitement increases, for the sow has come upon the scene, and in self-defense we are obliged to dispatch her. One of the boars, with a dog hanging to its legs, makes a rush towards George Williams. He stands coolly awaiting the onslaught with his feet firmly planted on the earth and holding the spear poised in both hands. He is a strong man, and we are all sure that he will be lucky this time in downing the first game. Zish—goes the spear into the side of the boar, but instead of falling it rushes on, forcing poor George to the ground. Before we can come to his aid the maddened beast has gashed him twice in the thigh. With a cry of horror we see the ground wet with his blood. But, before the brute has time to do further injury the three of us have sent home our spears. Even then the boar tries to rise and do us battle, but Kerrigan falls across him and sends his sheath knife deep into the heart. One of us attends to George, while the other two defend themselves against the second boar, which is killed only after a fierce struggle.

George Williams received two very severe flesh wounds, seven and nine inches long and about one and one-half inches deep respectively. They were sewed together, and George was carried to the camp, where we were obliged to remain a fortnight before the sufferer could proceed.

Sometimes wild boars are hunted on horseback with spears, and this fashion is doubly dangerous. I was once present at a hunt of this kind in which a wealthy young Nelsonian was literally gashed to death, after he had been thrown from his horse by a big black boar, who cut open his stomach with a stroke as clean and straight as that a knife could make.

Gave Himself Away.

The young man had been telling the old lady quite a lot about himself.

"You remind me," she said, "of a story I once read."

"What was it, may I ask?"

"Oh, I don't remember the story at all," she exclaimed, artlessly, "but I remember it didn't have any moral to it."—Detroit Free Press.

CLAIMS OF BOTH SIDES

Republicans and Democrats Name States Hoped For.

LITTLE BETTING IN WASHINGTON.

Backward About Wagering on the General Result — Government Employes Leaving the Capital for Home—Governor Flower Issues a Proclamation Regarding the Election.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Both camps of the national parties are now figuring on what States they expect to carry. The lines are now definitely drawn, and there will be very little fighting between now and next Tuesday. The main thing will be to perfect the plans already made.

The following is said to be the table of Republican expectations:

Alabama, 11; California, 9; Colorado, 4; Idaho, 3; Illinois, 24; Indiana, 15; Iowa, 13; Massachusetts, 15; Michigan, 8; Minnesota, 9; Nebraska, 8; New Hampshire, 4; New York, 36; North Dakota, 3; Ohio, 23; Oregon, 4; Pennsylvania, 32; Rhode Island, 4; South Dakota, 3; Vermont, 4; Washington, 4; West Virginia, 6; Wisconsin, 12; total, 254.

It will be noticed that the States of Nevada and Montana do not appear in this list.

Chairman Carter says he is confident of the result. Joseph H. Manley says the Solid South is sure to be broken.

A member of the Democratic National Committee said this morning:

"We expect to carry the Solid South with its 159 votes, New York 36 votes, Indiana 15, New Jersey 10, Connecticut 6, Michigan 6, Wisconsin 12. Total, 244."

The Democrats likewise leave out of their table Nevada and Montana. Thus both of the parties consider that those States are doubtful ones. This is about all they will admit. Their united claims, it will be seen, amount to 498 votes, 54 more than there are in the college.

The Democratic Committeeman said they were prepared to stand by the table they issued. He said the entire committee had confidence in the result as there laid down.

GOING HOME TO VOTE.

Government Employes Leaving Washington in Large Numbers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—There was a very general clearing out of government employes from the Executive Departments to-day for the far western States to vote at the approaching election, and to-morrow will witness the departure of several thousand for points in the eastern states and in the south.

It is estimated that 8,000 voters will leave or have left the District of Columbia to exercise the right of suffrage.

Both of the great political parties are very active here in sending voters home and committees are scouring the city in search of voters.

The Democrats are very active as to New York voters and to those who vote in the adjoining Congressional districts of Maryland and Virginia, several thousand of whom are engaged in business here.

Acting Secretary Spalding left for Michigan to vote at the general election.

Assistant Secretary Nettleton is acting Secretary of the Treasury.

Most of the big guns now here will get away by Monday.

BETTING IN WASHINGTON.

Comparatively Little Being Done—Harrison a Slight Favorite.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—There is comparatively little betting here, and what little there is gives Harrison the preference, the general ratio being 10 to 8 on Harrison for the general result. There is a marked shyness as regards the success of either candidate in Indiana or New York. Andy Gleason holds $10,000 that he will bet on Harrison in a lump or parcels. D. D Rogers will bet anything from $1,000 to $10,000 on Harrison's re-election.

A leading New York bookmaker put up $10,000 here on Harrison during the two weeks of the Ivy City races, but was finally compelled to take his money back with him, as he could find no takers save for insignificant amounts.

Some few bets of $500 and $300, even money on the general result, have been made, but, as a general thing, there is less betting this year than ever before.

Gov. Flower's Proclamation.

ALBANY, Nov. 5.—Gov. Flower has issued a proclamation calling upon all election officers, all district-attorneys, all sheriffs, and all peace officers to see that the laws of the State are rigidly enforced, to the end that good order may prevail at the polls, and the right of honest franchise be sacredly guarded; and he gives warning that all failures on the part of such public officers to discharge their full duty in the complete enforcement of the laws shall be considered sufficient cause for their removal.

Crazed By Remorse.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 5.—It is reported that A. W. Bennett, whose alleged negligence in delivering an order caused a railroad collision here a few days ago, in which two persons were killed, has been crazed by remorse, and is now wandering in the woods a raving maniac. The coroner's jury held him responsible for the collision. He is 50 years old and has a wife and family.

Charleston's Celebration Ended.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 5.—Charleston's Earthquake Festival came to a close last night with a magnificent pyrotechnic display, which was witnessed by 60,000 people. The week has been an unusually bright one, and will long be remembered by the participants. The warships will probably remain here for several days.

Treasury Department Statement.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—A statement prepared at the Treasury Department shows that there is now circulated $65,673,000 of one and two-dollar U. S. notes. In 1881 the amount was $45,000,000 when it ran down in 1885 to $35,000,000.

Mr. McLeod in Boston.

BOSTON, Nov. 5.—President McLeod, of the Reading Railroad, arrived in Boston last evening. It is said that he will make a thorough inspection of the Boston and Maine property, and will spend several days in going over the road.

PROBABLY TEN LIVES LOST.

The Oil Laden Bark Norcross Burned in the Seine.

PARIS, Nov. 5—The British bark, Norcross, which left Philadelphia on October 2d for Rouen, France, with a load of petroleum, has been burned in the Seine, with a loss of certainly three and probably ten lives.

Captain Roop, who was in command of the Norcross, had his wife on board with him, and both were saved.

How the fire originated is not known. When it was discovered it had gained considerable headway and every effort to prevent it from spreading to the petroleum was in vain.

As soon as the petroleum caught fire a series of explosions followed, and a bright flame shot up in the air, while dense smoke almost hid the bark from those on shore.

The crew who escaped the flames rushed to the side and leaped into the river. The Captain's wife was saved chiefly by her husband's exertions. Five others were also saved.

The remains of three, horribly burned, were found in the river, and seven others are missing and it is thought they have gone to the bottom. Several of the survivors were injured by the burning petroleum, which floated on the water in a fiery state some distance about the vessel, making approach to the scene of the wreck dangerous.

DIARY OF THE SULTAN'S MIND.

Abdul Hamid's Lifelong Friend and Favorite Physician Arrested.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 5.—Mavroyeni Pasha, the Sultan's favorite physician, has been arrested in consequence of his revengeful wife sending to the Sultan her husband's diary, in which daily notes were made of the variable conditions of the Sultan's mind.

Mavroyeni Pasha had been a trusted friend and confidant of the Sultan since the latter's childhood.

He married a French woman, whose scandalous life has twice involved him in disgrace and finally compelled him to apply for a divorce.

DIDN'T FULFILL HIS CONTRACT.

Thompson to Recieve No More Money for the New York Columbian Pageant.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5. — The Auditing Committee of the Columbian Celebration Committee, after much deliberation, has decided not to make any more payments to Captain Thompson for the night pageant.

The chairman of the night parade committee reported that Captain Thompson did not live up to his contract. The committee say that Captain Thompson failed in this in more than one respect, and specify that he failed to furnish costumes to the paraders as had been stipulated in the contract, and also that he failed to furnish illumination or pyrotechnic display.

SHORT SKIRTS AT ANN ARBOR.

College Girls Don the Jenness-Miller "Rainy-Day Dress."

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 5.—During the prevalent rainy weather dozens of the college girls here have appeared on the streets in the Jenness-Miller "rainy-day dress."

The skirt is plain and tight-fitting, but the striking feature is that it reaches only about half way from the knee to the ankle. To make up for this gap the college girls wear long gaiters, and can now splash through the mud as well as the boys.

They have been threatening to adopt this suit ever since Mrs. Jenness-Miller lectured here last summer.

CLEVELAND'S WINTER HOME.

With His Wife and Baby Ruth He Will Sojourn at Lakewood.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Nov. 5.—Mrs. Grover Cleveland, wife of ex-President Cleveland, is again to become a resident of this place. The Cleveland cottage is to be put in condition for early occupancy and Mrs. Cleveland, accompanied by Baby Ruth, will take possession, it is said, early next week.

The ex-President will remain in New York until after the election, when he will join the family here. It is expected that they will winter here.

Saved From Fire by a Student.

BOSTON, Nov. 5.—About 1 a. m., J. D. Hubbell, a Harvard student of the class of '94, while returning from Thursday night's Republican torchlight parade, in which he participated, saw fire burst from the upper windows of the four-story brick building 24 and 26 Dover street. He rang in an alarm and then forced his way into the house and aroused the sleeping inmates, who escaped in their night clothes. Hubbell was nearly overcome by smoke, but managed to get out of a second-story window and cling to a sign until rescued by firemen.

No Decision in Dr. Newton's Case.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Bishop Potter was seen this morning in regard to the report that Dr. Newton had been exonerated of the charge of having uttered sayings of a heretical character by the commission appointed to investigate. The Bishop said that no decision had been reached, despite reports to the contrary.

Denmark Pardons Ex-Consul Ryder.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—Secretary of State Foster has received a cable message from the United States Minister to Denmark, saying that the Danish government has pardoned Henry D. Ryder, late U. S. Consul at Copenhagen, who was recently convicted of embezzlement and sentenced to imprisonment.

THE LINGO TRIAL.

Every Effort Being Made to Connect Mrs. Miller's Husband With the Crime.

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 5.—Ex-Judge Wescott, senior counsel for Francis Lingo is trying hard to prove that John Miller murdered his wife. His theory is that the finding of a bloody glove of his wife in a sewing machine drawer in the dwelling by Mrs. Mick, one glove being on the body when it was found in the bush lot, and the alleged statement of Miller that his wife's throat was cut, before the body was discovered, go to implicate the husband.

When the afternoon session of the court was begun the cross-examination of Mary Collins was again taken up. She said she saw one of the gloves while wet, apparently with water, as her sister lay in the ice box, and never saw the other glove.

The dead woman's clothing was offered in evidence.

Charles Wilson, colored, Miller's hired man, was the next witness. He testified that Lingo left the Miller residence on the day of the murder at 6:30 a. m. He (Wilson) knew that Miller was going to Camden that day, and saw him when he returned.

The witness came to Camden the next morning (Friday), but did not know that Mrs. Miller had not been at home the night before. He did not sleep there.

On cross examination Wilson testified that Miller said nothing about his wife's absence except that he was going to the station. The witness was asked if he saw Mrs. Miller go in or out of the bush lot and said he did not.

County Physician Izzard next told of the finding of the body, and as he began to narrate the examination of Lingo's clothing and how he had taken the prisoner's undershirt because it had spots on it that resembled blood, the court adjourned.

Judicial Criticism of Gen. Butler's Book.

BOSTON, Nov. 5.—Gen. Butler won and lost the same suit yesterday. It was the suit for breach of contract which the Jewett Publishing Company brought against him. They demanded $85,000 damages because he wouldn't let them publish his book. Judge Holmes, of the Supreme Court, rules that Gen. Butler did break his contract, but he further decided that the book was worthless to any publisher because the book was not a success, and that damages were not recoverable.

The Prohibition of Live Canadian Cattle Importation.

SURPRISE AT THE ANNOUNCEMENT.

Latest Sensation in the Deacon Case—Russia's Greatest Warship Launched—The Sultan's Favorite Physician Arrested—Cream Respited—Tax Riots in Sicily—Other Cable News.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The prohibition by the Board of Agriculture of the free importation of Canadian cattle has caused great surprise. Henceforth Canadian cattle must be slaughtered at the ports at which they are landed.

This order is the result of the discovery of pleuro-pneumonia among Canadian cattle landed at Dundee.

The cattle had become scattered in Scotland and Northern England, and by the orders of the Board of Agriculture 1,200 head of cattle with which they had mingled have been slaughtered.

The Canadian Government had used its best efforts to avert this action and it was supposed that the reports from Canada as to the non-existence of pleuro-pneumonia, backed by the representations of Sir Charles Tupper High Commissioner to England, and the two members of the Canadian Ministry now in London, Premier Abbott and Finance Minister Foster, had reassured the authorities.

EDINBURGH, Nov. 5.—The slaughter of one thousand two hundred head of cattle, brought from Canada to Scotland on the steamship Huron and Monakeaton and supposed to be infected with pleuro-pneumonia, has caused many protests from the farmers of Fifeshire, Forthshire and Forfarshire.

The Board of Agriculture proceeded undoubtedly without sufficient investigation, and thereby have caused severe losses among the men who accepted deliveries of the suspected cattle.

The board was confident that the cattle which had died had pleuro-pneumonia, but the examination of the lungs of two by eminent veterinary surgeons shows that the disease was broncho-pneumonia. The farmers of the three counties in question will make a formal protest against the board's summary action.

FLED WITH THE CHILD.

Mrs. Deacon's Action After Her Defeat at Paris.

PARIS, Nov. 5.—Another great sensation has developed in the Deacon case.

As soon as the Tribunal of the Seine delivered its decision dismissing Mrs. Deacon's suit for divorce and ordering that the eldest child, then in a convent, be delivered up to Mr. Deacon, Mrs. Deacon hastened secretly to the convent of Our Lady of the Assumption in the department of the Marne, bent upon carrying off the child, and thus defying the authority of the French Court and baffling Mr. Deacon.

The sympathies of the nuns of the convent and of the people of the neighborhood have been with Mrs. Deacon, who was known to the latter as "La Princesse Americaine," and was much beloved for her goodness and kindness to the poor and suffering.

When Mrs. Deacon arrived, the news of the court's decision was unknown at the convent, and Mrs. Deacon was admitted as usual.

But little is known of what occurred within the walls.

Mrs. Deacon had a carriage at the gate, and she seemed calm and serene as usual, evidently suppressing her emotions in order not to excite suspicion.

She asked and received leave to take the older of the children to ride, and after kissing the younger tenderly, she walked with the former to the carriage. At first she drove slowly, but increased her speed as the convent and the adjoining group of houses disappeared from view.

Mr. Deacon drove up to the convent shortly after his wife had gone. He was amazed and maddened when he learned the situation, but no more amazed than the Lady Superior when she learned the strategy of the good Mrs. Deacon.

Mr. Deacon at once appealed to the police who readily joined him in attempting to overtake his wife.

It seems impossible that she could escape from France, as the police everywhere have been warned to be on the look-out, and to arrest her and the child wherever found.

Deacon is determined to get possession of the child.

POISONER NEILL RESPITED.

The London Murderer Gets a Stay of Seven Days.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—Thomas Cream Neill, the woman poisoner, convicted of murder and under the sentence of death, who was to be hanged on Tuesday next, has been respited for one week.

Home Secretary Asquith intimates that the respite is granted solely to give time for the receipt of certain documents from America supposed to have a material bearing on the case. Should, however, the result of the inquiry be adverse to the prisoner the law must take its course.

The news of the respite has imparted to Neill renewed confidence.

RUSSIA'S GREAT WAR-SHIP.

The Cruiser Rurik Launched in the Presence of the Czar and Czarina.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the "Times" says that the Russian ironclad cruiser Rurik, the largest vessel of the kind ever built in Russia, was launched yesterday in the presence of the Czar and Czarina.

She is 435 feet long, 67 feet beam, 10,933 tons burden, and her engines are 13,250 indicated horse power.

It is believed that she will be able to cover the voyage from Cronstadt to Vladivostock, a distance of 19,000 miles, without coaling on the way.

Tax Riots in Sicily.

ROME, Nov. 5.—Tax riots are reported from Barcelona, Sicily. An additional levy was resisted by the people; the collectors were stoned, and the windows of the Municipal buildings were smashed by a mob. The gendarmes were unable to restore order, and several were injured in an attempt to disperse the rioters. Eventually the military broke through the mob. Ten rioters were wounded in the charge.

$500. Given IN Christmas Presents.

Competition open to Women Only.

For the best and most effective article, suggestion or phrase for popular use in advertising the merit of Cleveland's Baking Powder, a present of $200 will be given; for the ten next best $20 each; and for the ten next best $10 each. Experience in writing advertisements is not necessary. A simple statement, a happy expression or even a suggestion may prove the best.

Conditions:—Competition open to women only. Contributions must not contain over 200 words. Verses if sent must not contain over six lines. Write your suggestion on one sheet of paper, your full name and address on another, and mail as below. All communications must reach us by December 24th. The awards will be made as soon thereafter as possible.

Address Secretary of Cleveland Baking Powder Co., 81 Fulton St., New York.

Some Facts that may give you a hint or suggestion:

Cleveland's baking powder is perfectly pure and wholesome.

It does not contain alum, ammonia or any other adulterant.

Everything used in making it is named on the label.

Consumers know exactly what they are eating.

It is the strongest of all pure cream of tartar powders.

A rounded teaspoonful will do as much as a heaping one of any other.

Food raised with it does not dry up quickly, as when made with other powders.

It is more convenient and more economical than the ordinary cream of tartar and soda.

The latest official reports show it to be first class, and first in its class.

The U. S. Government buys it for the Army officers.

Government Chemists, State Assayers and other official authorities testify to its superiority.

Writers on domestic science, as Marion Harland, Mrs. McBride and Mrs. Parker, endorse it.

Teachers of cooking, as Mrs. Lincoln, Mrs. Rorer and Mrs. Dearborn, prefer it.

"These are some of its points of excellence; others may have occurred to some of the thousands of women who are using it every day. Other facts are given in our cook book. Mailed free.

MERCIER ACQUITTED.

Canada's ex-Premier Exonerated of the Charge of Boodling.

QUEBEC, Nov. 5.—After Mr. Belleau had finished addressing the jurors in the Mercier-Pacaud trial, Judge Wurtele made his charge to the jury, which was very favorable to both Mercier and Pacaud. He advised them not to take any cognizance of the first count in the indictment, viz., for having conspired to defraud Her Majesty, as it was clearly proven that the so-called Langlais contract was in reality no contract at all, as it was not signed by the Lieutenant-Governor. Consequently, the government, not being bound by that contract, could not lose anything, and, therefore, the defendants could not have conspired to defraud Her Majesty.

The second count, for conspiracy to defraud Lacaisse d'Economie, was the only one upon which the jury could deliberate. His Honor repeated the charge in French and asked the jurors what time they would require to bring in a verdict.

"Ten minutes," replied the foreman, and the immense crowd present then knew that the jurors had decided upon their verdict. It was whispered around that a demonstration would be given to the defendants as soon as the verdict was rendered.

Therefore, while the jurors were deliberating, Judge Wurtele requested the spectators not to make any demonstration, as he would be obliged to punish somebody for contempt of court if such an attempt were made.

The jurors returned to the court at 6 o'clock and, as was expected, rendered a verdict of "Not Guilty" against both defendants.

Messrs. Mercier and Pacaud were immediately surrounded by their friends who were anxious to congratulate them. Several hundred spectators awaited them at the court house door, and on their exit they were cheered to the echo.

Mr. Mercier was then escorted through several streets, being carried on the shoulders of some of the sympathizers, and upon reaching the residence of Mr. Lemiux, one of his counsel, the ex-Prime Minister addressed a large crowd, and was followed by several other well known orators.

A grand torchlight procession is being prepared for to-night in this city and Mr. Mercier will leave for Montreal to-morrow afternoon, where his friends are making preparations to receive him.

Thus ended the most important trial ever known in the Canadian Criminal Court.

Brutal Outrage on a Student.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Nov. 5.—A gang of masked students of Wittenberg College perpetrated a brutal outrage Wednesday evening upon William C. Priestley, a student from South Charleston. He was thrown under a hydrant and held for five minutes until thoroughly soaked. The gang then tied him flat to a rail, and, beating him in the face enroute, dragged him to a creek and, after shaving part of his head, threw him, still tied to the rail, into the water, where his cries finally brought help. The faculty will investigate.

Her Death Suspicious.

KEYPORT, N. J., Nov. 5.—The county prosecutor will be called upon to investigate the death of Maggie Boyce, aged 23, of this place. The girl died at the house of Herman Potter under circumstances which indicate that she is the victim of malpractice. She was recently driven from home by her father. Potter gave her shelter. She became sick and a child was prematurely born. No doctor was present. An examination after death showed evidence of malpractice.

Held for Her Husband's Death.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 5.—Mrs. Mary Shields has been held by the coroner's jury to answer for the death of her husband, Peter Shields. The latter was found dead on Wednesday morning at Schwergert's dye works where he was employed as a watchman, and his death is alleged to have been caused by injuries received from vitriol burns, a pitcher of which his wife threw at him.

(From Grover Cleveland's Letter of Acceptance.)

We anticipate with calmness the misrepresentation of our motives and purposes, instigated by a selfishness which seeks to hold in unrelenting grasp its unfair advantage under present tariff laws. We will rely upon the intelligence of our fellow-countrymen to reject the charge that a party comprising a majority of our people is planning the destruction or injury of American interests; and we know they cannot be frightened by the specter of impossible free trade.

"Do they not tell you that Grover Cleveland will carry this State by 10,000, but that they expect to defeat George T. Werts by money? Is not that on every lip? Does it not come to you from your Republican friends? Is this true? Is our liberty, our right of suffrage, to be wounded and broken down in the person of th father of free ballots, and that by the introduction of large amounts of money in our State!—Attorney-General Stockton's Speech.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Warren Engine company is to have a new hose cart harness.

—The classes in English branches for foreign-speaking young men, and light gymnastics, will meet at the Y. M. C. A. to-night.

—The United Order of Independent Odd Ladies will give a fair in Saengerbund Hall Nov. 9—12. There will be dancing every evening.

—There will be no regular communication of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M. in Masonic Hall. Tuesday evening next, as it is a legal holiday.

—The principal speaker at Music Hall, next Monday evening, will be Charles S. Fairchild, who was President Cleveland's Secretary of the Treasury.

—A clever company of comedians, singers and burlesque artists is promised in "The Kid" which is to be presented here with Dotty Pine in the title role, next Wednesday evening.

—On the recommendation of Mayor Saunders, the borough lamps committee will look into the matter of re-arranging the street lamps for more efficient lighting, to report at the December meeting.

—The borough council will make the Edison Electric Light company pay the contract penalty for lamps left unlighted. Double the amount charged per lamp will be deducted for each lamp left unlighted each night.

—Attention of the borough council was directed by A. E. Faber last night to the dangerous condition of the sidewalk at Lebbeus Martin's property on Mercer avenue, and to other sidewalks. The matter was referred to the streets committee.

—The cast of "The Kid" to be played at Music Hall, Wednesday evening next, includes: Miss Tillie Shields, Blanche Sherwood, Dottie Pine, Lena Bruce, Emma Carr, Lou Skillman, Carrie Richardson, Ed. Chrissie, W. H. Williams, James J. Murray and others.

—George T. Werts will make just the same kind of a Governor as he was a Senator—honest, industrious, watchful of the public interests; considerate of all interests; attentive to all men; careful in his search for the right, and fearless in its performance. He is the creture of no man and of no interest. His partisanship is as broad as it is faithful; his ability is proven by his public works, and his independence needs no attestation. He will be a Governor of and for the people, and the people want just that kind of a Governor.

OBSTRUCTIONISTS.

NORTH PLAINFIELD BOROUGH IS FULL OF THEM.

They Are Fighting Against Street Railway Extension Through Somerset Street, and Make Absurd and Unreasonable Demands of the Company, Which May Mean Abandonment of Rapid Transit Altogether.

Unexpected and unreasonable opposition to the borough extension of the Plainfield street railway was developed at last night's meeting of the North Plainfield council.

The requisite list of consents and map of route had not yet been filed, so definite action could not be taken, but the proposed ordinance was read in sections and informally discussed by councilmen and citizens.

A few communications were read opposing a street railway on Somerset street, notably from R. N. Verdon, L. Verdon, and P. M. French.

The chief verbal objectors to the scheme were people who do n't live on or near Somerset street, and who under flimsy pretexts wanted the road run only to their own section of the backwoods.

When fault could n't be found on any more serious thing, such trivial objections as to the legal term "servants" as applied to street railway employes were made.

One man wanted the company to be compelled to keep the street paved from curb to curb, instead of only between rails and 18 inches each side, as in every sensible town. Another thought that the company ought to be forced to buy land and make their own road, "as to use Somerset street would spoil all North Plainfield".

John Goodwin was the loudest-mouthed against the use of Somerset street, and made ridiculous statements at which all had to laugh. At that he showed his good breeding by shouting: "Youse can all laugh—it only shows your ignorance!" This was nice language to use to Mayor Saunders and the councilmen. He went on to say that Somerset street was the only inlet to and outlet from the borough, and ought not to be given away, in defiance of the rights of the people, "to such a monopoly". The railway would block up the "ingine" house in case of fire, he claimed. Two persons applauded him.

It was urged by the obstructionists that Somerset street was too narrow for the railway; that the heavy carting of broken stone would be driven away from Somerset street on to thinly macadamized streets which would not stand the traffic; that there would be "rutting" of the street on each side of the tracks; that Duer street or North Broadway (prospective) would make a better route.

In spite of the statements that the cars on Somerset street would leave 11 feet passage-way on each side, that the traffic there would be divided between both sides of the street instead of "rutted" in the centre as now, that the people who now walk have as much right to consideration and to the use of Somerset street for their cars as the truckmen and carters, that the rail to be used was of a sort that could be easily followed and just as easily driven off of—in spite of these and other arguments, the obstructionists insisted that Somerset street should not be used. The opposition was so fierce that at last one man said in disgust that he should move out of such an anti-progressive community. He said that it was absurd to put the road on other than the main street, as then all business would go to Plainfield, and the Somerset street storekeepers would have to shut up shop to mow the grass in front of their doors; and as for North Broadway, that had been talked of for 20 years, and was no nearer opening now than a score of years ago. Ex-councilman Riker held that the people were standing in their own light. They had been too grasping on the proposed water-works contract, and had lost a taxable plant of $125,000 and now had to pay for service from a foreign corporation. It looked as though the street railway was to fizzle the same way.

Corporation counsel Reed said that the people should n't be too grasping, that the company was not over-anxious to come to North Plainfield; as its plant would cost $40,000 and it did not expect it to pay more than 5 per cent. on the investment; and too much opposition would drive it away altogether.

The discussion ended in the decision to postpone final consideration for one week.

Should Have Been Done Long Ago.

Borough councilman Hegeman last night praised the Plainfield councilmen for their public-spirited action in agreeing to help light Giraud avenue, which is exclusively a North Plainfield thoroughfare. The city will place a light at the rail bridge, and the borough one at the brook bridge. Thus a hitherto dark, lonely, thick-wooded section will be illuminated. The locality is now positively dangerous. One of the sidewalks terminates at the edge of a stone wall 12 feet high, over which the unwary pedestrian might easily tumble and break his neck.

Better Walks in the Borough.

The borough authorities are determined to improve the condition of sidewalks in North Plainfield. Last night the council gave the street committee power to lay board walks at 20, 42, 70, 35, 84, 100 and 88 Jackson avenue, and 85 to 99, 107 and 113 Manning avenue, at the expense of the property-holders, who have paid no attention to legal notices ordering them to lay such walks.

Athletes of the Present Day.

J. E. Sullivan, Secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union, President of the Pastime Athletic Club and athletic editor of The Sporting Times, writes:

"For years I have been actively connected with athletic sports. I always found it to my advantage to use ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS while in training, as they quickly remove soreness and stiffness; and when attacked with any kind of pains, the result of slight colds, I always used ALLCOCK'S with beneficial results. I have noticed that most athletes of the present day use nothing else but ALLCOCK'S PLASTERS."

VICTIMS OF A RABID DOG.

Three Persons Badly Bitten by a Canine Supposed to Be Mad.

A young bird dog owned by Bret Martin, of Monroe avenue, is supposed to have become mad, a day or two ago. At any rate it bit both Mr. Martin and his son. Yesterday they sent for a young lad who lives nearby named Howard Doty, and asked him to shoot the dog. He consented to do so, and at 8:30 this morning, while he was patting the dog, it jumped up, tore the sleeve of his coat, and made an ugly gash in his wrist with its fangs. He went to Dr. Fritts to have the wound dressed.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Lottie Birdsall, formerly of Brooklyn, is visiting her old friends in town.

Ex-Mayor L. V. F. Randolph will speak at the Memorial chapel at Washingtonville to-morrow evening.

Miss Grace Barlow entertained a large company of her friends in black dominos at her home, Prospect place, last evening.

James Blair of this city and Thomas King of Evona have been having a gay time at a party given by Mansfield Duckworth at Clinton.

Erkuries B. Dunham, uncle of postmaster E. R. Pope, died of pneumonia at Rahway, Wednesday, aged 87 years, 7 months and 16 days.

Chas. A. Tunison, of 141 Duer street, the last remaining son of a widowed mother, is in the last stages of consumption, and his death is a matter of only a little time.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Runyon gave a reception to their friends Thursday evening. There was dancing, and refreshments were served. During the evening Wallace Coriell gave a fine banjo selection, accompanied by Harry Runyon on the piccolo. Mrs. Runyon sang sweetly. The Arlington tennis club members all attended.

BY THE WAY.

—Three electric lights are to be placed on Stone avenue.

—There was a noticeable flurry of snow in town this morning.

—That's an unusually novel advertisement of Peck's to-day.

—There will be a special sale of buttercups and daisies at Tier's to-day.

—Peter Conde played at a tableaux entertainment at Bound Brook last night.

—The finest display of toys and games in the city is at Harper's, 75 Park avenue.

—The "saved wonder" and "favorite tenor" will be at Salvation hall at 8 to-night.

—A large assortment of Japanese goods may be found at Harper's, 75 Park avenue.

—Everybody welcome to the praise meeting in the W. C. T. U., rooms this evening at 8.

—You can get an excellent article in pure gum rubbers at Kenney's, and every pair is warranted.

—Hot chocolate and hot soda are now a specialty at the Plainfield pharmacy, T. S. Armstrong, manager.

—Two electric lights are to be placed on Mountain avenue near Westervelt, and two near the Children's Home.

—Powlison & Jones are doing a thriving business in furniture because their goods are substantial and handsome and their prices are low.

—G. Thorn photographed Miss Hunt's High school class and Miss Carrie Runyon's Grammar school class, yesterday to send pictures to the World's Fair.

—Geo. S. Randolph, of 49 Grandview avenue, will receive the election returns for the Union County Country Club at their club-rooms, Tuesday evening.

—Dr. J. H. Carman for the North Plainfield board of health has demanded of the council that they abate the nuisance of a foul-smelling sewer and catch-basin at Rockview, Mercer and Sycamore avenues.

—The North Plainfield board of health formerly had the borough council control its funds and meet its obligations. Now it has assumed its own responsibilities, handles its own cash, and pays its own bills.

—A Thanksgiving sale is to be given by the "Y's" on the 23d of Nov, in the rooms of the W. C. T. U., Crescent rink building. Home-made cakes, pies and candies, also fancy articles, will be on sale.

—The Christian Brethren now worshiping in the large room over the Dime Savings Institution, have leased the Laing's Hall building and will worship there when it is settled by building mover Jenkins on Madison avenue.

—White & VanArsdale's department store is growing in popularity every day. The best kind of inducements are offered in every department. A trip to their store will pay you. Their catalogue for November is out. Have you seen it? If not, call at their store and get one.

It's flying in the face of Nature to take the ordinary pill. Just consider how it acts. There's too much bulk and bustle, and not enough real good. And think how it leaves you when it's all over! Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets act naturally. They help Nature to do her own work. They cleanse and renovate, mildly but thoroughly, the whole system. Regulate it, too. The help that they give, lasts.

They're purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, the smallest, easiest, and best to take. Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels are promptly relieved and permanently cured. One tiny, sugar-coated Pellet for a gentle laxative—three for a cathartic.

They're the cheapest pill you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

You pay only for the good you get. This is true only of Dr. Pierce's medicines.

Lane's medicine moves the bowels each day. In order to be healthy this is necessary.

SOMERSET PROPHESIES.

The Campaign in Somerville Closes With Cleveland, Werts and All Other Democratic Candidates Safe in the County Except the Assemblyman—Revolt of the Colored Troops.

SOMERVILLE, Nov. 4.—Last night the leaders of both parties closed the campaign here with rousing mass meetings. Early in the evening the two bands which had been hired by the rival factions met at the corner of Railroad avenue and Main street. For a moment it was thought that a riot would ensue, but cooler judgment prevailed and the clash was averted by the Republican band taking the sidewalk and the other fellows the middle of the street. As they were both playing different airs, a block away one would think that the selection was "Ta ra ra".

The Democrats held forth in their wigwam in the eastern part of the town, where Charles H. Winfield talked for fully an hour to an enthusiastic audience. Heretofore the meetings have been not exactly slimly attended but a good many people have remained on the outside. Last night, Winfield held every man, woman and child spellbound until he finished. Not a seat was vacant and standing room was at a premium.

In the old skating rink situated in the extreme west end of town, now called Armory Hall, the Republicans partly filled the edifice and listened attentively to John S. Gibson, editor of the Newark Daily Advertiser, on the tariff question. He said a great many things which the people did not believe, and a great many he did not believe himself. He was followed by Mr. Gaskill, the leader of the State Republican League, who took delight in making an arraignment of the Abbett faction. It was expected last night that the colored drum corps would help make a noise at the Republican rally, but they did not. They have become disgusted with the treatment they have received from the party leaders. They have come out several times in conjunction with the Raritan band hired for the occasion and have never afterward been even treated to a cigar. As one of them said last night, "We don't want pay, but we would like to be treated like the white men are. We are going to North Branch Friday night and have to pay our own expenses, while the band gets good hard dollars for the same work. I only wish Col. Barcalow was living. Then things would be different." It is usually an easy thing to hold the colored voters in the "grand old party" in this county, but the way things look now there will be some "backsliders".

There has not been much betting on the result as yet.

In the early part of this week a prominent coal dealer in this vicinity put up $500 even that Cleveland would be elected, and $500 more that he would carry New York State. At present there is lots of money lying around ready to be placed on Cleveland being elected, with no takers. A West End club man has nearly two hundred dollars bet on the different States going in favor of Cleveland, and he stands a good chance to win it all. As the time draws near for determining the great question it is plain to be seen how Somerset will go. The county is very nearly evenly balanced, but will certainly go for Cleveland and Werts by about 150 majority. Even conservative Republicans admit this fact. The Democratic Surrogate, Coroner and Sheriff will pull through, but the chances are that a Republican Assemblyman will be elected.

Glad to Welcome the Mechanic Preacher.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The First Church of Christ, so long without a pastor, has at last determined upon a young member of the congregation familiarly known as "Brother Ben" or elder Hand, who has shared in turn with others, in absence of the founder of the church, the responsibilities of leader and exhorter. This young religionist is to be ordained pastor of the church the coming Sabbath evening. "Brother" Hand is not a collegiate graduate or student of any theological seminary, and therefore has no claim to didactic or polemic theology, but according to the usages of the society exhorts from personal experience and doctrinal beliefs circumscribed within the circle of symbolic baptism, to which this congregation thoroughly adheres and has been trained by its late pastor. It is a novel and exalted step for this young mechanic to take, and we wonder at his courage as we see him enter the arena to meet the Goliah of controversy shorn of ecclesiastical weapons. P.

—The awakening of the Democracy to the fact that it was possible for a man like George T. Werts to be defeated by a mincing money-bag like John Kean has not been without important results. The Democracy has laid aside the petty quarrels and differences which have a place only in the view of certain victory and have gotten together for the great purpose of electing a Democratic governor. The interests involved in the loss of the State are too great to be frittered away in disputes over individual wishes and disappointments, and no Democrat can serve his own or his party's interests by the election of a Republican governor. It is a recognition of this fact that has stirred up the Democracy to an earnest effort which means success for the State as well as National ticket.

Which

Will it be Gov. Kean or Gov. Werts? Those who believe in prestige think it will be the latter, yet the friends of the former can justly claim to be Kean-sighted. You may all be keen-sighted away into old age by proper care of the eyes. A call at Collier's will be of great value to you in this line.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

ROWLAND M. STOVER.

The Democratic Nominee for Surrogate of Union County Edits the Leading Law Journal, and Is Educated in Legal Work.

Rowland M. Stover was born in Pittstown, Rensellaer county, N. Y., in 1830. In 1856 he married the eldest daughter of Nathan Howard, jr., then editor and publisher of Howard's Practice Reports, which began in 1848 on the adoption of the old code of procedure, and has continued its even way as the acknowledged authority of the State of New York on questions of practice. In 1860 to a certain extent he gave up the practice of law and connected himself with Mr. Howard in the editorship and publication of that series of reports. In 1876 Mr. Stover moved from New York to Plainfield, N. J., since which time he has continued to edit "Howard's Practice Reports", which publication in 1884 had reached sixty-seven volumes, when he considered it advisable to commence a new series, which still continues as the recognized authority on questions of practice.

Mr. Stover at this time made a digest of "Howard's Practice Reports", consisting of two volumes of 1,000 pages each. In 1886 Mr. Stover commenced the publication of the New York State Reporter, which he continued to edit up to and including the twenty-fifth volume. He is at the present time engaged upon the editorship of a work entitled "Stover's Annotated Code of Civil Procedure", which will consist of three volumes of 1,000 pages each, all of which is now nearly complete.

Mr. Stover is a life-long Democrat, and when he took up his residence in Plainfield became actively identified in politics. He was elected to the common council of Plainfield in 1878 taking prominent part in that body's deliberations. He twice received the nomination for Assembly at the hands of his party. Though defeated he so reduced the Republican majority that he was only beaten by less than 100. In 1879 he was elected to the board of freeholders, the first and only Democratic freeholder ever elected from the city of Plainfield. Mr. Stover's nomination for Surrogate was the unanimous choice of the convention, no other name being presented to the convention as a candidate. He is a most respected citizen, a warm-hearted and genial friend and kind neighbor, well equipped in mental capacity for the responsible duties of the Surrogate's office, and if elected will reflect credit upon the party and prove an honor to the county of Union.

Mr. Van Deventer's Executors Lose Their Motion.

The supreme court has refused to allow the executors of Jeremiah Van Deventer to put in the defense of the statute of limitations to the suit brought by Peter Brunson. The executors neglected to put in the defense within the time limited by law, and then asked leave to amend by adding it later. Peter Brunson objected, and Judge Magie decided in his favor. The executors took the case to the supreme court, and that court now also decides in favor of Peter Brunson. The case will therefore have to be tried without permitting defendants to show that the claim is outlawed. The claim is for money borrowed over twenty years ago and for twenty odd years services as a farm laborer, book-keeper, etc. The case was argued in the supreme court by R. V. Lindabury and Judge Joseph Cross on behalf of the executors, and by Craig A. Marsh on behalf of Peter Brunson.

The winners are to be first team for the season.

The Democratic Enthusiasm Keeping Up.

In spite of the announcement that there would be no special meeting of the Cleveland and Stevenson Campaign club, last evening, the rooms were crowded and all present enjoyed the extreme pleasure of listening to J. W. Shrague, Esq., of Cincinnati. Mr. Shrague was one of the World's Fair commissioners to Europe. His address was eloquent and stirring.

At the close of the meeting, the executive committee of the club discussed ways and means for election day, and exchanged prophesies and congratulations with one another.

Their Fifth Annual Ball.

The Twilight Social club are making great preparations for their fifth annual ball which takes place in the Crescent rink, Thanksgiving Eve. The music will be by Voss's First Regiment band, and the grand march will begin at 9 p. m. The committee, consisting of James Laughlin, chairman; Joseph C. Blimm, secretary; Edward C. Searing, treasurer; Fred. S. Moore and Wm. H. Blimm, promise a pleasant evening to all who attend.

Interesting Meetings.

The 4.15 p. m., "hour-meetings" under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. every Sunday, are intensely interesting. Over twenty young men speak in the space of thirty minutes, interspersed with lively singing. If you wish to enjoy a right-down enthusiastic meeting that is the place to go. Subject for to-morrow "What the Gospel has done for me".

Services in the First Presbyterian church to-morrow will include communion service at 10:30 a. m., and evening service at 7:30. The Rev. Chas. E. Herring will occupy the pulpit at both services. The Sunday-school will meet at 2:30 p. m.

At the Methodist church to-morrow the Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut will preach morning and evening. The evening discourse will be the first of a series on "Reasons Why We Believe the Bible", illustrated with the blackboard, on the subject "A Threefold Cord".

In the Church of the Holy Cross to-morrow the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, rector, will officiate. There will be morning prayer, sermon and administration of the Holy Communion at 11 a. m., Sunday-school at 3 p. m., and even song at 4:30.

In the Congregational church to-morrow the Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor, will officiate. At the morning service the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered. The Sunday-school will meet at 2:45 p. m. The evening service will be in charge of the Christian Endeavor society at 7:30.

In the First Baptist church to-morrow there will be service of special prayer at 9:30 a. m., and preaching by the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes at 10:30 a. m.; A. H. Henderson, of the Students' Volunteer Movement, will address a service to be conducted by the Temple Builders at 7:30 p. m. The Sunday-school and the class for men will meet at 2:30 p. m.

The Salvation Army will hold special meetings at the Elkwood hall to-morrow, conducted by Captain Caygill, "the saved wonder", aided by the celebrated tenor singer, Mr. Bjorksten, from New York city, who before his conversion was Madame Nelson's favorite tenor singer. He sang with her at the marriage of the King of Sweden's son. The hours of meeting will be 11 a. m. and 3 and 8 p. m.

In the Church of Our Saviour, to-morrow, the Rev. S. P. Simpson, rector, will officiate. There will be Holy Communion at 7:30 a. m., litany, Holy Communion and sermon at 11 a. m., Sunday-school at 3:30 p. m., and evening prayer at 4:15. Two free stages will leave the railway station on North avenue in the morning, for the church, at 10:30, and return at the conclusion of the services.

To-morrow evening at the chapel of the First Church of Christ elder B. W. Hand will be formally ordained as a minister of the Gospel. Mr. Hand has been studying for two years. The Rev. J. B. Cleaver, of Bound Brook, will be present and officiate. "This," the congregation claim, "will be the first instance in the State of the ordaining of a minister to preach the Christian doctrine, which is peculiar in itself, as it teacher that the Gospel of Jesus Christ can only be found in the New Testament and that it began on the Day of Pentecost". Mr. Cleaver will preach the ordination sermon at 7:30.

Mountain Fire Extinguished by Rain.

PORT CLINTON, Pa., Nov. 5.—The fire on the Blue mountain has been extinguished by the rain, after doing immense damage. Thousands of acres of timber were devastated. The flames reached the upper end of this place, and thousands of men fought them to save buildings from destruction. The fire started in Drehersville, where much damage was done, and extended to Hamburg, a distance of 10 miles.

Grip's Reappearance in New York.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The "grip" has made its first public appearance in this city since last fall. On the Health Board's bulletin yesterday were chronicled two deaths as follows: Female, aged 74, November 1, la grippe. Male, aged 24, October 29, tuberculosis and la grippe. The Health Department would give out no information as to the names or residences of the deceased.

Nearly Lynched in Greene County, N. Y.

RONDOUT, N. Y., Nov. 5.—Enoch Simpson was arrested in New York City a few days ago. He was wanted at Prattsville, Greene county, for robbing a farmer's wife at the point of a pistol. He was taken to Prattsville and a large crowd met the stage as it entered the village. A rope was procured and but for the firm interference of the officers the man would have been lynched.

A MOTHER'S PRIDE.

The Beautiful Child of a Well-Known Lady.

Startling and Alarming Condition Suddenly Developed.

Beyond All Hope and Skill of the Doctors.

The most beautiful and lovable thing on earth is a little child; is it any wonder that the heart aches hardest when the little one, the brightest star in the world's ornaments, suffers in the grasp of a terrible disease.

All can therefore understand the bitter and heart-felt grief of Mrs. H. H. Watson of 153 Bloomingdale st., Worcester, Mass., when her darling little four-year-old child, a child of most singular sweetness and beauty, was seized with severe and serious nervous disease, and parents alone can appreciate the depth of her joy and thankfulness when the little idol of her heart was suddenly snatched back from the grave, as it were, after doctors and friends had given up all hope.

We will let the happy mother tell the story.

"My little daughter, Ethel May, was terribly and alarmingly sick. She had twenty-six convulsions in two years. Her nerves were very weak, her appetite very bad; she could not sleep nights, her limbs would draw up, and she suffered, oh, so much! She was as yellow as saffron, and weak and delicate.

"Our local doctors gave her up, saying she could not be cured.

"But thanks to a wonderful medicine she is now perfectly well and healthy. This remedy is Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and it has completely cured my little girl."

LITTLE ETHEL MAY WATSON.

Another grateful mother is Mrs. Henry Fry, who resides at 4 Flint place, South Boston, Mass. She too had a daughter who suffered terribly with St. Vitus Dance, an alarming nervous affection, but by the same marvellous remedy, her child has also been restored to perfect health.

Here is what she says:

"My daughter, twelve years old, became effected with St. Vitus Dance. I at once placed her unper the care of physicians at the Boston Dispensary, where she was treated for three months. She grew worse until she entirely lost her speech, and the right arm became useless. I tried other remedies without benefit.

"Finally I began the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and before finishing one bottle she could talk. She has now used six bottles and she talks as well as ever, has perfect use of her arm, and is wonderfully improved in all respects.

"The effects of this wonderful medicine in her case has excited great interest in many neighbors and friends who are acquainted with the facts."

With such evidence of the marvellous power to cure disease that Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy possesses, no mother who regards the welfare of her child will hesitate for an instant to give it this great medicine. A cure is sure. The remedy can be got at the druggists and is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless to give to children of any age. It is the prescription and discovery of Dr. Greene of 35 West 14th st., New York, the eminent specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, who can be consulted free in regard to any case, personally or by letter.

MARRIED FOR LOVE.

Papa Holdfast—I am ruined; all is lost.

Son-in-Law—Ahem! Then I married for love, after all.—Once a Week.

After the Wedding.

Mrs. Newed—Our prospect seems so clear.

Mr. Newed—Clear? A perfect paradox, so far.

Mrs. Newed—Oh, George!

Mr. Newed—Yes; before we were married the prospect intoxicated me, now it makes me mighty sober.—Judge.

A Promising Sign.

"What makes you think Miss Hennings loves you?"

"I'm the only man she won't flirt with."—Chicago News.

Behind the Scenes.

Cholly—Marwy me, or I'll blow me brains out!

Dolly Tites—Don't talk nonsense!—Truth.

A Reason.

"Oh, Willie dear," said his mother, "why do you whine so?"

"'Tause I don't want to fordet how," answered Willie.—Harper's Young People.

To Be Expected.

Visitor—What a little bit of a thing your baby sister is.

Little Girl—Yes; it's a condensed milk baby.—Good News.

SENOR ROMERO RUBIO.

One of the Most Progressive Men in the Mexican Republic.

Romero Rubio is secretary of state, father-in-law of President Diaz and one of the most intellectual men in the Mexican republic. He has received a leave of absence from the congress of his country and next spring he will visit the United States. The visit will be made with the intention of making observations and securing information about the affairs of state by which he may benefit his country and improve the condition of the Mexican people.

Senor Rubio is the recognized man of learning of the country in which he lives. He is an excellent Spanish and French scholar and he devotes a great deal of his time to literary research and study. One of his great aims in life is to obtain better educational facilities for his country and to raise the Mexican people up to a higher plane. He also co operates with his son-in-law, the president, for the improvement of the arts and sciences.

The minister of the interior is a native of Mexico. He is a distinguished-looking man about sixty years of age, but he is well preserved and does not look half that age. His daughter, Mrs. Diaz, is one of the handsomest women in the republic, and his other three daughters are also distinguished for their beauty In winter Senor Rubio, with his wife and two of his daughters, who are unmarried, lives in his handsome house in the City of Mexico. In the summer he lives at his beautiful country place at Penon, on the banks of Lake Texcoco. Penon is about twelve miles from the capital, and there Senor Rubio's handsome summer house is surrounded by beautiful grounds. This Mexican statesman will visit all the greater points of interest in the United States and will probably be here for four months.

BIRD-EATING SPIDERS.

Huge Tarantulas Which Live on Humming Birds and Mice.

The London Pall Mall Budget gives sketches of the two bird-eating spiders which Mr. T. Terry, of the Grange, Borough-green, Kent, recently presented to the London Zoo. They measure about six inches from end to end of legs, their bodies being about two inches long. The female is black, the male being lighter and less heavy. They are fed on cockroaches and other insects, the remains of which we have seen about the cage (and an occasional mouse for a treat). Their poison is so deadly that a small animal is killed instantly. Mr. Terry writes as follows concerning those interesting spiders: "In some newspaper reports they are described as the Brazilian bird-eating spiders, in others that they eat a good fat bird. These spiders were obtained by me in Port of Spain, Trinidad, under the guidance of my friends, Mr. Moule and Mr. Hoadley (living there), two of the most enthusiastic naturalists I have ever met, especially among deadly insects and snakes. These spiders no doubt live on young birds of the smallest kind, humming birds; also mice. Their bite often causes death to man, and at any time a most terrible fever. The spiders I have in my possession I feed on cockroaches, sand beetles and moths. I have also tried them with very young sparrows."

CRUSHED IN THE ARCTIC

The Whaler Helen Mar Sunk by an Iceberg.

THIRTY-FOUR MEN WENT DOWN.

But Five Escaped, and All Underwent a Thrilling Experience Before Being Rescued from an Ice Floe—The Captain Recently Married in Nantucket.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 7.—News of one of the worst disasters that has happened in the Arctic for years is brought by the steam whaler Beluga.

It tells of the loss of the Helen Mar and the drowning of 34 men. Only one of the five who survived the disaster came here, and he is now in the Marine hospital for treatment.

The story which this survivor, named Koshan, tells through an interpreter illustrates the perils of whaling in the far north.

The Helen Mar was an old, but staunch, craft, which sailed from San Francisco on the 24th of last December under Capt. E. O. Thaxter.

On Oct. 6, when in latitude 71 degrees north, the vessel took two whales. The crew were so busy in trying out the catch that they did not observe the swift current carrying them toward a great ice floe, in the centre of which was a huge iceberg.

When they observed their peril there was no time left to escape wreck. They had got out two boats, but had no time to get into them before the vessel came into contact with the floe. The sharp edge of the ice cut through her hull as a knife cuts cheese.

In a moment two masts snapped off and fell on the ice, and the vessel went down as though the bottom had dropped out. Just as she was sinking, Fifth Mate William Ward and four men leaped on the ice-floe, and saved their lives.

They saw the captain and the first mate struggling in the water, but could not lend any help. In five minutes the captain and 33 men had found a watery grave.

The men on the floe besides Mate Ward were Boat Steerer Anton Pargalino, Cook Acy Rershaw, and Sailors Katsura and Perores. Their situation was very bad, as the floe was swept by icy winds and they had no shelter.

They hoisted a shirt on a fragment of a spar and waited for help from some passing vessel. The spent 48 hours on the ice before they were seen by the steamer Orica, which mistook them for walruses.

Soon after their rescue the steam whaler Beluga came along and took the men on board. All except Kashan were left at Unalaska, as they were so badly frozen they could not be brought down. They will all recover, but Mate Ward will be a cripple.

The saddest feature of the story is that the captain was married last just before he sailed, to a lady in Nantucket. He brought her here and took her as far as Unalaska.

From there she returned to San Francisco, and is now in Oakland.

The vessel was built in 1855 in New Bedford. She is owned by Wright & Boney of San Francisco. All the crew are from this place.

WITH THE PUGILISTS.

The Mitchell-Corbett and Hall-Fitzsimmons Proposed Encounters.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—The following cable in regard to the proposed fistic encounters between Corbett and Mitchell and Hall and Fitzsimmons has been received from a noted sporting man:

"LONDON, Nov. 6.

"Mitchell and Hall thank the Coney Island and Crescent clubs for their liberal offer; have decided to leave the choice of which clubs the contests will take place in to Corbett and Fitzsimmons. Mitchell and Hall are willing to fight in either club, but both contests must take place in the same club they select. When Corbett and Fitzsimmons name the club they will fight in and post $5,000 and $2,500, the former amount to bind the Mitchell and Corbett fight and the latter amount to bind the Fitzsimmons and Hall match, articles of agreement can then be forwarded for Mitchell and Hall's signature. Both Mitchell and Hall mean business."

SALVATIONISTS ARRESTED.

Sixteen of the Army Charged With Disorder at Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 7.—Sixteen members of the Salvation Army, who were holding a meeting at the corner of Fifth avenue and Liberty street under the leadership of Ensign Heald of Omaha, were arrested yesterday for violating an order of the Department of Public Safety, forbidding the holding of street meetings, which complaints made to the chief, stated were interfering with foot and vehicle travel.

They are charged with disorderly conduct and they say they will fight the case to the highest court in the land, as they look upon their arrest as interfering with them in the worship of God according to the dictates of their own conscience, and they hold themselves to be martyrs to their faith.

They all left deposits for a hearing and were released.

Murderer Foy Captured in Oakland.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Sheriff Worden has received a telegram from the police of Oakland, Cal., stating that Martin Foy, the race track follower, who shot and killed Henrietta Wilson in this village, and who escaped from the Ballston jail in August, was captured in that city yesterday, and is being held to await the arrival of the Saratoga officers.

Dinner to Henry W. Cannon.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—A dinner was tendered Saturday evening in the Union League Club rooms to Henry W. Cannon, Commissioner to the International Monetary Conference at Brussels, by George Rutledge Gibson. Thirty-two guests were present. The room was especially decorated for the occasion and the table was covered with chrysthanemums.

Prize Fight Near Birmingham, Conn.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 7.—Thomas Dutton of Jersey City and Alf O'Neill of Bridgeport fought for a purse of $500 near Birmingham. Two rounds were fought and the fight was awarded to the Bridgeport bruiser. This did not suit the 200 spectators and a general row followed in which the referee was roughly handled.

FEDERAL OFFICERS AT THE POLLS.

Correspondence Between the U. S. Marshal and Tammany's Legal Advisers.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—United States Marshal Jacobus has issued a reply to David Leventrett, David McClure, John W. Bowers and Charles H. Knox, the committe appointed by Commissioner Gilroy to offset the action of deputy supervisors and marshals. He says:

"I and my deputies are directed by the laws of the United States to prevent fraudulent voting at the polls on election day."

In support of this he quotes section 2,023 of the United States Revised Code and proceeds to say that he knows of no way of preventing a man from fraudulently voting except by arresting him when he attempts to do so.

Being directed by the law to immediately arrest the offender before he votes, and further that such arrest is to be made with or without process if the offence of attempting to fraudulently vote is done in the presence of him or any of his deputies.

Having stated his duty he adds the committee will doubtless understand what his action will be.

In reply the Tammany Hall Advisory Committee have addressed the following letter:

John W. Jacobus, Esq., United States Marshal:

Dear Sir—In your letter of November 5 you quote but a portion of section 2,023 of the United States revised statutes and that in such a manner as to convey a wrong impression as to its meaning.

The section in its entirety was before Judge Beaver in the case brought to your attention in our former communication, and after careful consideration and construction of the section, he distinctly declared that no marshal could arrest a man until after he had cast his vote, if accepted by the judges of election.

You, therefore, overrule the express decision of a United States judge upon the supreme bench and assert for yourself arbitrary power on your mere suspicion to disfranchise voters.

We naturally prefer to rely upon the decision of the Court. Yours, etc.,

THE COMMITTEE.

TROUBLE FEARED AT ONEIDA.

Many Said to Have Registered in Two or More Districts.

ONEIDA, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Much trouble is anticipated in Madison county election day. It was supposed that the registration throughout the county showed a loss of about 500 as compared with last year's, but now it is given out that there is an increase in the registration of nearly 900 over that of 1888.

This is considered remarkable as the population of the county has decreased over 2,000 during the past four years. Sheriff Remick has been notified that many have registered in two or more districts in the county which accounts for the reported heavy registration and no doubt many arrests will be made on election day.

FOR MRS. HARRISON.

Wives of Cabinet Officers to Go Into Mourning for a Month.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The President, accompanied by Mrs. McKee and Mrs. Dimmick and by the venerable Dr. Scott and his son Judge Scott of Washington State, Mrs. Harrison's only brother, who was unable to reach here in time for the funeral of Mrs. Harrison, attended the morning service at the Church of the Covenant yesterday. As they came out at the close of the service they passed Mr. Blaine, who, walking alone, was taking his daily constitutional.

It has been the expressed wish of the President that Mrs. Harrison's death should be regarded as a private bereavement and be unaccompanied by any public demonstrations. The statement is made, however, that, as the result of a private conference between Mrs. Morton, the wife of the Vice-President, and Mrs. J. W. Foster, the wife of the Secretary of State, it has been agreed that the wives of the Cabinet officers will wear mourning for the next 30 days, and during that time will refuse all invitations to entertainments or attendance upon places of public amusements.

CANADA'S CATTLE TRADE.

England's Decision Will Cause Dominion Farmers to Suffer.

MONTREAL, Nov. 7.—The Canadian cattle trade, on account of the cancelling of the privilege of allowing Canadian cattle to be permitted to land and graze in British pastures, has received a blow which will have the effect of paralizing at least one-third of the trade.

Next season American cattle will be able to enter Canada unhindered by quarantine laws; and it will result in an impetus being given to the dressed beef trade in Canada, as Americans have been anxious to start establishments here. Canadian farmers will suffer largely, as they will have to compete with the cheap American cattle.

STRUCK BY AN EXPRESS.

Two Well Known Citizens of Athens, Pa., Killed.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Wm. Mott and Warren Johnson, a young attorney, both of Athens, Pa., went to attend a Democratic mass meeting at Wilawana. They started home about 12 o'clock, and, while crossing the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad tracks near Waverley, they were struck by an express train.

Mott was instantly killed, and Johnson received injuries from which he died at 4 o'clock this morning at the hospital in Sayre, where he had been taken.

The wagon in which they were riding was smashed to splinters and the horse killed.

Mott was 40 years of age, and leaves a wife and two children. Johnson was unmarried.

ESTIMATES OF LEADERS.

Harrity on General Result and Hackett on Empire State.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—The work at both the National headquarters is practically done. Of course both headquarters will remain open until after the full returns have been received.

At both the headquarters most of the employes were paid their salaries Saturday and their services were dispensed with. Some of these employes will return to their homes to vote, and others will remain in the city until after election.

Of the National Committeemen, it is said that none of them will go home to vote, as they live in States, as a rule, where the result is not at all doubtful.

At National Democratic Headquarters it is said that all the committeemen from a distance have "paired" with some Republican voter, and with the exception of Senator Gorman none of them will return home to vote.

Senator Gorman will go home, but will return to this city on Tuesday as soon as he has voted.

William F. Harrity, chairman of the Democratic national committee, says of the condition of the closing campaign:

"Our confidence in the election of Cleveland and Stevenson increases hourly. Democratic success is absolutely certain. All doubt has been removed by full and conclusively satisfactory advices from all the Southern States in which our opponents have made pretenses of contest, as well as from New York, Indiana, Connecticut, New Jersey, Michigan, and Wisconsin.

"Information from the Western and far Western States justifies the hope of an impending revolution that will add a number of electoral votes to those admitted to be sure for Cleveland as well as several others to Harrison in the States heretofore Republican. There are also hopeful indications in New England.

"We owe much to the admirable management of the Democratic State organizations, especially to those in the close and doubtful States. Their work has been efficient, and the result of it now is apparent in the confidence with which we feel that to-morrow will witness the election of Cleveland and Stevenson."

The Republicans at State headquarters have gone carefully over this State by counties, and have figured the result down so fine that Chairman Hackett predicts a plurality of 18,300 for Harrison. On the other hand, a tabulated statement of the estimated result in the 60 counties prepared by Democratic statisticians gives Cleveland a plurality of 25,350. Between these two estimates the truth lies.

FEARS NO TROUBLE.

Acting Attorney-General Aldrich on the Duties of Federal Officers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—In an interview last night Acting Attorney-General Aldrich said, in regard to the circular recently issued by him, that he did not anticipate any trouble or conflict between the Federal and State officers in the enforcement of election laws to-morrow. The United States officers had been cautioned to do anything to provoke a controversy, and he had no doubt that State officers had received similar instructions.

"But what about deputy marshals going within the booths or behind the guard rail?" was asked Mr. Aldrich.

Mr. Aldrich—They are not expected to do so unless necessary, in order to discharge some duty imposed on them by the statutes of the United States. Where necessary, they have the right to go anywhere about the polls or ballot boxes in discharge of duty. But ordinarily it will only be necessary that they be about outside ready for any emergency that may arise. If they obey instructions, as no doubt they will, their presence will simply be conducive to good order and a fair election.

NOMINATED FOR CONGRESS.

G. B. Fielder to Fill the Place Made Vacant By Mr. McDonald's Death.

JERSEY CITY, Nov. 7.—The Congressional Committee for the Seventh New Jersey District has nominated George B. Fielder for Congress in place of Edward F. McDonald, who died Saturday.

Mr. Fielder, in accepting the nomination, said he would, if elected, give the salary for the two years to Mr. McDonald's widow and children.

Mrs. McDonald gave birth to a daughter late Saturday night.

Most of the Students Can Vote.

CORNING DEPOT, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Justice Bradley of the Supreme Court has rendered decisions in the proceedings by which it was sought to have cut from the registry lists the names of 53 students of Colgate University and 22 students of Cornell University. He decided that the names of the Colgate students shall not be erased as no notice was served upon them, and in the Cornell case he orders that 18 of the 22 names be cut out as it does not appear that the 18 men are residents of Ithaca.

Remembering "the Martyred."

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—Yesterday was the anniversary of Anarchy in Chicago. Thirty-five hundred stood in a cold, drizzling rain in Waldheim cemetery, and paid tribute with speech and song to the memory of the "the Martyred," strewing with wreaths and flowers the graves of the five men who were condemned by law for their participation in the Haymarket riot. General good order characterized the event.

Threw a Lighted Lamp at His Wife.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—During a quarrel over his wages, Henry Eckert, aged 28 years, threw a lighted lamp at his wife Mary, aged 40, Saturday night. The lamp exploded and the woman was so badly burned that she died yesterday afternoon at the Episcopal Hospital.

JUST BEFORE THE FIGHT

Claims and Estimates from Leaders of the Hosts About to Join Issue.

SPECULATION REGARDING THE NEXT UNITED STATES SENATE.

Farmers' Alliance Hope to Hold the Balance of Power—Federal Officers and What They Are to Do at the Polls—Democrats and Republicans Manifesting the Greatest Confidence Both in Regard to the General Result and the Outcome in Doubtful States.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—The Legislatures of twenty-two States, whose members will be chosen to-morrow, will have the selection of successors to fourteen Republican and eight Democratic United States Senators, whose terms expire on March 3, 1893.

The Republican Senators whose terms expire then are: Felton, Cal.; Hawley, Conn; Dawes, Mass.; Stockbridge, Mich.; Davis, Minn.; Sanders, Mont.; Paddock, Neb.; Stewart, Nev.; Hiscock, N. Y.; Casey, N. D.; Quay, Pa.; Allen, Wash.; Sawyer, Wis.; Warren, Wyo.

The Democrats are: Gray, Del.; Pasco, Fla.; Turpie, Ind.; Cockrell, Mo.; Blodgett, N. J.; Bate, Tenn.; Faulkner, W. Va.; Mills, Texas.

Of the Republican Senators whose terms expire, Hawley, Stockbridge, Paddock, Stewart, Hiscock, Allen, and Sawyer represent States which are claimed by both sides.

Of the Democratic Senators, Gray, Turpie and Faulkner are from States similarly situated.

The expectations of the Farmer's Alliance, if they are well founded, place the seats of several other Senators in jeopardy and the complexion of the next Senate may undergo a considerable change as a result of to-morrow's election. The Republicans look to retaining the Senate, whatever the presidential result may be. The Democrats are planning to increase their repesentation in the upper House; and the Farmers' Alliance are scheming to secure the balance of power.

The Democrats claim that they will elect legislatures which will return Democrats in place of all Democratic Senators whose terms expire and also in in place of the Republican incumbent in New York, Connecticut, Michigan and Wisconsin, and the Farmers Alliance expect to capture Senatorships in Nevada, Nebraska and Washington.

This would mean a loss to the Republicans of seven United States Senators, and would make the upper House stand: Democrats, 43; Republicans, 40; Farmers' Alliance, 5.

This would practically give the Farmers' Alliance the balance of power in the Senate, as they could, by voting with the Democrats, give them a working majority, or, by working with the Republicans, give them a majority of one.

The Republican leaders, however, do not concede the loss of any of the seven Senatorships. They admit that these States will be close, so far as the legislative vote is concerned, but claim that their chance of winning in these States is better than that of the Democrats. They are confident of the result in Connecticut, Nebraska, Michigan and Wisconsin, and they are reaching out in other States after the Democratic Senatorships.

This is particularly true of Delaware and West Virginia. In the former State Senator Higgins is confident of the election of a Republican colleague in place of Senator Gray.

In West Virginia Stephen B. Elkins has made a personal canvass, upon which he predicts the election of a Republican Legislature, as well as of the Harrison electors. This would result in a Republican stepping into the shoes of Senator Faulkner. The Republicans are also confident of gaining a Senatorship in Indiana.

The Republicans admit that the Farmers' Alliance will gain the Nevada Senatorship, but say they are chasing rainbows when they claim Nebraska, Washington, Wyoming and Montana.

Taken altogether, there will be some lively figuring on the status of the three parties in the Senate when the votes are counted.

IN CONNECTICUT.

Both Sides Equally Confident of Carrying the State.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 7.—Both sides are confident of capturing Connecticut's six electoral votes, and both sides admit that the result will be close. Chairman Henry E. Benton, of the Republican State Committee, after a careful review of the situation, predicts the election of the Harrison electors, and of the Republican State ticket. He also looks for a gain of two Republican Congressmen.

Gov. Bulkeley looks on the election of his party ticket as a vindication of his retaining the Governorship, and is confident of carrying both the State and the Legislature. He is said to be a candidate for the United States Senate in case the Republicans win.

Chairman Davis, of the Democratic State Committee, declines to go into figures, but declares that Cleveland and Stevenson will sweep the State by a majority that will astonish the people.

He predicts the election of Democratic Congressmen in the First, Second, and Fourth districts, and says that Luzon B. Morris will be the next Governor.

Doubt as to North Dakota.

BISMARCK, N. D., Nov. 7.—The fusion of Democrats and Populists in this State and the first trial of the Australian ballot system makes it impossible to predict what the result will be to-morrow. Republicans expect to keep the State in the Republican column by about 1,000 votes, and to elect one Congressman, conceding the other Congressman to the Populists. The Democrats claim that they will elect the Weaver electors and a majority of the State Legislature, but give no figures to back their claim.

Little Activity in Maine.

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 7.—The campaign in Maine having been practically settled by the September election has been quite dull since that time. The State votes to-morrow for presidential electors only. "The Republican plurality in September of 13,413 may fairly be expected to be reached in November," said a well-known politician.

$500. Given IN Christmas Presents.

Competition open to Women Only.

For the best and most effective article, suggestion or phrase for popular use in advertising the merit of Cleveland's Baking Powder, a present of $200 will be given; for the ten next best $20 each; and for the ten next best $10 each. Experience in writing advertisements is not necessary. A simple statement, a happy expression or even a suggestion may prove the best.

Conditions:—Competition open to women only. Contributions must not contain over 200 words. Verses if sent must not contain over six lines. Write your suggestion on one sheet of paper, your full name and address on another, and mail as below. All communications must reach us by December 24th. The awards will be made as soon thereafter as possible.

Address Secretary of Cleveland Baking Powder Co., 81 Fulton St., New York.

Some Facts that may give you a hint or suggestion:

Cleveland's baking powder is perfectly pure and wholesome.

It does not contain alum, ammonia or any other adulterant.

Everything used in making it is named on the label.

Consumers know exactly what they are eating.

It is the strongest of all pure cream of tartar powders.

A rounded teaspoonful will do as much as a heaping one of any other.

Food raised with it does not dry up quickly, as when made with other powders.

It is more convenient and more economical than the ordinary cream of tartar and soda.

The latest official reports show it to be first class, and first in its class.

The U. S. Government buys it for the Army officers.

Government Chemists, State Assayers and other official authorities testify to its superiority.

Writers on domestic science, as Marion Harland, Mrs. McBride and Mrs. Parker, endorse it.

Teachers of cooking, as Mrs. Lincoln, Mrs. Rorer and Mrs. Dearborn, prefer it.

These are some of its points of excellence; others may have occurred to some of the thousands of women who are using it every day. Other facts are given in our cook book. Mailed free.

GERMANY'S NEW ARMY BILL.

The Country Unable to Bear the Increased Taxes It Involves.

BERLIN, Nov. 7.—During the coming week several important meetings of party leaders will be held in Berlin, preliminary to the opening of the Reichstag. The general drift of political developments points to the government securing a majority for the Army bill, through a coalition of Conservatives, Centrist and members of the Reichspartel.

Prince Bismarck's denunciation of the bill as being utterly needless have failed to influence even the National Liberals, whose organs deprecate popular agitation against the government proposals, and urge a cautious line of opposition.

A meeting of the National Liberals at Wurtemberg took the strongest line of attack against the bill in declaring that Germany was unable to bear the increased taxation proposed. It was shown that a vast majority of the incomes of Prussian families were under 900 marks yearly.

With regard to the tobacco tax, it was shown that there had been a decline in the receipts of the last half year of 54,000 marks as compared with the preceding year. The receipts from the salt tax had declined 260,000 marks and from the sugar tax 1,740,000 marks. The decline in the receipts from these articles of common consumption, is taken as proof that the people are already overburdened with taxation.

NOT YET SATISFIED.

Mrs. Leader Will Now Demand Newspaper Damages.

LONDON, Nov. 7. — The celebrated Leader-Smyth brooch case is not ended.

True, Mrs. Leader received the verdict for $2,500 and proved that the brooch she sold was presented to her years ago by Col. Treach, in Egypt.

But the lady wants her good name further vindicated. A London morning paper likened her to Mrs. Osborne, who was sent to jail for stealing pearls. So she is now suing that journal for damages, because the comment occurred before the case actually got to trial.

Card Game Ends in Murder.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 7.—While playing cards last evening in the tenement at No. 68 Jersey street, Julius Battino and Piepo Piencenzio, two Italians, accused each other of cheating, and adjourned to the street to fight the matter out. The others followed, and a free fight ensued, during which Piencenzio shot and fatally wounded Battino. Piencenzio attempted to escape, but was captured by the police.

Vassar Girls for Harrison.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Nov. 7.—Saturday was election day at Vassar College, as no holiday is allowed on November 8. Each floor was constituted one district, and provided with a Republican and Democratic inspector. Everything was carried out according to regulation methods as far as possible. The booths, ballot boxes and ballots for electors were secured from Poughkeepsie, and were the genuine articles. The result showed 96 majority for Harrison and Reid.

Weaver's Chances Good in Nevada.

VIRGINIA CITY, Nev., Nov. 7.—It is pretty generally conceded by the leaders of both the old parties that Nevada will cast her three electoral votes for Weaver this year. The Australian ballot will be tested for the first time here, and the vote will exceed but little that of 1888, when Harrison had a plurality of 1,913 out of a total of 12,605 votes. The Weaver men count upon a plurality of between 2,000 and 4,000 and expect to capture the next legislature.

Byrnes Predicts a Peaceful Election.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Inspector Byrnes yesterday gave final orders to captains regarding their work on election day. He declined to divulge their nature, but to-day issued an interview for publication in which he predicts a peaceful election. Relative to the United States supervisors, marshals, etc., he says they are acting under national authority and, he thinks, to protect the integrity of the ballot box.

(From Grover Cleveland's Letter of Acceptance.)

We anticipate with calmness the misrepresentation of our motives and purposes, instigated by a selfishness which seeks to hold in unrelenting grasp its unfair advantage under present tariff laws. We will rely upon the intelligence of our fellow-countrymen to reject the charge that a party comprising a majority of our people is planning the destruction or injury of American interests; and we know they cannot be frightened by the specter of impossible free trade.

"Do they not tell you that Grover Cleveland will carry this State by 10,000, but that they expect to defeat George T. Werts by money? Is not that on every lip? Does it not come to you from your Republican friends? Is this true? Is our liberty, our right of suffrage, to be wounded and broken down in the person of th father of free ballots, and that by the introduction of large amounts of money in our State?—Attorney-General Stockton's Speech.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—There will be no regular communication of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M. in Masonic Hall, to-morrow evening, as it is a legal holiday.

—The Democratic Committee of Hudson county have nominated George B. Fielder as the candidate for Congress in place of the late Congressman McDonald.

—THE PRESS knows of two Republicans whose names were attached to the Parrot circular, so extensively circulated in this city, who declare that their names were put there without authority.

—Men of Union county, do you wish "Boss" Sewell to name the State assessor and control the State National Guard and police in the interests of the railroads and corporations? If not, elect Judge Werts.

—R. W. Rice & Co., the North Plainfield grocers, have the choicest of goods, and can be depended on for honest prices, quick delivery and thorough satisfaction. Housewives trade there from all parts of city and borough.

—When you go to bed to-night make up your mind to wake up early and vote the Democratic ticket straight. Every name on it is a good one, and insures a government of the people, by the people and for the people.

—Cleveland's election means no more of a triumph of popular rights than does the defeat of John Kean, the railroad's pet, by George T. Werts, who has fought his own way by his own ability and merits from obscure poverty to the highest estimation of his fellow citizens.

—Once put John Kean, jr., in power and then who shall stand between the workingmen of New Jersey and the Pinkerton thugs? The Kean-Sewell crowd would at once repeal, at the bidding of the railroads, the bill passed by the Democrats against Pinkertonism.

—There has been issued "To the voters of Plainfield", a circular calling upon them to vote for George T. Parrott for surrogate. The appeal is signed by 36 black Republicans, 3 tariff reformers, and not a single straight-out Democrat. Beware of the ballot inclosed. THE PRESS saw one that came with the circular this morning, and it was a "marked ballot" that would have been thrown out if cast.

MILLER IS GUILTY.

The Druggist Convicted on Expert Stillman's Testimony.

Druggist Frederick A. Miller had another trial to-day on the charge of selling whisky without a prescription. The jurors this time were:

John Naylor,	Geo. VanEmburgh,
John Lewis,	A. M. Vanderbeck,
J. E. Mosher,	Jno. Doane,
John French,	J. B. Mills,
Wm. Brokaw,	DeWitt Stevens,
L. L. Manning,	John Smith.

Mr. Martell testified that policeman Giese had for $25 hired him to play the spy against Miller.

Prof. Thomas B. Stillman, formerly of Plainfield, and now of Stevens Institute of Technology, testified that he had analyzed the stuff sold, and that it was as pure as any whisky in the market.

The jury were out one hour. Their verdict was guilty, with recommendation of mercy to the court.

The jury recommended that the fine be not more than $25. The verdict was a compromise. The jurors who favored a "guilty" verdict got hungry and gave in.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

At the home of the bride on West Third street, in this city, yesterday, the marriage took place of Mary Alberta Scriven and Charles Robert Baker. The Rev. A. H. Lewis officiated.

Mr. Marr, of West Third street, merits the sympathy of the entire community. He has lost three children in two years. His wife, Mary, died yesterday, in her twenty-seventh year.

Benjamin Hand, "the carpenter preacher", was formally ordained pastor of the First Church of Christ last evening, the Rev. J. B. Cleaver officiating. He will make an earnest and successful minister.

Charles Stillwell and wife, of Hamilton, Ontario, were guests of the latter's father, Samuel D. Frazee, in this city Friday. Mr. Stillwell is superintendent of the Edison Electric Light Works at Hamilton, which employs over 1,100 workmen.

The Rev. Charles E. Herring, the new pastor of the First Presbyterian church of this city, held a most impressive communion service in the church yesterday morning. Five new members were received by letter from other churches.

The sympathy of a host of friends is extended George Lyons of Bound Brook, and his sister, formerly amanuensis in the office of the corporation counsel, this city, in the death of their aged mother, who passed away at Scotch Plains, yesterday, aged 62 years.

Miss Titsworth of Madison avenue, and other young women of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, will hold a flower show at 17 Crescent avenue, beginning to-morrow evening at 7 and continuing during the afternoons and evenings of Wednesday and Thursday from 2 till 11.

Thos. B. Stillman, son of the late ex-Mayor Charles H. Stillman, announces that although he is a life-long Republican and will vote the Republican State ticket to-morrow, yet he will vote for Grover Cleveland for President for the sake of his country's progress and prosperity.

The date of the Woman's Foreign Missionary meeting has been changed from Tuesday, the 8th to Saturday, the 12th inst. Miss Elizabeth Milliken, niece of Samuel Milliken, of this city, a missionary from Japan, will address the ladies at 3:30 p. m. in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church. Tea will be served at 5. A cordial invitation is extended to all women and also to all the Mission Bands.

At the funeral services of the late Edward Winter, this afternoon, the Rev. Dr. Hurlbut, officiating clergyman, was assisted by the Rev. James R. Bryan, of Washington, Warren county, formerly a pastor of the Plainfield M. E. church. The display of floral tributes at the funeral was very beautiful. The singing was very sweet. The selections "Rock of Ages" and "Abide with Me" were rendered by Mrs. W. A. Freeman, Miss Gussie Runyon, E. E. Runyon and Fred. Freeman. The pall-bearers were Garret Q. Packer, George R. Cornwell, C. H. Rugg, John Valiant, W. H. Griffen and Ezra Loomis.

To Be Installed Next Sunday.

The Rev. J. W. Richardson, late of Brooklyn, the newly-elected pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, is expected to begin his labors in that church next Sunday, when he will preach both morning and evening. The evening service, while including a sermon by the eloquent preacher, will take the form of a praise service at which Mrs. E. E. Spicer, from Brooklyn, who has so often delighted lovers of sweet music, will sing the soprano solo "I Will Extol Thee", from the oratorio of Eli; and, assisted by the church choir, will render the "Inflammatus" from Stabat Mater. The evening service will begin at 7:45.

—Soldiers! Hear D. I. Murphy at Music Hall to-night! He'll tell you about those pension claims that President Cleveland vetoed.

—Don't miss the Ragan course this year.

—There will be no paper issued from this office to-morrow, election day.

—"The Kid" will be given at Music Hall, Wednesday evening, by Dotty Pine and a clever company.

—A smash-up of coal cars in the Fanwood cut delayed traffic an hour this afternoon. No one was hurt.

—The Jacot restaurant, 15 East Second street, next to the Crescent League clubhouse, will be open all night of election day.

—The polls will be open to-morrow from 6 in the morning until 7 in the evening, with one hour's intermission—from 12 to 1.

—The sale of reserved seats for the Ragan course of illustrated lectures at Music Hall, will begin at the Central pharmacy Thursday morning. Price for the entire course, $1.50. Scholars, $1.

—Don't miss the mass meeting at Music Hall, to-night.

OBITUARY.

Richard R. Coriell—Another Famous Old Hatter Gone.

Richard R. Coriell, who for many years has been a familiar figure on the streets of Plainfield, died yesterday at his late residence, 8 Liberty street, where for the past 20 years he had lived a quiet, retired life. He was nearly 84 years old, having been born at Harris's Lane, Middlesex county, December 1, 1808. His wife survives him. He learned the hatter's trade and was engaged at that business until about thirty years ago. He was fourth of a family of eight children. His brother, Abner S. Coriell, the youngest and only survivor of the family, resides at New Market, where he has been postmaster under every Republican President, and assessor for many years. His father, Richard Coriell, and his mother, Sarah Smalley, were both born before the Revolutionary war. His father died in 1838 and his mother ten years later. His grandfather, Abraham Coriell, a zealous member of the Presbyterian church at Bound Brook, died in 1828 at his home at Newton (now Randolphville) aged 91 years. Shortly before his death he showed Mr. Coriell the ruins of the ovens where he had baked bread for the Revolutionary soldiers. Mr. Coriell joined the Baptist church at Samptown in 1832, and on his removal to Plainfield in 1834 united with the Baptist church in this place. When a young man he saw and shook hands with General Lafayette. Richard E. and W. Wallace Coriell and Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson are his children by a former marriage. An older daughter, the wife of Morgan Bird, died in 1876. He has two great-grandchildren, the sons of Fred W. Bird of East Front street. The Coriells of New Jersey are descendants of three brothers, Emanuel, David and Elias, who emigrated from the Island of Corsica and settled at Coryell's Ferry, now Lambertville, in 1663.

—Soldiers! Hear D. I. Murphy at Music Hall to-night! He'll tell you about those pension claims that President Cleveland vetoed.

STRANGE FIRE.

Truck-Load of Household Goods Burned in Transit on the Rahway Road.

Jack Stevens of Second and Peace streets has a summer home on a farm on the Rahway road. On Saturday he was removing his household goods to his winter home. There was $800 in fine parlor furniture, including piano, on John Yose's truck. Mr. Yose and Mrs. Stevens were riding ahead in a buggy. Suddenly they heard a commotion behind, and looked back to see the truck-load of goods afire. They ran back and helped the drivers try to save the goods. Mrs. Stevens had her hands severely burned. There was a high wind blowing, and little was saved from the flames. The cause of the fire is unknown.

Great Game To-Morrow.

Leal's school foot-ball team will play the Columbians of Brooklyn on the Crescent League grounds to-morrow afternoon at 3:15. It will be a good game, and lovers of the sport should all go. This will probably be the last game of the season, and everyone should go. Ladies will be admitted free. The general admission is 15 cents.

The Leals will line us as follows:
Right end—Henderson.
Right tackle—G. Peck.
Right guard—E. Brown.
Center—Mitchell.
Quarter back—H. Ryder.

Working for a Worthy Cause.

An earnest effort is being made by the Trinity Reformed Sunday-school to raise a portion of the debt on the church. The teachers of the primary department have arranged a parlor entertainment for next Thursday evening, at the residence of Mrs. Snediker's, 110 Grove street, to which they invite their friends. No admission will be asked, but all are requested to bring their mites with them.

On the afternoons of Friday and Saturday, also Friday evening, Section I of the Sunday-school will hold a sale of ice-cream, cake, candy and fruits on North avenue, opposite the railroad station. Anyone desiring to purchase whole cakes will no doubt avail himself of this opportunity and so help along a good cause. No admission fee will be charged.

—Do n't miss the mass meeting at Music Hall to-night.

CITIZENS OF NEW JERSEY

DON'T LET THE MONOPOLISTS SEIZE THE STATE.

Vote for George T. Werts for Governor—Don't Trade Off—Scan Your Tickets Closely.

The Republican party, with a candidate for Governor, John Kean, jr., a known monopolist and a member of the coal combine, is appealing to you to make a change from a Democratic administration to one in which it shall have the power and control. No good or substantial reasons have been given for such a change; nothing but a shallow cry for reform has been set up with no declaration or statement as to what that reform shall consist of. On the other hand, the Democracy with a candidate for Governor, the Hon. George T. Werts, who is of the people and of a high and general reputation, point with pride to the past record of their party, and appeal to you for their suffrages on Tuesday next. They have no cause to be ashamed of the men who in the past they have elected to the Governorship of the State. The list is a long one, but every name thereon is that of an honest, capable and upright citizen. They point with a just feeling of State pride to the Bench composed of jurists of more than ordinary ability and who were appointed to their positions by Democratic Governors. They call open attention to the fact that most of the Legislatures since the close of the war have been Republican, and to the differences in the character of the legislation whenever the legislation was Democratic. Under the latter, the interests of the people have been protected; corporations have been made to bear their proportion of the burden of taxation, from which they were exempted by Republican legislation, and for a period of eight years not a dollar of State tax has been exacted from the people. Under Governor Abbett's administration, a floating debt of $400,000 has been paid off and a surplus of $500,000 has found its way into the Treasury. Can you forget that former Republican favoritism to corporations and Republican extravagance empfled the Treasury and brought it to the verge of bankruptcy. Those are facts. Every law upon the statute books that has increased the revenue of the State and helped to abolish a direct tax, as well as other principal reforms in the law, have been of Democratic origin. Is there any necessity for a change? Will it not be dangerous to hazard by experiment what has been found to work well? As citizens devoted to the welfare of your State, vote then for the Hon. George T. Werts for Governor, a man whom none know but to esteem, and of whose ability and integrity there can be no question.

—Soldiers! Hear D. I. Murphy at Music Hall to-night! He'll tell you about those pension claims that President Cleveland vetoed.

THE GRAND CHAPLAIN'S CONVERTED

Another Clergyman Who Cannot Stand Modern Republicanism.

The ranks of the clergy who although Republicans, like Dr. Ramsford, are going to vote for Mr. Cleveland have grown enormously. One of the latest of these converts is the Rev. Dr. C. H. W. Stocking, rector in charge of the Church of the Holy Innocents, West Orange, and Principal of the Orange Academy. The Rev. Dr. Stocking, when asked by a reporter Saturday morning to state the reasons which impel him to vote for the Democratic ticket, to-morrow, said:

"I come of an old Whig ancestry, and have always voted with the Republican party. I cannot resist the conclusion, however, that the present policy of that party is inimical to the best and truest interests of the country. Its claim to the solo possession of morality in method and motive is offensive; the unblushing corruption of its chosen leaders in the use of money to control elections, and its oppressive tariff policy and legislation, all oblige me, as a teacher of morality and a student of political economy, to vote the Democratic ticket as the only protest I can make against the present Republican position. I know Grover Cleveland personally, and I have confidence in his fidelity to any trust reposed in him."

The Rev. Dr. Stocking is a man of much influence in the Oranges. He has been rector of Christ church, Ansonia, Conn.; of Trinity church, Rochester, N. Y.; of Epiphany church, Chicago, and of Trinity church, Albany. He is a distinguished Freemason, a Knight Templar, and Grand Chaplain of the Masonic Grand Lodge of New Jersey.

Plainfield's Post-office.

[New Brunswick Home News.]

How is this for rapid transit? A Plainfield paper, mailed in that city on Monday last, arrived here this [Saturday] morning. The address was printed on the wrapper distinctly, so that there could be no blame attached to the publisher. Are the employes in the post-offices so much engaged in politics that they cannot attend to public business?

—Ex-Secretary Fairchild will speak at Music Hall to-night.

Do n't Tie His Hands.

Do n't tie Grover Cleveland's hands with a republican Congress. Throw aside all prejudice and vote for John T. Dunn for Congress.

—Do n't vote a ticket sent you. Secure the right one from a friend or get it in the booth.

—Gep Frazee is back in Plainfield to vote.

—Ex-Governor Bedle is out with a warning to Democrats to beware of fraudulent ballots which even Plainfield Republicans are circulating.

—The enterprising firm of Miller Bros. have made arrangements with the Postal Telegraph company to have returns of the votes at Hotel Grenada to-morrow night.

AGIN JOHNNIE KEAN.

Another Harrison Republican Afraid to Trust Him.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Sir: Noticing in the New York World of to-day a communication signed by "A Harrison Republican", in which reasons are given for reducing the plurality of John Kean the Republican nominee for Governor, I desire as another Harrison Republican to endorse the sentiments of the writer of that article.

Further, I state as a fact that at the Republican county convention held in Library Hall, Elizabeth, Mr. Kean was called upon to address the assemblage. Embodied in that address was the statement that the Governor to be elected in New Jersey this fall would have the appointment of numerous judges to preside over the highest courts of the State, and was understood by several of his hearers to mean that the successful candidate would have powers second only to the autocrat, the Czar of the Russias.

Now I want to put this query to all thinking men of every party. If John Kean, jr., is elected Governor, do you not think that he will appoint those judges to hand down decisions in his (Kean's) individual interests? Based upon his attempt to squeeze the man not born with a silver spoon in his mouth; and from his record up to date I am firmly of that opinion.

ANOTHER HARRISON REPUBLICAN.

—Soldiers! Hear D. I. Murphy at Music Hall to-night! He'll tell you about those pension claims that President Cleveland vetoed.

MARTINE SLATED FOR SENATOR,

And the Chances for the Democratic Candidates in Union County, Considerably Bettered.

(From The New York World.)

Plainfield Democrats were hopping mad over the defeat of their favorite orator, James E. Martine, in his congressional fight, while Rahway's Democracy were equally sore over the turning down of county clerk Crowell, who, they claimed, should have a second term according to party usage. Both Plainfield and Rahway were ready then to slaughter the ticket, but since that time their wrath has cooled off considerably and wiser counsels have prevailed. It is no doubt true that Mr. Dunn, for congress, will lose many votes in Plainfield, while Mr. Gerber, for county clerk, will suffer somewhat in Rahway. It is going to be a close call with both candidates in Union county, but their chances of carrying it have bettered considerably during the past week, and now it is even money that they do.

Mr. Gerber will be benefited to the extent of a couple of hundred Republican votes in Elizabeth, as he is popular with the young men of that party and has always run ahead of his ticket in Republican strongholds. This will be a very material aid to him this time.

James E. Martine has taken his defeat like a Democrat and is making a strenuous effort to get Plainfield Democrats to smother their resentment and vote for his successful rival, Mr. Dunn. As a reward for his devotion to the cause of Democracy Mr. Martine is already slated for State senator next fall.

—Do n't vote a ticket sent you. Secure the right one from a friend or get it in the booth.

Varying Estimates in Somerset.

According to the estimate of L. A. Thompson, chairman of the Republican County Committee, Somerset county will give Kean at least 100 majority and Harrison about the same.

James J. Bergen, Speaker of the House of Assembly, speaking for the Democrats, said yesterday: "The county will give Cleveland 250 majority and Werts a little less. I see no reason why there should be any change from the last Presidential election. There are changes on both sides, but they will about even up."

—Ex-Secretary Fairchild will speak at Music Hall to-night.

A Chinaman Gets a Bath.

Friday morning when the aquarium in Vanderbeek's show window was being filled by means of a hose attached to the water company's faucet there was an inquisitive Chinaman watching the frogs, 'gators, etc., take their morning bath. When the aquarium was nearly full, an inquisitive Dutchman lifted the hose, and someone accidentally (?) turned the water on. The stream came against the window directly in front of the "Chinee's" face, like a miniature Niagara, and he shut his "almonds" and beat a hasty retreat as far as the edge of the sidewalk. After making himself quite sure that he was not soaked, he cast a "lucky for me" glance towards the window, only to see three or four cases of "laughing fits" inside the store. When he saw that, he gave an object lesson of an aggravated Oriental smile and floated around the corner like the last notes of "Ta-ra-ra-Boom-de-Aye".

Scull, general passenger agent, B. & O. R. R., Baltimore, Md. 2

—Ex-Secretary Fairchild will speak at Music Hall to-night.

Spurious Tickets.

Beware of spurious tickets. The Republican managers have flooded the State with over two hundred thousand bogus Democratic tickets which, if cast at any polls will be thrown out and declared void. Do not vote any ticket but the one you receive from a trusted friend or that which will be found in the voting booth.

—Do n't miss the mass meeting at Music Hall to-night.

THAT REPUBLICAN SMOKER."

A Prohibitionist Thinks it Was a Disgraceful Gathering of Sunday-School Teachers and a Devil's Trap for Young Men.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Never did any political party adopt a more disgraceful method to make votes than when they organized and go up the "Smoker". Not satisfied with furnishing our young men with saloons for the last decade of years for their destruction, this "Smoker" opens the door of temptation by wholesale as never before. This is the counterpart to the saloon, to draw the young men of all classes down to death and all manner of evil. The Republican party charge all evil to the Democracy; but in Heaven's name what could they do worse than to get up this "Smoker"? Two thousand pipes and fifty pounds of tobacco for one session according to their own report. A type of hell "where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched;" "where the smoke of their tourment ascendeth up forever and ever." And strange as it may seem nearly every church in the city had its representative young and middle-aged men there; as well as superintendents and teachers of Sunday-schools, and young men from the Y. M. C. A.; and nearly every officer of the city from mayor to constable was represented upon the platform. Was there ever such a disgraceful gathering in the city of Plainfield? Could the devil himself have invented a worse trap of death to our young men. The call was to all, white and black, "to come in and have a good time". What a harvest for the saloons and bottling establishments. This smoker was counted a grand success for the Republican party. But where were the ministers and pastors of the city? Not one was reported upon the platform with the notables! Are n't you proud of such a party, and such a gathering? This is the Republican temperance reform party of our land. Walk up to the captain's office and cast your ballot for reform, and pray thy kingdom come Lord! PROHIBITIONIST.

—Do n't vote a ticket sent you. Secure the right one from a friend or get it in the booth.

Do n't Scratch the Ticket.

In certain localities, and our source of information comes straight, John Kean's managers are making propositions to Democrats to trade off Harrison and the Republican Congressional candidate, for the Gubernational and Assembly candidates. This game will be attempted on election day. So desperate have the corporations and the coal combine become, and so determined to carry the State, that no scheme nor art will be left unemployed to accomplish their purpose. Democrats, on Tuesday next strike for the honor of Democratic New Jersey. Poll every vote for the Democratic ticket, and thus administer a deserved rebuke to the conspirators who aim at nullifying the will of the people, and prostituting the ballot box for their own selfish ends.

Vote the Whole Ticket.

We urge upon all Democrats to vote their ticket without scratching it. The candidates for Congress and county offices upon it are all good men, fairly selected in convention, and should receive the support of every true Democrat. We have before extolled their good qualities and fitness for the offices they are nominated for, and it seems unnecessary to again individualize. We can only repeat, vote the whole ticket and it will be elected by a handsome majority. The correct ticket will be found at the head of the first column on the second page.

—Soldiers! Hear D. I. Murphy at Music Hall to-night! He'll tell you about those pension claims that President Cleveland vetoed.

Winter Excursion Tickets

To all Florida and other southern health and pleasure resorts, to Havana, Cuba, to Asheville, and Hot Springs, N. C., Luray, Old Point Comfort, Atlantic City, and other winter resorts have been placed on sale at Baltimore and Ohio ticket offices at greatly reduced rates.

For detailed information as to rates apply to C. P. Craig, 415 Broadway, New York; A. J. Simmons, 211 Washington street, Boston; James Potter, 833 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, or Chas. O. Scull, general passenger agent, Baltimore, Md.

—Ex-Secretary Fairchild will speak at Music Hall to-night.

How Far You Can Talk.

From the Leggett's pharmacy pay station at Park avenue and Front street you can now talk by telephone to the distant west. The rate to Chicago is $8.75 by day and $4.50 by night; the same to Milwaukee. To South Bend, Ind., or Toledo, Ohio, the day rate is $7.75, the night rate $3.85. There is a direct wire to each place.

A Great Press from Plainfield.

Scott's Press Works, under the superintendency of A. Weseman, have just turned out and will ship this week a 3-decker web-perfecting press and folder that prints a 24-page paper, the outside pages being printed in colors. This is the second press of its kind made in this country. It turns out 90,000 papers an hour, and will fold for mailing or delivery to newsboys. It is a fine piece of workmanship.

—Soldiers! Hear D. I. Murphy at Music Hall to-night! He'll tell you about those pension claims that President Cleveland vetoed.

—The Pennsylvania railroad company has issued orders to their employes to vote for Kean for Governor under fear of the company's displeasure. Werts's ballot reform law provides that any corporation or person attempting to prevent the free exercise of the franchise of any voter at any election shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and punishable by a fine not exceeding $2,000, or imprisonment not exceeding five years.

GEN. POPE'S CAREER.

The Life and Services of a Distinguished Soldier.

His Record in the Civil War—How He Subdued the Indians of Minnesota—His Part in the Fitz John Porter Case.

Gen. John Pope, who died September 23, was a son of Hon. Nathaniel Pope, a distinguished jurist, who served in the Fourteenth congress and was appointed to United States judgeship in 1818 and died in St. Louis in 1850. General Pope was born in Louisville, Ky., March 16, 1822. He graduated from the United States Military academy in 1842 and was made brevet second lieutenant of engineers. He served in Florida in 1842-4 and assisted in the survey of the northeast boundary line between the United States and the British provinces. He was made second lieutenant May 9, 1846, and took part in the Mexican war, being brevetted first lieutenant for gallantry at Monterey and captain for his services in the battle of Buena Vista. In 1849 he conducted the Minnesota exploring expedition which demonstrated the practicability of the navigation of the Red river of the north by steamers and in 1851-3 he was engaged in topographical engineering service in New Mexico.

In the political campaign of 1860 Capt. Pope sympathized with the republicans, and in an address on the subject of "Fortifications," read before a literary society in Cincinnati, he criticised the policy of President Buchanan in unsparing terms. For this he was courtmartialed, but, upon the recommendation of Postmaster General Joseph Holt further proceedings were dropped. He was still a captain of engineers when Sumter was fired upon, and he was one of the officers detailed by the war department to escort Abraham Lincoln to Washington. He was made brigadier general of volunteers, May 17, 1861, and placed in command first in the district of northern and afterwards southwestern and central Missouri. Gen. Pope's operations in the state in protecting railway communication and driving out guerrillas were highly successful. His most important engagement was that of Blackwater, December 18, 1861, where he captured 1,300 prisoners, 1,000 stand of arms, 1,000 horses, 65 wagons, two tons of gunpowder and a large quantity of tents, baggage and supplies. This victory forced Gen. Sterling Price to retreat below the Osage river, which he never again crossed. He was next intrusted by Gen. Henry W. Halleck with the command of the land forces that cooperated with Admiral Andrew H. Foot's flotilla in the expedition against New Madrid and Island No. 10. He succeeded in occupying the former place March 14, 1862, while the latter surrendered on April 8, the same year, when 6,500 prisoners, 125 cannons and 7,000 small arms fell into his hands. He was rewarded for the capture of New Madrid by a commission as major general of volunteers. As commander of the army of the Mississippi he advanced from Pittsburgh landing upon Corinth, the operations against the place occupying the period from April 23 to May 30. After its evacuation he pursued the enemy to Baldwin, Lee county, Miss. At the end of June he was summoned to Washington and assigned to the command of the army of Virginia, composed of Fremont's (afterwards Sigel's), Banks' and McDowell's corps. On July 14 he was commissioned brigadier general in the regular army. On August 9 a division of his army under Gen. Nathaniel P. Banks had a severe engagement with the confederates commanded by Gen. Thomas J. Jackson at Cedar Mountain. For the next fifteen days Gen. Pope, who had been reenforced by a portion of the Army of the Potomac, fought continuously a greatly superior force of the enemy under Gen. Robert E. Lee on the line of the Rappahannock, at Bristow Station, at Groveton, at Mannassas Junction, at Gainesville and at Germantown, near Chantilly. Gen. Pope then withdrew his forces behind Difficult creek, between Flint hill and the Warrenton turnpike, whence he fell back within the fortifications of Washington and on September 3 was, at his own request, relieved of the command of the army of Virginia and was assigned to that of the department of the northwest, where in a short time he completely checked the outrages of the Minnesota Indians.

He retained this command until January 30, 1866, when he was given charge of the military division of the Missouri, including all the northwestern states and territories. From this he was relieved January 6, 1866. He afterward had command successively of the third military district, comprising Georgia, Alabama and Florida, under the first reconstruction act of 1867-8; the department of the lakes, 1868-70; the department of the Missouri, headquarters at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., 1870-84, and the military department of the Pacific from 1884 until he was retired March 16, 1886. In Washington, in December, 1862, he testified before a courtmartial called for the trial of Gen. Fitz John Porter, who had been accused by him of misconduct before the enemy at the second battle of Manassas or Bull Run. Gen. Pope was brevetted major general March 13, 1865, "for gallant and meritorious service" in the capture of Island No. 10 and advanced to the full rank October 26, 1882.

Two gentlemen get in a dispute One of them says very sarcastically

"My dear sir, I am so impressed with your childish simplicity that I would pay a considerable sum of money to be for five minutes only, as stupid as you are."

"In that case you could brag of having had at least one lucid interval," was the tart reply.—Texas Siftings.

Rare Luck.

Mrs. Bloomer—It's shamefull Mr. Silentt, who is deaf and dumb, is going to marry Miss Quiett, and she's deaf and dumb.

Mr. B.—What of it?

"Why, just think. Their children may be deaf and dumb, too."

"That's all right. We'll watch where they settle and move in next door to 'em."—N. Y. Weekly.

It Got There Just the Same.

Mabel—Such a joke on Mr. Gayboy We were out on the balcony between the dances and he got the sleeve of his dress coat all over red paint from one of the posts that were just painted.

Maud—And did you go near the post?

Mabel—No. Why?

Maud—Because you have red paint all over the back of your waist.—Jury

A young widow has married again An old friend of the family reproaches her discreetly

"I am sure, my dear," he says, gently, "that you have not chosen as you might have. Had your poor husband been alive he would never have let you make such a match."—Boston Globe.

Misconstrued.

The New Principal—And now, my boys, I think I have shown you the folly of ambition. You are not to try to become great generals or poets or authors or statesmen, but you want to be—great what?

Class (in chorus)—Great prize-fighters!—Chicago News.

Knocked Out.

Enterprising Druggist—Here's a card madam. Each time you buy something I'll punch it. When two dollars are punched you get five soda-water tickets free.

Madam—That's a fine idea. I'll take two dollars' worth of postage-stamps now.—Judge.

A Grand Scheme.

"I save money under this new tariff on tobacco," said Binks.

"Tell us how you do it," put in Lathers. "I'd like to do it myself."

"I smoke one thirty-cent cigar now where I used to smoke two twenty fivers."—Harper's Bazar.

Gave Himself Away.

The young man had been telling the old lady quite a lot about himself.

"You remind me," she said, "of a story I once read."

"What was it, may I ask?"

"Oh, I don't remember the story at all," she exclaimed, artlessly, "but I remember it didn't have any moral to it."—Detroit Free Press.

Taken by Surprise.

"Captain, there's a lady standing on the dock who wishes to speak to you before the boat pulls out."

The captain of the lake steamer hurriedly ran up on deck and looked in the direction indicated.

"Lady, be hanged!" he exclaimed "That's my wife!"—Chicago Tribune.

Mean Thing!

Mrs O.—Oh, I do like this hat so much; it is awfully becoming! I think it makes me ten years younger. Don't you think so, my dear?

Mrs. Y.—Yes, indeed, my dear; with that hat on you don't look over forty-five.—Demorest's Magazine.

Mrs. Brown—My husband tore the last page out of the book I was reading But I'll pay him back in his own coin.

Mrs. Cobwigger—But how, my dear?

Mrs. Brown—He'll never hear the end of it.—N. Y. Sun.

A SURPRISE IN ILLINOIS.

The State Has Apparently Gone Over to the Democracy.

New York State Democratic by About 40,000—Indiana is Also Claimed by the Democratic Party—West Virginia and Delaware Seem as Yet to Be in Doubt. Wisconsin Also in the Democratic Column—The Republicans Make Inroads on the Democratic Majority in Congress.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Grover Cleveland has once more been elected president of the United States. According to the returns he will receive in the electoral college 250 votes against 148 for President Harrison. The detailed electoral vote follows:

From the best information obtainable the following table gives the result in the various states. Later returns may, of course, change the result, and this table also shows the indicated standing of the Fifty-third congress:

For Weaver—Nevada 3; Colorado, 4. Total, 7

Late reports indicate that the Democratic majority in the next national house of representatives has been considerably decreased. In New York the Republicans appear to have elected but ten of the thirty-four congressmen, a Democratic gain of one. New Jersey and Connecticut have not apparently changed their present division of representation, except that the Democrats in New Jersey have gained the additional member accorded by the new apportionment.

New York state is Democratic by not less than 30,000, and has elected a Democratic assembly.

New Jersey has probably gone for Cleveland by from 5,000 to 8,000, but Kean, Rep., claims his election as governor.

The south has rolled up almost solid delegations from every state. Alabama has an additional member in the Fifty-third congress, and it is a Democratic gain; also Arkansas.

Georgia gains a new member and recovers the district now represented by Watson (Alliance member). The Republican gains are one in New Hampshire, eight in Ohio and one in Oregon. Although the Republicans carried Rhode Island on the presidential ticket, the reports are that no selection for congressman was made, necessitating another election.

Owing to the absence of reports from the central and western states, and the uncertainty as to the results in congressional districts, it is impossible even to attempt to approximate the total representation of the several parties in the next house; but it will be Democratic.

The town of Harrison, Whitelaw Reid's own district, went against him by five. In 1888 it went six in favor of Harrison.

As the returns came into the national Democratic headquarters they were duplicated by special wire to Mr. Cleveland at his house on Fifty-first street.

Harrity's Claim.

William F. Harrity, chairman of the National Democratic committee, said of the election: "The returns received leave no doubt in our minds of the election of Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Stevenson by decisive majorities in the electoral college.

The indications are that they, as already predicted, receives the electoral votes of every one of the southern states. We are enabled to add to those the electoral votes of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Indiana as previously claimed.

"We furthermore claim that Mr. Cleveland has carried Illinois and Wisconsin, and that Mr. Harrison has lost some of the far western states.

"Returns generally indicate great Democratic gains and great Republican losses. The people of the country are entitled to congratulations upon their great victory."

What The Sun Says:

The elections throughout the Union resulted in sweeping Democratic victories. Mr. Cleveland was elected president and a Democratic house of representatives was chosen."

Some of the states which heretofore have been solidly in the Republican column gave substantial Democratic victories.

Some of the features of the election were the very great majorities rolled up by New York and Brooklyn, the cutting down of majorities in the strong Republican counties in the interior and the great change in the voting generally throughout the western states.

In the south the Third party cut a sorry figure, their most crushing defeat, perhaps, being in Georgia, where Tom Watson was beaten by 4,000 by his Democratic opponent.

Not a Third party congressman was elected in Georgia. In South Carolina only one district is in doubt, and there the chances favor the Democrats. In Florida, famous for its Ocala platform and agitation, the Third party was in a hopeless minority.

In Arkansas the Third party fusion with the Republicans had no effect whatever on Democratic success. In Mississippi, also a former Alliance hotbed, the entire Democratic congress delegation was elected, as was the case in Virginia, where Weaver received fewer votes than Bidwell.

The Tribune's Claims.

The Tribune this morning says: The result of the election is in doubt at midnight. The returns from most of the states are meagre and insufficient to warrant an absolute conclusion, though the probabilities at this hour are that Harrison and Reid have not obtained a majority of the electoral votes.

Connecticut is believed to be Democratic by a plurality of from 1,000 to 2,000 on the presidential ticket with the governorship and legislature in doubt.

Indiana is claimed by both parties by a small majority.

In Illinois the great Democratic majority in Chicago is claimed to carry in the Cleveland electors.

Wisconsin is confidently claimed by the Republicans by a safe plurality, and Spooner is elected governor.

Returns from the far west and northwest are late and fragmentary, indicating, however, the choice of some People's party electors in several states.

Massachusetts has chosen Harrison electors and probably a Republican state ticket, thus displacing Governor Russell. All the rest of New England is Republican, with the possible exception of New Hampshire.

Whether or not the solid south has been broken is still uncertain. The Republicans claim Delaware by a narrow margin and West Virginia with greater confidence.

It is possible that the election of a president may devolve on the house of representatives.

Congress is Democratic by a large majority.

NEW YORK.

The Indications Are That Cleveland Has Carried the State by About 40,000 Plurality.

NEW YORK.—The indications are that Cleveland has carried the state by about 40,000 plurality; that the assembly will consist of 71 Democrats and 57 Republicans.

The weather was perfect in all parts of the state. In some of the northern counties the roads were very muddy, and that may have affected the voting.

Whatever the cause the total vote in the country districts fell much below the vote of 1888, but two Republicans stayed at home to one Democrat, so that the Cleveland majority increased in nearly every part of the state.

There are many surprises, but the greatest of all is in Chemung county, Senator David B. Hill's home, where a Democratic majority of 570 in 1888 is now a Republican majority of 300, or a total Democratic loss of 870. Dr. R. P. Bush, the speaker of the present assembly, who represented the county seven years, is defeated.

Most of this loss is in the city of Elmira, which gives 285 majority for Harrison against 302 for Cleveland in 1888.

Albany county did as bad. The majority for Cleveland there is only 500, while in 1888 it was 1,675. Albany sent three Democrats to the present assembly, but in the next it will have but one, a clear loss of two seats. For months past there the Democrats have been quarreling, and in spite of all efforts to restore peace the fight was carried to the polls.

Tammany Hall made a clean sweep. Gilroy was elected mayor over Einstein by a vote of 173,508 to 97,647. Cleveland had a majority of 74,793 in the city. New York city with Richmond and Westchester counties sends a solid Democratic delegation of ten representatives to congress.

Kings county gave Cleveland a plurality of 29,160, and cast 1,390 votes for Weaver, and 1,598 for Bidwell. Three Democratic congressmen were elected.

WEST VIRGINIA.—Owing to the delay caused in the count by the Australian ballot, which is being tried for the first time, definite figures cannot yet be given. Both committees claim the state.

NEW JERSEY.

The State Casts Its Electoral Vote for Cleveland by a Plurality Exceeding 8,000—Werts Elected Governor.

NEW JERSEY.—Dispatches from every county in the state indicate that Cleveland has a plurality exceeding 8,000, and that Werts, Dem., for governor will have a plurality of from 3,000 to 5,000. The pluralities by counties are as follows:

The following table shows the pluralities by counties:

Counties.	Harrison.	Cleveland.

Cleveland's plurality, 8,940.

Caldwell, the birthplace of Grover Cleveland, gave Harrison 184, Cleveland 154.

Fifteen arrests were made in Trenton for bribery at the polls. Among the prisoners required to give bail to answer such charges are Major Michael Hurley, the Democratic "boss" of Mercer county; John Webb, a letter carrier, and William H. Skirm, son of the Republican candidate for state senator in this county.

Mercer county gives Harrison 1,200 plurality; Kean, Rep., for governor, 1,300, and Gardner, Rep., for congress, 1,100. Hutchinson, Rep., is elected to the assembly in the First Mercer district. Skirm, Rep., for state senate, carries the county by 1,500.

The New York Tribune correspondent says that Werts, Democratic candidate for governor, is probably elected by 3,500, and that Cleveland's plurality will be 7,000.

PENNSYLVANIA.

The Majority for Harrison and Reid in the State Will Be in the Neighborhood of 70,000.

PENNSYLVANIA.—The Philadelphia Press says:

Pennsylvania has gone for Harrison and Reid. The returns indicate that his majority will not be less than 70,000, and more complete reports may carry it to a figure somewhat larger. The Republican state ticket, including John Dean, for justice of the supreme court, and William Lilly and Alexander McDowell, for congressmen at large, has received about the same majority, although there are sections where Judge Dean has run considerably ahead of his ticket.

An important part of the Republican victory in the state is the election of twenty-one Republican congressmen out of a total or thirty. In the present house the Democrats have eleven members from Pennsylvania. The legislature is also strongly Republican, the majority on joint ballot promising from the returns so far received to range from eighty-five to ninety. The vote in most quarters has been a pretty full one, and the experience with the new ballot system appears to have been without serious difficulty.

It is impossible at this hour to make any calculation as to the extent of the vote cast for any of the outside party organizations, although there were three electoral tickets in the field besides the Republican and Democratic nominations—the Prohibition, People's and Socialistic-Labor.

Pennsylvania elected thirty-two presidential electors, thirty congressmen and a legislature to select a United States senator to succeed Mr. Quay. The state will give Harrison more than 50,000 majority, Philadelphia giving 28,000. The legislature will be largely Republican.

LOUISIANA.—The figures on the vote in ninety-nine parishes thus far received show a plurality for Cleveland of 30,000. The Cleveland plurality four years ago was 54,848.

CONNECTICUT.

The Democrats Claim the State by About 1,000 Plurality—There Will Be No Election of State Officers.

CONNECTICUT.—This state has gone for Cleveland. In half the state Cleveland runs 737 ahead of 1888. This does not include the cities. The vote in these towns stands: Harrison, 21,757; Cleveland, 20,024. In 1888 the vote was Harrison, 21,655; Cleveland, 19,165.

One hundred and one towns give Cleveland 31,077; Harrison, 31,713. This shows a Democratic gain over 1888 of 1,472. The Democrats claim the state for Cleveland by about 1,000 majority. There will be no election of state officers by the people. The legislature will probably be Republican.

New Haven gives a Democratic majority of 2,688. The vote polled is 90 per cent. of the total voting list of 21,000 throughout the state. Mr. Morris, the Democratic candidate for governor, is running ahead of Cleveland, while Merwin appears to be running behind his ticket.

The city of Waterbury gives about 1,000 Democratic majority. Bridgeport is Democratic by about 1,000 majority. The town of Haddam shows a gain of one Democratic representative.

The following congressmen appear to be elected: First district, Lewis Sperry, Dem.; Second district, J. P. Piggott, Dem.; Third district, Charles A. Russell, Rep.; Fourth district, Robert E. De Forest, Dem.

Complete returns from the state, gathered by the Southern New England Telephone company, give Cleveland 5,330 plurality and Morris, Democratic candidate for governor, 1,469 majority.

THE CENTRAL STATES.

Illinois Apparently Goes for Cleveland and Causes the Greatest Surprise in the Campaign.

ILLINOIS.—As returns come in it is conclusively demonstated that Illinois cast the heaviest vote in the history of the state. Apathy prevailed in every precinct throughout the state during the campaign, but this gave way to an unprecedented activity, and all parties appear to have polled practically their entire vote. The surprise of the day in Chicago is the little disparity between the Cleveland and Altgeld vote.

It was expected that Altgeld, the German Democratic candidate for governor, would lead the presidential ticket by many thousands, but returns as far as received do not indicate this result. The scratching has been unusually heavy, but not so general as it would have been had this not been the first election under the Australian ticket. Voters desiring to scratch often refrained from doing so owing to a fear of spoiling their ballot through error.

The Chicago Tribune, Rep., says: "Returns received by The Tribune up to 10:30 o'clock indicate that Cleveland, for president, and Altgeld, Dem., for governor, have carried Cook county by at least 20,000 State returns do not show as large Republican games as was hoped, so that in all likelihood Illinois is lost to the Republicans. The state legislature will also in all probability have Democratic majorities in both branches."

Chairman Clark of the Democratic state committee says: "Cleveland has carried Illinois by 15,000, and Altgeld, Dem., is elected governor."

The indications are that the legislature will also be Democratic.

INDIANA.—The vote was probably the largest ever polled in the state. As the Australian ballot law has doubled the number of precincts it would be impracticable to compare the vote of this year with that of the presidential vote of four years ago. In 1890 the Democrats carried the state by a plurality of 19,575. On this basis the Republicans would have to gain an average of seven votes in each precinct.

Later reports from Republican headquarters say that the indications are that Indiana will go Republican. Heavy Republican gains over two years ago in Marion county, containing the city of Indianapolis, indicate now, with 40 out of 208 precincts in, that the Democratic majority of 2,000 in the county will be reduced to 600.

No comparisons can be made on these precincts for their geography as changed a few months ago. At the same time eighty precincts outside the city show net gains of 1,104 for Harrison, an average of 11 to the precinct. If this keeps up it will wipe out the Democratic majority of 19,579 in 1890 and leave over 12,000 plurality for the Republicans.

Returns indicate considerable Republican gains. For example fifty-four precincts of Indianapolis show a gain of 411 over the vote of 1890. If this were continued throughout the state, there would be a small Republican majority. But the Democrats claim gains in the counties, which, if coocct, more than offset the Republican gains in the capital. Ex-Gov. Gray telegraphed the National Democratic committee that Cleveland would have 10,000 to 12,000 majority.

OHIO.—The Buckeye State voted for twenty-three presidential electors, twenty-one congressmen, a secretary of state, and minor state officers.

The latest returns from Ohio increase Republican gains in places least expected.

Twenty-seven of the sixty-one precincts in the city of Columbus give a net Democratic gain on the head of the ticket of 78. The Democratic State committee now concedes Ohio to Harrison by over 20,000 plurality.

Democratic congressmen are elected in six districts, and the indications are that the Republicans have elected the fifteen other members of the Ohio delegation.

Democratic congressmen are elelected as follows: Third district, Houk; Fourth, Layton; Fifth, Donovan; Twelfth, Outhwaite; Thirteenth, Haire; Seventeenth, Richards.

Republican congressmen are probably elected as follows: First district, Storer; Second, Caldwell; Sixth, Hulick; Seventh, Wilson; Eighth, Strong; Ninth, Ashley; Tenth, Enochs; Eleventh, Grosvenor; Fourteenth, E. G. Johnson; Fifteenth, Van Vorhis; Sixteenth, Horrman; Eighteenth, Morgan; Nineteenth, Northway; Twentieth, White; Twenty-first, Hoise.

MICHIGAN.—Michigan elected 14 presidential electors, 12 congressmen, a governor and a legislature which will choose a successor to United States Senator Francis B. Stockbridge, Rep.

It is estimated that Michigan will give from five to seven of her electoral votes to Cleveland.

Chipman will probably be elected from the First district by 2,000.

State returns show a gain for Morse, Democratic candidate for governor, and his election seems assured.

IOWA.—Only sixty-nine precincts in Iowa had been heard from at 11:20 o'clock, and it is impossible to give the result definitely. The new election law rendered the counting of the ballots a slow job. The indications are that the Republicans have carried the states on electors and that the state ticket is in doubt.

NORTHWEST STATES.

The Returns Are Slow in Coming in, and Late Returns May Change the Indicated Results.

IDAHO.—Idaho voted for governor, three presidential electors and one congressman. An unusually heavy vote was polled. The polls were open from 8 a. m. until 7 p. m. It is impossible to obtain figures from any of the eighteen counties, as the count is proceeding at a snail's pace. Sweet, the Republican nominee for congress, is undoubtedly elected and it is conceded that McConnell, the Republican nominee for governor, has the best chance. It seems likely that the Weaver-Cleveland electoral ticket has been elected by a narrow margin.

CALIFORNIA.—The returns so far received indicate that Cleveland is running ahead in the city, and Democrats claim that he will carry it by several thousand. The state committee now claims the state will be close. In the First congressional district Geary, Dem., is probably re-elected. In the Sixth district Republicans claim the election of Lindley, while the Democrats say Cannon, the fusion candidate, will be elected. Other districts are in doubt, but three will probably be Republican.

WISCONSIN.—The campaign of 1892 closed with the largest vote ever polled within the city. A corresponding increase is reported throughout the state, and 850,000 is the estimate of the total vote cast. The unusual number of split tickets with the Australian system in vogue caused an unprecedented delay in receiving the returns. The returns have not nearly all been received.

Everything indicates a Democratic majority in state. Spooner, Rep., for governor, is running away ahead of the ticket.

Otjen, Rep., for congress, is running well against Mitchell, and the election of Van Schaick, Rep., state at large for congress, is probably assured. All congressional districts are still in doubt.

MINNESOTA.—Fragmentary returns indicate Democratic gains in the state. There is nothing definite as yet. The number of tickets and the new system will make reports very late.

The returns received indicate a falling off in the vote. The gains and losses are about equally divided. The returns received do not show the effect of the Populist vote yet.

Chairman Baker, of the Democratic state committee, claims the certain election of the four fusion electors.

WYOMING.—Estimates from returns received show Harrison to have carried the state by very small majority. The Democrats will undoubtedly elect the whole state ticket. The legislature is yet in doubt.

NORTH DAKOTA.—Returns are very meagre, but seem to indicate that Harrison has carried the state by about 1,000. No returns are yet available on the congressional contests.

OREGON.—Returns from 90 precincts, including 18 precincts of Multnomah county, give Harrison 18,027, Weaver 7,702 and Cleveland 2,891. Chairman Murphy, of the Democratic state central committee, asserts that all Populist candidates will be elected with pluralities of from 1,000 to 3,000. On the other hand, Chairman Boise, of the Republican state central committee, claims the state by 7,000.

NEW ENGLAND STATES.

With the Exception of Connecticut, Which Is Claimed by the Democrats, They Are All Republican.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—The indications are that the state is carried for Harrison by about 2,000; that there is no choice for governor by the people; that Stone and Parker, Dems., are elected to congress; that the legislature is Republican in both branches.

VERMONT.—Vermont went Republican. The Democrats concede the State to the Republicans by a plurality of 30,000.

Returns received from fifty Vermont towns give the following vote: Harrison, 12,765; Cleveland, 5,606; Bidwell, 443; scattering, 6. The same towns in 1888 gave Harrison 14,719; Cleveland, 5,610; Fisk, 405. The Republican vote shows a decrease of 1,954, or 13 per cent., and the Democratic a decrease of 4, or seven-tenths per cent.; the Prohibition a gain of 28, or 9 per cent. The second trial of voting under the new ballot law was more satisfactory than the first.

MASSACHUSETTS.—The election in Massachusetts was for 15 presidential electors, 13 congressmen, state officers and a legislature which will chose a United States senator to succeed Henry L. Dawes, Rep. A heavy vote was polled all over the state. Fifty-two towns and 190 precincts of Boston give Haile, Rep., for governor 40,928; Russell, Dem., 50,807. Russell's plurality, 9,879.

Governor Russell's friends claim that he will carry the state by 1,500 plurality, while the Republicans express confidence that Haile will have several thousand plurality. Russell is running ahead of Cleveland and Haile behind Harrison.

Returns come very slowly, and no congress districts are as yet complete. The indications seem to point to the election of McEttrick, Independent Dem., in the Tenth district. Harrison carries the state by a reduced majority.

MAINE.—One hundred and seventy-seven towns in Maine give Harrison, 42,089; Cleveland, 31,455; scattering, 3,084. The same towns in 1888 gave Harrison, 42,347; Cleveland, 32,060; scattering, 2,897. Republican plurality now 10,624. Republican plurality then 18,287. If the remaining towns come in with the same rate of loss, the vote will stand: Harrison, 64,000; Cleveland, 49,500; scattering, 5,000. Total vote, 118,500.

RHODE ISLAND.—The total vote of the state, lacking twenty districts, gives Harrison 18,248; Cleveland, 16,532. This state goes for Harrison.

Indications point to no election of congressmen in this state.

WESTERN STATES.

Kansas Will Probably Go Republican by About 20,000—The Populists' Tactics Delay Returns.

KANSAS.—There is little probability of any definite returns from Kansas being received until late today. The Populists have insisted that the law providing that each ballot shall be checked up complete when taken from the box is complied with to the letter. This has resulted in delaying the count to such an extent that no figures of any consequence have been reported.

The precincts heard from all show decided Republican gains. Four towns in the Seventh district, Wichita, Winfield, Newton and Nickerson, all of which gave Jerry Simpson handsome majorities in 1890, have each given majorities for Long, Rep.

The Republican state central state committee claims the election of all the eight Republican candidates for congress and a majority in each branch of the legislature as well as the state and electoral tickets. A similar claim is made by the fusionists.

If the proportion of gains made by the Republicans in the few precincts heard from is kept up throughout the state the Republican majority will not be less than 30,000.

The Republican state central committee claim the state by 20,000 plurality. The chairman of the People's party concedes nothing.

NEVADA.—It is conceded by all parties that Weaver carries Nevada by 1,500. Newlands, silver party, is elected to congress. Result as to legislature not yet certain, but it is generally believed the silver party have a majority which will insure the election of Stewart to the United States senate.

COLORADO.—The returns are coming in very slowly, especially from the interior of the state, owing to a lack of railroad and telegraphic facilities in many counties. The returns indicate the election of electors for Weaver, the Populist candidate for the presidency, by a majority which cannot yet be estimated.

NEBRASKA.—The returns are still very fragmentary, owing to the new election law and poor accounting. Figures so far received indicate that Weaver will carry the state by a few thousand.

CALIFORNIA.—Returns received are too meagre to forecast the result in this state. The returns from Kern county show a gain of 100 for Cleveland over the vote of 1888.

At 5 o'clock when the polls closed in this city a number of voters had not cast their ballots, and the total vote in many precincts showed a falling off from the registration figures.

A great deal of trouble was caused by the lack of ballot boxes, and although 150 were distributed many voters were unable to get their votes in in time.

The election passed off very quietly, though twenty arrests were made by United States deputy marshals for attempts at illegal voting and for breach of the peace. The estimated total vote of the city will be 60,000. An unusually large vote was cast throughout California, and the new ballot law was generally satisfactory.

"PATER" STILL ON DECK.

HE SAILS RIGHT INTO EDUCATOR BABCOCK.

Every Parent of Plainfield Public School Pupils, He Says, Can Testify to Radical Defects in the Present Plan of Work—Further Complaints, and Remedies Suggested.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—A "public office is a public trust" and a public officer is a public servant. It is therefore surprising that the president of the board of education, if he wished to reply to my criticism of the High School through your columns, did not write in a better spirit than that which characterized his article. I spoke as a citizen who has a perfect right to express through the public prints an honest opinion of the conduct of a public institution. But the president of the school board takes me to task for so doing as if he were the master, and not the servant, of the people. Such an attitude is certainly not becoming in one holding his position.

The personalities of his communication were none the less out of place. Calling names is not an argument, and, besides, it is a very undignified proceeding for the head of the school board. Furthermore, his assumption that I was airing a personal grievance was entirely gratuitous. I have no reason to ask the superintendent or the school trustees for a dispensation in behalf of any child of mine. I was speaking for the benefit of others and for the larger usefulness of the High School.

In passing the strictures I did upon the curriculum of the High School, I find that I voiced the views of many parents. I need not to have been told this, as I have been since my article was published, for every thoughtful parent who has had a child in the advanc classes of the High School has been aware of the radical defects in the plan of work.

I reiterate that it is impossible, under the present plan, for more than a very small fraction of the pupils to reap the benefit of the full course of study, without undergoing a nervous strain that is dangerous. This is a fact that cannot be successfully denied. The result is that only a very meagre percentage of the pupils attempt to complete the preparatory course, as it is called. I insist that the plan of study should be and could be adjusted in such a way as to give every member of the High School who desired it a chance to complete with ease the course necessary to fit for college, whether he or she wishes to enter college or not.

The largest benefits that the High School offers should be for the many and not for the few only who are now able to enjoy them because they may happen to have the gift of mastering their studies without a consuming effort. And in pleading for the right of the many to partake of these benefits without physical detriment, I am not pleading for the weak and diseased, as the president of the school board seems to think. I am arguing the cause of those who have the health to do all the study that a suitably planned course of work would require, without the least danger to their physical constitution.

I am not aware that any intelligent friends of education in this city believe that the methods of our public schools are so nearly perfect that there is no hope of improving them. Nor do they believe that the suggestion of a desirable change in some of those methods is a signal for a community to become alarmed and resent it as "a blow to the fair fame of the city". I don't think anyone, except an unduly sensitive school trustee, perhaps, could be so disturbed over the matter.

In fact, I understand that the new principal himself intends to introduce a very significant and wise change in some of the methods heretofore followed. I have faith to believe that it will be his purpose to remedy the defects in the methods to which I have directed attention. It was solely because of this belief that I was so rash as to commit the offence of "rushing into print" on the subject.

Heretofore it was scarcely worth the while to make any suggestions of this nature, for our excellent and respected friend, the former principal, was so thoroughly satisfied with the completeness of the machine in whose construction she had a very large part, that she was not friendly to any proposed changes. I see that brother Wells in his plain, businesslike letter to THE PRESS on this subject, gives some personal testimony to that effect.

PLAINFIELD'S GUN CLUB.

Result of Team Contests of the Trapshooters' League.

The result of the recent team contests of the New Jersey Trapshooters' League has been prepared and shows that there were eighty-eight team scores shot. For these 10,975 targets were thrown and 8,399 broken. The Independent Gun club, of Plainfield, won first prize for winning the most contests and first premium for the highest average, 88.24. The averages of the other clubs were: Maplewood, 82.72; South Sides, 81.86; New Jersey, 79; Boiling Springs, 78; Woodside, 77.60; Passaic City, 69; Brunswick, 69.93; East Side Mutual, 68, and East Orange, 63.

There were eight prizes in the team contest, and the first went to the Independents, second to the Boiling Springs, third was tied for by the South Sides and Maplewoods, fourth by the New Jerseys, fifth tied for by the Woodsides and East Side Mutuals, sixth by the Passaic Citys and seventh was tied for by the East Orange and Brunswicks. The special prize for the best average was won by E. D. Miller, who made a percentage of 92.24. The Penrose medal, which was offered for the highest aggregate number of breaks in four consecutive shoots, was won by W. N. Drake, of the Maplewood club, who had to break twenty-five straight in the last contest to win. This he did, beating E. D. Miller by one break, with an aggregate of 96.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Gen. Long and family have returned from their summer home.

George Watson and family are at Hotel Savoy, New York, for the Winter.

Mrs. Gill and family of Netherwood, have removed to 23 East Second street.

Harry VanEmburgh has completed F. A. Dunham's work at Dunkirk, N. Y., for the winter.

Miss Carpenter, of East Front street, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Gillespie, at Bound Brook.

Wm. C. Ayres has been appointed commissioner of appeals, vice Manning Vermeule, deceased.

Mrs. Annie Lynch, sister of Michael Winn, died this morning at her late residence, Third and Liberty streets,

Miss Kate Tuite, a popular young lady of Elizabeth, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Davis of West Second street.

The Rev. C. E. Herring, in all probability, will be installed as pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Tuesday evening, Nov. 22.

One hundred and fifty borough Democrats saluted Mayor Saunders at midnight, at his home, and made him give a rousing speech.

The Kid, To-night.

This is the cast of to-night's farce comedy at Music Hall:

Ebenezer Newrich, rich but unpretentious,	Ed. Chrissie
Samuel Baxter, a condescending servant,	W. H. Williams
Swipes, a gentleman from the Bowery,	Jas. J. Murray
Billy Rustle	Burton Collver
Tommy Drummer	Fred Huntley
Irving Booth O'Connor	Charles Barrett
Mrs. Maria Newrich, who never does things by halves	Tillie Shields
Evangeline, her youngest "Kid"	Dottie Pine
Emily, her eldest, with two beaux to her string,	Blanche Sherwood
Miss St. John,	Lena Bruce,
Miss St. George,	Emma Carr,
Miss St. Felix,	Lou Skillman,
Miss St. Thomas,	Carrie Richardson
Telephone girls, passengers, etc.

Good Foot-Ball Game.

A fine game of football was played between Leal's second eleven and "Pick-Ups" at the Willow avenue grounds yesterday. Leal's won. The teams lined up as follows:

LEAL'S.	PICK UPS.
Loizeaux	center Snediker.
Shaen	right guard A. Crane.
McClure	right tackle Langdon.
McGee	right end Smith.
Erickson	quarter back Perrin.
Green	left half back Bosterle.
Wadsworth	right half back West.
Taylor	full back McCutchen.

Referee, Nathan Laing; Umpire, C. B. Morse.

Leal's won by 14 to 0. The interference of Leal's was very good, especially Shaen's. The tackling of Taylor and the running of Wadsworth were to be commended.

Another Business Improvement.

As bright and beautiful as an oasis in a desert is the new place of business of Miss A. E. Lincoln, florist, on Park avenue, at the foot of North. The display of plants and flowers is most attractive, and everything is very tastefully arranged. Miss Lincoln will supply weddings and funerals with the choicest of cut flowers or plants, either in bulk or attractive design. The new home of the flowers is an appropriate one, and is a fine business improvement.

That Public Fountain.

The W. C. T. U. have submitted the plan for the public drinking fountain. At the top flows water for humanity; below is a basin for horses, then one for dogs. The women have secured promise of free water from the Supply company, and want the city to provide a seas-pool and keep the fountain clean. The matter has been referred to the proper councilmanic committee.

A WASHINGTON LETTER.

One Firm in Buffalo Spends More Money at the Buffalo Post-office than all the Banks and Newspapers combined.

A Washington (D. C.) letter says, that the post-office authorities at Washington report that one firm in Buffalo—the World's Dispensary Medical Association—spends annually one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000) for stamps alone, in carrying on their extensive proprietary business. This is more than all the banks and newspapers of Buffalo combined spend for postage.

Here's a firm which has grown, step by step, through many years to greatness. The reason for this wonderful growth has been that they have faith in what they sell, so much faith that if they can't benefit or cure, they don't want your money.

For many years they have been selling Dr. Pierce's remedies—one, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, for regulating and invigorating the liver and purifying the blood; the other, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the hope of weakly womanhood, and they've been sold for years, sold by the million bottles; sold under a positive guarantee of benefiting or curing, or your money will be refunded.

"The Result"

Satisfactory. The Winning Party the Future Servants of the People.

The great victory was not won by fraud or bribery; or by misrepresentations and false promises; or by vile epethets and mean personal ties.

But on the other hand the fairest and most righteous means have been used by the successful party. Every promise has been faithfully fulfilled as far as possible, and a strict adherence to right and justice maintained. Fair and polite treatment of the people, honesty and uprightness in all their methods have won for the party this much desired and coveted success.

The victorious party named above is not a political party at all, but one of our most successful and enterprising dry goods merchants, who only a few years ago commenced business here in a small room on East Front street. To-day Edsall's, of No. 20 West Front street, is well and favorably known all through this part of the state as the leading establishment in the dry and fancy goods line. The growth has been remarkable, and bespeaks for the proprietor commendable push and energy.

In view of this success in the past, Edsall has decided to make greater efforts still during the next year to double the volume of trade.

This of course means less profits to the business, and more money in the pockets of the patrons.

His elegant stores are thronged with buyers, who are well pleased and satisfied with their purchases, and say that they find it much to their advantage to buy at home instead of going to New York.

In a few days the public will hear more about how he expects to increase his trade to double its present amount. In the mean time come in and see the elegant new bric-a-brac and novelties we are now showing in the new archway, and the hundreds of other beautiful and seasonable articles through each department at Edsall's.

Councilman Fisk's Big Borrow.

Councilman Fisk caused considerable merriment at Monday night's council meeting by a motion to borrow $500,000 for the fire department fund. "What are you going to build?" queried councilman Marsh—"an opera-house?" Mr. Fisk meant $500. This was ordered borrowed, and $4,500 for the general fund. $400 was returned to the poor fund from the general fund, and $1,000 was appropriated from the general fund for the streets.

The only Republican elected in Somerset county is George A. Dilts for Sheriff.

Huff's majorities over Spencer are: Bridgewater, 304; Bedminster, 149: Bernardsville, 106; Branchburg, 17; Franklin, 80; Hillsborough, first district, 38. Spencer's majorities: Hillsborough, second district, 45; Montgomery, 23; North Plainfield and Warren given elsewhere.

UNION COUNTY.

Rahway's Majorities.

Parrot, R., maj	131
Wm. Chamberlain, R, maj	403
Kean, R., maj	66

The entire Democratic ticket is elected in Union county, except Stover for surrogate, and Cohen for assembly.

Parrot's own figures are that he is elected by about 350 majority.

Elizabeth gives Werts a majorty of 1,200.

The latest returns indicate that Dunn's majority for congress in the district is 300.

TWO MORE DISTRICTS.

That's What the Enormous Vote of Yesterday Means for Plainfield.

The vote in Plainfield yesterday was enormous and unprecedented. The perfect weather brought everybody out early. The voters cast as many as 18 to 20 ballots a minute, during the "rush" hours. In the First ward 621 votes were cast, and 608 in the Second. This means a division of each of these wards into two districts, for the December municipal election. The 601st ballot dividing the Second ward was cast by Andrew G. Carpenter.

WHAT FOOLS THESE MORTALS BE.

Even the Farmer and the "Common People" Knew Better.

The News and Courier, the organs of the grand old party, told their readers all about it yesterday as follows:

EVERYTHING FAVORABLE FOR HARRISON.

[SPECIAL DESPATCH TO THE COURIER.]

The prospects for Harrison's election are hourly increasing. The vote polled will be the largest yet, and everything is harmonious about the polling places.

The polls will close at 4 o'clock, but Harrison's election is now almost conceded by some of the leaders of opposite the party.

THE NEWS' PREDICTION.

HARRISON AND REID AND KEAN WE BELIEVE SURE WINNERS.

Studying the causes named we feel confident that Harrison will be elected by a larger majority than before. And because of a better chance this time for an honest election in New Jersey, we are confident that too will go Republican.

To-Night's Bowling.

The Crescent League bowling teams for this evening are:

Thomas King, sr.,	Leggett,
W. H. Rogers,	Brokaw,
J. J. Kenney,	Green,
H. Doane,	Ulrich,
W. Woodruff,	G. A. Hallock.

Every body is wanted on hand early, and to bring their friends.

Watson Acquitted.

One of the three charges of illegal liquor selling, against Michael Watson, was investigated before Judge Codington this morning. Mrs. Ferguson, the prosecuting witness, did not substantiate her original story, and on the city's own motion the case was dismissed. Two more cases are to be tried.

Only Wind.

Col. Chas. K. Moore of the Crescent League led a contingent of Fanwood Republicans in Plainfield last night shouting:

"Who gets the electoral vote? Harrison and Reed! From old Grover she'll secede. Who will? New Jersey."

The cry gave considerable amusement, but it did n't count.

A Coward Gets His Deserts.

A Republican rowdy in Mt. Bethel struck Michael Connor, a Grand Army man, a crippled veteran, a cowardly blow, yesterday, and was deservedly thrown down stairs bodily by Dick Egel.

Water Tanks Burning.

The water tanks between Bound Brook and Dunellen, belonging to the Central railroad caught fire this morning and were nearly burned to the ground. The fire originated under the sand drier, burning through the bricks to the planking underneath. After a stubborn fight and the entire destruction of the machinery the fire was extinguished.

All That Ailed Willie.

Willie came in at dusk by way of the back alley. One eye was closed, there was a big knob over the other, his nose was bloody, his cheeks were scratched and bruised and his coat was torn all the way up the back.

"I know what's the matter with you," said Johnny. "You've had another fight with Bob Stapleford and you got licked."

"No," said Willie, with dignity. "I wasn't licked. I was outclassed."—Chicago Tribune.

She Had Experience.

Mrs. Lenox Hill—I wish you would let me have ten dollars to-day. I want to do a little shopping.

Mr. Lenox Hill—You are the most extravagant women in New York. If I were to die before you you would have to beg for a living.

Mrs. Lenox Hill—Humph! I have to do that now.—Texas Siftings.

Youthful Thirst for Knowledge.

North Side Youngster—Where are you going, auntie?

Visiting Relative—To the dye-house, Rollo.

(Eagerly)—"Can I go along?"

"Certainly."

(On the way)—"Auntie, how many dead folks will we see there?"—Chicago Tribune.

A Case of Vicarious Suffering.

Brown—You don't look well lately, Robinson.

Robinson—No; I can't sleep at night on account of lung trouble.

Brown—Nonsense; your lungs are all right.

Robinson—Yes, mine are; the trouble is with the baby's.—Boston Globe.

Unsophisticated.

Mr. Cooper—Sorry the servant is out. Have to wait on the door myself.

Mr. Hooper—She will be along in a moment. She's coming up the street now, with an elegant jag on.

Mr. Cooper—You don't say so! I shouldn't be a bit surprised if it were one of my wife's.—Puck.

Very Likely.

Banknote—Are you aware, young man, that the girl you are asking me to let you have will be very wealthy? How dare you ask for her hand?

Slimpurse—I know she will be wealthy, sir, but you must admit that it will be through no fault of mine.—Chicago News Record.

Equal to the Emergency.

It was a picnic party and Goldberg gallantly offered to help Miss Fannie Sharpgirl over a fence, saying:

"Just give me your hand, Miss Fannie, and I'll help you over."

"Oh, mamma, come here, Mr. Goldberg has asked for my hand."—Texas Siftings.

Faults Vs. Virtues.

Mr. Suburb—Women are a perfect nuisance to sit behind on a railroad train. They are bound to have the window up.

Mr. Citimann—Yes; but they are a perfect blessing to walk behind on the street. They don't smoke.—N. Y. Weekly.

An Eye for Effect.

Jinks—Why don't they make bicycle wheels with wooden spokes the same as carriage wheels?

Binks—Why, no one could tell which were the spokes and which were the legs.—N. Y. Weekly.

An Absent-Minded Professor.

Friend—I haven't seen you in a long time, professor. How are you coming on?

Professor—I really can't tell you, I pay so little attenion to such matters.—Texas Siftings.

Heading the List.

Wife—I want to talk with you about some things we need for the house.

Husband—What are they?

Wife—Well, to begin with, dear, don't you think we need a new bonnet?—Detroit Free Press.

He Wasn't Posted to the Major.

Maj. Stofah is a fat and frolicsome bachelor, who still loves to linger in the dangerous light of youth and beauty. Not long ago he was lingering about half-past eleven o'clock when the young woman's father returned from down town.

"Ah, Mr. Wilkins," observed the major effusively, "you get in late."

"Well," said Wilkins, ungraciously, "I don't get in quite as late as you get out," and he went upstairs leaving the major with a bad taste in his mouth.—Detroit Free Press.

He Was Extravagant.

Mrs. Bronson—What, been getting yourself another $8 hat? Charley, you're too extravagant altogether.

Mr. Bronson (penitently)—I'm 'fraid you're right, Mary. And I won't do it again. Truly I won't.

Mrs. Bronson (breaking into tears)—And you forgot all about the new $35 bonnet I wanted you to bring down.—Chicago News Record.

An English Joke.

Farmer—You had a fire at the manse this morning. Any serious loss?

Minister—Yes, ten years' sermons were completely burned.

Farmer (with the memory of many a weary Sunday morning)—Mon, they had made a gran' blaze, they were so dry, ye ken.—Pall Mall Budget.

Oh, What a Cough!

Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease, Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50c., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves croup and whooping cough at once. Mothers, do not be without it. For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by A. D. Mallinson, 65 North Ave., opposite railroad station. 6-16-y

Why He Declined to Call.

Perhaps the lawyer was justified in being provoked. He had met an old friend, shaken hands with him, and asked after his health.

"Never better," was the reply.

"I'm glad to hear it," said the lawyer. "Come around to the office to-morrow and see me."

"No, thank you. I have a little money with me."—Frank Leslie's Weekly.

Dorothy's Resolve.

"I know what I'd do if I'd been one of Mrs. Twemlow's little girls," said Dorothy, giving her mother's hand an affectionate squeeze.

"What would you do, Dorothy?" asked her mother.

"I'd run away, and come and live with you and papa," said Dorothy.—Harper's Young People.

Quite Possible.

Billings, Jr.—Pa, if an animal breaks his back does he get humpbacked like a human being?

Billings, Sr.—Yes, my son; but what makes you ask such a question?

Billings, Jr.—I was just wondering if the hump on the camel was caused by the last straw.—Truth.

Nellie Fosdick—Papa, you might as well take down the front gate and fence.

Fosdick Pere—Why, daughter, you always have objected to their removal.

Nellie Fosdick—Yes; but the city authorities have hung an electric light right in front of the house.—Judge.

Put Glue on the Chair Seat.

On one occasion a friend of Lord Alvanley's came for his advice under the following circumstances:

"Mr. M—— threatens to kick me whenever he sees me in society. What am I to do if he comes into the room?"

"Sit down," replied Lord Alvanley.—Boston Globe.

More Than He Wanted.

Tom—Did your wife's father leave you anything when he died?

Jack—Yes.

Tom—Did he leave you much?

Jack—Yes; more than I wanted.

Tom—What did he leave you?

Jack—He left me my wife's mother.—Brooklyn Life.

SPAIN'S NEW MINISTER.

He Is Said to Be a Gentleman and a Scholar.

The Enviable Career of Henry Dupuy de Lome, Representative of the Castilian Court at Washington—His Record at Other Capitals.

Henry Dupuy de Lome, the new Spanish minister to this country, comes of a distinguished ancestry, and has already, at the age of forty-one, achieved a renowned career. His family is French, his ancestry dating back to Hugo Raimundo Dupuy, who served with Godefroy de Bouillion, and one of whose many estates was that of L'Ome, which was added to the family name. The father of the minister, says Frank Leslie's Weekly, was a man of fine attainments, and a voluminous contributor to the literature of his time. He was notable for the introduction of steam machinery into Spain in connection with the silk manufacture, and in recognition of his enterprise received a gold medal from his countrymen. He occupied many positions under the government, having been governor of several provinces before the revolution. Henry Dupuy de Lome was born in August, 1851, in Valencia. He studied in the famous college of Barcelona, and subsequently pursued the study of law. Entering a diplomatic career, he was employed in the state department in 1869, and in 1872 was made third secretary in the ministry of state. In the following year he was attached to the legation of Japan; in 1875 was sent to Brussels; in 1877 was made second secretary of legation at Montevideo; in 1880 was advanced to the secretaryship of legation at Buenos Ayres, and was for a time charge d' affaires. In June, 1881, he became secretary of legation at Paris, and in October of the year following became first secretary of the legation in Washington. At the time of the suicide of the minister, Senor Barca, he was charge d'affaires, and his services were largely appreciated in connection with the adjustment of the filibuster troubles. In 1884 he was transferred to Berlin as first secretary; in 1886 he was the Spanish delegate to the international congress for the consideration of commercial questions of importance, and in 1888 was sent as delegate to Rome in connection with the propogation of the treaty of commerce. In that relation he was of great service to Valencia. In the same year he became the representative of Spain in Montevideo, where his services commanded wide commendation. After serving for a time as chief of the section of commerce and consulates in the Spanish ministry he has now been made minister at Washington. Thus he has for twenty years been continuously engaged in the diplomatic service of his country. Meanwhile, he has found time to engage in literary pursuits, and has published a number of volumes of great value upon economic and other subjects. It has been his habit in his travels to utilize his opportunities in gathering information of value to his countrymen as to the world at large. He has also contributed various important articles to Spanish newspapers, notably to La Ilustracion Espanola y Americana. He has especial fondness for literary work, and his library is rich in volumes on international law, and historical and classical subjects. He has given special consideration to the subject of tariffs. He is a man of profound sympathy with all charitable enterprises, and while at Montevideo founded the Spanish hospital, raising in a single year $50,000 in its behalf. His wife is distinguished for charitable impulses, and, although a woman of fashion and beauty, loses no opportunity to promote enterprises looking to the welfare of the unfortunate. While at Buenos Ayres she conducted a memorable festival, which resulted in securing $9,000 for a charitable object. Minister de Lome is a man of most engaging manners and of great dignity, without the slightest pretension, being as courteous and genial to inferiors as to his equals. He speaks English with great fluency, and is master of French. He is active and alert in the performance of all public duties, and it is regarded as fortunate that he has been appointed as minister to this country at a time when he will be able to contribute to the success of the great Columbian festival, in which Spain has an equal interest with ourselves. It is believed by those who know him that he will prove one of the most popular ministers ever sent to our national capital.

Snails as an Article of Diet.

Upwards of 100,000 pounds of snails are eaten every day by the residents of the gay French capital, the snail market being the busiest industrial mart in Paris. One "snailery" in the province of Dijon yields its proprietor 7,000 francs per year. At this place they are carefully reared in snail gardens and fed on an aromatic herb which gives them a fine flavor. Many Swiss cantons also have large snail gardens and depend chiefly on the people of Paris for a market. Snails are also used as an article of food in Austria, Spain and Italy as well as in Egypt and the other countries on the Mediterranean's southern shore. Hygienists claim that they are very nutritive, containing not less than 17 per cent. of nitrogenous matter.

"I AM NOT WELL ENOUGH TO WORK."

This is a daily event in mills, shops, factories, etc. It is the point where Nature can endure no more, and demands a rest. Then the poor sufferer, worn with toil, and broken in health, stands aside to make room for another. "Quick consumption" they called it.

To this class of women and girls we proffer both sympathy and aid. When those distressing weaknesses and derangements assail you, remember that there is a Remedy for all of them. We have on record thousands of such cases, that have been restored to vigorous health and lives of usefulness.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Is the only Positive Cure and Legitimate Remedy for the peculiar weaknesses and ailments of women.

It cures the worst forms of Female Complaints, that Bearing-down Feeling, Weak Back, Falling and Displacement of the Womb, Inflammation, Ovarian Troubles, and all Organic Diseases of the Uterus or Womb, and is invaluable to the Change of Life. Dissolves and expels Tumors from the Uterus at an early stage, and checks any tendency to Cancerous Humor. Subdues Faintness, Excitability, Nervous Prostration, Exhaustion, Sleeplessness, and tones the Stomach. Cures Headache, General Debility, Indigestion, Dizziness, and invigorates the whole system. For the cure of Kidney Complaints of either sex, LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S Compound has no rival.

All Druggists sell it as a standard article, or sent by mail, in form of Pills or Lozenges, on receipt of $1.00. LYDIA E. PINKHAM MED. CO., LYNN, MASS.

An illustrated book, entitled "Guide to Health and Etiquette," by Lydia E. Pinkham, is of great value to ladies. We will present a copy to anyone addressing us with two 2-cent stamps.

Cleveland's Plurality in the Electoral College Will Be at Least 266.

OHIO AND CALIFORNIA CLAIMED BY THE DEMOCRATS.

RESULT DOUBTFUL IN BOTH STATES.

Weaver, Third Party Candidate, Has 22 Votes so Far and Claims More—His Party Will Probably Hold the Balance of Power in the United States Senate—Democrats Have About 100 Majority in the House of Representatives—Latest Returns from States and Counties.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—The latest returns do not materially change the result as first announced.

Mr. Cleveland is elected to the Presidency, having carried the solid South and a great number of hitherto doubtful States, as is shown in the table printed below.

The surprises of the day are the possibility that he may have carried the State of Ohio, and the strengthening of the possibility that he may have carried California.

Kansas gives her vote to the People's party.

Indiana, Illinois, and Wisconsin are safe for the Democratic candidate.

The Legislatures elected in the various States have changed from Republican to Democratic in such numbers that the Democrats will probably have a small working majority in the United States Senate.

In the House the Democratic majority will not be far from 100.

The majority in New York State is 47,388 for Cleveland. In New York city it is 75,843.

The Assembly is Democratic by 10 majority.

THESE WERE BIG BETS.

Some of the Money That Will Now Change Hands.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The men who made bets on the results of the election are now looking around for the stakeholders.

Michael Dyner is said to have won $75,000. He put up about $180,000 at big odds to win.

Joseph J. O'Donohue won over $22,000. Edward Murphy, jr., wins about $40,000. Edward Kearney will be $35,000 better off when he collects his bets. Subway commissioner Walter Storm captures $12,5000. Bookmaker J. Mahoney made $25,000.

Eddie Talcott wins $5,000; Louis Bell, $5,000; Tom Palton, about $50,000; Ed Stokes, $5,000; William J. Thompson, $80,000; Pat Duffy of New Orleans, $30,000 from President Walbaum of Guttenberg; H. A. Hart, $15,000.

Dave Martin lost about $50,000; Bookmaker Wheelock, $55,000; Bilir Edwards, about $200,000 he held as stake money, and Bookmaker Fred Lowe about $12,500.

CONGRATULATING THE WINNER.

Mr. Cleveland Receives a Party of Prominent Democrats.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Several gentlemen from the Democratic National Headquarters went up to see Mr. Cleveland at his residence, soon after the result of the election was known, to congratulate him on his victory.

There were in the party Chairman William F. Harrity, Don M. Dickinson, Charles S. Fairchild, William C. Whitney, C. C. Baldwin, Henry Villard and others.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland came out upon the portico and Mr. Cleveland made a short speech, in acknowledgement of the congratulations.

Mr. Cleveland said:—

"This seems to be the hour for rejoicing. We have earned a grand victory. I attribute it to the rank and file of the party and to the splendid management of the National Committee."

Illinois.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—The later returns do not materially affect the Democratic victory in the State of Illinois on national and State tickets. Conservative men of all parties now generally agree that the Democratic plurality in Illinois will be apparently 10,000.

THE NEXT HOUSE.

It Will be Democratic by a Large Working Majority.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The best possible compilation of the election returns for Congressmen, made up from the latest returns, is presented below.

The returns, as yet, of course, are very incomplete, and changes will have to be made in the figures on both sides, as the later reports will probably show the defeat of a number of Congressmen now said to be elected, and vice versa.

The figures, however, clearly indicate that the next House of Representatives will be Democratic by a large working majority, which will doubtless finally be found to be somewhere between 60 and 80.

According to the present compilation, there will be 224 Democrats, 123 Republicans, and 7 Third party men in the next House, with 2 additions yet to be made to complete the quota of 356 members.

There were in the last House 235 Democrats, 88 Republicans and 9 Independents, or 333 members in all. The result is a relative gain for the Republicans, as compared with the tremendnous landslide of two years ago, so that the Republicans will need more than two aisles in the national legislative chamber for their members.

But though the Democrats have lost a number of members, as compared with the present House, their majority is certainly large enough for all practical purposes. The strength of the Independents will be pretty nearly the same in the next House as in this, but they will miss the presence of their two most aggressive representatives, Tom Watson of Georgia and Jerry Simpson of Kansas. "Honest John Davis," of Kansas, will be the leading Third party man in the next House.

NEW JERSEY.

Pluralities for Cleveland and Werts—Legislature and Congressmen.

TRENTON, Nov. 10.—Returns up to this morning show that Cleveland has carried the State of New Jersey by 7,149, and that Werts, Democrat, for Governor, has been elected by a plurality of 4,000.

The next Legislature will stand as follows:

Senate—Republicans, 4; Democrats, 17; House—Democrats, 56; Republicans, 25;

The Democratic majority on joint ballot will be 31—which leaves a net Republican gain of 4.

The candidates for Congress elected in New Jersey are as follows, with their estimated pluralities:

District.	Majority.
1—H. C. Loudenslager, Rep.,	3,000
2—John J. Gardner, Rep.,	2,500
3—J. A. Geissenhainer, Dem.,	3,000

Result in Doubt—Democrats Made Great Gains in the Interior.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 10.—Returns develop surprising Democratic gains in the interior counties. There is no disguising the fact that the result is in doubt, and that Ohio's electoral vote may be cast for Cleveland and Stevenson.

At present, Harrison has a margin of 700, but there are several counties yet to hear from. Chairmen Farley, of the Democratic executive committee, has arrived here, and says he confidently expects that the State has gone Democratic. He does not actually claim it so far. The outcome will not be known to-day.

Nebraska.

OMAHA, Nov. 9.—Republicans have probably elected the Governor and entire State ticket in Nebraska, but returns are slow, and the plurality will be small Weaverites claim the State by a small plurality. Bryan, Dem., for Congress, will not have over 500 majority.

Wisconsin.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 10. — Democratic Chairman Wall says Cleveland and Peck are elected by about 18,000. Returns are incomplete but will not make any material difference in the result.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Harrison's Plurality Over 74,000—Republicans Gain One Congressmen.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 9.—Harrison's plurality in Pennsylvania is 74,753, his majority in Philadelphia being 32,552.

The Congressional delegation includes 18 Republicans and 10 Democrats, an increase of one Republican, as follows:

First district, Henry H. Bingham, Rep.; 2, Charles O. Neill, Rep.; 3, Wm. McAleer, Dem.; 4, John E. Reyburn, Rep.; 5, A. C. Harmen, Rep.; 6. John B. Robinson, Rep.; 7, E. W. Hallowell, Dem.; 8, Wm. ka are still incomplete owing to new election law and poor accounting. Figures so far received indicate that Weaver will carry the State by about 2,000.

On Governor the result is very doubtful. Crounse (Rep.) will not get as large a vote as expected, and Norton (Dem.) developes unexpected strength. Van Wyck (Independent) not so strong among laboring classes in Omaha as expected.

For Congress, the Democrats have probably elected three members, Independents two and Republicans one.

The Legislature will be about 45 per cent. Republican, 40 Independent and 20 per cent. Democratic.

CONNECTICUT.

Cleveland Has Over 5,000—Morris Elected Governor—Senate a Tie.

HARTFORD, Nov. 10.—Nothing in the later returns received changes the result here materially. Cleveland's plurality is 5,647.

The report that sufficient Prohibition and scattering votes were cast to prevent Morris' election is not confirmed by the drift of the official returns, more than half of which are in.

The State Senate is a tie. The House shows a Republican majority of 14.

Lewis Sperry, Dem., is re-elected to Congress from the first district by 547. James P. Piggott, Dem., is elected in the second district by 2,660. Charles M. Russell Rep. is re-elected in the third district by 827, a falling off of 465 votes from two years ago. Robert E. Deforest, Dem., is re-elected from the fourth district by 2,091. The State Senate is a tie and the Republicans have about 20 majority in the House.

Virginia.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Nov. 10.—A little more than two-thirds of the State heard from gives Cleveland a plurality of 28,100 with indications of an increase in complete returns to 35,000. Tyler (Dem.) for Congress in Second district has a plurality of at least 6,000; Democrats claim that Epa will pull through with a majority of about 500. If so the entire delegation will be Democratic.

Iowa.

DES MOINES, Nov. 10.—The returns so far received indicate a Republican plurality of 22,000 in Iowa on electors. The State ticket runs a little behind. The Republicans elect Congressmen in ten of the eleven districts. Walter I. Hayes of the Second district is the only Democrat elected. The People's party vote will reach 35,000 and the Prohibition vote 8,000.

Montana.

HELENA, Nov. 9.—The Republicans claim the State by 5,000 plurality. They will elect the Congressman by a small margin.

CANADIAN COMMENTS.

How the Dominion Papers Regard Cleveland's Election.

TORONTO, Nov. 10.—The "Mail" commenting on the result of the Presidential election, says it looks as if the vast majority of Americans regard the policy of protection as legislative robbery.

The "Globe" says it is a positive proof that in spite of the tremendous influences of a privileged class, which is making millions annually out of the existing protective policy, the principle of freeing commerce from its withering shackles has at length commended itself to the intelligence of the people.

The "Empire" says the result matters very little to Canada and that there is nothing to show that so far as fiscal changes affecting Canada are concerned, any radical departure from the present condition of affairs is in serious contemplation.

The "World" says Cleveland's administration in its foreign relations will certainly not be so hostile to Great Britain as Mr. Harrison's was, under the auspices of Mr. Blaine, and that it is possible it may be disposed to establish reciprocal trade relations with Canada beneficent to both countries.

OTTAWA, Nov. 10.—The "Citizen," government, says of the result of the Presidential election: "We may be grateful at the prospect of a diminution of the duties now levied on Canadian goods. Apart from the commercial aspect of the situation, the Democrats cannot be more unfriendly to Canada than the government of Mr. Harrison, and we may hope for an improvement in this respect."

AS GERMANS VIEW IT.

Berlin Press Comments—Regret That Phelps Must Retire.

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—Most of the newspapers comment upon the American Presidential election, which has been observed in this city with exceptional interest.

The "Tageblatt" says that the election was the most important election ever held in the United States, and that its results should cause general satisfaction both in Europe and America.

The "Boersen Courier" thinks that the election of Cleveland is a guarantee that the system of extreme protection will not be carried to further lengths.

Regret is expressed that the apparent approach of a change in the American tariff could not have been anticipated by the countries invited to exhibit at Chicago next year, as the fear of still further increase in the tariff has kept the manufacturers of most countries from preparing to send their wares to the World's Fair.

The necessity of the retirement of William Walter Phelps is the only source of regret connected with the defeat of Mr. Harrison.

Mr. Phelps has been the most popular Minister from the United States that Berlin has received in many years, and he has been distinguished by numerous exceptional courtesies from the Emperor.

*Elections elected by Congress districts.

Lasker Won 21 Games.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Lasker completed his engagement at the Manhattan Chess Club last night by defeating Delmar, his last opponent. Lasker won all his matches. His grand total is 21 won, 2 lost, 1 drawn.

ON TRIAL FOR HERESY

Dr. Briggs Before the New York Presbytery.

HE MAKES SEVERAL OBJECTIONS.

Contends That the Prosecuting Committee Has No Power to Bring New Charges After Action Had Been Taken on Old Ones—The New Allegations.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—What is hoped will be the final trial and settlement of the charges of heresy brought by the Presbyterian Church in the United States against Prof. Charles A. Briggs, of Union Theological Seminary, is now being conducted before the Presbytery of New York in the old Scotch Presbyterian Church in West Fourteenth street.

After the prayer opening the trial, the Moderator asked for the charges, but was interrupted by Dr. Briggs, who asked leave to interpose several objections.

In a short address he outlined the line the prosecution had taken in regard to the old charges and contended that the prosecuting committee had no power to now bring these new ones.

Col. J. J. McCook, counsel for the prosecuting committee, answered the objections very technically, but deplored the fact that he was compelled to argue with the defendant.

Dr. Briggs, when Col. McCook had finished, arose to reply, but was checked by Rev. Thomas Booth, who made the point of order that the discussion was irregular.

Dr. Briggs claimed that he had only been able to state his objections, while the prosecuting committee had been allowed to answer them and say several other things which he could controvert by quotations from theological law.

The request to allow him to answer the prosecution was denied by the Moderator, and, on Dr. Briggs' appeal from this decision, the Moderator was sustained—73 to 58.

The amended charges and specifications against Dr. Briggs were then read. As revised, and a little more explicit and with more attention to detail than the old charges, they occupy 25 pages of a good sized book, but cover the same ground as the old charges. They were compiled by and signed by the full prosecuting committee, consisting of Dr. Birch, chairman; J. J. Lampe, D. D., R. I. Sample, D. D., John S. Stevenson and J. J. McCook.

The reading occupied the remainder of the day's session.

After the charges were read Dr. Briggs said: "These are new issues and charges very different from the former charges. The order of General Assembly gives the power to amend the charges without changing their nature. I had my answer to the first charges ready, but these are so different that I will have to revise my answer. I may also demur to the amended charges. I reserve that right and shall decide upon my course during the ten days allowed me to prepare my answer."

DEATH OF MARLBOROUGH.

Found Lifeless in His Bed at Blenheim Palace.

LONDON, Nov. 9. — George Charles Spencer Churchill, Duke of Marlborough, was this morning found dead in his bed in Blenheim Palace, Woodstock. He was 48 years of age.

The news caused great excitement in club and society circles.

Although the Duke had not been in good health for a long time, his sudden death caused great surprise, and shared public interest almost equally with the American election.

The Duke retired Tuesday evening, as usual, and when a servant went to his apartment, in the morning, to assist in his toilet, he found his master dead.

The cause of death has not yet been ascertained.

George Charles Spencer Churchill, Duke of Marlborough, Marquis of Blandford, Earl of Sunderland, Earl of Marlborough, Baron Spencer of Wormleighton and Baron Churchill, of Sandridge, all in England, Prince of the Holy Roman Empire, and Prince of Mindelheim, in Suabia, was born May 13, 1844, and in 1869 was married to Lady Albertha Frances Anne Hamilton, sixth daughter of James, the first Duke of Abercorn, and they have a son, Charles Richard John, born November 13, 1871. This son now becomes Duke of Marlborough. They also have three daughters.

Lady Albertha secured a divorce from the Duke in 1883 on account of her husband's infidelity.

The Duke remained unmarried until June 29, 1888, when he was married by Mayor Hewitt at the City Hall, New York, to Lilly Warren Hammersley, the wealthy widow of Louis Hammersley, and daughter of Cicaro Price, a commodore in the United States Navy.

Express Train Held Up.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 10.—A despatch from Guthrie, Oklahoma, says that the express train on the Santa Fe road was held up at Wharton yesterday. The express car was blown open with dynamite, the messenger wounded and overpowered, and the safe robbed. The amount secured is not known, but is supposed to be several thousand dollars. The railroad company has out a posse of armed men in pursuit of the robbers, who are supposed to have headed for the Indian Nation.

Bought by an English Syndicate.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 10.—Negotiations for the purchase of the Pratt & Whitney works by an English syndicate have been practically completed and the plant will be in the control of the Englishmen in a short time. The terms of purchase were $2,500,000. The new terms embrace $1,000,000 of common, $1,000,000 of preferred stock and $1,000,000 in bonds. The only thing to be settled now relates to the retention of present managers.

Killed and Hurt by a Runaway Team.

VIENNA, Nov. 9.—Two horses ran away with an empty carriage in Pressburg yesterday and plunged through a company of recruits on their way to drill. The horses swung around the corner which the men were about to turn so suddenly that none of the soldiers had time to get out of the way. Twenty men were thrown to the ground. Four were killed under the horses hoofs, and twelve were severely wounded.

Col. Dodds Made a Brigadier-General.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—Col. Dodds, commander of the successful expedition of French troops in Dahomey, has been made Brigadier-General in recognition of his recent victories.

THE DAILY PRESS.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The W. C. T. U. coffee cart lies at the Crescent rink in dismantled condition. It should be kept ready for fire emergency.

—A lamp explosion burned a hole in the carpet at Warren Mission chapel Tuesday evening. An alarm was sounded, but the recall was promptly given.

—J. Howard Leggett, manager of the Central pharmacy, has made a record on the sale of over 200 pounds of Huyler's candies in less than two weeks.

—An anxious Republican in North Plainfield, was so absent minded as to carefully fold a receipted grocery bill, put it in the official envelope and vote it.

—Let there be a good representation of horsemen in the Democratic parade to-morrow evening. Already a number of horseback riders have agreed to turn out.

—Ed. White, machinist, said he had just come to town, when taken before judge Codington this morning. He had been drinking too much, and was fined $2,

—The Odd Ladies opened a most enjoyable and successful fair at Saengerbund Hall last night. The fair will be continued all this week, with dancing every evening.

—All colored Democrats are requested to meet at William E. Johnson's, 36 East Front street, to-morrow evening, for the purpose of turning out with the Democratic parade.

—John R. Hewitt of 66 East Third street is the man who split the First ward into two districts. His was the 601st ballot cast. It was his maiden vote, and he is a good Democrat.

—Kean ran behind his ticket in every ward in Plainfield in spite of the hundreds of dollars openly spent in his interests. The majority for the Republican ticket in this city was 411; Kean's majority, 374.

—The full and accurate election returns of yesterday's issue of THE PRESS were in great demand yesterday, and edition after edition was exhausted. Early this morning the presses had to be started up again to print more PRESSES to fill the demand.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Ellen Morgan, wife of Lewis H. Morgan, of 387 West Front street, died Nov. 7, and was buried at Hillside Cemetery yesterday.

William H. Brower & Sons were awarded prizes for a basket and a vase of chrysanthemums, at the New York flower show, last week.

Mrs. T. O. Doane, wife of Plainfield's efficient chief engineer, is to have a new silk dress as a result of an election promise of her husband's, in case Cleveland got elected.

Master Frank Dencklau of East Second street is deservedly proud of a solid-gold pin presented to him by the Jr. Christian Endeavor society of Trinity Reformed church. The pin was offered as a prize for the member who would return the largest list of boys and girls of no Sunday-school connection who promised to attend the Trinity school.

Working for a Worthy Cause.

Mrs. Snediker of 110 Grove street has kindly thrown open her home to the teachers of the primary department of Trinity church for a parlor entertainment this evening. All friends of the church and Sunday-school are invited to be present. Voluntary offerings will be accepted, and an interesting programme is promised.

Home-made cakes and candies, ice-cream and fruits, will be on sale at 55 North avenue, opposite the railway station, under the auspices of the young ladies of class I, Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school, to-morrow afternoon and evening. No admission fee will be charged. The entire proceeds of the sale will be given toward paying off the debt of the church.

Seventh-Day Chrysanthemums.

Have you seen the chrysanthemum show at 17 Crescent avenue, which the Ladies' Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church are offering? If not you will still have an opportunity this evening. The chrysanthemums on exhibition are direct from the great display at the Madison Square Garden in New York, and are the flowers which captured the prizes there, and they did n't give booby prizes, either. The ladies have been to considerable expense in preparing this unique entertainment for the people of Plainfield. They have undertaken something of an entirely new character. Such an undertaking should be encouraged, and the ladies made to feel that they have met with the recognition and approval of the community. The way to bring this about is to go to No. 17 to-night and take your family, or your wife, sister or somebody's else sister if you feel inclined, according to your circumstances. Don't stay in on account of a little moisture. The flowers are waiting to see you, and are smiling their prettiest. Some of Plainfield's fair sex are there also to satisfy the pangs of thirst and hunger with a cool quaff of a harmless liquid and delicious bon-bons of the finest make, the more of which you eat the more you wish to continue. Help make the "returns" like the election "returns", and let them be overwhelming—for the ladies. You can't put in a better and more instructive evening than going to No. 17 Crescent avenue and gazing upon nature's choice gifts of beauty—the chrysanthemums. The price of admission is within the reach of all, 25 cents, and the flowers will nod to you from 7 to 10:30.

Only good things are imitated, therefore be sure that you get the genuine Salvation Oil, if you want to cure your rheumatism.

We are not surprised that people will not take a new cough remedy, when they know the value of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

Coughing leads to consumption. Kemp's Balsam stops the cough at once.

FOOL NEWS.

THE REPUBLICAN EX-ORGAN PERSISTS IN DELUSION.

It Tells Its Readers the Democrats Cut the Wires, Falsified the Returns, and that Harrison's Elected.

The News has always been crazy on the tariff question, but it was hardly expected that the overwhelming defeat of that fallacy and fraud would drive Plainfield's Republican ex-organ insane. Here are some extracts from its issue of last evening:

HURRAH!

WE ARE IN IT YET!

Gamblers Cut the Wires and Send Out False Reports to Influence Betting, and the Trick Deceives the Whole Country.

HOPES FOR KEAN!

R. M. STOVER ELECTED SURROGATE.

THE VICTORS WILL MARCH.

And it is Requested That Everybody Along the Line Will Illuminate.

The victorious tariff reformers, friends of good government and Democrats, will have a parade through the streets of Plainfield to-morrow evening, in glorification of the election of Grover Cleveland.

The line of march will be: Form at Crescent building, through Peace street to North avenue, to Park, to Front, to Somerset, to Emily, to Grove, to Front, to Liberty, to Seventh, to Park avenue, to Ninth, to Broadway, to Seventh, to Park avenue, to Fifth, to Peace.

The Democratic association of North Plainfield will join the ranks.

WHAT BECAME OF HIS MONEY?

Johnnie Kean Snowed Under Even in His Own Home.

The Democrats of Union county are wild with joy over the great victory at the polls Tuesday. Despite the influence of boodle and the railway companies, Judge George T. Werts has the splendid plurality of nearly 600 in the county of the Republican candidate for Governor. Elizabeth, Mr. Kean's headquarters, gives Judge Werts 1,216 plurality and Grover Cleveland 1,291, a gain of 34 for the latter over 1888. Cleveland's majority in the county is nearly 800. John T. Dunn, for Congress, loses Union county by over 250 plurality, but is elected by fully 1,000 plurality.

Some enthusiastic Democrats last night got out sleighs in Elizabeth, and, decorating them with brooms, had a November sleigh ride in honor of the victory.

BOROUGHITES, TAKE YOUR CHOICE

The Company's Ultimatum Is, It Will Be Somerset Street or No Railway!

To-morrow night the borough council will decide the question of electric street railway into North Plainfield.

The mayor and council have heard emphatic objections against the use of Somerset street. They should not be unduly influenced by the mutterings of a few.

The masses want rapid transit, and Somerset street is the only available street.

As for North Broadway [in prospect], the Street Railway company tells THE PRESS through secretary Chandler W. Riker that under no circumstances will any but Somerset street be used by the company; that they would n't go through North Broadway, even if the street were now open, for $100,000; that it would be worth that much money to the North Broadway property-holders; that the company will go only where it is sure to get most traffic, and that it will be Somerset street or no railway.

It must be Somerset!

Said He Wanted to Buy a Leg.

John Phalen, a cripple from Trenton, hobbled about Plainfield on crutches yesterday, begging for money to buy a new leg. He had raised $3 when vigilant sergeant Lynch got on to his racket. Phalen is a stool-pigeon for a gang of toughs who use him to get money by working on people's sympathies. Lynch kept the fellow in a cell over night, and sent him back to Trenton to-day.

Regeneration.

To secure a normal and regular tissue change throughout the body use BRANDRETH'S PILLS. This tissue metamorphoconsists in constantly proceeding waste of tissue and its regeneration. BRANDRETH'S PILLS are the best solvent of the products of disintegration of the tissues and increases their elasticity. They are an alterative and eliminative remedy, which allay irritation and remove obstruction by aiding nature and are of great benefit in cases of temporary and habitual constipation, torpid liver, billiousness, headache, indigestion, rheumatism and diseases arising from an impure state of the blood.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS are purely vegetable, absolutely harmless and safe to take at any time.

THE ELECTION.

Additions to Mr. Cleveland's Electoral Vote—Ohio Probably Democratic—California Almost Sure for Mr. Cleveland.

Cleveland	300
Weaver	32

Returns received since yesterday have materially increased Mr. Cleveland's lead in the Electoral College, and he now seems likely to receive 300 votes. The most remarkable change made by the fuller returns is in the State of Ohio, which is now claimed by the Democrats by about 2,000 plurality, and conceded by the Cincinnati Commerical Gazette (Rep.) by a few hundred. California no longer appears doubtful to cast its votes for the Democratic candidate for President. In Indiana the majority will be decisive, the Democrats claiming 7,000.

The returns of Representatives in Congress elected indicate that the next House will have a Democratic majority over all of 90 votes. The returns of members of various State legislatures which will elect United States Senators at present indicate that the Democrats will outnumber the combined strength of Republicans and Fusionists in the Senate, the estimate standing 45 Democrats, 38 Republicans, and 5 People's party.

BOROUGH REPUBLICANS MAD.

They Will Have Revenge on the Mountaineers Who Defeated Col. Spencer.

Leading Republicans of Somerset county admit that they were completely routed on Tuesday, and further acknowledge that it is extremely improbable that their ticket will ever again be victorious in Somerset. Treachery is alleged to be the cause of this disruption. The party leaders claim that had the voters of the county clung together, several valuable offices would have been won by their candidates. A notable instance is that of surrogate. H. Newton Spencer of North Plainfield was without doubt the strongest nominee the party ever had for any county office, and with full support from all the county he would have been elected But the local pride of Bridgewater township Republicans in their fellow-townsman candidate for sheriff, George A. Dilts, led them to sacrifice, by trading and knifing, all of Spencer's chances of election in order to give Dilts a "large complimentary vote". That vote elected Dilts and defeated Spencer. In his own bailiwick of North Plainfield Spencer received the unprecedented majority of 321, and in many other districts he also ran largely ahead of his ticket, but not enough to overcome the setback he got in Bridgewater. This is but one of the many instances showing the disloyalty of the mountainous districts. Somerset county Republicans can do nothing without North Plainfield's solid vote, and this, it is threatened, will be withheld at the very first chance given for revenge. The disruption threatens to become permanent.

RAISED THE DEBT IN A DAY.

Auspicious Dedication of Dunellen's New Chapel.

The new chapel of the First Presbyterian church of Dunellen was dedicated last Sunday, at the morning services. About three hundred and fifty were present. The Rev. D. W. Couch, of Brooklyn, preached the sermon, after which he persuaded the congregation present to subscribe $2,206 to help pay the balance due on the chapel. In the afternoon the Methodist Sunday-school held a short session, after which they proceeded to the Presbyterian chapel to pay their respects to their neighbors. In the evening the Rev. Mr. Couch again persuaded the congregation to put their hands into their pockets, to raise the balance of the debt, and after a half-hour's soliciting he raised the balance, making a grand total of $2,596.47. The audience numbered about 500 people.

The transfer of trust was made by pastor Martine to R. J. Swackhamer, president of the board of trustees.

The pulpit was banked with chrysanthemums. Music was rendered by the choir, consiting of Maud Benton, Imogene Smith, Mrs. E. Taylor, Ed. Teel and M. L. Barick. The organist was R. Humpsted, the pianist Maggie Swackhamer, and the cornetist David Blackford.

The chapel is 80 feet long by 40 wide, is lighted by electricity, and is finished in the interior with Norway pine. The cost was nearly $3,000.

"How do I look?" That depends, madam, upon how you feel. If you're suffering from functional disturbances, irregularities or weaknesses, you're sure to "look it." And Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the remedy. It builds up the system, regulates and promotes the proper functions, and restores health and strength. It's a legitimate medicine, not a beverage; purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, and made especially for woman's needs. In the cure of all "female complaints," it's guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money is refunded. No other medicine for women is sold so. Think of that, when the dealer says something else (which pays him better) is "just as good."

"Times have changed." So have methods. The modern improvements in pills are Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They help Nature, instead of fighting with her. Sick and nervous headache, biliousness, costiveness, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels are prevented, relieved, and cured.

"The Result"

Satisfactory. The Winning Party the Future Servants of the People.

The great victory was not won by fraud or bribery; or by misrepresentations and false promises; or by vile epethets and mean personal ties.

But on the other hand the fairest and most righteous means have been used by the successful party. Every promise has been faithfully fulfilled as far as possible, and a strict adherence to right and justice maintained. Fair and polite treatment of the people, honesty and uprightness in all their methods have won for the party this much desired and coveted success.

The victorious party named above is not a political party at all, but one of our most successful and enterprising dry goods merchants, who only a few years ago commenced business here in a small room on East Front street. To-day Edsall's, of No. 20 West Front street, is well and favorably known all through this part of the state as the leading establishment in the dry and fancy goods line. The growth has been remarkable, and bespeaks for the proprietor commendable push and energy.

In view of this success in the past, Edsall has decided to make greater efforts still during the next year to double the volume of trade.

This of course means less profits to the business, and more money in the pockets of the patrons.

His elegant stores are thronged with buyers, who are well pleased and satisfied with their purchases, and say that they find it much to their advantage to buy at home instead of going to New York.

In a few days the public will hear more about how he expects to increase his trade to double its present amount. In the mean time come in and see the elegant new bric-a-brac and novelties we are now showing in the new archway, and the hundreds of other beautiful and seasonable articles through each department at Edsall's.

Early Winter in Indian Summer

Three inches of snow fell last evening in Plainfield and vicinity. The snow was wet and clinging, and enshrouded everything in its feathery folds, making a beautiful picture. Rain fell during the night and washed much of the snow away. The weight of snow broke electric wires and interfered with the fire-alarm system. The storm was a very cold one, and seemed unreasonable after the delightful and balmy weather of recent days.

JOHNNIE KEAN BURIED.

WERTS' PLURALITY FOR GOVERNOR IN NEW JERSEY NEARLY 7,000.

The Democrats Elect Two-Thirds of the Assemblymen and Have an Overwhelming Majority in the Senate—Kean Snowed Under in His Home, Elizabeth, and Although the Republicans Spend $500,000 to Elect Kean, Scores of the Party Refused to Vote for Him.

Corrected returns, very carefully gathered by The World yesterday, showed that Grover Cleveland carried New Jersey by a plurality of 14,700. Judge Werts's plurality for Governor is about 6,600. Some precincts in Burlington, Cumberland and Warren counties are missing and the vote from Mercer is not official, but it is certain the Judge's plurality is not less than 6,000 and it may be as much as 7,000. It is somewhere about midway between those two figures.

The Democrats appear to have had almost a clean sweep in the legislative contests. Of sixty Assemblymen in the next House forty-one will be Democrats and only nineteen Republicans. There is a dispute as to whether the Democrats have or have not captured a State Senator in Atlantic county. The returns seem to favor William Riddle (Dem.). If he is elected the Democrats will have gained one member of the higher house, and that body will be composed of sixteen Democrats and five Republicans, and the Democratic majority on joint ballot next winter will be thirty-three.

Although Judge Werts ran far behind Cleveland, his plurality is nearly as large as was Gov. Green's six years ago. He has carried the State outside of Hudson county.

In Camden and Passaic counties the Democrats made very large gains, reducing the Republican majorities in those two Republican strongholds fully 70 per cent. Middlesex gives very large pluralities for the entire Democratic ticket. Judge Werts carried Elizabeth, John Kean, jr's, home, by a plurality of more than 1,200, and he carried Union county by 600 plurality. Mr. Kean lost about 300 Republican votes in the county. Judge Werts also carried Morris county by a plurality of 7. His vote was larger than that cast for him for Senator three years ago, but the Republican vote in the county had increased between 300 and 400.

Senator Cornish secured 2,400 plurality for Congress in the Fourth, Cadmus 1,600 in the Fifth and Dunn about 1,000 in the Eighth—the three doubtful Congressional Districts.

The Republicans had a campaign fund in New Jersey of over $500,000, which they used for corrupt purposes on election day. In Essex county alone it is known they spent $75,000. They were also assisted by the entire Pennsylvania railroad system and its officers, agents and employees, many of whom worked at the polls for Kean.

The reduction of the Republican pluralities in Camden and Passaic counties is conceded to have been brought about by the friends of William Walter Phelps, who in that way rebuked the dictation to the Republican party of Gen. Sewell and his lieutenant-in-chief, Garret A. Hobart. Scores of Republicans in Passaic county refused to vote at all.

They Stuffed Kean Till He Thought Everything Was His.

Millionaire Kean's certainty of election is shown by the following story which was told in Jersey City, yesterday: Mr. Kean went to the Essex club, in Newark, Tuesday for his luncheon and while he was eating he met Judge Kirkpatrick and several other members of the club. Judge Kirkpatrick spoke very feelingly about the late Congressman McDonald and said it was too bad that he had died because his reelection was assured.

"Not at all", said Mr. Kean grandiloquently, "McDohald was popular, I'll admit, but I would have carried his opponent through in Hudson."

The Worst Defeated Candidate Since Greeley.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The following was given to me by E. P. Williams, a prominent Republican, of this city on Oct. 30, last.

"Harrison will carry all the N. E States—all the middle States—all the Western States — probably Delaware, North Carolina and Alabama."

I offered him Texas, but he declined the gift.

On Nov. 6, he reaffirmed his prediction, but through an increase of inspiration, he added to his probabilities West Virginia and South Carolina. I offered him Georgia, but he refused it.

I told him that Harrison would be the worse defeated candidate since Horace Greeley. He was anxious I should read his prophecy the morning after election.

I have done so—has he?

LOUIS F. WADSWORTH.

Queer Election Capers.

Ed Conshee and Miss Minnie Kelly had a novel wager on the election, the result of which is that Conshee has to wheel Miss Kelly around the block in a wheelbarrow. The route is from Somerset street to Chatham, to Warren, to Harmeny, back to Somerset, to Blatz's hotel. Miss Kelly will play a concertina and organet in transit. She bet on Cleveland, and Conshee on Harrison. Had Harrison been elected, Miss Kelly would have to do the wheeling, and Conshee the playing. To-day was set for the fulfillment of the odd bargain, but the rain postpones it.

THAT UNDERGROUND RIVER.

All the World's Scientists Are Told of Plainfield's Famous Water-Supply.

The Scientific American occupies a page of its latest issue with an illustrated description of the Plainfield water-works. The article is as follows:

An underground river, with the clearest and purest of water, has been discovered near the city of Plainfield, N. J. A few months ago the water company began to drive wells, and after going over about five square miles of country and striking inferior qualities of water, they struck pure water at Netherwood Station, on a line with the Central Railroad, two miles this side of the city, at the depth of fifty feet. Here they sunk a number of wells, and then made a test. After pumping seven days and nights, drawing out of the earth 2,000,000 gallons of pure water every twenty-four hours, and their test tubes showing no decided fall, it was concluded that they had an inexhaustible supply. Twenty six-inch wells were then sunk to the depth of 50 ft., the wells being about 50 ft. apart and sunk in a zigzag manner for a distance of 1,000 ft. Running between these wells is a pipe, which is attached to the end wells. This pipe is 6 in. at the ends, increasing in size as it runs toward the center up to 12 in., changing in size about every 125 ft. Each section of pipe rests on two saddles, the saddles fitting over the top of a post 5 ft. in length, which rests on a foundation of lumber 3 ft. square. The wells are about 8 ft. from this pipe on each side and connected to it by a 6 in. pipe. At the center of the 12 in. pipe are three large valves which turn the water on or off from the pumping station, a small valve being also attached to each well. Each well has at its bottom a 12 ft. strainer. The earth through which these wells are driven is a hard shale, running down to a depth of 27 ft. It is so compact that no drainage or surface water can get through it, and below it is a bed of sand and gravel, through which the pure and clear water flows. The wells run down to the depth of 20 ft. into this bed, the gravel in which is smooth and polished, showing that the water is constantly moving. The natural force of this underground river brings the water up to within 18 ft. of the surface. Two Worthington compound condensing pumps with 18 in. stroke are used for drawing water from the wells and forcing it up into the stand pipe. The pumping capacity of these pumps is 5,000,000 gallons every 24 hours, and the pumps are run with 80 lb. pressure of steam. The stand pipe is 25 ft. in diameter and 140 ft. in height, and is made of wrought iron plates of four different sizes ⅜, ½, ⅝, and ¾ in., in twenty-eight tiers and double bolted. The water is forced up through a 20 in. pipe, running up the center of stand pipe, to a height of 144 ft., the water flowing over the top and falling down into the stand pipe. This 20 in. pipe is securely braced to the sides of stand pipe with angle iron braces bolted to the sides, and has two valves, one at 50 ft. and the other at 100 feet from the ground, which can be opened and closed from the outside of stand pipe. The foundation for the stand pipe is 10 ft. in depth and 33 ft. in diameter, and is made of cracked stone and cement, 10 ft. bolts, two inch in diameter, securely fastening the stand pipe to the foundation. This pipe holds 515,000 gallons, and has a pressure at the bottom of 62½ lb. There is a fall of 25 ft. from the station to the city of Plainfield. There are twenty-seven miles of pipe laid in the city. Water is also furnished to the city of Elizabeth, N. J., to the extent of 1,500,000 gallons daily. The water analysis is: Total solid, 8·86; chlorine, 0·44; free ammonia, 0·001; albumenoid, 0·0058; and the temperature of the water as it comes from the wells is 52 degrees.

The cost of the water works is about $450,000.

THE FORESTERS.

Lord Tennyson's Poetical Comedy, With Sir Arthur Sullivan's Original Music, to be Given in Plainfield.

To the Public: I have the honor to submit the following for your consideration.

It is proposed to introduce in your city Lord Tennyson's poetic comedy, "The Foresters", which (with Sir Arthur Sullivan's most charming music) was the literary and society sensation of this past spring in New York; a sensation which was received and accentuated in Boston, Washington, Philadelphia and Chicago. It will be given at Music Hall next Monday evening.

The proper presentation of this work necessitates the employment of almost a double company of singers as well as actors, and, combined with the electric effects, creates an expense, which only the most liberal response can cover.

The production appeals strictly to the highest intellectual taste and the most exalted appreciation of all that is refined and exquisite in poetry and music.

I take, therefore, this means of calling your attention and soliciting your particular interest in this proposed production.

Believe me very truly,

ARTHUR REHAN.

The Plea of the Jury More Effective than the Plea of the Counsel.

Frederick A. Miller, the druggist charged with selling liquor illegally, was sentenced by Judge Codington to-day. On the first count, the jury had found him guilty, with recommendation of light fine, and the judge fined him $25. On the second count, Miller's counsel, C. A. Reed, withdrew the plea of not guilty for the plea of non vult, and made a stirring plea for leniency and mitigation of sentence. The court made that fine $60.

That Ragan Course.

The illustrated lecture has now become an established form of entertainment, which bids fair to rival in popularity some of the best attractions of the play-house. So steadily has this instructive form of amusement grown in public favor that no less than half a dozen lecturers are now in the field, which, until recently, had been monopolized by one man. Henry H. Ragan, one of the most popular, perhaps, and certainly one of the most entertaining of them all, will begin another attractive series of lectures on travel at Music Hall, the 16th inst., with entirely new subjects. As the lecturer fittingly reminds his hearers, Americans are in the habit of associating a journey of travel for "sight-seeing" with an ocean voyage, while most Americans, who have perhaps "done" Europe several times are entirely ignorant of the natural grandeur of their own country, and would be surprised to hear possibly that portions of the Rocky Mountain country and the Pacific slope present the sublimest spectacles of topographical splendor on the planet. Some of the pictures which Mr. Ragan's camera has caught for reproduction are startlighly vivid and the most glorious examples of voluptuous color and effect.

The sale of seats at $1 50 for the entire course, begins at Central pharmacy tomorrow morning.

A Seventh-Day Convert to be Baptised in Plainfield.

The Sabbath Recorder says: "On the 12th of November Bro. Leslie, a New York convert to the Sabbath from the Episcopal church, will present his letter of experience and ask for membership with the New York Seventh-day church. The baptism of this brother will take place at Plainfield, N. J., during some session of our Yearly Meeting."

A Popular Young Couple Serenaded.

The Independent Fife and Drum corps accompanied members of Franklin Council, 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., to North Plainfield, Tuesday evening, and gave Mr. and Mrs. Corra Ryno an enjoyable wedding serenade at their cozy new home, 11 Grandview avenue. The courtesy of the young men was greatly appreciated, and all spent a very pleasant evening.

Remembrances.

Wife (revisiting the scene of her betrothal)—I remember, Algernon, so well when you proposed to me, how painfully embarrassed you were.

Algernon—Yes, dear; and I remember so well how kind and encouraging you were, and how very easy you made it for me, after all.—Brooklyn Life.

Disputed Ownership.

"Papa," said little Johnnie, "Johnnie is my name, isn't it?"

"Yes, my boy. Why?"

"I saw Johnnie Perkins to-day, and he said it was his, and he got real mad 'cause I told him it wasn't, because you'd given it to me."—Harper's Young People.

A Tight Squeeze.

"I hadn't heard that you'd been ill, Smithson."

"Have though; been pretty close to death's door."

"Is that so?"

"Yes; two doctors in the house at the same time."—Life.

A Plan That Failed.

Mamma—How did you get scratched so?

Little Daughter—I was putting dolly's shoes and stockin's on the kitty.

"What for?"

"So she couldn't scwatch."—Good News.

No Scandal in It.

Larkin (to his wife)—Did you hear of the Rev. Dr. Thirdly's fall?

Mrs. Larkin—Dear me, no! What has he done?

Larkin—He has fallen heir to $50,000 by the death of an uncle.—Truth.

Why He Growled.

Mrs. Hicks—You blow about my dressmaker, but I never say a word about your tailor.

Hicks—Good heavens, madam, you don't seem to realize that dressmakers have to be paid.—N. Y. Herald.

What She Objected To.

Wife—You are altogether too nice about everything.

Husband—I thought you liked fastidious men?

Wife—I do; it's the fussidious kind I object to.—Detroit Free Press.

Wouldn't Be Safe, You Know.

"I suppose when you marry the duke you will go at once to his home in England with him?"

"Dear me, no! I wouldn't trust myself away over there with a man I know so little about."—Life.

Oh, What a Cough!

Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease, Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50c., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves croup and whooping cough at once. Mothers, do not be without it. Takes Time.

Jobson—I have a claim against the government. What lawyer would you advise me to retain?

Friend—It doesn't matter whom you select, only so he's young.—N. Y. Weekly.

The Reason.

Visitor—How is it that you are always such a good little boy, Harold?

Harold—Because I am always put to bed when I'm naughty.—Harper's Young People.

SHE WAS MERCENARY.

Miss Coopah—'Lige, how much yo' dun made dis week whitewashin'?

'Lige—'Fo' de Lawd! yo's de mos' mercinary gal I knows, yo' is. I beliebe now yo's marryin' me fo' mah money.—Judge.

In Kentucky.

Youth (eloping with the girl of his heart)—Judge, we would like you to join us.

The Judge—Thanks, I don't know who you are; but I never refuse to drink with a gentleman, be he friend or stranger. I'll be with you in one minute.—Puck.

His Mark.

Ward Healey—An' yer want to make yer cross again' de names ye're votin' fer. See?

Micky Halligan—No, I don't. Sure, I don't have to make no cross. I was edducated, I was, an' I kin write me name wid anny wan of 'em!—Puck.

Unappreciated Music.

"I'm sorry you don't like the new nurse," she said to her husband. "She is good about singing to the baby and keeping him quiet."

"Yes," was the reply, "that's just it. I'd rather hear the baby cry."—Boston Globe.

The Hard Part of It.

"It wasn't hard learning how to write," said Bobbie one morning, when he was trying to write a letter to his father. "What bothers me is learning what to say when I write."—Harper's Young People.

A Useful Adjunct.

"Who is that cross-looking old man in the corner?" asked the fair visitor who was looking through the offices.

"That," replied the editor, "is the man who writes our smart-child jokes."—Judge.

After the Wedding.

Mrs. Ketchon—I'll wager you what you like, the bride will wear the breeches.

Ketchon—I shouldn't wonder; I noticed she had on suspenders.—Puck.

An Unwholesome Appetite.

Sharpe—Lambly has a taste for inventions.

Keepe—Well, I presume that is why he swallows every lie that is told to him.—Puck.

ALARMINGLY FREQUENT.

Are Women the Slaves of Weakness.

For eight years I have been constantly under the care of doctors, but found no relief, nor, from what the doctors told me, did I expect to get any better. I was convinced that they did not understand my case, so I thought I would try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and the result has been truly wonderful. I now feel in better health than for the last 20 years. During all this time I have been suffering with Malaria, Heart Disease, Kidney and Liver Complaints, Nervous Prostration and Sleeplessness. For the three months before taking this wonderful remedy, I had been confined to my room, and most of the time to the bed. I feel, with the blessing of God, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy has given me a new lease of life and health, and that I am cured of all my troubles. I have a great desire that others may be benefitted as I have been, and take every opportunity to recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to the sick. Mrs. E. S. Bogart, Baptist Home, 68th street, New York city.

If you feel faint, nervous, dull, tired, languid, low-spirited, lifeless and miserable, experience a faintness, sense of fulness or bloating after eating, have irregular appetite, constipated bowels, frequent headaches, wakeful or disturbed, and unrefreshing sleep, with weak back, backache, dragging down pains, irregularities, falling, etc., go insiantly to the drug store and get for $1.00 a bottle of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy which is the greatest boon to women ever discovered, and by its use be restored to sound, healthy and vigorous womanhood.

You need not fear to use it, for it is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless, and it will bring back strength to your nerves, freshness to your complexion, brightness to your eyes, and the bloom of health to your cheeks.

The discoverer of this great remedy, Dr. Greene, the most successful specialist in curing all forms of nervous and chronic diseases, 35 West 14th st., New York, can be consulted free, personally or by letter. Call or write him about your case or send for symptom blank to fill out, and a letter fully explaining your disease, giving advice, etc., will be returned free.

Timely Warning.

"My young friend," said the kind old man with the tracts, "will you oblige me by reading this some day when you have the leisure?"

The young man looked at the little pamphlet. It was entitled: "Snun the Place of Everlasting Burning!"

"Why, uncle," he said, "I should think it would be a healthy place. They boil the water, don't they?"

"Yes, my dear young friend," rejoined the kind old man. "And they also burn the garbage. You'd better keep away!"—Chicago Tribune.

Her Amendment.

Flossie had seen something on the street which greatly amused her and when she had concluded talking of it to her mother she drew a long breath and exclaimed:

"Why, mamma, I just thought I would bust."

"Gracious me, Flossie," said the horrified mother, "you must use more elegant language than that."

"Well, then, break open," she said, apologetically, and the amendment was accepted.—Detroit Free Press.

Reconciled at Last.

Mrs. Bilders—John, I cannot reconcile myself to your wretched habit of playing the races. You've been there again to-day, I suppose.

Mr. Bilders—Yes, my love, and I've brought you a box of gloves with the proceeds.

Mrs. Bilders—You dear old thing! Why didn't you say so? and er-er tomorrow you might go again, dear. I know where there's the loveliest new hat.—Chicago News Record.

A Joy She Never Can Know.

"Nothing can make a woman so superlatively happy as to have a baby of her own to kiss," exclaimed Mrs. McBride, rapturously, as she fondled her first-born.

"My dear," replied her husband, pityingly, "you can never know the unutterable joy of being 'Next' in a crowded barber shop on Saturday night."—Jury.

SWEARING HIM IN.

—Life.

A Costly Variety.

Bagley—I've got an order from a friend to buy a dresser for him. I'm on my way downtown now on that mission. I don't suppose an article of that sort costs much, does it?

Wagley—A dresser? I married one ten years ago, and it has impressed me with the belief that there could be no costlier article.—Boston Courier.

Causes of Gout.

Rich Patient—What is the cause of gout, doctor?

Doctor—Excessive eating and drinking will produce gout. Mental worry will also cause it.

Patient—My, my! Well, I must stop worrying over my excessive eating and drinking.—N. Y. Weekly.

Undeniable.

"You are a fool," exclaimed Mrs. Cawker, in the course of a controversy with her husband.

"If that is so, you are a bigger one than I," replied Cawker.

"Why?" she demanded, with asperity.

"Because you are the better half of a fool."—Brooklyn Life.

Two Adams.

"How do you do, little boy? What is your name?"

"Adams."

"Indeed; were you named after the president?"

"No, sir. I was named after two uncles named Adam.—Harper's Young People.

An Unkind Remark.

Exasperated Wife—I want you to have that dog of ours shot. He annoys people with his growling.

Husband—That's no good reason for shooting him. If it was you wouldn't stand much show for your life.—Texas Siftings.

Exchange No Robbery.

Washington—I think I should tell you, old man, that I am sure your valet had your dress suit on the other night while you were away.

Shorter—He did, and it was all right. His looked better than mine, and I changed with him.—Boston Globe.

She's After Him.

"Do you ever suffer from stage-fright?" asked Adlet of the famous tragedian.

"Oh, yes," he replied. "One of the ugliest girls in the ballet is in love with me."—Judge.

At the Ball.

He (who has been boring her all the evening)—It's a good night for some of the belles, Miss Edie.

She—It ought to be a "good night" for some of the men, too.—Chicago News Record.

His Internal Impudence.

Trivvet—What are you doing, Dicer?

Dicer—I am still looking for something to turn up.

Trivvet—But you don't need to look farther than your nose for that.—Truth.

Flattery That Paid.

"I needn't ask you to look pleasant," The crafty photographer said: "You always look so, as at present!" Three dozen that order she made.

—Leslie's Weekly.

He Could Not Help It.

Dimling—Why did you leave the lecture platform, Larkin?

Larkin—Well, I was egged on to take that step.—Life.

A Sad Affair.

Nobody could ever tell the Hudson twins from each other until they fell in love with the same girl."

"And then?"

"Oh, then there was a serious difference between them."—Jury.

A Popular Young Man.

Nellie—Mr. Hamphat, the millionaire's son, is engaged to me.

Ada—That's nothing. He is engaged to Jennie Smith and me, too.—Chicago News Record.

Amenable.

Not to care for the will of the father
Is the way with wild children, 'tis said;
And yet there's one time they would rather
Come under his will—when he's dead.

—Judge.

Waiting for the Test.

"Did he give you a diamond ring when you accepted him?"

"I don't know whether he did or not until I show it to the jeweler."—Truth.

EVER VARYING FIGURES

Latest Returns Give Cleveland 277 Electoral Votes.

OHIO STILL REGARDED IN DOUBT.

Returns from Other States—Talk About Calling an Extra Session of the House—President Harrison's Future Plans—How the Next Congress Will Stand.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The exact standing of the Democrats, Republicans and Populists in the Electoral College is not yet determined and will probably not be until an official count is had in several States.

The Republicans to-day are still claiming Ohio, although yesterday they conceded it to the Democrats, while the latter are positive that they have carried it by at least 2,000 plurality.

A complete list of States at present claimed for the Cleveland electors is as follows:

Alabama, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, North California, Ohio, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia and Wisconsin. This is 25 out of the 44, and gives an electoral vote of 300.

As foreshadowed by the choice of State Legislatures which are to elect new United States Senators, the next United States Senate will be divided as follows: Democrats, 42; Republicans, 40; Peoples, 6; anti-Republican majority, 8.

Democratic Legislatures have been elected in New York, Wisconsin and California to choose the successors of Republican Senators Hiscock, Sawyer and Felton.

Fusion Legislatures have been elected to choose Senators in place of these Republicans: Paddock of Nebrask, Perkins of Kansas, Warren of Wyoming, and Stewart of Nevada.

According to the latest returns the new House of Representatives will stand 216 Democrats, 127 Republicans, and 13 Fusion or Third party men. Several of the Fusionists are Democrats and will vote with that party.

AN EXTRA SESSION.

Talk About Convening the Lower House Immediately After Inauguration.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Among the immediate consequences of the verdict at the polls the strong probability of the Fifty-Third Congress being called in extra session immediately after inauguration is already discussed here.

An extra session of the Senate is always called at the beginning of a new administration, to confirm the Cabinet officers and the new diplomatic representatives of the United States abroad. But the present election having turned on questions of domestic policy, it is obvious to experienced political leaders of all parties that an extra session of both houses of Congress will almost inevitably result.

Secretary of the Treasury Foster among others admits this—the party he says, challenged the judgement of the country on the McKinley bill and the result must be accepted as the work of the will of the people, that a different policy shall be put into effect.

Ex-Secretary Bayard writes to a friend here to like effect, adding that the people will expect this to be done without delay.

President Harrison, it is stated, has determined to leave unfilled vacant missions to Italy, Portugal and Switzerland; also the assistant secretaryships of the Treasury vacated by Messrs. Crounse and Nettleton.

Ex-Chairman Carter it is thought may return to the land office which he vacated to take charge of the campaign and hold it for the remaining 100 days of Mr Harrison's administration if he so desires.

It is stated that with the single exception of Secretary Rusk all the members of the Cabinet had intimated to the President their intention of resigning on the fourth of March, hence their plans will not be materially disarranged.

THE PRESIDENT'S FUTURE PLANS.

He May Decide to Take Up His Residence in Boston.

BOSTON, Nov. 11.—"Is it true that President Harrison talks of taking up his residence in Boston?" asked a reporter of J. R. McKee, the President's son-in-law.

"It is too early to reply definitely," said Mr. McKee, but if the President leaves Washington and if the efforts of myself and Mrs. McKee can prevail he may come.

"He was, up to a short time ago, at least, determined to return to Indianapolis at the close of his official career, where almost his whole life has been passed.

"The President was informed by the doctors several months ago that his wife could not live, and until her death of course her condition engrossed the whole attention of the family. Any consideration of where he would reside in the event of her death was not to be thought of.

"With a man at his age, however, it is greatly a matter of associations, and it would be hard for him to leave Indianapolis, for which he has always had a great liking, and go to another place where associations would be new and perhaps entirely different from those in the old home."

Secretary Rusk on the Election.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Secretary Jeremiah M. Rusk, on his way back to Washington after voting for Harrison in his home in Wisconsin, is at the Grand Pacific. "We were cleaned out—that's all there is about it," said he, "referring to Tuesday. "In my opinion, the tariff was the sole and whole cause of it. There had been a howl about the tariff everywhere, and then the Homestead affair made the laboring classes discontented. The reform spirit is growing, and the result has been a clean sweep."

Hogg May Succeed Mills.

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 11.—Cleveland's majority is greatly reduced from four years ago. There has been much swapping because of local and State elections, and the Hogg men have scratched Cleveland extensively. The Populist ticket has developed unexpected strength all over the State. Speculation is rife here that Hogg, if the Legislature is with him, will go to the United States Senate in place of Roger Q. Mills.

DOUBT AS TO OHIO.

Both Sides Claiming the State—Official Count May Have to Decide.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 10.—A telegram from Bellaire states that Col. Poorman, the Republican candidate for Congress in the 16th district, concedes the election of A. J. Pearson by a plurality of 200. In the Ninth, or Toledo district, the result is still in doubt, the democrats claiming the election of Byron Ritchie by four votes, and the Republicans maintaining that they have elected ex-Gov. Ashley by six plurality. The official count will be necessary to decide the contest.

Aside from the Toledo district each party is now sure of ten Congressman from this State.

A gerrymander last winter was supposed to give the Democrats but six members of the lower House.

The Democrats who have been elected in what were counted as Republican districts are: M. D. Harter, in the 14th, who overcame a nominal Republican plurality of 1,800; A. J. Pearson, in the 16th, who was confronted with a supposed Republican plurality of about 1,300; George P. Ikirt, whose handicap in the 18th district, was fixed at 2,500 and Tom L. Johnson of the 21st district, which was counted upon as Republican by 1,600 majority.

In the 9th district, which is claimed by both sides, the Republicans were supposed to have a normal plurality of at least 1,700.

Chairman Farley, of the Democratic State Committee, was in Cleveland this morning. He claimed the State for the Democrats by 1,200 plurality.

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 1.—The "Commercial Gazette" (Rep.) on the basis of the complete returns from fifty-four counties, and estimates on the remaining thirty-four counties in the State, estimates that Cleveland electors are chosen by 353 plurality, and that S. M. Taylor, Republican, for Secretary of State, has been elected. It also figures ten Republican and eleven Democratic Congressmen.

KANSAS FOR WEAVER.

No Doubt But That the Populist Electors Have a Plurality.

TOPEKA, Nov. 11.—The People's party, assisted by the Democrats, have certainly elected the Weaver electors, the entire State ticket, and the Congressmen-at-Large by a majority of at least 4,000. This is practically conceded by the Republicans this morning.

The Republicans have elected Case Broderict in the First district, E. H. Funston in the Second, and Charles Curtis in the Fourth.

The Populists have elected T. J. Hudson in the Third district, John Davis in the Fifth, W. M. Baker in the Sixth, Jerry Simpson in the Seventh, and A. W. Harris at large.

In the Legislature the Populists have elected 23 Senators and the Republicans 17. In the House the Populists have 58, Republicans 65, and Democrats 2. The two Democrats are pledged to vote for the Republican candidate for United States Senator, having been elected with the aid of Republicans. This gives the Republicans a majority of three on joint ballot, and insures the election of a Republican to succeed Senator Bishop W. Perkins.

The official count by county commissioners will be made to-day, and the official canvass will be made by the State Board of Canvassers on Wednesday, November 28.

RUSSELL'S PLURALITY.

It is Now Estimated That He Carried the State By 2,800.

BOSTON, Nov. 11.—It is still impossible to give correct footings on the Presidential and Gubernatorial votes of the State, but from the most careful estimate of the few missing towns, based on the rule of percentages, it appears as though Russell (Dem.) has about 2,800 plurality over Haile, (Rep.)

The results in the Congressional districts, as far as completed, are as follows:

Republicans elected in 3rd, 4th, 7th, 8th and 11th districts; in the 10th an Independent Republican is elected, and Democrats elected from the 5th and 9th districts.

Congratulations for Grover and Ruth.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Several hundred letters and telegrams of congratulations were received by Mr. Cleveland at his residence this morning. A number also came addressed to baby Ruth. Mr. Cleveland remained at home all the morning. Mr. Cleveland still refuses to be interviewed with regard to the result of the election. Mr. Cleveland's private secretary also denied that the former was preparing a letter to the public.

New York Assembly.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Revised reports of Assembly returns elect James Stead, (rep.) over Cole, (Dem.) in Greene county. Stead's plurality is 154. In second Ulster district James Lounsberry, (Rep.) now has 21 plurality over George H. Bush, (Dem.) This makes the Assembly stand 73 Democrats, and 55 Republicans. Latest returns from Montgomery county give E. J. Hand, (Dem.) a plurality of 3 votes, instead of 1 as previously reported.

A Woman Justice of the Peace.

BUFFALO, Wyo., Nov. 11.—The first woman elected to the office of Justice of the Peace in Wyoming is Mrs. Ann Scally of Fort Kinnet precinct, Johnson county. Although her name was first mentioned as a candidate about 10 a. m. on election day she made a phenomenal race, defeating her male Republican opponent, Phagan, the Post Master, 4 to 1.

Montana.

HELENA, Nov. 11.—The Republicans claim the State by 5,000 plurality. They will elect the Congressman by a small margin.

NEW ORLEANS STRIKE.

The Governor Takes Command of the Crescent City.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 11.—The Governor has taken control of the situation.

The city authorities practically admitted their inability to maintain the peace, and last night the Governor issued a proclamation in which he says that the shutting down of the gas and electric light works has given criminals an incentive to ply their vocation in darkness.

The Governor calls upon citizens not to congregate upon the streets, and says that all the power vested in him shall be extended to preserve the peace and good order of the city.

The mayor issued a proclamation this morning calling upon all good citizens to present themselves at the City Hall to be sworn in as special policemen. Every military company in the State is under arms and ready to respond to a call for duty, and companies are organizing all over the State to come here on special trains should their services be required.

The situation in the general strike is unchanged this morning. The fact that the common laborers are still at work is regarded as a sign of weakness on the part of the strikers. Every effort has been made to make the crew men and their allies quit work but the men have calculated on the season of disaster which would follow the turning of cotton into some other channel and refuse to be called out. The men in other branches have consented to idleness.

The strike of freight handlers has at last affected the business of the merchants to a serious extent, but the railroad officials have taken a very firm stand and have given the strikers notice that they must return to work at once or lose their places. The railroads have a number of men in a short run of the city, and will not temporize much longer.

If they are compelled to put in a new set of freight handlers they will not only bring all the men they require, but will assist the merchants in importing laborers to take the places of all strikers, and by to-morrow there will be ample protection.

The plan is to increase the force of the militia. About 1,500 men are available, but such a force could not do much in case of a general riot. The merchants will organize an auxiliary force of several thousand men, and these will be drilled and armed, and ready to take the field in a short time.

Another plan of attack decided upon is to file suits against the labor leaders for conspiring to ruin the business of some institution which would be selected, so that in case of trouble the United States Marshal could be called upon to aid in the punishment.

KECK CHEATED THE GALLOWS.

Died of Nervous Exhaustion Superinduced by Fear—Was He Guilty?

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Nov. 11.—William F. Keck, the murderer, who was to have been hanged at noon, was found dead in his cell here yesterday morning. Everything was ready for the hanging.

The doctors who made the post-mortem examination found no traces of poison, and swore that death was caused by nervous exhaustion.

A coroner's jury was impaneled, and after hearing other witnesses, including prison officials, returned the following verdict:

"That William F. Keck came to his death at Lehigh County prison, Allentown, Lehigh county; that the cause of death was nervous prostration superinduced by the fear and terror of execution imminent."

The crime for which Keck was to have made expiation was the murder of Wm. Nipch, aged 72, and his wife, Jeannette, aged 69, at Smoketown, nine miles north of Allentown, on the afternoon of Wednesday, Nov. 18, 1891.

Keck and the Nipches were intimate and neighbors, occupying old shanties on the banks of an abandoned iron mine.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 11.—Robert E. Wright, of Allentown, counsel for Keck, the murderer, came to Harrisburg Wednesday night with recently discovered testimony to ask a reprieve for the prisoner. Before he could see the Governor yesterday morning he received a telegram stating that Keck had died in his cell from heart disease. Mr. Wright believes he was innocent.

Suggests Speedy Action on the Tariff.

BOSTON, Nov. 11.—A "Herald" editorial advocates the calling by Mr. Cleveland of an extra session of Congress for next spring. It says: "If the McKinley law is the outrage upon the people of this country, which Democratic newspapers have affirmed, no time should be lost in securing its repeal and substituting for it an equitable system of taxation.

Killed by an Elevator.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Jonas W. Wells of Woodbury, N. J., general manager of the large cotton mills of the May's Landing Water Power company, at Millville, met death at May's Landing yesterday, by being struck and almost instantly killed by an elevator on the outside of the mill.

Heavy Snow Fall at Lebanon.

LEBANON, Pa., Nov. 11.—Eight inches of snow fell here yesterday. A great many trees still full of leaves were broken down by the snow which adhered to the limbs and foliage. The Lebanon Street Railway company was compelled to use snow plows to clean the tracks.

Smallpox in Jersey City.

JERSEY CITY, Nov. 11.—Four new cases of smallpox were discovered in the Italian quarter here yesterday. They were removed to the Snake Hill pest house, the houses were disinfected and all the tenants were required to submit to vaccination.

EVENTS FROM ABROAD

Many Killed by a Mill's Collapse in Moravia.

A MURDEROUS FAMILY SENTENCED

Eleven Atrocities Charged to the Koulikovskis—Marlborough Died of Natural Causes—Poisoner Cream to Hang Next Week—The Abeille Family Continue to Annoy Deacon.

VIENNA, Nov. 11.—A mill collapsed in Oprau, Moravia, yesterday, shortly before the hands were to leave for the night. Almost 200 men were in the building at the time.

When the walls began to crack the men in the basement and on the ground floor ran out.

The men and girls above started down stairs. In the panic the stairway collapsed, and before anybody could struggle out of the ruins the whole building came down.

About 50 persons were caught in the bricks and broken timber. Several were rescued, but it is supposed that 35 or 40 were killed.

The dead bodies of 20 have been removed, and the debris will undoubtedly reveal many more.

Fifty men are at work clearing away the ruins.

The mill was flimsily built, and the operation of heavy machinery on the second floor is believed to have caused the collapse. The police are looking for the builder, and will arrest him.

THEY MURDERED ELEVEN.

A Family in Poland Sentenced for a Long Series of Crimes.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 11.—The Koulikovski family, after several days' trial in Lomza, Russian Poland, have been sentenced to penal servitude for terms varying between 15 and 20 years for murdering and robbing Russian emigrants.

The two sons, who executed the plans made by their wives and father, lived near Monki, a frontier village. They had picked up a precarious living by questionable means since leaving the Russian army.

Last winter they began luring emigrants they met on the roads to their home, and there arranging to lead them over the border into Prussia by routes not watched by the frontier guard.

Only emigrants with considerable baggage were treated thus. In the evenings the younger brother would take the emigrants into a dense forest where the elder brother waited for the party. Then the two brothers set upon the emigrants, and beat out their brains with clubs.

The bodies were buried under leaves and a thin covering of dirt, and the baggage was taken to the home of the Koulikovski family, to be sold later in the city near by.

The bodies of ten persons murdered in this way were found in the forest by the police. Others are supposed to be still there.

The eleventh known victim was a man who sought shelter with the family from a storm. He was scalded to death by the wife of the younger brother.

AIDED BY THE ABEILLES.

The Slain Man's Family Determined to Annoy Deacon.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—The position of the Deacon case before the First Chamber of the French Court of Appeal is somewhat hazy.

If Mrs. Deacon really wants her appeal to be heard it will be heard next Wednesday, as the Abeille family possesses large influence and is using it in her behalf. If she desires to gain time she will be able to delay the trial indefinitely.

The exact whereabouts of the child abducted by Mrs. Deacon from the Convent of Our Lady of the Assumption is unknown. There is no doubt, however, that the little girl is near Paris, as on Saturday, when Mrs. Deacon's lawyers offered to surrender her to Mr. Deacon, they said that if he would agree to their conditions he should have possession of her in three hours.

Mr. Deacon refused to consent to any compromise in the case, being determined to divorce his wife.

The real explanation of her move in bringing an action of divorce against her husband is that she is a tool of the Abeille family. The members of the family are still trying their utmost to annoy and thwart Mr. Deacon.

Marlborough Not a Suicide.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The post-mortem examination of the Duke of Marlborough's body revealed, so the surgeons say, a "marked calcareous degeneration of a large vessel of the heart, amply sufficient to cause death."

Theodore Child is Dead.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—The report of the death of Theodore Child is confirmed. He died of cholera at Ispahan, Persia, on Wednesday, Nov. 9.

Cream to Hang Next Week.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Mr. Asquith, Home Secretary, has decided that Neill Cream shall be hanged next week.

Gen. Miles Will Stay in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—The rumor in army circles that Gen. Miles has asked the War Department to remove him from Chicago and let him exchange places with Gen. Howard, because of the criticisms by the press of Chicago on his management of the military parades in connection with the ball and dedicatory ceremonies of the World's Fair, is denied by the Indian fighter.

South Dakota Surely Republican.

YANKTON, S. D., Nov. 11.—Ottawa Peemiller, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee has given up all hope that South Dakota would go for Weaver and acknowledges everything in the State Republican, even to the Legislature. He says the Independent promises for Weaver failed to be delivered. He regards the election as showing the Populists much weaker in the State.

Suicide of a Young Woman.

CORNING, N. Y., Nov. 11.—Miss Nina Deming, a popular young woman of Tioga, Pa., committed suicide by shooting herself Thursday night. She was only 18 years old, and quite handsome. Unrequited love is supposed to have been the cause of her rash act.

Light Muffins.
By Eliza R. Parker, Bedford, Ky.
Sift one quart of flour, and two teaspoons of Cleveland's Baking Powder. Add two tablespoons of melted butter, a tea cup of sweet milk, a teaspoon of salt, and the beaten whites of six eggs. Bake in well greased muffin moulds.
Use only Cleveland's baking powder, the proportions are made for that. 90
A pure cream of tartar powder.
Cleveland's Baking Powder
Perfect healthfulness is its chief merit.
"Absolutely the Best."

HE MARRIED A PRETTY GIRL.

Now the Relatives Say W. E. Farrell is a Lunatic.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 11.—A contest as to who is to control property valued at $14,000, and whether William E. Farrell, the owner of the estate, is of sound mind and fitted to marry, has been begun in the City Hall courtroom before Commissioners D. J. Pancoast, Dr. D. Benjamin, of Camden, and City Solicitor A. B. Endicott, who were represented by Chancellor McGill. They are to determine Farrell's sanity.

It was only a preliminary hearing, but from the testimony given it appears that Farrell is a well-to-do manufacturer at Pleasant Mills, N. J., over 50 years of age, and that recently he had become enamored of a pretty girl. He pressed his suit, and, not very long ago, against the protests of his relatives and advice of his friends, he made her his wife. This angered his brother, Frank Farrell, who resides in Camden. He could see nothing but a mercenary object on the part of the bride and a weakness of mind on his brother's. Hence he and Dr. Amos Mills of Philadelphia, an expert on sanity, and Dr. T. K. Reed examined into this condition, and from their report he applied for a commission.

The testimony taken was of a general character by the two physicians named, who pronounced Farrell mentally deranged, and incapable of properly attending to his business affairs. Several employes at the mill testified to his queer actions about the place.

Mrs. Farrell's interests are being guarded sharply by Lawyer Martin Gray, of Camden.

The defense will maintain that Farrell was not of a weak mind at the time of the marriage, and thus avoid the annuling of that contract, which would debar the defendant from participating in the property. The investigation will be continued to-day.

An Incendiary Sentenced.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11.—Hamilton Dunn, a young man charged with setting fire to the stable of Richard Foote at Edgemont and Gersler streets with intent to burn dwellings and other buildings near by, was convicted before Judge Biddle and sentenced to ten years in the Eastern penitentiary.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—That is a great fair now on at Saengerbund hall.

—Seats for the Ragan illustrated lectures are going rapidly.

—Cleveland's majority of the votes of the people will reach over half a million.

—The Carolina company, an incorporation of local capitalists, is to be dissolved as advertised in another column.

—The United Tea and Coffee Growers association have another interesting new advertisement in THE PRESS to-day.

—The first concert of the Plainfield Choral society, has been arranged for Tuesday evening, Dec. 20, at Music Hall.

—Mr. Ragan's lectures undoubtedly comprise the most entertaining and instructive series ever given in Chicago.—Herald.

—The Newark Evening News calls it "Somerset's Somersault" in speaking of the great Democratic sweep in that county.

—North Plainfield Democrats are preparing a big Salt River boat, for the accommodation of Republicans, in the parade to-night.

—Remember the home-made cake, candy, ice-cream and fruit sale at 55 North avenue this evening and to-morrow morning and afternoon.

—The Union county board of canvassers will meet at the Court House at Elizabeth at noon to-day to canvass the election returns of Union county.

—The colored Democrats are called upon to meet at the Crescent building, this evening, and form in the parade. Torches will be provided for them.

—The regular meeting of the Christian Endeavor society of the Park Avenue Baptist church will take place this evening at 8. Strangers will be welcome.

—Here is the disaster at a glance. There are forty-four States. The Republicans carried thirteen. They lost fourteen that they felt reasonably sure of.

—Lord Tennyson's play of "The Foresters", with Sir Arthur Sullivan's music, is to be given under the direction of Augustin Daly, next Monday evening, at Music Hall.

—The Somerville Unionist-Gazette says: "H. Newton Spencer made a brilliant fight at his own home in North Plainfield, and returned the handsome majority of 321. He was cut by Republicans in many parts of the county."

—A special committee of the Somerset county board of freeholders has reported in the matter of damages claimed by William A. Woodruff of this city, and recommends the payment of $87.50 from Somerset's funds.

—The marvelously exact coloring which characterized the illustrations of former lectures marked those of last evening. Mr. Ragan shows famous scenes and historic sights in a manner that is astonishingly realistic.—Tribune.

—The Young People's League of the First Baptist church, will hold their weekly prayer meeting this evening. Subject: "The Plan of Salvation", Matt. III: 2. Leader—Charles Brown. All young people are cordially invited.

—Vanderbeek & Sattels, carried on the crest of the wave of prosperity, are compelled to enlarge their quarters, and have opened fine new warerooms on the second floor of THE PRESS building, where may be seen an elegant assortment of pianos and organs.

—Edsall says in his new advertisement which will appear to-morrow: "Don't buy anything in New York that you can find in Plainfield". He is making great efforts, he says, to double his trade during the next year, and will make it to your interest to trade at his stores.

—The second lecture by Henry H. Ragan was attended by a large audience, and was illustrated by the finest collection of stereoption pictures ever shown in Chicago. The accompanying description was all that could be desired, and Mr. Ragan has established himself as a standard attraction here.—Evening Journal.

—James Martin, an employe at Vogeler's meat market, while putting up an electric lamp, yesterday afternoon, slipped from a box and ran a meat hook into his hand, tearing it severely, so that two stitches had to be taken. Dr. Long dressed the wound. It will be some time before Mr. Martin will be able to use his hand again.

—Mr. Harrison lost his ward, city, county, State and the country. He probably lost his old home also, as Northern Indiana shows heavy Democratic gains. Mr. Cleveland carried the town and State of his birth, his old home Buffalo, every Assembly district in the city in which he now lives and swept the country in cyclonic fashion.

—There have been no views of nature's imposing handiwork exhibited here before which equal those of Mr. Ragan. And he is an entertaining and instructive lecturer—even fascinating. His appearance catches the attention, his voice is full, strong and pleasant, and his description vivid and eloquent. The lectures will undoubtedly prove one of the most interesting series of the season.—Globe.

—Last year at Music Hall "The Midnight Alarm", a realistic comedy-drama in five acts, made a decided hit. It is full of life and action from start to finish, and was well staged. The locality is New York city, and the time the present. The characters are well defined and the various scenes and incidents fairly natural. In the fourth act is introduced a scene at the truck house. Suddenly the alarm strikes and out dashes the Hayes truck, followed by engine and hose carriages, the whole forming a very realistic and exciting episode. It will be repeated next Tuesday evening.

MARCH OF THE VICTORS.

ALL DEMOCRATS CALLED UPON TO TURN OUT TO-NIGHT.

The Band Will Play, the Canon Roar, Red Lights Will Burn and Boom Galore.

Every Democrat in Plainfield and North Plainfield is requested to meet at the headquarters of the Cleveland and Stevenson Campaign club, to-night at 7:30, to take part in the parade of victory. Torches, etc., will be provided for all who may not have their own.

The line of march has been altered slightly from that printed yesterday, and is now as follows: Form on Peace street, to North avenue, to Park, to Front, to Grove, to Emily, to Somerset, to Front, to Liberty, to Seventh, to Crescent, to Park, to Ninth, to Franklin place, to Fifth, to Peace.

Major Sydney E. Flower will be grand marshal with W. K. McClure, L. G. Timpson and N. Verrier as aides. The procession will be headed by the equestrians. The Plainfield cornet band and the drum and fife corps, have been engaged.

All Democrats and friends of good government and tariff restriction, are expected to illuminate along the line of march. A number of those who live at a distance, also have expressed their intention to burn some fireworks between 8 and 10 o'clock.

The North Plainfield Democratic association are to turn out with a float, and everybody who can bring a broom, or a stick of red fire, or a flag is requested to do so.

GOOD TIME FOR YOUNG MEN.

The Y. M. C. A. Workers Pleasantly Entertained at Mr. Jackson's Home.

The residence of James W. Jackson, 7 Crescent avenue, was the scene of a pleasant gathering last evening. The occasion was a social meeting of the directors and committeemen of the Young Men's Christian association.

Some of the most prominent young men in Christian work in this city were present. After an informal reception, a short song service was heartily engaged in, followed by prayer.

President Murray then took up the various phases of association work, and many plans were suggested by the different members for increasing the efficacy of the many branches of the work, and for increasing the membership.

Mrs. Jackson then invited the guests to the dining room, where Mrs. L. M. French and Miss French assisted in serving the refreshments liberally provided.

The committee-men lingered till a late hour, and after a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Jackson for their kind hospitality, all united in singing "Blest be the Tie that Binds", and retired to their homes, feeling that they had spent a most profitable and pleasant evening.

Among those present were: President Wm. D. Murray, general secretary J. H. Manning, A. C. LaBoyteaux, Charles B. Brown, F. W. Howland, J. A. Robinson, C. A. Lee, E. A. Embree, J. C. Whiting, H. O. Newman, Jas. Alex. Grant, Wm. Thompson, S. Cahoone, J. W. Gavett, R. F. Murray, E. L. Walz, jr. Also the following: C. H. Duncan, Clarence McKenzie, S. B. Joseph, J. D. Moon, John Lindsay, J. V. A. Craighead, T. E. Hazell, N. M. Maxson, R. H. Radford, A. B. Beers, R. A. Suffern, A. W. Teneyck, George B. Wean, A. M. Clements and A. V. Searing, jr.

Lillian Hope, granddaughter of Stevenson B. Hope, is very ill with diphtheria at her home, 31 Richmond street.

Mrs. J. Peterman of this city, visiting friends in Valatia, N. Y., picked on Oct. 30 a quart of fine red raspberries from the garden.

Amateurs of this city will give "Young Mrs. Winthrop", under the direction of H. C. Blake, at the Casino, Dec. 10, and "The Prompter's Box", at Netherwood, Dec. 29.

William D. Murray will speak about Japan at the meeting to be held in the interest of the International Y. M. C. A. work at the Crescent Avenue church next Sunday evening.

At the Warren County Teachers' institute to be held at Phillipsburg on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 21, 22 and 23, H. M. Maxson, superintendent of the Plainfield public schools, will read a paper entitled "How to Save Time".

The Rev. W. G. Searles, formerly secretary of the Junior Department of the Albany Young Men's Christian association, will speak to boys under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. in the old Grace church building, corner of Sixth and Sycamore streets, Sunday afternoon at 4:15.

The largest share of credit for the beauty of the display and adornment of the rooms at 17 Crescent avenue, where has been held for the past few days, the Seventh Day ladies' chrysanthemum show, is due Mrs. E. R. Pope. She must have stripped her conservatory and her home, so extensive was the show of palms, ferns and wall decorations that represented her contributions.

Seats to be Selected for the Melopoia Concerts.

Secretary William T. Kaufman of the Melopoia society, will be at The Casino, Tuesday evening, the 29th inst., from 8 till 9, with a diagram of sittings for the coming concerts. Subscribers who desire to choose seats are requested to do so at the time indicated, as seats will be alloted to those not so attending. Not more than four seats for each concert will be delivered to any one person.

Only one evening will be given to this purpose, so it behooves any who may desire to subscribe but have not done so, to send in their names before the 29th, otherwise they will have to take the seats that may be left.

Lane's medicine moves the bowels each day. In order to be healthy this is necessary.

TO INSTALL THEIR PASTORS.

Revs. Richardson and Herring Will Soon Officiate in Plainfield.

The Rev. John W. Richardson, the new pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, will enter on his duties next Sunday. The good citizens of Plainfield will give this gentleman a hearty welcome, as he comes with a reputation for earnest and effective work, and a readiness of speech and brilliancy of oratory that are sure to meet the approval of this progressive and cultured community. The Park Avenue church people have arranged an elaborate programme for the service the first evening of Mr. Richardson's pastorate. Besides his talk on an appropriate subject, there will be music and song. Mrs. Evelyn Everett Spicer, the sweet "Tabernacle" singer, will come from Brooklyn to render the solos. These will include a selection from the oratorio of Eli, "I Will Extol Thee;" song and chorus from Rossini's Stabat Mater, "Inflammatus;" and song and chorus by Emerson, "Nothing But Leaves". A very interesting evening service is promised, and the large audience that usually greets Mrs. Spicer, when she sings in Plainfield, will be enhanced by those eager to hear the new and talented minister.

The Rev. C. E. Herring, pastor-elect of the First Presbyterian church, will be installed probably Tuesday evening, Nov. 22.

PLAINFIELD'S TAX RATE.

Compare It with that in Other Cities, and Compare Local Advantages.

For a place with so many improvements and advantages, Plainfield has a low tax rate, in comparison with other cities of the State.

The inhabitants of the township of Greenwich, Warren county, have the distinction of being the least taxed of any people in New Jersey. The rate in the township is 70 cents for every $100 or $7 a $1,000. The highest rate in the State is in the borough of Rutherford, Bergen county, and is $3 73 per $100, or $37.30 on every $1,000 of valuation. This is higher than the tax rate of any of the large cities. In Newark the rate is $1.87, in Jersey city it is $2.84, in Paterson, $2 50, and in Plainfield $2.20.

These rates are taken from the State Board of Assessors' report for the coming year, and form the basis for the distribution of the railroad tax collected by the State for the localities. The rates all over the State are generally higher than last year.

The rates in the principal cities of the State for 1892 are as follows:

Atlantic City	$1.28	Perth Amboy	$2.50
Rutherford	3.78	South Amboy	1.22
Beverly	2.50	Freehold	1.27
Burlington	1.96	Boonton	1.86
Camden	1.50	Chatham	1.08
Gloucester City	1.75	Salem	1.35
Holly Beach	3.50	Newton	1.55
Ocean City	3.20	Cranford	2.15
Bridgeton	1.60	Elizabeth	2.98
Millville	1.75	Fanwood	2.15
Vineland	1.90	Plainfield	2.20
Woodbury	1.66	Rahway	2.75
Lambertville	1.25	Summit	3.00
Trenton	1.95	Westfield	2.06
New Brunswick	2.50	Belvidere	1.05

It isn't the usual way—it's just the reverse—to pay a patient when you can't cure him. Nevertheless, that's what's done by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. They promise to pay you $500 if they can't cure your catarrh, no matter how bad the case. It isn't mere talk—it's business. You can satisfy yourself of it, if you're interested. And you ought to be, if you have catarrh. It's faith in their medicine that's behind the offer.

It has cured thousands of the worst cases, where everything else failed.

You can be cured, too. If you can't, you get the money.

They're willing to take the risk—you ought to be glad to take the medicine.

It's the cheapest medicine you can buy, because it's guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

You only pay for the good you get. Can you ask more?

That's the peculiar plan all Dr. Pierce's medicines are sold on.

If you want to be on the safe side, stick to the old reliable, Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. It is sold by dealers everywhere.

"The Result"

Satisfactory. The Winning Party the Future Servants of the People.

The great victory was not won by fraud or bribery; or by misrepresentations and false promises; or by vile epethets and mean personal ties.

But on the other hand the fairest and most righteous means have been used by the successful party. Every promise has been faithfully fulfilled as far as possible, and a strict adherence to right and justice maintained. Fair and polite treatment of the people, honesty and uprightness in all their methods have won for the party this much desired and coveted success.

The victorious party named above is not a political party at all, but one of our most successful and enterprising dry goods merchants, who only a few years ago commenced business here in a small room on East Front street. To-day Edsall's, of No. 20 West Front street, is well and favorably known all through this part of the state as the leading establishment in the dry and fancy goods line. The growth has been remarkable, and bespeaks for the proprietor commendable push and energy.

In view of this success in the past, Edsall has decided to make greater efforts still during the next year to double the volume of trade.

This of course means less profits to the business, and more money in the pockets of the patrons.

His elegant stores are thronged with buyers, who are well pleased and satisfied with their purchases, and say that they find it much to their advantage to buy at home instead of going to New York.

In a few days the public will hear more about how he expects to increase his trade to double its present amount. In the mean time come in and see the elegant new bric-a-brac and novelties we are now showing in the new archway, and the hundreds of other beautiful and seasonable articles through each department at Edsall's.

WELCOMED WEST.

PLAINFIELD'S GOOD DOCTOR MITCHELL GIVEN WARMEST GREETING.

News from His New Pastorate, and Sketch of His Busy Young Life—He Was a Minister from Childhood.

(From The Kansas City (Mo.) Star.)

The pulpit of the Grand Avenue Methodist church will be occupied to-morrow morning by a new pastor, the Rev. Chas Bayard Mitchell, who will succeed to the labors of the Rev. Dr. Young and who will begin a new chapter in the history of the church.

The wonderful system of the Methodist church is known to everybody and interests everybody. From the humblest village to the proudest city the coming of a "new Methodist preacher" is a matter of public concern. This is because the preacher of that faith is regarded as a "prominent citizen". The first religious body to congratulate a President of the United States on the success of his administration was a Methodist conference; the President was George Washington. When a new Methodist preacher comes to town the number is increased of those who labor for the building of the kingdom of God; also of those who will labor for the betterment of this world; for better manners and purer laws; for popular secular education; for civil liberty; for the abolition of great evils, as drunkenness; for the success of reforms, which implies new measures, as they are inaugurated in thought, word and action. Hence, everybody who has the good of the community in mind is interested in knowing about the "new Methodist preacher"; how much of a man he is; how much of the qualities he possesses of a popular as well as a religious leader; how strong is the shoulder he is to bring to bear upon the wheel of human progress.

The Rev. Charles B. Mitchell, who, by the way, is "Doctor" Mitchell, but Doctor of Philosophy instead of Doctor of Divinity, is to "take post", in military phrase, at the Grand Avenue church, which stands right in the business heart of the city, directly opposite the site of the new government building, which will probably constitute in time the center of the metropolis, being the very spot where the greatest number of its inhabitants of all classes and conditions of men will pass in the course of each twenty-four hours. The briefest and best summary of the new pastor's character should be that he is just the young man to stand up and preach the gospel of the next world and of this in that part of the city.

The belief is popular, if not universal, that actors who also move men by the speaking eye and the "word of mouth", do, so to speak, "run in families"; that their gifts descend from sire to son. The new preacher at the Grand Avenue Methodist church comes of a ministerial family. His father was the Rev. Daniel P. Mitchell of Kansas, a man of varied gifts and a powerful as well as acute and plausible speaker on all public questions as well as a pulpit orator. The elder Mitchell, after a distinguished career as a Methodist preacher in Pennsylvania and Eastern Ohio and finally as presiding elder of the Allegheny district, came to Kansas in 1863 and began his work at Leavenworth. He served afterward the largest Methodist churches in the State, as Topeka, Fort Scott and Emporia, and acted as delegate four times in the general conference of his church. He died in 1881, probably the most widely known clergyman in Kansas, after a ministerial career of thirty-three years. Such was Charles B. Mitchell's father; his mother, who is still living, is the daughter of the Rev. Henry Baker of the Baltimore conference.

Charles B. Mitchell was born in Allegheny, Pa., August 27, 1857, and was transferred from the East to the West at the age of 6 years, consequently he may be considered a Western man. His father made him the subject of an educational experiment and refused to have him sent to school or even to be taught anything of books by the other children until he was 7 years old. The result seemed to justify the wisdom of the experiment, as after he began his school life he learned rapidly, and in a year was in the same classes with his older sister. He seems from childhood to have thought of no other work than that of the ministry. At the age of 18 he entered Mount Union college, in Ohio; in two years he finished the three years' course and entered Allegheny college, at Meadville, Pa., joining the senior class. He graduated in June, 1879. Immediately he began preaching as a supply at the little village of Coyville; thence he went to Burrton, and thence to the fine country town of Marion; all the while recognized as a rising man. Thence he was transferred to the church in Leavenworth, which his father had decided in the autumn of 1862. In Leavenworth Mr. Mitchell attracted the attention of the State by his activity and power as a preacher, and his brave stand on the question of Prohibition. In June, 1882, he was married to Miss Clara Aull, of East Pittsburg, a charming and accomplished woman. From Leavenworth he was called to the Smithfield church of Pittsburg, one of the old fortresses of Methodism, and thence to Plainfield, N J. Plainfield may almost be considered a suburb of New York. Many of the members were business men of that city. Among Mr. Mitchell's parishioners in Plainfield was Dr. Jesse L. Hurlbut, known throughout the country for his service in connection with the Chautauqua movement. From Plainfield Dr. Mitchell comes to Kansas City.

Dr. Mitchell is a young man, in the very prime of life, being 35 years of age. He is so young that many of his former schoolmates and friends over in Kansas still call him "Charley" Mitchell. By these and many more he will be warmly welcomed back to the West, for Western men believe after all that the West is the real field for a man with a future. He has had for years a wide experience; has proved his qualities, has tested his learning, his patience, his courage, the the strength and earnestness of his own convictions, which is a great deal; and enters upon his work in a great field with the abiding good will of those who have known him longest and best.

COL. SPENCER'S DEFEAT.

Somerset County's Republican Organ Fixes the Blame Where THE PRESS Did.

(Somerville Unionist-Gazette.)

Republicans have only themselves to blame for the defeat of H. Newton Spencer and Dr. Van Derveer. Mr. Spencer was given a splendid majority by his own township, where he had been known for years. If all the Republicans in the county had stood by him he would have been elected by a handsome majority. The Republicans are complaining about the defeat in New Jersey, and wondering why it is so. If they have done the same all over the state, as many have in Somerset county, can they wonder at the result? Republicans ought to stand by their party if they want it to succeed, and not for some very small reason give their votes to some one on the opposite ticket. There is no reason why both Dr. VanDerveer and Mr. Spencer should not have been elected if their own party had stood by by them.

DR. LEWIS STUDIES CARDS.

Gambler Quinn Gives Him Some Points for To-Morrow's Sermon.

At the Seventh-Day Baptist church at 10:30 a. m. to-morrow, Dr. Lewis will preach to young men on "Gambling". He has lately made some "studies" under John P. Quinn, who was for twenty-five years a "professional gambler", and his hearers will undoubtedly get the benefit of those studies. People who "play cards at home—just for amusement", are cordially invited to attend.

His Personal Popularity Won.

[Elizabeth Journal.]

By a very handsome majority James J. Gerber has been elected county clerk of Union county for the next five years. It is by long odds the best paying office in the county, its fees and proper perquisites aggregating, it is said, from $12,000 to $15,000 a year. These figures may possibly be overestimated, but certainly there is no office in the county that pays so well. Mr. Gerber is, therefore, to be congratulated from the purely financial point of view. In the next place it may be said that Mr. Gerber is to be congratulated because of his personal popularity. A majority of over 1,500 in this city alone could not have been gained without Republican votes, and Mr. Gerber got many of these because of his friendly relations to those with whom he is associated in business and in social circles. He has held public office before, and has so efficiently filled these places of trust, that the people of this city laid aside politics and heartily supported him for county clerk.

The Pluralities in the County.

The vote and pluralities in the county for the successful candidates were as follows:

For President—Harrison, 7,719; Cleveland, 8,599; Bidwell, Pro., 239; Weaver, P. P., 23; Wing, S. L., 139. Cleveland's plurality, 880.

For Coroner—Lawrence, 7,873; Horning, 8,449; Lohmeyer, S. L., 105. Horning's plurality, 576.

For County Clerk—Chamberlain, 8,045; Gerber, 8,352; Irving, Pro., 210; Christensen, S. L., 157. Gerber's plurality, 307.

For Surrogate—Parrot, 8,490; Stover, 7,930; Clayton, Pro., 139; Fischer, S. L., 147. Parrot's plurality, 560.

The Two Extremes.

[Dunellen Weekly Call.]

A hotel has been opened at Evona, in the corner store, which for many years has been used as a Sunday-school. The owner has built new stables at the rear of the property and fitted up the old Sunday-school room into a barroom. It is sad to think that where the innocent once gathered to drink in the truth from God's Word should be turned into a den where its frequenters shall drink in the fruits of evil and shall be led to destruction.

Donations to the Home.

The Children's Home association has received during October from the "Busy Bee" Circle of King's Daughters $50; from the Crescent Avenue Sunday-school, $50; from the Needlework Guild, one hundred and eighty-six new garments. All other October donations will be noted in the annual report.

Pleasant Evening on Grove Street.

The parlor entertainment at the residence of Mrs. D. Snediker, 110 Grove street, last evening, under the auspices of the teachers of the primary department of Trinity church Sunday-school, was a great success, socially and financially. An interesting programme was given, and the people were most hospitably entertained. Trinity's social events are always delightful.

HYMENEAL.

Grant—Paff.

A very pretty home wedding took place at Scotch Plains last Wednesday evening, when Miss Lizzie A. Paff, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. M. Paff, sr., was united in marriage to Charles E. Grant of New York city.

The Rev. J. H. Parks, D. D., pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, officiated.

The house was beautifully decorated with chrysenthemums and ferns. In the parlor, where the ceremony took place, white chrysanthemums were lavishly used, while the long dining room where supper was served was turned into a bower of golden blossoms by the generous use of the yellow ones. Pale pink blossoms decked the room in which the gifts were displayed, and the halls fairly bloomed with a profusion of all the different tints of these autumnal favorites.

The bride looked very pretty in a lovely gown of golden brown crepon and velvet, fastened at the throat with a diamond pin, the gift of the bridegroom. She carried an immense bouquet of white roses and maiden-hair ferns. The maid of honor, Miss Rena L. B. Hollander, of Brooklyn, looked charming in a dainty costume of heliotrope and white Chinese silk. Wm. Hazell of Scotch Plains was best man.

The wedding gifts were numerous and beautiful, and included many handsome pieces of silver, bric-a-brac, china and linen.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Radford, sr., Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Radford, jr. and family, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Pope, Mrs. J. Darby and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. Vanderhoff and family, Mrs. E. Hand, L. Brown, of Plainfield, N. J.; Mrs. M. Duryea and daughter, Miss S. Bridges, Mrs. D. Smith and son, Mrs. T. A. Gere, Mrs. R. S. Welcome and Miss Maud de Lorraine, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mrs. Mary Hornung, of New York city; Mrs. Jas. Harold and daughters and Mrs. F. Ransom and daughters, of Dunellen, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. Morton C. Noble, of Newark; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Westervelt, of Nanuet, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Mead and daughters, of Fanwood, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. F. Smith, of Netherwood, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. Jas. A. Baker and daughters, Miss Susie Parse, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. M. Paff, jr., and family, Mrs. J. H. Parks, and Wm. Noble of Scotch Plains, N. J.

Preparing for Thanksgiving.

A colored man named Johnson, of Cottage row, was skulking homeward with 6 freshly-killed pullets and a big turkey gobbler, at 3 this morning. Officer Kiely could n't get a straight story from him, and locked him up, and the police are now seeking the owner of the fowls.

A Plainfielder's Wedding.

The Dunellen Weekly Call says: "The wedding of Miss Eliza VanNess to Richard Wilson, of Plainfield, on Saturday evening, was another event that brought out the boys for a serenade. The nuptial knot was tied by the Rev. J. A. Cubberly and after the usual congratulations the happy couple entertained all their friends to a bountiful collation which lasted until a late hour.

I was so much troubled with catarrh it seriously affected my voice. One bottle of Ely's Cream Balm did the work. My voice is fully restored.—B. F. Liepaner, A. M., pastor of the Olivet Baptist church, Philadelphia, Pa.

"A God-send is Ely's Cream Balm. I had catarrh for three years. Two or three times a week my nose would bleed. I thought the sores would never heal. Your Balm has cured me."—Mrs. M. A. Jackson, Portsmouth, N. H.

NEWSPAPER WOMEN.

A History of Their Long Struggle for Recognition.

The Woman's National Press Association of Washington—Something About the Ladies Who Organized It—Mrs. Briggs' Enterprise.

[Special Washington Letter.]

An infant was born here in 1881, but it was so obscure that very little attention was paid to it, save a passing notice in one of our daily papers. That infant has grown quite rapidly, and is already taking its rank among the men of the world, and commanding recognition. Its parents were Necessity and Ambition. It was christened the "Ladies' Press club," but its name has since been changed, (as all ladies' names are or should be changed), and is now known as the "Woman's National Press association."

In former days all ladies who aspired to journalistic honors, with bread and butter on the side, were obliged to work singly against the terrible odds of prejudice and adverse criticisms concerning their real aims and ends. Young men who are compelled to struggle with the world for existence and recognition, without paternal aid, soon find themselves surrounded not by helpful beings of their own race and sex, but rather by a mob of wolves, tigers, sharks, boa constrictors, lizards and hyenas. They learn that this life is indeed a terrific struggle of selfishness and that the survival of the fittest results. But if young men find themselves in a maelstrom which engulfs their fellow men by the tens of thousands, how must the young lady feel who clings helplessly to the gunwales of rickety sympathy in that surging, seething mass of humanity? Thus it was previous to the year 1881. Young ladies who dared to lift their heads in the sea of journalism immediately became the targets for the envenomed shafts of small men. Their abilities were questioned, their intentions suspected, their reputations bandied from sneering lip to careless tongue, and on every hand they were met with discouragements, until the waves of disappointment and all the billows of despair rolled over them.

A few sturdy women of ages with knighthood dating from the birth of their association in 1881, and those princely and queenly women shall be the root of the family trees of which future generations in the literary cosmos will be very proud. It is the ambition of some of the present leaders to ultimately form a league or society which will embrace all the newspaper women of the United States, binding them to the promotion of the mutual interests of women journalists by vows, oaths and passwords.

While indorsing this association in every particular up to date, I, to-day, informed one of the most enthusiastic workers that, while probably all newspaper women would like to be properly embraced, they would scarcely indorse the proposition of a secret society. If the ladies will push themselves up to the front rank as far as men have gone they will be doing well. They are as yet too young to go farther.

Semi-monthly meetings of the national association are held, and they are very enjoyable and usually instructive in a very marked degree. These ladies do not get together to wrangle about business or politics. They attend to the business of their association in an orderly manner; and, that being done, they listen to the reading of papers on some topic previously announced. After these readings there are full and free discussions and interchanges of views. At these meetings many a learned male mathematician might gain new light concerning the asymptotes of the hyperbola, and many a pulpit orator or learned theologian might enlarge his ideas of the hypostatic and supernatural moments of the Theanthropos. The ladies are cultured, refined, and many of them of broad scholarship and extensive travel. Their subjects of discussion include disputed points of ancient history, views of military maneuvers in the decisive battles of the world, astronomical problems and other questions requiring extensive reading and philosophical training. It is a treat for a poor lone man to sometimes be permitted to sit there quietly and realize what a small factor he is in the world of women, when they are running affairs themselves.

It is one of the unwritten laws of the association that none of its members shall write contributions for newspapers except for pay. This should not only be an unwritten law, but it should be one of the most potent clauses of constitution. I know certain members of the association who write for nothing, while others offer to write for starvation wages. These women are the worst enemies of the association. They should be left "outside the breastworks," and that right speedily, too. Any woman who cheapens the price of labor is a deadly enemy of other ladies who are obliged to depend upon their pens or pencils for daily bread.

There was lady here from eleven to fifteen years ago who was a powerful friend of the lady press workers. She was the wife of President Hayes, and one of the noblest women who ever came to Washington to occupy high social position. She was lovely in her whole life, always of a sweet disposition, always will have a separate organization. At present all lady journalists, correspondents, reporters, magazine contributors, poets, book-writers and story-writers are eligible to membership."

This Washington association is the parent stem of a national organization, and women's press associations in various cities are becoming members auxiliary by subscribing to the constitution and paying ten per cent. per capita annually into the treasury. This association is the very first women's press club that ever was born since the world of civilization began to write history. Hence they constitute an aristocracy, and one of these days there will be a nobility. Among newspaper women fiber than the rest, kept their heads above water and compelled respect; while others went down to the bottom of the sea, and their bodies were often found sunken in the slough of despond. This, you will understand, was previous to the birth of the infant press club.

This organization resulted from the suggestions of the lady correspondents who had survived in the struggle of the preceding decade. The organization was made, not for the benefits which might accrue to those ladies who had succeeded in their fight for existence, but in order to give aid and comfort to the young ladies who were then coming upon the stage of active newspaper life and engaging in the same single handed battle which their elder sisters had fought before them. Mary Clemmer Hudson, "Olivia" Briggs, Mrs. M. D. Lincoln, Rose P. Breandle, ("Pips"), and others of like standing got together, not for themselves, but for the welfare of the coming generation of lady workers, and organized the press club, which, as stated above, has grown into the Woman's National Press association. The first president of the club was Mrs. Briggs; and her first action was to secure recognition in the gallery for women workers. A long seat was set apart for the ladies, and to each of them was given a key to its little gate, while upon the front rail overlooking the speaker's desk in the house and the vice president's place in the senate, a smooth, desk-like board was arranged for the ladies to do their writing. These ladies' galleries adjoin the regular press galleries occupied by the gentlemen and are separated from them by a wire screen.

The state of Iowa is entitled to credit for this organization which has grown and is growing so rapidly. Mrs. Briggs is an Iowa lady, and it was she, more than any other one, except Mrs. Nettie Sanford, who infused life and strength into the original organization; and Mrs. Sanford is an Iowa woman now engaged in editorial work upon one of the leading dailies of the Hawkeye state. But aside from this distinction honor and credit can be claimed by no state for the growth of this association. Every state in the union, even far-off California, has furnished a portion of the membership. The association employs the use of a handsome apartment at Willard's hotel, for which the proprietor charges them no rent. Some of the more independent ladies insist upon paying a regular rental for their room, but the proprietor says that he gave them the room when they started in poor and humble circumstances, and now that they have become prosperous he doesn't want them to go to putting on any airs. They are his guests, and he is proud of them.

"The prime object of our association," says Mrs. Briggs, "is to advance women in all literary work, and to secure for them the power of organized effort. We do not confine our membership to the news workers only. I anticipate the time, however, when the news-gathering women will be strong enough to stand alone in this city and then they may so near and to help the worthy, and continually seeking and devising ways and means of helping struggling women. One of the ladies informs me that for the past two or three years they have entertained and fostered the project of erecting in Washington a memorial temple to Mrs. Hayes; and to make it a home for newspaper women, particularly for the purpose of aiding young ladies who come here alone to enter upon the struggle of life, as their sturdy and successful sisters have done before them. This idea of a memorial temple to Mrs. Hayes is a very good one; and, it will not be very many years until some woman of wealth and character will donate a sum sufficient to either commence or comple te the building. Long live the Woman's National Press association!

FICHUS AND JABOTS.

Dainty and Elegant Neckwear for Fastidious Women.

Trifles That Are Quite Easily Made at Home and Require Very Little Material—A Plastron of More Than Ordinary Neatness.

If you have a limited dress allowance, you find it difficult to keep well supplied with dainty ornaments in lace, silk, muslin and chiffon, the chief beauty of which lies in their freshness. These neck furnishings are expensive and perishable. Because of their expense one is tempted sometimes to wear them when their pristine glory has departed and they are beginning to look a trifle soiled. Do not allow yourself to fall into that trick. Better a fresh linen collar than a soiled bit of gauze or chiffon about your throat. Fortunately, says Once a Week, most of these trifles are quite easily made at home and require very little material; all, then, that is wanted are skillful fingers and ideas. The main use of these dainty accessories is to smarten half-worn gowns so that the eye will dwell on the pretty cravat or jabot rather than on the shabby and faded frock. All sorts of odds and ends of material may be utilized these days for this purpose, chiffon, gauze, crape, silk, muslin, soft silk and lace come in play, and the materials employed may be either plain or figured. Laces used for edging are as a rule light and delicate, but guipure lace may be used with good effect.

JABOT.

The Marie Antoinette fichus are in vogue once more, and no other neck ornament is so becoming to the woman with a soft, full throat. They may be made of silk mull with a plain hem stitched edge; crape, tucked and edged with filmy lace, or of chiffon finished with deep frills. The jabot shown in the illustration is a favorite style. It is made of a yard and a half of embroidered crepon frilling about five inches wide. The two headings are put together and the material is gathered up through the center, the lower part being shaped to a point with two short mitered ends falling below it. A very narrow plaiting of plain crepon in a lighter color is sewn on under the scallop-edge of the flouncing, and the point, which is at the waist, is drawn in with a ribbon bow. This is pretty in dark green, blue or black crepon, embroidered with straw-color with ribbon to match. The collarette shown is made of white or colored silk muslin tipped with little tufts of black ostrich feather; the ruche, which is very full, and for which three or four yards of the frilling are required, is mounted on a ribbon band, and is tied in front with strings of black velvet ribbon. A novel jabot may be made of black net studded with sequins in flame, green, purple and gold. The band is of black silk covered with the spangled net, and the jabot is arranged flounce fashion, being much shorter on the shoulders than across the bust. This is particularly effective on a black gown.

A smart finish to a frock is a plastron of almost any kind of ribbon on a white or black Brussels net foundation, cut like a yoke with a point reaching to the waist. On this the graduated lengths of ribbon are tacked, each length being plaited a little at the top and folded to form a point at the end; the center band of ribbon is pinned down to the waist and ornamented with loops and ends of ribbon. The collar consists of two bands of ribbon, either in a narrower width, or folded if too wide, leaving a band of net between, and fastened at the back of the neck with a bow. Nine yards of ribbon are required for this plastron.

USEFUL BASKET.

To restore black cashmere, wash it in hot suds with a little borax in the water; rins in very strong bluing water, and iron while damp.

The best mucilage is made from gum tragasanth and water. When well dissolved, add a few drops of oil of cloves and a tiny piece of alum.

A good cement for china is made this way: Mix with a strong solution of gum arabic and water enough plaster of paris to make a thick paste. Apply this with a camel's hair brush to the broken edges and unite.

Add to each quart of well-boiled starch half a teaspoonful of powdered borax and a tiny piece of lard, and dip the collars and cuffs in while the starch is quite hot. Use a polishing iron, and your collars and cuffs will look like new.

During the summer months it is a common thing to have more than one light dress stained by the grass. Such marks are easily removed with alcohol. Put a little of the liquid in a saucer and wet the stained part with it. Rub well, and the green will disappear.

A Revolution In Eating
has been brought about by the introduction of COTTOLENE, the new vegetable shortening. The discovery of this product, and the demonstration of its remarkable qualities, has attracted the widest interest. Hitherto the common shortening has been lard, or indifferent butter. Every one has probably suffered occasional discomfort from lard-cooked food; while it is well known that thousands are obliged to abstain entirely from everything of that kind. To such people, COTTOLENE is of peculiar value, widening as it does, the range of what may be eaten and enjoyed. COTTOLENE is a cooking marvel. It combines with the food—imparts to it a tempting color, a delicate flavor, and an appetizing crispness. No trace of greasiness remains to offend the taste, or disturb the digestion.
COTTOLENE is worthy of the careful notice of all those who value good food, of itself or for its hygienic properties.

EXTRA SESSION TALK

Precedent Seems to be Against Calling One.

MR. HARRISON WRITING HIS MESSAGE

He Attributes the Republican Defeat Entirely to the Tariff—Investigating Alleged Frauds in Land Entries—Ex Senator Platt on the Late Unpleasantness—Ohio Still in Doubt.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12. — Precedent seems to be against the likelihood of an extra session of the next Congress immediately after March 4.

When President Arthur became President in 1881 it was held that he must and would call Congress together at once to take action upon certain issues which were impending, and which were agitating the country, principally the proposed revision of the tariff. The same had been said when Gen. Garfield became President.

There were international questions, it was held, which demanded immediate action. Neither Garfield nor Arthur had the least idea of calling an extra session. When Mr. Cleveland became President in 1885 the Democratic and Independent press throughout the country demanded and anticipated an extra session for the revision of the tariff. The circumstances were the same as at present. Mr. Cleveland in private conversations laughed at the suggestion of an extra session of Congress.

Every one will recall how when General Harrison became President it was demanded that he call Congress together for tariff revision. Everybody seemed to expect an extra session till the President said he would not even consider the subject of an extra session. He said the country would fare very well till Congress met in regular session. Besides, he had observed during his political life that extra sessions of Congress and State Legislatures were always followed by defeats of the party in power.

It is now pointed out by prominent Democrats in Washington that besides being opposed to extra sessions of Congress in times like these, President Cleveland will have too much to do making changes in offices.

It is learned that some of the leading tariff reformers are favoring an average reduction of about 20 per cent. from the McKinley schedule. They expect a bill to be passed by the new Congress and made operative two years afterward.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 12.—Ex-Secretary of State Thomas F. Bayard was asked this morning whether he had urged the calling of a special session of Congress to revise the tariff, as was stated in a Washington despatch. He replied:

"While I agree that McKinleyism cannot too soon be thoroughly reformed and ended, yet, as a matter of fact, I never even heard of a special session of Congress to be called for that purpose."

FRAUDS IN LAND ENTRIES.

Proceedings Ordered Against Several Government Surveyors.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Cases of alleged frauds in land entries which were investigated during the administration of Land Commissioner Sparks, and the discovery of which caused a suspension of surveying work over public lands in California, New Mexico, Wyoming, Washington, Idaho, Oregon and Arizona, at last are to be brought to trial in the courts.

Proceedings have been ordered in the courts of San Francisco against J. H. Hall for perjury in regard to the survey of public lands. This case is to be followed up by the trial of J. R. Glover, J. A. Benson and G. H. Perrus, expert surveyors, who, it is charged, in 1890, formed a syndicate in San Francisco for the survey of lands and fraudulently tried to control all special deposit contracts on the Pacific slope.

Certain banks, it is alleged, supplied the money requisite for deposits, the agents of the syndicate perfecting the award of contracts at the several offices of the Surveyor General and the contracting deputy executing a power of attorney to the banks for any and all moneys payable under each contract.

The principal location for operation was in Central and Southern California, but extended into other States and Territories.

Several million dollars were secured by these schemes.

WRITING HIS MESSAGE.

Mr. Harrison Attributes the Defeat Entirely to the Tariff.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—President Harrison is now engaged in writing his annual message to Congress. It is understood that it will be brief, and since there is no legislation to be expected at the next session of Congress (certainly no Republican legislation) the message will be devoted chiefly to a review of the work of the Administration and the recommendation that some steps be taken in a non-partisan way to secure fair elections.

It is uncertain what he will say on the subject of the tariff, beyond reasserting that the country has been prosperous under the Republican tariff law. Mr. Harrison attributes his defeat entirely to the tariff, and sees in the result a popular verdict against the McKinley bill, but he does not yield his judgment to this verdict. He thinks it was rendered before the evidence was all in, and that time will vindicate the Republican policy.

He thinks that more experience will give the public more wisdom on this question, especially since the Democrats are liable to be in a position to give the country a trial of their policy.

Mr. Cleveland a Lively Corpse.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—A despatch was received in this city last evening from Chicago saying that there was a rumor in that city to the effect that Grover Cleveland had dropped dead at his residence, No. 12 West 51st street. When a reporter reached the house and stated his errand, Mr. Cleveland laughed and said he thought he was a pretty lively corpse.

The Vote in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 12.—Later returns give Harrison 106,284; Cleveland 107,711; Weaver 20,589. This includes 1,736 out of a total of 2,199 precincts in the State. The same returns indicate the election of 60 Democrats, 57 Republicans, 2 non-partisans, and 1 Populist in the Legislature.

PLATT ON THE ELECTION.

The Ex-Senator Gives His Views of the Republican Defeat.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12. — Ex-Senator Thomas C. Platt, in an interview last night regarding the outcome of the election, said:

"In looking over the defeat it has been suggested to my mind that President Harrison was beaten in this State by about the same majority which overwhelmed J. Sloat Fassett, the Republican candidate for Governor, last fall. All newspaper readers will recall that Mr. Fassett made his campaign issue the fight against Tammany.

"In this he was supported by some of the Republican leaders in the State. Others objected to that line of policy, and Governor Hill, who took the stump against my young friend Fassett, made every attempt to divert the issue into national channels.

"It is sad to relate that some of my old Republican friends believed that Mr. Fassett should have accepted the gage of battle thrown down by Gov. Hill. Mr. Fassett and his friends, though, stuck to the one issue.

"In that campaign the Republican vote in New York city was larger than it has been in the Presidential fight. It was a ringing issue, and the Republicans were cheered on by it.

"This year the McKinley law was the issue, and what has been the result? The Republican vote in New York and Kings, and in all the counties except those in the southern tier, fell down miserably. I do not wish to go further in this matter just at this time, except to add that, in my opinion, had the old fight against Tammany been continued, we would have had better results in the State. Yet, speaking of the McKinley law, I venture the prediction that if the Democratic party attempts to tinker the tariff, there will be another political revolution four years from now."

Mr. Platt went over the counties of the southern tier, which, he said, plainly showed that all Republicans in the southern tier were loyal no matter what the issue was. On the other hand, among the counties which show a loss, is Herkimer, ex-Senator Miller's home, which has a loss of 402. In Kings, where Secretary Tracy has been active for four years, the Republican loss is 16,445. Strange to say, the loss in New York city Mr. Platt attributed to Dr. Depew.

Mr. Platt said that he felt very sorry indeed for the party, and, of course, he was chagrined over the defeat and the retirement of President Harrison to private life.

OHIO VERY CLOSE.

Both Sides Say That Only Official Figures Can Determine the Result.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 12.—The "Commercial Gazette" (Rep.) says: "Ohio remains this morning in the list of doubtful States, though it must be confessed that so far as the Presidential electors are concerned she has a decided democratic leaning. Nothing less than the official vote can determine the result."

The "Enquirer" (Dem.) says: "While the Democratic managers believe that the State has cast her vote for Cleveland and Stevenson they still advise all to await the official count.

"The figures are very close, and the plurality will be but a few hundred either way. Both sides are earnestly watching, and both show a praiseworthy determination to ascertain the will of the people, as expressed Tuesday, and to announce it at the earliest possible moment. There must be a square deal."

The "Post" (Ind.) says: "Both parties claim the State, but a revision of the figures favors the Democrats more than the Republicans on the State ticket.

"The official returns may possibly result in a division of the electoral vote."

The Congressional delegation stands as announced—11 Democrats and 10 Republicans.

Says Sulzer Will be Speaker.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Nov. 12. — Speaker Robert P. Bush of the last Assembly was asked his opinion as to who would preside in the Assembly this winter. Dr. Bush said Assemblyman Sulzer would probably be elected Speaker. Either Gov. Flower, Lieut.-Gov. Sheehan or Bourke Cockran, he said, can be elected to the United States Senate. Charles Bush, if elected to the Assembly, would have undoubtedly been chosen speaker, but, "like this Bush, he was defeated."

McNaughton Proposed for Senator.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 12.—Friends of Hon. Donald McNaughton in this city are proposing him for United States Senator in place of Frank Hiscock. His great popularity with the people and strong individual as well as executive capacity are considered to have been instrumental in a large measure in reducing the large Republican vote usually polled in this county.

Montreal Business Men Elated.

MONTREAL, Nov. 12.—The members of the Stock Exchange and business men generally are elated over the result of the Presidential election in the States. They say that they believe it will materially benefit both the United States and Canada in all lines of trade, as they consider a reform of the tariff necessary to both countries.

Morris' Majority 1,072.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 12.—All except six of the 177 towns in this State have forwarded their returns to the Secretary of State. The total vote for Governor is 164,662, of which Morris, Dem., received 82,867, or a majority of 1,072 over all.

The Borden Murder Case.

BOSTON, Nov. 12.—It is learned that if the grand jury of Bristol county finds an indictment of murder against Lizzie A Borden, the trial will take place in New Bedford, probably in January.

SUNDAY AND THE FAIR.

Nearly All the Directors Vote to Keep It Open.

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—With only four dissenting votes, the directors of the World's Fair have gone on record as favoring the opening of the Exposition on Sundays.

The resolutions adopted state that the Sunday Exposition should be a still show, the fair to be open on the same conditions that art galleries are thrown open on Sunday. Among other things, the resolutions declare:

"It is our judgment that the Exposition should be open on Sunday under such rules and regulations as will prohibit the use of machinery, unnecessary manual labor, and all merchandizing, and at the same time give opportunity for the study of the highest standard of artistic and mechanical science; that the art gallery, the horticultural building, and all other buildings in which exhibits of mechanical art are exhibited should be thrown open to the public on each and every day during the time of the Exposition; also that each employe should be given one day of each week for rest, study or recreation.

"We believe that the study on Sunday of such exhibits of science and art and of the skill and genius of the artisan, will not only be of inestimable educational advantage, but the thoughts of the visitors will be lifted above these creative agencies, to the great creator of all things useful and beautiful."

The resolutions favor the holding of religious services on the grounds each Sunday afternoon.

It is probable that a statement of the Board's action, together with the resolutions adopted, will be sent to each member of Congress. Whether any further attempt will be made to influence the members to amend the law has not been decided, but it is likely that long petitions will be sent to Washington soon after the session of Congress begins.

DRIVEN FROM PARA.

A New York Schooner Refused Entrance to Brazil on Account of Cholera Scare.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The schooner Anna R. Bishop, Captain Rulson, which left New York September 15 lumber laden, and bound to Para, Brazil, has returned to this port.

Captain Rulson says he arrived at Para Oct. 12, and was signalled not to enter the harbor.

He anchored near Atelia Lighthouse and waited five days. No attention was paid to his signals.

He then concluded to sail up the river, but was met by a Brazilian man-of-war, and ordered to return to New York.

No opportunity was given to speak to any person, nor was he allowed to approach any nearer than to be able to distinguish signals.

No boat or vessel was permitted to go to the leeward of the vessel; because she came from New York, where cholera was supposed to exist.

The captain proceeded with his vessel to this port. He had on board a clean bill of health from the Brazilian Consul at New York, which he was unable to present.

COLUMBUS CAR STRIKE SETTLED

The Men to Return to Work Pending Arbitration.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 12.—The strike of the street railway employes has been settled amicably.

After several propositions both by the company and employes, all of which were rejected, it was agreed by both parties that Mayor Karb should be sole arbitrator of the trouble, and pending the investigation, the men were to return to work.

The cars are running as usual this morning.

AFRAID OF DYNAMITE.

Carmaux Mining Co.'s President Will Remain Away from His Office.

PARIS, Nov. 12.—The owner of the building in which the Carmaux Mining Company has its office is unable to dispossess the company because it holds a lease, but he has induced Baron Reille, president of the company, to stay away from the offices until the alarm of the other tenants had subsided.

M. Lagasse, who was counsel for Ravachol, says that Ravachol predicted that there would be a renewal of the dynamite outrages as soon as winter arrived, as it was too dangerous to manufacture bombs in summer.

It is not believed that Rabe, the anarchist, had any direct connection with the dynamite outrage of Tuesday.

It is evident, however, that he is a dangerous character, as a search of his lodgings disclosed drawings of infernal machines, written formulæ of explosive compounds, packages of chemicals, Anarchistic pamphlets, etc.

Dahomeyan Leaders Shot.

PARIS, Nov. 12.—A despatch from Porto Novo says that the Belgian Engels and the Germans, Puech, Wecked and Schulz, all of whom have been leaders of the Dahomeyans, have been captured, court martialed and shot. The Portuguese mulattoes, known to have been most influential in causing trouble between France and Dahomey, have escaped.

American Bicyclists in Asia.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—A despatch from Shanghai, China, announces that the two American college students who set out some months ago to cross Asia on bicycles, have arrived safely. They traveled by the way of Tashkand, Culdja, Urumtsi, Bami, Tuhchau, Lanchow, Sengen and Pactiagfa. They were treated well everywhere.

YALE'S GLORY AT STAKE

Her Great Contest With Pennsylvania To-day.

THE NEW HAVEN MEN CONFIDENT.

They Think Their Team Will Have an Easy Time With the Conquerors of Princeton's Eleven—Fears That the Yale Men Are Overtrained.

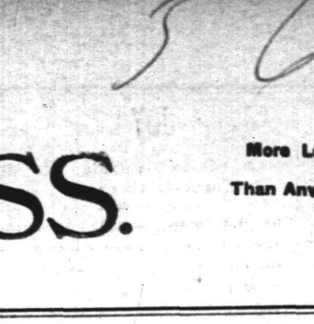
NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The foot ball game to be decided at Manhattan Field this afternoon is fraught with the greatest interest, and thousands await the result with impatience. Yale and University of Pennsylvania are the opposing elevens and the battle they put up will be second only to the big Thanksgiving day contest.

Yale's honor and Yale's glory are at stake. She must not even allow the Quaker lads to score, and if intelligent, strong, courageous foot ball can prevent them they will not.

Ordinarily the meeting of these teams would not attract more than passing notice. Pennsylvania's handsome victory over Princeton recently has changed the aspect of affairs, however, and gives the meeting of to-day an interest and an importance which it could not not otherwise have possessed.

Should Pennsylvania even score to-day, this triumph, with her defeat of Princeton, would give her eleven a foremost position among the leading football teams of the country.

"Pennsylvania will not get within Yale's 25-yard line." Such was the statement made by an enthusiastic Yale man this morning, in speaking of the game.



HUSTLERS FROM THE YALE TEAM.

On the face, the statement appears to savor of windiness. It seems premature to make any such prediction as that, and only the game itself can tell the story. At any rate, Yale men are sitting back in their chairs, looking complacent, and laugh as they read the papers and learn what Pennsylvania is going to do with the poor Yale team.

The members of the Yale eleven are saying nothing, but they are doing some pretty strong thinking. Capt. McCormick has been working his men as football men have never worked before. The coaches have been driving scientific football into each man.

Walter Camp has the supervision of the coaches and team, and this year he is looked upon more than ever as an oracle on football matters.

Some graduates are afraid that the team is overtrained. It cannot be questioned that the men have been working hard.

RIDICULED IN NEW YORK.

Story of a Contemplated Invasion of Chili Pooh-poohed.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—New York business houses interested in Chili, Peru and the Argentine Republic denounce the story that only a casus belli is wanted to array Peru and the Argentine Republic on one side and Chili on the other, in war, as without foundation.

Charles R. Flint said: "Our advices from those countries do not mention anything touching on the subject, so it is safe to say there is no truth in the report."

To Publish Parnell's Correspondence.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—The executors of the late Charles Stewart Parnell have decided to publish a selection of his private political documents and correspondence. Mr. Parnell kept every communication received by him that was of the least importance, often jotting down his opinion of the subject matter of the letter, even when he did not reply to them. No biography will accompany the publication, which will be issued before Parliament reassembles.

Big Pork Packing Combine.

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—It is announced that two of the largest packing companies in Chicago will soon be merged into one. These are the International Packing and Provision company and the Chicago Packing and Provision company. The new company will be one of the greatest organizations in the country, controlling over $4,000,000 each of working capital, in addition to the plants represented by the stocks and bonds.

A Minister to Turn Editor.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 12.—Rev. Forrest F. Emerson, for ten years pastor of the United Congregational Church in this city, whose letter of resignation was read to his congregation on Sunday last, will remove to Missouri where he will assume editorial charge of a daily newspaper, and also engage in literary work, contemplating the immediate publication of a volume of essays.

Suffocated in a Trench.

LYNN, Mass., Nov. 12.—Edwin T. Butman, 63 years old, was buried alive in a drain trench he was excavating alone in his yard yesterday, and was taken out dead after several hours' entombment. The trench was 12 feet deep and very narrow. He was last seen at work about 2 o'clock. His prolonged absence was noticed, and in searching for him the trench was found caved in.

CAMDEN, Me., Nov. 12.—As a result of Thursday's fire there is but one store, a grocery store, left in the town. All drug stores, boot and shoe stores, millinery and drygoods stores, jewelry shops and furniture stores, the postoffice and telegraph office were wiped out.

Light Muffins.
By Elisa R. Perker, Bedford, Ky.
Sift one quart of flour, and two teaspoons of Cleveland's Baking Powder. Add two tablespoons of melted butter, a tea cup of sweet milk, a teaspoon of salt, and the beaten whites of six eggs. Bake in well greased muffin moulds.

END OF THE BIG STRIKE.

Business Resumed in New Orleans—Workmen Incensed at the Leaders.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 12.—Business has been fully resumed in all branches. The committee of five, representing the laborers, did not go back to the headquarters yesterday when the strike was settled to report the matter to the laborers, who were left to shift for themselves, and only learned the result of the strike through rumor and the press.

The indignation of the laboring men over the action of their leaders, who deceived and deluded them, is intense.

The strike has almost ruined the labor unions. The car drivers hustled back to their case, but they were not taken back under the old terms, as they had broken the contract and were told that the company reserved the right to employ whomsoever they chose. The only men taken back where those who remained passive, and who were forced out, all the leaders being refused employment.

The Standard Oil company declined to take back their old men and many of the merchants did likewise, as most of them had employed other laborers. The laborers who went out on strike on Oct. 29 were the teamsters, loaders, warehouse men and packers, including 1,500 men.

The other 46 labor organizations struck through sympathy. Having no grievances there was nothing to arbitrate.

Dr. Harris Also a Suicide.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Dr. Benvenuto Harris, a witness at the inquest upon the body of Dr. Woodburn Heron, paramour of the suicide Ruby Russell, poisoned himself with morphine at a hotel in Croydon. He left a letter addressed to the coroner in which he requested that his wife's letters and a lock of her hair be buried with him.

New Car Building Plant.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 12.—A new car building works backed by capitalists in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Pittsburg and Buffalo has been formed for the purpose of starting a plant in this city. It is stated that 35 acres of land have been bought for the plant. The capital will be over $500,000.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

—Henry Fulmer's school slate factory at Slatington, Pa., was destroyed by fire yesterday. Loss, $100,000.

—A syndicate is negotiating for the purchase of the street railroads in Herkimer, Ilion and Frankfort, N. Y.

—Superior and Duluth capitalists have bought from Proctor Knott's syndicate 550 acres of coal land in Kentucky.

—Corporal James Tanner of Brooklyn has been appointed Judge Advocate General of the G. A. R. by Commander-in-Chief Weissert.

—The Detroit, Mich., Board of Education rescinded the resolutions requiring anti-Catholic qualifications of applicants for positions as teachers in the public schools.

—The Boston Board of Fire Underwriters have issued a circular announcing an advance in the rate of 50 per cent. on all risks not insured to 80 per cent. of their value.

—An explosion of natural gas in an excavation in Chicago, Ill., demolished every window for a block in every direction. Two men were injured. The value of the glass destroyed is about $25,000.

—Near Junction Crossing, Idaho, on the Clearwater river, Zachrowski, a Hungarian, was murdered by a countryman known as "Peter the Hun," who poured molten solder into his ear while he slept.

—The house in St. Louis in which the late Gen. W. T. Sherman lived, and which was presented to him at the close of the war by a number of citizens, has been sold to F. A. Drew, a manufacturer, for $150,000.

—The steam whaler Orca has arrived in San Francisco from the Arctic. Fifth Mate Ward of the wrecked whaler Helen Mar, of the five survivors of that vessel was taken on board Oct. 19, six days after the wreck. He died from the effects of the exposure.

—There is a rumor, apparently well-founded, that the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad company intends reopening the Schuylkill canal next year for an extensive traffic in coal, when a large number of boats will be added to the fleet now using this waterway. The proposed move, it is learned, is for the purpose of relieving the main line of the road, which has been so crowded for some time as to result in frequent obstructions of the tracks.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

Forecast Till 8 P. M. Saturday: For New Jersey, Fair Till Monday, Westerly Winds.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Secure your seats for Ragan, right away.

—Reserved seats for "The Foresters", now on sale.

—The Courier sorrowfully hauled in its portrait of Benjamin "F." Harrison yesterday.

—This is the last night of the Odd Ladies' fair, and the contest for the rings and pins will take place.

—There will be opportunity for parents who wish to present their children for baptism, at Dr. Richards's church, to-morrow.

—The Central Railroad of New Jersey has accepted plans for new stations to be erected at White House, North Branch, and Bound Brook.

—The fair for the benefit of the church debt of the German Reformed church will be held next week in Mr. Thorn's block, Somerset street. It will begin Thursday evening, and be continued till Saturday evening. A good many fine and useful things will be found, and a good success may be expected.

—John P. Reed, secretary, announces that a special meeting of the Prohibition League of Plainfield will be held in their rooms, 2 East Front street, next Tuesday evening, at 8 sharp. All citizens interested in the cause of temperance are earnestly requested to be present, as business of importance will be transacted.

—"The Midnight Alarm" is a realistic comedy-drama that has for its irresistible attraction a fire scene, before which Harry Lach and his "Still Alarm" may yet be compelled to strike their colors. As produced at Music Hall last season it emphasized the fact that the popular house is capable of holding its own with the best whenever an unusual scenic display is necessary. It will be repeated next Tuesday evening.

LOOK OUT, BAD BOYS.

Break Any More Street Lamps, and to Jail You'll Go.

Dr. Justus H. Cooley last night fully explained to the common council that the electric company could not be blamed for street lights being out in October, as the cause was breakage of lamps by boys. At least 100 lamps had been shattered, and some had to be replaced six times. He demanded protection from the borough, and the marshals were instructed to watch out for and arrest all offenders. They will be severely dealt with if caught.

The October lighting bill of $368.50 was paid without the threatened reduction.

BELLE ARCHER AS "MARIAN",

And a Company of Fifty, in Tennyson's Play With Sullivan's Music.

A complete and elaborate production of Lord Tennyson's beautiful play, "The Foresters", with Sir Arthur Sullivan's delicious music, will be given next Monday evening at Music Hall. It is doubtful if anything of its kind will create such an interest as this representation. The organization comes directly from Daly's Theatre, New York, and will be complete in every detail that marked its great success at this theatre. The electric scenic effects and costumes are the same as used in its original production. The company consists of nearly fifty people headed by Miss Belle Archer as "Maid Marian".

TOOK POISON BY MISTAKE.

Mrs Hedden Drank Opium Liniment for Cough Medicine.

Mrs. Albert Hedden, wife of the liveryman, made nearly a fatal mistake Thursday in taking medicine. She drank a quantity of what she supposed was cough medicine, but found that it was liniment. The family immediately had druggist Moy give them an analysis, and found that a principal ingredient was opium. Drs. Endicott and Tomlinson were both required in attendance, and after hard work got the patient out of danger.

"Wronging Myself and Family if I Fail to Attend."

It is safe to say that no lecturer in many years has carried his audience more completely both by the story from his lips and the exceeding beauty of illustration than H. H. Ragan who will begin his series of four lectures at Music Hall, next Wednesday evening. In person, Mr. Ragan is decidedly pleasing, and his voice is rich and sweet. He has directness and power, and at all times is personally subservient to the story he tells and the impressions that the beautiful illustration produce. In point of description he is powerful and in the strange and beautiful stories that he tells he had an audience waiting upon every word from his lips. Under his lecture, people who at first were coldly critical, became warm friends of the speaker, and as the evening's entertainment closes, no word is to be heard except:

"It is beautiful."

"The views were the finest I ever saw."

"I was charmed with it all."

"I shall consider that I am wronging myself and my family and friends, if I fail to attend each one of the course."

JOY!

THAT FREIGHT-HOUSE TO BE MOVED AT LAST.

The Old Boice Lumber Yard the New Site Contemplated — Railway Officials Taking Action—Success of THE PRESS'S Long Fight.

Officials of the Jersey Central Railroad company came by "Star" engine to Plainfield this afternoon for the purpose of investigating the freight-house matter.

The officials include Mr. Maxwell and Mr. Olhausen.

THE PRESS can now assure the people that the great public improvement for which so long it has clamored is to come at last.

The details are not yet completed, but the plan under consideration is to remove the freight-house to the old Boice lumber yard, and open up a fine railway-station approach from Sycamore avenue, which the city is to widen, with an ornamental park and circular driveways.

The officials are in conference with Boice, Runyon & Co., perfecting the plans.

Good things never come singly. The removal of the freight-house and development of its present site into a fine station approach is as much cause for jubilation as is the election of Grover Cleveland and the triumph of Tariff Reform.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

John Kane, in his eighth year, died at 64 West Third street, yesterday. Funeral services will be held to-morrow at 2 p. m.

Miss Alice Spangenberg will give a missionary talk at the Christian Endeavor service at Warren Mission next Tuesday evening.

Miss Blanche Fellows is now taking the place of Mrs. Knight as soprano in the First Presbyterian church, and her sweet voice is delighting large congregations.

W. E. MacClymont will give a piano recital at the Westfield Athletic club-house, the evening of Dec. 8. He will be assisted by Milton H. Gruet, violinist, and Ray W. Smith, tenor.

The Rev. George Stevens, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Berwick, Pa., will preach in the Trinity Reformed church, to-morrow morning. In the evening the pastor will preach a special sermon to young men.

Augustus M. Laing, for many years an employe of the Government Printing office at Washington, and formerly a resident of Plainfield, but now of Rahway, was so loyal as to come home on election day and cast his vote for his choice.

James O'Neill, formerly of Plainfield, died at Portsmouth, Va., a day or two ago, and the body will be brought here by his brother Richard for burial Monday in St. Mary's cemetery, in the family plot with his father, mother and three sisters. A sister Maria, Mrs. McCarthy, lives on South Second street.

FOOLISH MAN.

He Tried the Old Trick of Leaping from a Moving Train.

Andrew Freymuth, fireman at Hotel Albion, got asleep on the train coming home from New York last evening. He was awakened after passing the Plainfield station, and rushed out on the platform in a dazed condition and jumped. He was terribly bruised on an elbow and about the head, but is resting as comfortably as possible at Muhlenberg Hospital.

To Explain the Unitarian Doctrine.

The Rev. Hobart Clark, pastor of All Souls' church, will to-morrow evening begin a short series of Sunday evening lectures on the position held by the Unitarian church of to-day on certain subjects which all Christian churches rightly hold to be of vital importance. His aim will be to make these lectures expository and explanatory in form and spirit, rather than doctrinal or controversial. The position actually held to-day by the church of Channing, Parker, Emerson, Edward Everett Hale, and Robert Collyer, regarding the Bible, the personality of Jesus Christ, and the older church organization, is commonly misunderstood, and usually misinterpreted by those who have no practical acquaintance with its thought, its spirit, and its work. In the hope that some such in this community may feel a desire to know the facts, these lectures have been prepared, and are now announced.

Crazy, and from Plainfield.

The Bound Brook Chronicle tells of a rather small man, of middle age, who was observed on Tuesday walking up and down Main street, but owing to the excitement of the election little attention was paid to his actions.

Late Tuesday evening Chief Sebring, being satisfied that the man was out of his right mind, arrested him and lodged him in jail at Somerville. He gave his name as John Christopher Roguely, jr., of Plainfield, and said that he was walking under the dispensation of God. He will be examined by the county physician.

DEMOCRACY'S NIGHT.

TWO THOUSAND VICTORS MARCH THE STREETS.

And Their Way is Cheered and Illuminated by Thousands More Who Join in the Rejoicing.

It was a glorious jollification the victorious tariff reformers had in Plainfield last night. Fully 2,000 were in line, headed by marshals S. E. Flower, L. G. Timpson and N. Verier. The band came next, and between it and the cavalry was the post of honor where walked such old campaigners as James Martine, Louis Wadsworth, John Ross, James Slevin, Frank Bacon and Aaron Rand. There was a large body of horsemen followed by the rank and file of happy citizens.

The streets were never so full of spectators, and the display of decorations, illuminations, fire-works and red-lights along the line was unprecedented. No houses were more extensively illuminated than those of the Republican State organizer, Hon. John Uirich, and Charles B. Corwin. Messrs. Joseph W. Yates, James Clark, William K. McClure, the Park club, the Rev. J. P. Taylor, the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum, R. M. Stover, THE PRESS office, ex-postmaster W. L. Force at the City Hotel, C. P. Bull, Rowland Cox, the Seminary, E. C. Perkins, and scores of others made brilliant exhibits of lights and fireworks. Not the least bright was the U.S.Grant club room in Spencer's Hall.

Among other features of the procession was a stage load of little girls bearing the the banner", we 're for Baby Ruth;" and a boat for Salt River.

Kean's Majority in Fanwood.

The day before election word was sent to that stalwart Fanwood Republican, Col. C. K. Moore, that no matter what he might say or do Mr. Kean would receive a greater majority in Fanwood township than any other Republican on the ticket. C. I. Moore immediately went to work to disprove the statement and in fact wagered Mr. Kyte that he (Kyte) would receive a greater majority than Kean. The result officially showed Kean's majority to be the lowest of all the candidates in the field.

TALKS ABOUT AUTHORS.

WALTER BESANT, the English novelist, was intended by his parents for a career in the church, but he drifted naturally into literary work.

WILLIAM BLACK, the novelist, does his literary work in a room at the top of his house above the noise of the street and away from all unnecessary interruptions.

ROSE TERRY COOKE, with all her power and reputation as a writer, was not able, it is said, to make much more than mere pin money out of her literary labors.

DR. EDWARD EGGLESTON, the novelist, has just been appointed an associate professor at Cambridge college and will begin next fall a series of lectures upon colonial life and literature.

MRS. CRUGER'S pen-name of "Julien Gordon" finds a contrast in Mrs. Craige's "John Oliver Hobbes." Still there are no hobnails in the style of either of these gifted Americans.

SKETCHINGS FROM ART.

MISS KUHNO BEVERIDGE, of San Francisco, has modeled a bust of the actor Joseph Jefferson.

AN oil painting constantly hung in a dark place loses some of its vividness and therefore depreciates in value.

MARION CRAWFORD'S father, Thomas Crawford, the sculptor, was an American who went to Italy at the age of 22, and lived in Rome almost constantly until he died in London, aged 44.

JOHN TENNIEL, Punch's famous cartoonist, is 70 years of age, and though he has lost his left eye he can yet see fun enough in the world to make him very sad when he thinks about having to leave it.

Don't be hoodwinked by dealers who pretend that they can sell Dr. Pierce's genuine medicines at less than these long-established prices: Golden Medical Discovery (for Liver, Blood and Lung Diseases), $1.00 per bottle. Favorite Prescription (for woman's weaknesses and ailments), $1.00 per bottle. Pleasant Pellets (for the liver), 25 cents per vial. Compound Extract of Smart-Weed, 50 cents per bottle. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, 50 cents per bottle. The genuine medicines can only be sold by druggists, at the above prices.

There are more ways than one to make a profit, even at "cut prices." Unscrupulous dealers tamper with the bottles, or refill empty ones—and such mixtures can be sold cheaply. But every bottle of Dr. Pierce's genuine medicines is guaranteed. If it fails to give satisfaction in any case, you have your money back.

Can anything else, at any price, be really as cheap? You pay only for value received.

RAPID TRANSIT AT LAST.

NORTH PLAINFIELD'S COUNCIL DOES THE RIGHT THING.

Railway Extension Through Somerset Street Assured—The Road to be in Operation in the Spring—The Backwoods Obstructionists Take a Back Seat.

The North Plainfield borough council last night adopted on final passage the street-railway-extension ordinance, and work on the laying of the tracks through Somerset street will be begun probably this month.

The obstructionists who at the previous meeting had been so blatant against the enterprise, were conspicuously absent from last night's session, which was a great relief to the public-spirited people of the community. Instead, the lobby was crowded with citizens approving the project, and these heartily applauded everything said in favor of the ordinance.

The only opposition to the use of Somerset street was from councilmen Hegeman and Sebring. Mr. Hegeman praised the character of the road in Plainfield, and said that North Plainfield's was to be even better, the best in the country; but his constituents were opposed to the use of Somerset street, and he should vote against Somerset street as the route of travel. Somerset street he held to be the one issue; all the borough wanted the road somewhere, believing that it would do much good, but many interests would be jeopardized by the use of Somerset street. Mr. Sebring took the same stand, favoring the railway in general, but protesting against its going through Somerset street.

Councilmen Needham, Hummer, Neal and Connolly all spoke warmly in favor of the Somerset street project, putting forth every argument showing what THE PRESS has always claimed, that Somerset street is the only available thoroughfare for the railway. Frank Linke, Michael Powers, Charles Brock, and other Somerset street citizens and freeholders, pleaded urgently that Somerset street be the route. Mr. Powers proved himself a public-spirited citizen by offering to donate to the city property 2½ feet deep, along his entire frontage, towards making the street 5 feet wider. The obstructionists had been urging the claims of the farmers and stone carters. Mr. Brock argued that they were not the only ones to be considered, and showed that the side-bearing grooved rail to be used would not interfere with traffic anyway.

Councilmen Hegeman and Sebring voted against the section of the ordinance with the Somerset clause, but the vote on all the other sections was unanimous. On the final passage of the ordinance as a whole Messrs. Hegeman and Sebring again voted no.

Corporation counsel Reed, in response to a query from Mayor Saunders, said that all legal requirements had been fully complied with, and, indeed, that the council had exacted even more from the company than the company were in law bound to do. The list of regularly certified consents showed a total of 7,191 feet, out of the 11,970 on the street, which is considerably more than the requisite one-half; and there were many more informal consents that had not been legally acknowledged.

After the ordinance was adopted, it was ordered advertised and recorded.

The railway is to be completed and in operation within seven months at the latest, and the company hope to have it working by spring. The ordinance takes effect Nov. 25, when the work of construction will be at once begun.

The single fare of five cents shall be sufficient to transport any passenger over any section of the road in city and borough. All borough cars shall run direct from North avenue station to the foot of the mountain, but a system of transfers will be used so that one may change cars at the Somerset and Front street junction and for a single fare ride on to the Pondville terminus.

For two years no license fee shall be paid, but after that the annual fee shall be: Third year, $50; fourth year, $100; fifth year, $150; sixth, seventh and eighth years, $200; ninth year, $250. This is in addition to the taxes on the $40,000 plant. The cars will run under the following headway: 6 to 10 a. m., 15 minutes; 10 a. m. to 3 p. m., 30 minutes; 3 to 8 p. m., 15 minutes; after 8, 30 minutes. The use of salt to keep the rails free from snow and ice being injurious to horses' feet, no salt shall be used except on switches and curves. Children under 4 years shall ride free; from 4 to 10 years, three cents; school children and teachers, three cents; borough marshals and firemen, free; all others, five cents. The company shall give a $20,000 bond.

Regeneration.

To secure a normal and regular tissue change throughout the body use BRANDETH'S PILLS. This tissue metamorphosis consists in constantly proceeding waste of tissue and its regeneration. BRANDETH'S PILLS are the best solvent of the products of disintegration of the tissues and increases their elasticity. They are an alterative and eliminative remedy, which allay irritation and remove obstruction by aiding nature and are of great benefit in cases of temporary and habitual constipation, torpid liver, billiousness, headache, indigestion, rheumatism and diseases arising from an impure state of the blood.

BRANETH'S PILLS are purely vegetable, absolutely harmless and safe to take at any time.

THE OFFICIAL COUNT.

Johnnie Kean Couldn't Even Buy His Own County.

The Union county board of canvassers made its official canvass yesterday of the vote cast at the recent election. L. F. Wadsworth of this city was chairman, and John Crowell clerk. The count resulted as follows:

For President—Grover Cleveland received 8,695; Benjamin Harrison, 7,824; Bidwell, Pro., 302; Weaver, Populist, 180; Socialist, 27; Cleveland's plurality, 871.

Governor—George T. Werts, 8,466; John Kean, jr., 7,852; Kennedy, Pro., 301; Keim, Socialist, 188; Bird, Populist, 24; Werts's plurality, 614.

Congress—John T. Dunn, Dem., 7,977; W. S. Chamberlin, Rep., 8,172; VanCise, Pro., 332; Wiegel, Socialist, 190; Chamberlin's plurality, 195.

First Assembly District—T. M. Kelly, Democratic, 2,979; J. A. Burns, Republican, 2,332; Shay, People, 102; Mackey, Prohibition, 56. Kelly's plurality, 647.

Second District—Thos F. Lane, Democrat, 2,455; John W. Benjamin, Republican, 2,373; Bigelow, Prohibition, 179; Zimmer, People, 56. Lane's plurality, 82.

Third District—George T. Kyte, Republican, 3,290; Leonard Cohen, Democrat, 2,595; Fountain, 136; Bell, 18. Kyte's plurality, 695.

County Clerk—James J. Gerber, Democratic, 8,347; Wm. Chamberlain, Republican, 7,842; C. Christianson, People, 182; Irving, Prohibition, 302. Gerber's plurality, 505.

Surrogate—George T. Parrot, Republican, 8,427; Rowland M. Stover, Democratic, 7,973; Christian Fisher, People, 181; J. L. Clayton, Prohibition, 270; Parrot's plurality, 454.

When the Board went to canvass the vote for Coroner it was found the clerks in the Second District, First Ward, and First District, Second Ward, of Elizabeth, made no returns of the vote for Coroner. The board, therefore, was unable to finish the canvass, and had to adjourn until 9 o'clock to-day to give the careless clerks a chance to be notified of their blunder, and have them produce the returns for coroner. This blunder puts the county to an additional expense of $126, as the forty-two members of the board will get $3 more apiece to-day for their services.

London Anarchists Glorify the "Chicago Martyrs."

THE PARIS DYNAMITE OUTRAGE.

President of the Carmaux Company Will Not Return to His Office for Some Time—How Marlborough Died—Europeans Executed in Dahomey.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—The Anarchists of London held a meeting in South Place Institute, Moorgate street, last night to honor the memory of the so-called "Chicago martyrs."

The hall was crowded with men of all the nationalities who make up the Anarchists and the extreme Social Democratic party in this city.

Red flags were hung up over the doors, and the pictures of Parsons and his companions were draped in mourning.

Above the pictures and on the wall behind the platform were Anarchist mottoes—"Workmen, Unite!" "Remember Chicago," "Liberty, Equality and Fraternity," "Death to Tyrants!" "Retribution to Our Oppressors," and many others in English, German and French.

Comrade Mowbray, the friend of the Socialist poet, William Morris, was the first speaker. He said that the history of the Anarchist movement was the history of the martyrdom of hundreds of noble men and women. Their blood had been shed ruthlessly by the classes in power, in order that the monopoly of the world's good things by these classes might not be imperiled. The propertied classes had applauded all the crimes committed in the name of the present order of society against the Anarchists.

The blood of the Anarchist martyrs cried out for revenge. The American Government had shown itself brutal and despotic, despite all its pretensions, in its treatment of the Chicago Anarchists. Anarchists in Great Britain need not think, however, that the British Government was any better. It had shown itself in the last few months to be as brutal and tyrannical as any other in the world.

This reference to the cases against the Walsall Anarchists was received with tumultuous demonstrations of enthusiasm and loud threats of vengeance.

Comrade Barker, who followed Mowbray, eulogized the French Anarchists for their conscientiousness and fearlessness, and expressed regret that their courage was not to be found among the Anarchists of every country. In closing, he hinted that the example set by the Chicago Anarchists should be followed speedily by the Anarchists of London.

Louise Michel was greeted with cheering when she came forward to speak. Her address was in French, and consequently only the foreigners in the audience applauded her incendiary words. She talked disjointedly about the Chicago and Paris Anarchists, and exhorted her audience to imitate the example of their heroes, like Parsons and Ravachol. The Chicago martyrs, she said, died for liberty, as did Ravachol, and, if the Anarchists of London would be equally brave and unselfish, they, too, might hope for such glorious deaths as these great fighters, doubtless to their experience.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following ordinance has been introduced before the common council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the council to adopt the same at a meeting to be held at the council chamber, No. 7 Park avenue, Plainfield, N. J., on Monday, December 5, 1892, at the hour of 8 o'clock p. m., at which time and place prior to the adoption of said ordinance, said ordinance will be considered by the common council and all persons interested may be heard before the common council.

F. W. RUNYON, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., November 9, 1892.

AN ORDINANCE

To lay out and open Sycamore street from the northerly side of East Fifth street to the southerly side of East Fourth street.

The inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, by their common council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That Sycamore street in the city of Plainfield from the northwesterly side of East Fifth street to the southeasterly side of East Fourth street be laid out and opened so that said street shall be of the uniform width of twenty-five (25) feet on each side of the centre line thereof, which said centre line is described as follows:

Beginning at a point in the northwesterly side line of East Fifth street, said point being distant twenty-four and eight-tenth (24.8) feet in a magnetic course of north forty five degrees and forty-three minutes west (N. 45 deg. 43 min. W.) from a stone monument in the intersection of the centre lines of said Sycamore and East Fifth streets as now laid out and opened, and running from said beginning point north forty-five degrees and forty-three minutes west (N. 45 deg. 43 min. W.) over lands of Elizabeth Chapin, Charles H. Hand, Agnes Littell, Catherine Lynch, Margaret Thatcher, William H. Brower, Justus H. Cooley, The Plainfield Bicycle club and Michael Quinn, a distance of three hundred and sixty-two and twenty-one one hundredths (362.21) feet to a point in the southeasterly side line of East Fourth street; said point being distant twenty-four and seventy-nine one-hundredths (24.79) feet in a course of South forty-five degrees and forty-three minutes east (S. 45 deg. 43 min. E.) from a stake in the centre line of East Fourth street and there to end.

The land to be taken, in addition to the land already dedicated to the public, consists of a narrow strip beginning at the intersection of the northerly side of East Fifth street with the easterly side of said proposed street, and running thence northwesterly along the said line of said proposed street seventy and eighty-five one-hundredths (70.85) feet to a point in line of lands now or formerly of Charles H. Hand; thence along the said last mentioned line south thirty-nine degrees and thirty-two minutes west (S. 39 degrees 32 minutes W.) a distance of ten and eight one hundredths (10.08) feet to a point; thence south forty-five degrees and fifty-four minutes east, (S. 45 degrees 54 minutes E.) a distance of sixty-nine and forty-eight one-hundredths (69.48) feet to a point in the north westerly side line of East Fifth street, thence along said northwesterly side line of East Fifth street north forty-eight degrees and eight minutes east, (N. 48 degrees 8 minutes E.) a distance of nine and eighty-four one-hundredths (9.84) feet to the place of beginning.

That the lands and real estate and the portions necessary therefor shall be taken and appropriated for the said laying out and opening of Sycamore street as aforesaid, pursuant to the charter of the city of Plainfield and the general statutes in such case made and provided.

The land to be taken and the lines of said street as the same is hereinbefore ordered be laid out and opened are shown on a map on file with the City Clerk entitled "Application Map to Lay Out and Open Sycamore Street from the northerly side of East Fifth street to the southerly side of East Fourth street, city of Plainfield, N. J., April 1892." Four—$0.

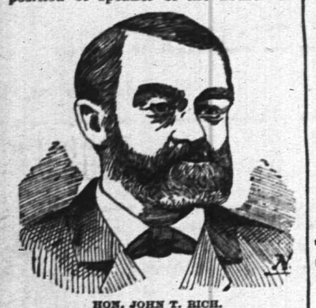
HON. JOHN T. RICH.

The Republican Candidate for Governor of Michigan.

Mr. John T. Rich, the republican nominee for the governorship of Michigan, is a farmer. His parents, originally from Vermont, removed to Crawford county, Pa., where he was born. Coming to Michigan in 1848, when only seven years old, he began life for himself, and has won both position and fortune. In 1872 Mr. Rich was elected to the lower house of the state legislature, and during his six years service in that body served upon the most important committees. During the sessions of 1877 and 1879 he occupied the position of speaker of the house. In



HON. JOHN T. RICH.

1880 he was a prominent candidate before the convention for governor. In the same year he was elected to the state senate, which position he resigned upon his election to congress to succeed Mr. Conger. He served but one term in congress, being defeated for reelection by a few votes. Returning to private life he has been active in agricultural circles, being connected prominently with the state association, and is also vice president of the National Wool Growers' association. In 1890 Mr. Rich was appointed by Secretary Foster, of the treasury department, as a member of the commission to revise the standard of wool samples of the government. In 1887 Gov. Luce appointed him state railroad commissioner, and reappointed him to the same position two years later.

MUNICIPAL COLORS.

Terra Cotta and White Seem to Be Good Enough for Chicago.

Alfred Jensen Roewad's suggestion for "municipal colors" for the world's fair city has been adopted by the committee to which was assigned the duty of making a selection from the number of designs submitted. The committee was appointed by F. W. Millet, director of decorations, and Walter Sherlaw, Walter McEwan and E. H. Blashfield are the members. The design is a field of terra cotta, divided in three parts by a band of white. The three parts indicate the three great divisions of the city made by the river—north, south and west. In making the award the committee says the background of that shade of red known as terra cotta with white stand well together, and seen against the blue of the sky, the green of fields and trees and the different house fronts will be at once the most simple, gay and durable. The design can be easily adapted to banner or shield as well as flag. Mr. Roewad, whose suggestion for municipal colors has been adopted, is a native of Copenhagen, Denmark. He is an architect and civil engineer, and came to Chicago in 1890. He entered the bureau of construction of the world's fair and made most of the detail drawings for the immense trusses of the manufactures and liberal arts building. Mr. Roewad is forty-four years old.

Legal Verbiage.

An old Missouri deed for forty acres of land is a good illustration of legal verbiage. It conveys "all and singular—appurtenances, appendages, advowsons, benefits, commons, curtilages, cow-houses, corncribs, dairies, dovecoats, easements emoluments, freeholds, features, furniture, fixtures, gardens, homestalls, improvements, immunities, limekilns, meadows, marshes, mines, minerals, orchards, barks, pleasure grounds, pigeon-houses, pig styes, quarries, remainders, reversions, rents, rights, ways, water-courses, wind mills, together with every other necessary right, immunity, privilege, and advantage of whatsoever name, nature, or description."

Rates of Postage in 1814.

An old almanac for 1814 gives the following as the rates of postage prevailing at that time: "For every single letter by land, for 40 miles, 8 cents; 90 miles, 10 cents; 150 miles, 12½ cents; 300 miles, 17 cents; 500 miles, 20 cents, and for more than 500 miles, 25 cents. No allowance to be made for intermediate miles. Every double letter is to pay double the said rates; every triple letter, triple; every packet weighing one ounce, at the rate of four single letters each ounce. Every ship letter originally received at an office for delivery, 6 cents. Magazines and pamphlets, not over 50 miles, 1 cent per sheet; over 50 miles and not exceeding 100 miles, 1¾ cents per sheet; over 100 miles, 2 cents per sheet."

Lamps and Fires.

Nearly three-fourths of the fires in the United States last year were the result of the upsetting or explosion of lamps

THE FLOWER CLOCK.

Curious Mechanical and Decorative Sight in a Paris Garden.

A little masterpiece of mechanism, and at the same time a model of garden decoration, is the floral clock which decorates the garden of an ingenious Parisian. The appearance of this oddest of timepieces is shown in the accompanying cut. The dial, which is not less than thirty feet in diameter, is composed entirely of choice plants of various colors. The hands, which actually move over the face of the clock, are made in the same manner, and the whole effect of the arrangement is that of an immense basket of flowers. The mechanism which drives the hands is lodged in a large chamber built in the garden immediately beneath the dial. It is composed of the usual machinery employed in operating large clocks, except that it is particularly constructed to move the great weight of the earth which must be supported by the revolving hands. This is cleverly accomplished by making an ordinary clock train release a volume of water every minute, and this by its gravity operates the wheels that send the heavy hands forward. The whole arrangement is exceedingly ingenious and interesting, and, according to the Philadelphia Record, is the daily admiration and wonder of hundreds of the inventor's townsmen.

BULLETS FLEW THICK

But Nobody Was Killed at the Homestead Riot.

STRIKERS VS. NON-UNION MEN.

The Desperate Affray in Which Seven Negroes Came Near Being Exterminated by a Bloodthirsty Crowd—The Colored Men Game—More Deputies Asked For.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Nov. 14.—The period of comparative quietness which has prevailed in Homestead since the militia left has died out. The pent-up feelings of the strikers broke out afresh yesterday in a riot, in which at least 50 shots were fired, but miraculously no person was killed, though a score were hit by the flying bullets.

A party of seven colored non-union men were on their way to their boarding house about 4:45 p. m. yesterday, when a man, supposed to be a striker, attacked two of the negroes, Charles Carroll and Fred Lewis. Lewis was knocked down.

This was a signal for a large crowd to gather at the scene of the trouble.

Lewis' companions came to his rescue, and a terrible riot took place between the colored men on one side, and the crowd, supposed to be all strikers, on the other side.

The two sides fought desperately and fired their revolvers and slashed each other with knives at close quarters for several minutes, when the negroes made a dash through the crowd for their boarding houses.

They were followed by the hooting and bloodthirsty crowd, which, by this time, numbered at least 2,000, including many women and children. The crowd fired and threw stones at the fleeing negroes, and they in turn returned the fire on the crowd, and how so many escaped instant death is a miracle.

The colored non-unionists living on Shanty Hill, hearing of the assault upon their brethren in town, were about to come down and rescue them. Over 500 of the colored men were ready to make an onslaught at a moment's notice, and the coal and iron police had much difficulty in restraining them.

Marion Conrad, non-unionist, owns a house above Ann street, on Fourth avenue. During the shooting a large crowd gathered in front of his house and when he appeared began to threaten him. Conrad is sworn in as a deputy sheriff and he stood in the door with a revolver in either hand and said that he would shoot the first man who entered the gate. Several deputies arrived, keeping the crowd back for an hour, when it dispersed.

At least two dozen people were injured by flying missiles, but as far as can be learned none were killed.

The seven negroes and a number of strikers have been arrested.

Great excitement still prevails here and more deputies have been asked for.

CABINET SPECULATION.

Whitney Said to be Slated for the State Department—Other Rumors.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—It has been decided to keep open the Democratic National Headquarters for another week at least and probably until after the inauguration of Mr. Cleveland, March 4, next.

The National Democratic Campaign Committee will act in an advisory capacity—a sort of temporary Cabinet—to Mr. Cleveland from now till inauguration day. The committee will meet some day this week, and among other things will discuss the advisability of maintaining permanent headquarters in New York until March 4. The committee may engage rooms at some hotel, in all likelihood the Hoffman House, it is said.

Ex-Secretary Whitney and the other Democratic chiefs will be in daily consultation with President-elect Cleveland.

Regarding Mr. Whitney, rumor has it that he is to be the Premier of President Cleveland's Cabinet. The same rumor, says the report comes directly from the President-elect to a gentleman high in the party's councils, and adds: "Benjamin T. Cable, of Illinois, will be tendered the Naval portfolio."

Rumor also has another interesting report about Mr. Whitney. It makes him a candidate for the Presidency in 1896, and says that therefore he "will probably accept no office under the new Administration."

Three prominent names are mentioned for the United States District-Attorneyship. They are those of Nelson Smith, Chairman of the Tammany Hall General Committee; Macgrane Coxe and Daniel O'Connell.

A GHASTLY RELIC.

The John Brown Scaffold Now on Its Way to the World's Fair.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—The scaffold upon which John Brown was executed at Harper's Ferry, W. Va., has arrived here for shipment to the World's Fair Exposition. The timbers are in a good state of preservation though they have served the purposes of a porch to the residence of a son of the man who built the scaffold.

The gallows itself is a plain, substantial affair, which would attract little attention apart from its historical interest. The timbers are evidently pine, although they have been painted over at some later period to preserve them. The two uprights are beams six inches square and the crosses of the bar is in proportion. Even the screws with which it was put together have been preserved, and in a remarkable manner.

John Brown was executed Dec. 2, 1859.

Death of Dr. A. R. Jackson.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—Dr. Abraham R. THE PLOT AGAINST SIMPSON.

Mr. Harvey Said Jerry Helped Put Up the Scheme Himself.

TOPEKA, Kas., Nov. 14.—The biggest sensation connected with the late Kansas campaign has been made public. It is the public confession of L. S. Harvey, Assistant-Secretary of the People's Party Campaign Committee.

Harvey had been charged with giving out secrets of the committee, and to defend himself, he exposed the plot which was arranged in Topeka to have an attempt made to assassinate Jerry Simpson.

Harvey says the parties to the scheme were W. C. Jones, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee; Briedenthal, Chairman of the People's party, and Jerry Simpson. The object was to create sympathy for Simpson and aid in his election.

"The plan," says Secretary Harvey, "was to have Simpson return to his district and be waylaid and beaten and bruised in the pretended effort to assassinate him. Letters were to be found with regard to the employment of a man to murder him, and the whole was to offset Southern outrages and create sympathy for him.

"During the discussion of this scheme Jerry objected to being beaten and bruised up, but was talked out of the opinion, and agreed to undergo the punishment, but insisted that the fellow who did the pounding must not carry it too far."

Mr. Harvey further says that owing to the blunder of Simpson's district chairman the letters offering $2,000 reward to the man who would murder Simpson were found, and the sham attempt at murder was prevented.

When Gen. Weaver was here Chairman Briedenthal urged Harvey to hire some one to walk beside Weaver's carriage and pelt him with eggs, so that the outrages in the South might be repeated in this State, the object being to place the blame on Republicans.

The exposure by Harvey has created a deal of excitement here, and many threats are made against him. He went to his home, 15 miles from Topeka, yesterday, and a telegram was sent him not to come to Topeka.

HARRISON NOT DISAPPOINTED.

Glad Because He Can Retire to Private Life—Son Russell on the Result.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Russell B. Harrison, son of the President, is stopping at the Plazza Hotel. A newspaper correspondent asked him whether there was any truth in the report that his father intended to live in Boston after he retired from the White House.

He stated that the President would return to Indianapolis and pass the remainder of his days among his associates and friends. He spoke feelingly of the great family affliction and intimated that his father was not at all disappointed by the result of the election because he could retire to quiet life.

He did not care to speak at length upon the result of the election, but added; "I think my father is proud of the good showing made in Indiana. Two years ago the State gave the Democrats a majority of 19,000, and now they carry it by 8,000, showing a Republican gain of 11,000. It was not even a doubtful State, for the Democrats had carried it last fall.

"Other States that were conclusively Republican until the election proved the contrary are the ones that cause surprise. Look at Ohio, which gave McKinley a majority of 20,000 or more when he was elected Governor, and which has always been considered a Republican State in national years, and consider the great revolution wrought there. In view of the overwhelming change of votes in that State, I certainly think the President has cause to be proud of his own State and the great gains he made in two years.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR CONVENTION.

Members Arriving in St. Louis to Attend the Annual Session of the Order.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 14.—Representatives of the Knights of Labor are fast arriving for the annual convention here to-morrow. As yet the only general officer here is John W. Hayes, secretary and treasurer.

General Master Workman Powderly will reach St. Louis to-day. John Davis, who has just been elected to Congress from the Fifth district of Kansas on the People's ticket, will also put in an appearance. He is a member of the General Executive Board. The other expected general officers are General Worthy Foreman Hugh Cavanagh and A. W. Wright, and John Devlin, of the Executive Board.

Another interesting figure in the convention will be Henry Dicks, of District Assembly 258, which embraces the entire building industry of New York city. At the late election Mr. Dicks was the People's candidate for mayor of New York.

RUN DOWN OFF VINEYARD SOUND.

The Schooner George S. Tarbell Sunk by the Schooner Gypsum Prince.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., Nov. 14.—The three-masted schooner George S. Tarbell of Wellfleet, Mass., Capt. Haskell, from Windsor for New York with a cargo of plaster, was run into early yesterday morning when about five miles west of Vineyard Sound Lightship by the four-masted schooner Gypsum Prince from New York and for Windsor, N. S., in ballast. A moderate north by west wind was prevailing.

The Tarbell was sailing on the starboard tack, heading about west by north, and was struck just aft of the fore rigging and cut down several feet below the water's edge, causing her to sink in about 15 minutes.

The captain and crew took to the vessel's boat and succeeded in boarding the Gypsum Prince which was brought to an anchorage off Nobeki yesterday.

A "VULGAR" ANSWER.

So Gail Hamilton Characterizes the Reply to the Maybrick Petition.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—The celebrated international case of Mrs. Maybrick, the young American confined in Waking prison, on a life sentence for the murder of her husband near Liverpool, several years ago, is the subject of renewed agitation. Gail Hamilton, the well known writer, has taken a deep interest in the case, and it was largely through her efforts that an immense petition was sent to Queen Victoria asking that the unfortunate woman be pardoned and released from prison.

The petition was based on the assertions that no proof was adduced on the trial to connect her with the crime charged, and further, that the commission of the crime itself was not proved. This petition was signed by Mrs. Harrison, the wives of the members of the Cabinet, including Mrs. Blaine, and many prominent ladies all over the country.

It was forwarded to England and ultimately found its way to the office of the Home Secretary. The petition received a semi-official character by being forwarded through the State Department and the United States Legation in London, and the response to it was communicated direct to this Government by the British officials.

This reply, which has not been made public, is reported to be exceedingly caustic, so much so, in fact, as to cause Gail Hamilton, in her last letter on the subject, to refer to it as "senseless, vulgar, and brutal insolence towards a friendly republican nation pleading for its own citizens."

The response is said to characterize the petition as the most impudent paper that ever found its way to the office of the Home Secretary and wholly unprecedented.

TWO STATES STILL IN DOUBT.

Official Count Must Determine the Result in California and Ohio.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 14.—The unexpected closeness of the vote in California on the National ticket has thrown the result in doubt, although at one time there had been little question as to a Democratic victory. The State outside of San Francisco has evidently gone Republican by a plurality variously estimated at between 6,000 and 8,000. City returns are still incomplete but thus far Cleveland has a plurality of about 5,500. It is yet difficult to judge whether Cleveland's plurality in San Francisco will be sufficient to overcome the Republican plurality in the State.

The complexion of the Legislature is also uncertain. Neither party can have more than a small majority on joint ballot, although the indications favor the Democrats.

The "Chronicle" (Rep.) claims the State for Harrison by 2,000, while the Democratic State Committee's figures indicate a victory for Cleveland by 800.

The official canvass will have to be awaited to ascertain the result.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 14.—The Ohio tangle is as complicated as ever. Both sides claim the State, including electoral vote and State officers, but each side concedes one electoral vote to the other. One thing is now apparent. It will require the official count to decide and in this the Republicans have the advantage, if any is to be gained therefrom.

The Republicans claim the Secretaryship of State by 1,055 and the election of 22 out of 23 electors by 917.

The Democrats gave out no figures but they still adhere to the claim made in their former statement that Col. W. A. Taylor is elected and that 23 electors out of 23 are chosen for Cleveland.

Nothing but the official canvass will induce them to surrender.

PLOTTING MORE BLACKMAIL.

"Lord Beresford" Plying His Trade Even from Prison.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—"Lord Charles Beresford," the talented young scamp who is now wearing a convict suit in a Georgia State prison, is plotting more blackmail and scandal from behind prison bars. A note was sent to the newspapers yesterday by a prominent lawyer stating that Beresford was endeavoring to sell to papers in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Pittsburg, a most scurrilous manuscript, reflecting upon the honor of two well known, wealthy society ladies of the metropolis.

The lawyer was seen at the Union League Club by a reporter, and he explained that some wealthy ladies received a letter from Beresford a few months ago in which he said that unless he was paid $2,500 he would cause the publication of an article most damaging to their reputations.

The ladies put the matter in the lawyer's hands and he it was who caused Beresford's arrest in Albany on the charge which eventually landed him in a Georgia prison.

The lawyer says that he did not make any charge of attempted blackmail against Beresford, as he did not wish to give the names of the ladies for publication, and, as Beresford was going to prison he thought that would end the matter.

Beresford, now seeks, he added, to strike at these rich ladies through threatening to publish cruel and untrue stories about them.

Two Workingmen Murderously Assaulted

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 14.—Two Swedes employed at the reservoir in West Hartford were waylaid at the foot of Talcott Mountains at a late hour Saturday night. One was shot and not expected to live. He said his companion was stoned to death, and dragged into the woods. The cause of the assault was undoubtedly robbery as both men were robbed of their wages. A general alarm was at once sent out by the police.

THREATS OF LYNCHING

Lingo's Acquittal Excites Merchantville Residents.

EX-JUDGE WESCOTT CENSURED

An Indignation Meeting Held at Which Prominent People of the Place Speak Their Minds—Negroes of Matchtown Also Aroused—Lingo to Enter a Museum

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—The people of Merchantville, N. J., are in arms because of the acquittal in Camden of Francis Lingo, colored, the alleged murderer of Mrs. Annie Miller. Their anger knows no bounds, and is intermingled with fear that some one else may be murdered in that vicinity and the perpetrator go unpunished.

The wives and daughters of the well-to-do residents, and they are numerous, actually dread to leave their homes alone for fear that something might happen to them.

As soon as it was learned on Saturday afternoon that Lingo was a free man, threats of lynching him, should he return to the community, were freely made, and yesterday the expression grew in earnestness and volume.

As the outcome of this state of affairs, an indignation meeting was held at 4 o'clock in the afternoon in the Merchantville town hall, which was attended by two hundred of the most prominent citizens of the locality.

It was presided over by Thomas C. Knight, President of the Philadelphia Brokers' Exchange, and a committee of three consisting of John Morton, Edward Nash and Frederick Kleintz, was appointed to confer with Camden County Prosecutor Jenkins, who conducted the case against Lingo, and see what could be done to keep the acquitted negro from returning to the neighborhood.

Resolutions were presented, and, although referred to a committee of five, they were practically adopted, censuring ex-Judge Wescott, senior counsel for Lingo, expressing sympathy with John Miller, husband of the murdered woman, and disapproving of the abrupt ending of the trial.

The committee, composed of John Allen, Charles Hollingshead, Edward W. Morris, William Longstrath, and Morris Redderow, all of whom are wealthy and influential, and to whom the resolutions were referred, will probably augment them.

The meeting adjourned to meet at the same place to-night at 8 o'clock, when a definite line of action will be decided upon.

The citizens argue that, as the murders of Mrs. Leconey and Mrs. Miller, both of which occurred in their town, are unavenged, there is no safety for them; that their lives and the lives of their families are in constant peril, and that precautions be taken.

They fear that the acquittal of Chalkley Leconey and Francis Lingo of the respective murders, the latter also being arrested for the first crime, will set a lawless precedent to many of the 500 negroes of Matchtown, a suburb of Merchantville, which might result in another mysterious killing.

They also feel that some one should be hanged for each murder, but as there is no probability of either mystery ever being cleared, the best they can do is to take, in a measure, the law into their own hands and protect their homes by aggressive methods. The Matchtown negroes are aroused and threaten vengeance upon any one who shall maltreat Lingo.

Lingo says he never will return to Merchantville and as his life would be in danger were he to do so, it is believed he will be an unknown quantity in those parts. He will exhibit himself in a dime museum here during the coming week.

Lingo's acquittal was brought about by the action of Judge Garrison, who, when the evidence was all in, declared to the jury that the case made out by the prosecution was not sufficient to convict the prisoner of the murder of Mrs. Annie Miller, and he thereupon discharged Lingo.

Judge Garrison held that by the State's own witnesses an alibi had been proved for Lingo, and that he was not the negro that Insurance Agent Wilder and the Du Hadway children met in the bush lot. Under his instructions the jury rendered a verdict of acquittal and Lingo was discharged.

The first thing Lingo did after his release was to send this dispatch to his wife: "Through God, and Judge Garrison, I am a free man."

He then visited the office of ex-Judge Westcott and was soon surrounded by friends. He declared he was innocent of the crime.

"Why," he exclaimed, "Mrs. Miller was the best friend I had on earth."

"Will you work for me?" asked ex-Judge Westcott.

"Yes, a whole year for nothing," Lingo replied. "But I will not go to Merchantville again."

Ex-Judge Wescott said that although Lingo is acquitted he is not yet through with the case. Several of the State's witnesses, he declared, will be arrested for perjury.

Brooklyn's Big Fire Still Burning.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 14.—The fire which started several days ago in Harbeck's big store on the river front, is still burning, and it may be several days yet before the firemen have the flames extinguished, owing to the enormous amount of cotton, jute and other slow-burning material, in the building. Two firemen were killed Saturday and several seriously injured, by the falling of one of the floors. The loss will be fully $300,000.

The President Has Not Spoken.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14. — President Harrison authorizes the statement that recent publications purporting to be interviews with him, in which he is represented as giving his views upon the election, are entirely unfounded and pure inventions. When he is ready to speak upon the subject he will do so in his own way, one that will be convincing to all readers of the correctness of the statements made.

Fled for Life from the Flames.

SHENANDOAH, Pa., Nov. 14.—A conflagration started in one of the Philadelphia & Reading company's houses at Indian Ridge colliery on the outskirts of Shenandoah, yesterday morning and destroyed five double tenements occupied by employes at that mine. Many narrow escapes were had by occupants who were compelled to flee for their lives and in many cases saving nothing but their clothing.

JUDGE COOLEY DEAD.

A Prominent Iowan Expires in New York of Paralysis.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—D. M. Cooley of Dubuque, Iowa, Judge of the Supreme Court of that State, is dead at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. J. F. Douglass, No. 211 West End avenue, of paralysis.

Judge Cooley came East in September. A week ago he was stricken with paralysis.

Judge Cooley was born at Sugar Hill, N. H., in 1825. He was Indian Commissioner under President Grant, and served several terms as a Republican Senator in the Iowa Legislature. A few years ago he was made judge of the Supreme Court. For 20 years he has been President of the First National Bank of Dubuque.

CLEVELAND'S INAUGURATION.

Preparations Already Under Way for the Event.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Already preparations are under way for the inauguration of Mr. Cleveland on March 4 next. It is the intention of Democratic organizations in the larger cities to make it more notable than any similar event that has preceded it.

Tammany Hall, of New York, the Harrity Club, of Philadelphia, the Iroquois Club, of Chicago, and other similar organizations have already sent representatives to Washington to secure accommodations for their members who will be present and participate in the event.

Estimates are heard fixing the number of marchers in the procession to celebrate the return of the Democratic party to power at 50,000.

Are Wilhelm and Bismarck Reconciled?

LONDON, Nov. 14.—A despatch says the "Leipziger Nachrichten" announces that while Emperor William was hunting in Saxony he met Bismarck. The two were reconciled and in course of conversation Bismarck pointed out the dangers threatened by the new Army bill.

Wants Mayor Fitzpatrick Impeached.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 14.—The "Times-Democrat" editorially calls for the impeachment of Mayor Fitzpatrick for his passiveness during the recent labor conflict and his inertness during the car drivers' strike last May.

To Support Quay for Re-election.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—The eight Republican State Senators of Philadelphia met in the office of Senator Charles A. Porter and resolved to support Matthew S. Quay for re election to the United States Senate. Senator Quay's friends in the Philadelphia delegation to the House of Representatives will shortly hold a caucus and pledge themselves for him.

Boniface Garrison Dying.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—W. D. Garrison, of the firm of Garrison & Ford, proprietors of the Grand Union hotel, is lying dangerously ill from heart trouble, and it is feared that his death is only a question of a few days at most. W. D. Garrison is one of the most popular and best known hotel men in New York, and, perhaps, in the country.

The Vote in New Jersey.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 14.—In many of the counties in New Jersey the official returns of the vote cast on Tuesday have been received and in others the unofficial returns have been so carefully gathered as to be practically accurate. These show that in the State Cleveland has a plurality of 14,700 and that Werts for Governor received a plurality of 6,870.

Victory for Street Car Strikers.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 14.—Mayor Karb has given his decision as arbitrator in the strike of the street railway employes. He finds the conductor, Alexander, was discharged without good cause and decides that he must be reinstated. This is a complete victory for the street car employes.

SET FIRE TO A BOY.

Fiendish Crime of a Tramp at Bradford, Pa.

BRADFORD, Pa., Nov. 14.—Yesterday afternoon a tramp giving his name as Anthony Honlon, or Quinn, took shelter in a small shanty on the bank of the Tuna creek near the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg railroad shops, used by the small boys in the neighborhood as a play house.

A number of boys were playing around the shanty, and requested the tramp to get out.

This enraged the tramp, who seized a pail of crude oil and threw it on John Leggett, aged 14. He then set fire to the boy's clothes.

Young Leggett was frightfully burned all over the body, his head and face being literally cooked.

The villain was captured and handed over to the police and is now in the lock-up.

Young Leggett died last night after lingering four hours in great agony.

—Belle Archer will play Maid Marian to-night supported by an able New York company and a full chorus. Tennyson's beautiful book and Sullivan's lively score will be finely rendered.

—White & VanArsdale are offering inducements of the best kind throughout every department of their large store. They ask special attention to their underwear, coat and house-furnishing departments.

—The new schedule of trains on the Central railroad of N. J., that went into effect yesterday, contained few changes. The 6:14 a. m. train for New York now leaves Plainfield at 6:05, and the 5:51 p. m. leaves at 5:57.

—Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Smalley of Smalleytown were driving home from Plainfield Saturday evening, when their horse was taken suddenly ill and died at the corner of Somerset street and Johnston drive.

—The gospel meeting held yesterday at 4:15 p. m. by the Y. M. C. A., was largely attended and of specially interesting character. Over twenty young men gave short talks in the space of thirty minutes, interspersed with lively singing.

—The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum will produce by local talent at Music Hall, on Thanksgiving evening, the 24th inst., an Irish drama entitled "Eileen Oge, or Dark's the Hour Before the Dawn". The play is being thoroughly rehearsed under the direction of H. J. King.

—"The Midnight Alarm" drew a large audience at Music Hall, last season, and will undoubtedly draw a larger one to-morrow when No. 1 company comes. It is a sensational play of merit, dealing with the humbler affairs of life and incidentally introducing that branch of public service in which every man cherishes the liveliest interest, the fire department. There is a thoroughly equipped engine drawn by a dashing span of roadsters, and the piece is well mounted and ably cast. The presentation took the house by storm, and curtain calls were numerous.

Ate Hearty in Cleveland's Honor.

A jolly party sat down to a first-class dinner at Mrs. Mary Neighbor's boarding house, 59 East Front street, Saturday evening. The affair was paid for by the Cleveland men of the house, as a result of an election wager. The walls of the dining room were adorned with large pictures of Cleveland and Stevenson. Following are those who sat at the dinner table: Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Corey, Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Neighbor, Miss Reynolds, Miss Disborough, Messrs. Love, B. Thorn, A. Thorn, W. Titsworth, C. E. Rutt, R. Rphel, M. C. Jenkins, Dr. Tucker, R. H. Cooley, G. H. Cook, Mrs. G. Neighbor, John Neighbor and family.

The Modern Ideas Still Remain.

Referring to a theatrical company which created a local flutter a while ago, the Dramatic News says:

Will Miller Farnum has resigned from the Dr. Bill company, and will be at liberty after Nov. 19.

If the "resignations" continue the company may yet be unpresentable. Suffice it, though, that Miss Trudelle, who does the "Kangaroo" and skirt dancing, is still appreciated by audiences with modern ideas.

I was so much troubled with catarrh it seriously affected my voice. One bottle of Ely's Cream Balm did the work. My voice is fully restored.—B. F. Liepsner, A. M., pastor of the Olivet Baptist church, Philadelphia, Pa.

Nothing can be said in favor of the best medicine in the world that may not be said of the most worthless. In one case, it's true; in the other, it isn't;—but how can you distinguish?

Judge by what is done. There's only one blood-purifier that's guaranteed. It's Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery—and this is what is done with it; if it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, you get your money back. Isn't it likely to be the best?

All the year round, as well at one time as another, it cleanses and purifies the system. All blood-poisons must go. For Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Scrofula, Salt-rheum, Tetter, Erysipelas, or any blood-taint or disorder, it is an unequaled remedy.

It's the cheapest, too. With this, you pay only for the good you get.

And nothing else is "just as good." It may be better—for the dealer. But he isn't the one that's to be helped.

"Value received, or no pay,"—you can't get these terms with any other medicine, at any price.

FIVE BLOWN TO DEATH.

Killed by a Boiler Explosion on the Reading Road.

READING, Pa., Nov. 12.—A frightful boiler explosion occurred on the Reading road a short distance above Schuylkill about midnight last night. Five men were killed and several injured. The killed were:

Engineer William Cowey and his fireman.

William Moyer, engineer.

Harry Allison.

Conductor Kendrick.

Michael Dobbins, a brakeman, was badly injured.

The engine had just finished making a shift and coupled up to a train. The moment the steam was applied the explosion followed.

Cowey was hurled against the rocks and every bone in his body was crushed. Moyer was hurled 100 yards away into a field. The others lay near the wreck.

The engine was No. 563 and belonged to the freight trade.

On Sunday she was put on the coal trade, and at the time of the accident was on her way to Palo Alto. The locomotive is a complete wreck.

Cowey and Moyer belonged to another crew and were deadheading it home to Palo Alto. The other victims belonged to the engine which exploded.

Some of the dead are mutilated almost beyond recognition.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

R. B. Grinnell, of Netherwood, who has been ill for the past six weeks, is now convalescent.

Cornelius P. Ross died yesterday at his late residence, 113 Plainfield avenue, at the age of 69. Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon at 3.

Mrs. Henry VanMiddlesworth of 3 Elmwood place, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Charles Foster, at 336 Communipaw avenue, Jersey City, formerly of Plainfield.

The Rev. George Stevens, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Berwick, Pa., preached very acceptably yesterday morning to the Rev. Mr. Schenck's congregation in the Trinity Reformed church.

Of this season's course of lectures at Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, that on Monday evening, the 21st inst., will be by George H. Babcock, of this city, president of the Babcock & Wilcox Co., on "The Genesis and Exodus of Steam".

Miss Maud Grace Tingley, daughter of Jacob S. Tingley of West Fourth street, was married to Edgar O. Chappell of Great Barrington, Mass., by the Rev. Dr. Lewis, the 10th of last April, and the marriage is just now announced.

Isaac N. Titus has the sympathy of Dunellen and Plainfield people in the loss of his wife Deborah M., who died yesterday in her thirty-ninth year. Funeral services will be held from the home of the afflicted husband to-morrow afternoon at 2.

Thomas Crosley, sr., father of borough magistrate T. R. Crosley, died at his home in Trenton last Monday night in his 86th year, from a stroke of paralysis. He was a devout Christian, and died in full faith. The funeral services on Friday were largely attended.

Cormack Caulfield, of West Third street, has had much misfortune. He buried one child two weeks ago, and another child died last night with diphtheria. The funeral was held this afternoon, and was private. A third child, who has been very ill, is slowly recovering.

Charles B. Brown, representing the Y. M. C. A., made a fifteen-minute address in the Trinity Reformed church last evening, full of interesting facts and figures regarding the workings of that branch of Christian work. He succeeded in holding the close attention of the large congregation present, in his earnestness for the salvation of young men.

The service last evening at the Crescent Avenue church was conducted by F. H. Andrews, and was in the interest of the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A. An address was made by William D. Murray, a member of the committee, on the general work including that in Japan. Dr. Richards preached for Dr. Kempshall at Elizabeth.

Announcement is made of the Plainfield assemblies, to be held during the winter in the Casino of the Union County Country club. The dates are December 12, January 2 and 16, and February 13. The patronesses are Mrs. Charles E. Brooks, Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, Mrs. Pliny Fisk, Mrs. Robert L. Burnett, Mrs. Harry G. Runkle and Mrs. William T. Kaufman.

At the Fourth Triennial Convention of the N. J. Sunday-school association, to be held at Newark, Wednesday and Thursday of this week, the Rev. Dr. Hurlbut of this city will make addresses on "The Gains of the Sunday-school Teacher", and "The Early Christian Church", and will lead a conference on "Teachers" at 4 Wednesday afternoon.

The Rev. George Stevens, of Berwick, Pa., accompanied by his wife, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Laire and family of East Fifth street. George V. Creveling, the father of Mrs. Laire and of Mrs. Stevens, is confined to his bed at Mr. Laire's home, by a stroke of paralysis, and Mr. and Mrs. Stevens were summoned to his bedside a few days ago.

—The Democrats of Bound Brook will have a grand jollification and parade in that borough Tuesday night, Nov. 15. Everybody is invited to be present and participate in the festivities in honor of the election of Cleveland and Stevenson, Gov. Werts and the rest of the Democratic candidates.

An Open Fire-Place Caused the Blaze.

What might have proved a serious conflagration was fortunately averted at an early hour Saturday morning by prompt and energetic attention on the part of Lewis and Alex Mack sons of Adolph Mack the millionaire owner of the Raritan Woollen Mills. Mr. Mack's residence is situated midway between Somerville and Raritan. It is a large, handsome structure, standing back from the public road amid clumps of trees and shady drives. About 1 o'clock Saturday morning Lewis was awakened by one of the servants, who told him the house was afire. A hurried examination failed to reveal the location of the blaze, and water doused around the place where the smoke was pouring out did no good. Young Mr. Mack despatched one of the servants to Somerville to Brown's Woollen Mills, whence an alarm was sounded, bringing the fire department of both towns to the scene at once. The firemen on their arrival tore up the floors, and, finding the blaze, apparently put it out, without one drop of water being used by the department. At 5 o'clock the same morning the fire broke out afresh between the wooden walls of the old and new portions of the building. There was no alarm sounded at this time, but Dan Smith, one of the foremen in the Raritan Mills, was sent for. He brought with him several machinists and experienced men, who tore out all of one side of the annex. When discovered the fire was burning merrily, and it would only have been a question of a few moments when it would have been beyond control. A few pails of water in the right place extinguished the flames, and all danger was past. The damage will amount to between $500 and $600, wholly insured. The fire is supposed to have originated under the tiling in an open fire-place.

"Recognition" of Their Pastor.

Recognition services in honor of the new pastor will be held in the Park Avenue Baptist church Thursday evening at 7:45.

At these services the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes will be moderator, Dr. Eddy of New York will preach the sermon, Dr. Luther of Newark will deliver the charge to the pastor, and the Rev. Joseph Sagebeer of Flemington to the church, the Rev. Dr. Robert Lowry of Plainfield will give the right of fellowship, and the Rev. Dr. Richards the ministerial welcome. Other local pastors will participate.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

—Captain E. S. Densmore, doorkeeper at the White House, died yesterday of Brights' disease.

—Policeman Graeff of Shamokin, Pa., was shot and killed in that place by an unknown man last night while patrolling his beat.

—The University of Pennsylvania's football team was practically not "in it" with the Yale team at New York, being defeated 28 to 0.

—The President has appointed William P. Estes, of Minnesota, Consul at Hamburg. Mr. Estes was United States Consul at Kingston, Jamaica.

—Albert E. Speck, a compositor employed at the "Republican" office, Williamsport, Pa., committed suicide by hanging in the composing room yesterday.

—The marriage of Margaret Mather, the actress, and Gustave Pabst, son of the well known Milwaukee brewer, is announced from San Francisco.

—Senator Hill's bachelor days are said to be numbered. It is reported that he is soon to wed Mrs. Fannie Iverson, a wealthy widow, of Atlanta, Ga.

—Fire in the Shissler building, Pottsville, Pa., did damage to the extent of $30,000. The structure was occupied by a photographer, a milliner and several lawyers.

—The daughter of James Hurley, of Glens Falls, N.Y., is in a critical condition from eating oatmeal in which rat poison had been mixed. She is not expected to recover.

—Charles Ryan of New York, shot and killed Susie Hess and Frank Whittaker in a disorderly house in Chicago, Sunday, and then blew out his brains. Jealousy was the cause.

—Saturday night the Democrats of Utica, N. Y., and vicinity celebrated the result of the election by a barbecue, monster torchlight parade and banquet. Covers were laid for 1,000 persons.

—The meeting of the Behring Sea arbitrators has been postponed because the data used in preparing the case of the United States, furnished by Ivan Petroff, is found to have been falsified.

Weather Forecast.

For eastern New York: Fair in southern and light showers in northern portion; slightly warmer; brisk, southerly winds.

For Eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland: Fair; followed light showers in Western Maryland; slightly warmer; south winds.

For Western New York: Generally fair except showers at lake stations; cooler; south gales shifting to west.

For Western Pennsylvania: Fair weather except light showers on the lake; colder winds becoming westerly.

HOEY AT DEATH'S DOOR.

The Ex-President of the Adams Express Company Passing Away.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—It is announced by the family of John Hoey, the well-known express manager, that his condition is very critical, and that it is feared he cannot survive longer than a few days at the most. Mr. Hoey is at his finely furnished rooms in Delmonico's, where he is surrounded by the members and friends of his family. Little hope of his recovery is given, although everything possible is being done to prolong his life. Drs. T. S. Robertson and Janeway believe that only Mr. Hoey's extraordinary vitality can keep him alive more than a few days. He is gradually growing weaker, and it can be plainly seen that the end is near.

Mr. Hoey is suffering from a complication of disorders brought on by a severe cold he contracted several weeks ago. He failed to properly care for himself when attacked and other ailments were contracted.

Although very weak, Mr. Hoey still keeps up his spirits and hopes to recover, and of course every encouragement is given him by his family. Dr. Robertson is almost constantly by his side.

Mr. Hoey's son William is also ill. The constant worry over his father's illness and fatigue from incessantly watching him has proven too much for the younger Hoey, who broke down yesterday. It was said at the office of the Adams Express Company that he might not be able to attend to business for several days.

THE NEW PASTOR INSTALLED.

Large Congregations Pleased With the Rev. Richardson.

The Rev. J. W. Richardson began his labors as pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church yesterday. The morning services were enjoyed by a large congregation, and the sermon was able and eloquent. The text was I Cor. II: 2.—"For I determined not to know anything among you but Jesus Christ, and Him Crucified". The discourse was a plain and earnest declaration of the pastor's principle that notwithstanding the inclination of some eminent divines to preach on the new fads of popular religion of the day, he would be like Paul, and preach only the Gospel as in the text. The sermon was one of distinctest utterance and choicest language, and the preacher's manner was most pleasant. The Park Avenue people feel that they have obtained a rare good man, and consider themselves very fortunate to have secured so excellent a pastor.

In the evening the attendance was even larger than in the morning. Every seat was taken. The pastor's theme was "The Fading Leaf", and was founded on the passage "We all do fade as a leaf". In beautiful figures of language the preacher drew lessons from the autumnal season applicable to life, and showed that as the leaves shaded and nourished the trees so our lives should be useful and fruitful, full of service and doing good. We should take lesson from the tree. The sermon was replete with beautiful thoughts, and the pastor revealed a rare power in so rich a development of so simple a text.

The special music of the day was very beautiful. Mrs. Spicer's solos were particularly enjoyable, and J. Linn Edsall's bass solo work was very good. Mr. Edsall's voice has developed remarkable power, and he is taking front rank among Plainfield's vocalists.

Altogether, the opening day of the new pastor was most auspicious. He is popular from the start.

Work of the Week of Prayer.

The services in the Crescent Avenue and First Baptist churches last evening were given up entirely to the work of the International committee of the Young Men's Christian associations, in accordance with the programme of the week of prayer for young men. In the former church Wm. D. Murray and F. H. Andrews ably presented the features of the work, and in the latter place Chas. T. Kissam spoke along the same lines.

In addition to the above, short addresses were delivered after the close of the sermons, in the following churches: A. B. Beers, in the Methodist; A. C. LaBoyteaux, in the First Presbyterian; and Charles B. Brown, in the Trinity Reformed church. These addresses were all listened to attentively, and the growth and work of the Young Men's Christian associations were shown to be such as to merit the aid and sympathy of every one interested in the welfare of young men.

SPEAKER LANE.

Pick a Fitter One or One With Better Right, if You Can.

Out of the smoke of the political battle just fought, looms forth in the front rank of local victors, Thomas F. Lane of Summit. No one deserves greater credit for winning than he, as his struggle was against odds and handicaps that would have frightened away almost every other man.

He went into the convention with but a handful of delegates, yet held the nomination suspended until after two-score of ballots he reached forth and grasped it for himself, and with the same unprecedented and incomparable shrewdness and skill he won the election.

Now no one in the assembly-elect can contest his right to the speaker's chair, for all reasons that establish such right. Length of service, ability to move along the business of the house smoothly and speedily, force of character and executive strength to hold unruly debaters and partisan members in check, all are component parts of Thomas Lane, and of no other assemblyman-elect to a sufficient degree

His New Gun.

Charley Smith, alias "Du'chy", has just become the happy possessor of a handsome new L. C. Smith hammerless ejector gun, from the Hunter Arms Co., of Hartford, Conn. The other day he invited a few of his friends to accompany him to the Independent Gun club grounds and try the merits of the new purchase at live birds and blue-rocks, and from the way Charley killed the birds and smashed the targets there is no question but that the gun "fits him".

Regeneration.

To secure a normal and regular tissue change throughout the body use BRANDETH'S PILLS. This tissue metamorphosis consists in constantly proceeding waste of tissue and its regeneration. BRANDETH'S PILLS are the best solvent of the products of disintegration of the tissues and increases their elasticity. They are an alterative and eliminative remedy, which allay irritation and remove obstruction by aiding nature and are of great benefit in cases of temporary and habitual constipation, torpid liver, biliousness, headache, indigestion, rheumatism and diseases arising from an impure state of the blood.

BRANETH'S PILLS are purely vegetable, absolutely harmless and safe to take at any time.

DUNELLEN'S JOLLIFICATION.

Everybody Joins in a Great Hurrah Over Democracy's Triumph.

Never in the history of politics in Middlesex county has there been a grander or more inspiriting sight than was presented at Dunellen Saturday night in the great Democratic parade which took place there.

The line of march was formed on Front street. There were about 1,000 in line. At the head were the Democratic club and Bound Brook band, and next came a wagon, handsomely trimmed, with a boat imitating "Harrison" going up Salt River, also placards such as "Did you hear the drop!" "How about the converted Democrats!" etc. A large body of horsemen was followed by the rank and file of happy citizens.

The streets were never so full of spectators, and the display of decorations, illuminations, fireworks and red lights along the line was unprecedented. No houses were more extensively illuminated than those of Messrs. Schepflin, Staats, Doolittle, Rider, Moynihan, Taylor and Maier. These and scores of others made brilliant exhibits of lights and fireworks. After the parade, which lasted about three hours, they all returned to the Democratic headquarters, where sandwiches and coffee were served in abundance.

THE OFFICIAL RETURNS.

Grover Cleveland's Plurality Over 15,000 and Judge Werts's Over 8,000.

Official returns from most of the counties of the State have been received. They show that Grover Cleveland's plurality in the State is more than 15,000, while Judge Werts, for Governor, received more than 8,000 plurality. The gains over the unofficial figures are principally in Burlington, Cumberland, Hudson, Hunterdon, Middlesex, Monmouth and Warren counties.

Cleveland carried the State outside of Hudson county by more than 11,000 plurality, and Judge Werts by nearly 2,000 plurality. The largest Democratic gains were made in Camden, Passaic and Middlesex counties. The vote by counties, with Salem, Ocean and Camden non-official, is as follows:

	Werts.	Kean.	C'land.	H'son.
Atlantic	—	288	—	328
Bergen	713	—	846	—
Burlington	—	347	—	249
Camden	—	1,280	—	1,159
Cape May	—	81	—	171
Cumberland	—	946	—	822
Essex	—	1,198	1,221	—
Gloucester	—	270	—	254
Hudson	6,257	—	8,648	—
Hunterdon	1,384	—	1,672	—
Mercer	—	774	—	395
Middlesex	1,764	—	2,195	—
Monmouth	1,222	—	1,333	—
Morris	44	—	66	—
Ocean	—	520	—	500
Passaic	—	821	—	434
Salem	—	100	—	150
Somerset	55	—	104	—
Sussex	764	—	868	—
Union	615	—	871	—
Warren	1,919	—	2,017	—
Totals	14,737	6,625	19,841	4,462
Plurality	8,112	—	15,379	—

Official figures from the remaining three counties will probably increase rather than decrease the pluralities for the Democratic candidates.

A Plainfielder's Enterprise.

(Bound Brook Chronicle.)

A large tract of land lying on the top of the Watchung Mountains, at the head of Mountain avenue, and overlooking a beautiful expanse of country, is now owned by J. T. Vail, of Plainfield, and is being extensively advertised as "Mizzen Peak". It has been cleared of its underbrush, an observatory has been built upon it, and Mr. Vail expects soon to be able to develop the property by selling off portions of it to wealthy New York people who are looking for attractive sites for Summer homes.

A movement ought to be started to improve that portion of Mountain avenue from the foot of the mountain to a point half-way up the slope. The upper half was put in good condition a short time ago by ex-freeholder Kirch and others, and if the lower half were now repaired, the road would not only attract trade to Bound Brook but would remove an obstacle in the way of building up this charming region.

Good roads always enlarge the demand for country and suburban property, and enhance the value of farming lands. If the Bridgewater township committee would make an appropriation for this object, doubtless many private individuals, more or less directly or indirectly interested, donate funds for the same purpose

An Accident Patient at Muhlenberg.

Last week, while riding on a coal train near Dunellen, Edward Burke slipped between the bumpers of two coal cars and had his foot badly crushed. He was taken from the train at the Prospect avenue crossing, where Dr. Brakely dressed the wound and ordered his removal to the hospital. Charles English then took charge of the injured man and had him speedily sent to Muhlenberg Hospital, at Plainfield. He had some trouble in securing a hack but soon had his patient comfortably seated in a conveyance and taken to the hospital, where he is now doing nicely. The man was moderately well dressed and had been employed in one of the machine shops at Bound Brook. He resided with his sister at Elizabeth.

—Bound Brook Chronicle: "If Republicans would but have the courage of their convictions they would win more battles. There is no earthly reason why H. N. Spencer should have been defeated, except that many Republicans voted for Mr. Huff, who has no more qualifications for the office than Mr. Spencer."

THE BEST IN NEW YORK.

What Music and Fun is Being Offered to Matinee-Goers at the Metropolitan Theaters.

Owing to "Wang's" great popularity with all classes of New York theatre-goers, and in deference to the written and orally-expressed wishes of many of the Broadway patrons, Mr. Hopper has decided again to present Goodwin and Morse's jolly burletta this week which is the last of his present engagement. The final presentations are positively announced, in the metropolis, for at the close of his road season—which will be inaugurated at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, on the 21st inst—the comedian will shelve "Wang," and at the beginning of his return engagement at the Broadway theater next spring, will present a new opera by the same author and composer.

"The Black Crook" is still at the Academy of Music with its gorgeous ballets, bevies of comely girls, quadrille dancers and other attractions. It will probably remain at this house for many weeks to come, as the theater is well filled at every performance, not excepting the Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

At Proctor's Twenty-third street theater Hopkins's Trans-Oceanics will begin the second and last week of their engagement to-night. Trewey, Melville and Stetson, James and Lucy Allison, the Dixon Brothers, Whitley and Leonard, Marguerite Fish and Charles Warren will all appear. The performance is an admirable one.

A brand-new production of the well-known "Fun on the Bristol" will take place at the Bijou theater to-night, and it will be supplemented by a number of musical, vaudeville and other features. The Yum-Ka-Poo troupe of Japanese dancers, Geran, Mlle. Bonisi and Inez Arnos will be seen. John J. Sheridan will play the leading part.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. John H. VanWinkle.

(From The Paris, Ills., Beacon.)

DEATH OF MRS. EMMA VAN WINKLE.

It is probable that no single event has ever been productive of more general sadness in this city, than the death of Mrs. Emma VanWinkle nee Judson, which occurred at an early hour Sunday morning at her home in Plainfield, N. J. Only a little over a year ago, this noble young woman stood at the altar a happy bride. It was our pleasure to be present on that occasion and never have we seen a more beautiful or auspicious wedding. In the two lives thus united, there seemed to be wanting no element of joy. Little did any one dream that the young wife was even then entering the impenetrable shadows that veil the tomb. After her marriage, Mrs. VanWinkle accompanied her husband to his home in Plainfield, N. J., where she lived out a few short months of her life. It is sad indeed that she should thus be called at a time when life seemed filled with the brightest possibilities, but to the hearts thus made desolate, there remains the sweet assurance that God knows best. The life thus abruptly terminated, has been one replete with good deeds and honest endeavor to add to the happiness of others. A type of true womanhood, earnest, patient and helpful, her presence was a benediction to all with whom she came in contact and her pure and lofty character has left an impress for good that will live on long after the marble that marks her resting place shall have crumbled beneath the touch of time. Mrs. VanWinkle's illness was of several months duration, but its serious character was not suspected until about ten days ago when her mother was summoned from Colorado. The interment will be made in New Jersey sometime Wednesday. Miss Bessie Judson who has been visiting in the city departed for Plainfield immediately upon receipt of the telegram announcing her sister's death.

WEDDING OF MISS FANNIE TYLER.

Mr. and Mrs. Kelsey Were of the Bridal Party.

In St. Andrew's Protestant Episcopal church, Fifth avenue and 127th street, New York, at 8:30 o'clock Thursday night, Miss Fannie Louise Tyler, the only child of Charles Curtiss Tyler, and niece of C. C. Tyler, formerly of this city, was married to Dr. Le Roy Watkins Hubbard.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. George Clarke Cox of Ridgewood, N. J., assisted by the Rev. Dr. Van de Water, the rector of the church. The attendants of the bride were her two cousins, Mrs. Clifford S. Kelsey, a bride of two weeks, and Miss Lulu Tyler. The maid of honor was Mrs. Clara Wardwell, who wore a becoming gown of pink china silk and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses. Louis V. Hubbard attended his brother as best man. The ushers were Ira A. Place, Dr. Herrmann M. Biggs, Dr. J. Carlisle, Allen Wardwell, Henry Dunman, C. S. Kelsey, O. H. Corsa, and the bride's cousin, Corydon C. Tyler.

The bridal gown was of heavy white corded silk, draped with point-lace, and the veil was of white tulle, fastened with orange blossoms and a diamond pin, a gift from the bridegroom. A reception for 500 guests followed at 1,935 Madison avenue, the home of the bride's father.

—The fair for the benefit of the church debt of the German Reformed church, in Thorn's block, Somerset street, will begin Tuesday evening, and be continued till Saturday evening.

THE CLOSING SESSION

Important Work Yet Remains for the 52d Congress.

WASHBURN ANTI-OPTION BILL.

It is the First Special Order for the Senate—The Free Coinage Bill—Appropriations for the Current Year Likely to Evoke Little Discussion.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—On Monday, Dec. 5, three weeks from to-day, the 52d Congress will meet in final session. In the interest which has centred around the probable make-up and action of the 53d Congress, sight has been lost for the time of the important work yet remaining uncompleted on the calendar of the 52d Congress.

One of the first matters to be brought before the Senate will be the Washburn Anti-Option bill, which has already passed the House, and which has shown that it has a clear majority in favor of its passage in the Senate.

The title of the bill is "H. H. 7845, an Act defining 'Options' and 'Futures,' imposing special taxes on dealers therein, and requiring such persons engaged in selling certain products to obtain license, and for other purposes."

Its provisions are so sweeping that they would practically, it is charged, shut up the Chicago wheat pit, the New Orleans Cotton exchange, and other institutions of like character. A strong opposition was developed to the bill in the Senate, but there was a still stronger movement in its favor.

Mr. Washburn, of Minnesota, who had the bill in charge, only consented to lay it aside so as to allow of an adjournment of Congress when August had far advanced, on condition that it should be made the first special order for the next session, and should be fought out to a finish.

This accordingly has to be done. The Senate has a number of other important House bills on its calendar. These have slumbered hitherto in the Committee on Finance, but a determined effort will be made to bring them out and to send them up to the President for his action. The House may possibly be given an opportunity to reconsider its action and to take up the Senate's Free Coinage of Silver bill. The silver men will try to bring this about.

The appropriations for the current year will probably evoke little discussion except in one important respect. Secretary of the Treasury Foster, to whom the law requires that all estimates shall be sent prior to the meeting of Congress, has already intimated informally that those estimates will simply be a duplication of the appropriations which Congress has already agreed to be necessary for this year, and that no recommendations will be made for any increases of expenditure or of force.

The one exception upon which a lively discussion may be looked for, is that part of the Sundry Civil bill which makes appropriation for expenses of United States courts, commissioners, marshals and deputy marshals. Mr. Allison stated to the Senate, when reporting the Sundry Civil bill for this year, as agreed upon in conference, that the reductions made by the House would inevitably result in a deficiency.

The Senate wished to appropriate $900,000 for "Fees and expenses of United States marshals and deputies. The House cut the amount down to $675,000 and stuck to that figure. The Senate gave $145,000 for fees of United States commissioners; the House knocked off $45,000. The Senate appropriated $225,000 for fees of clerks, etc.; the House reduced the amount to $175,000. Any attempt to appropriate for deficiencies under these heads will assuredly precipitate a debate which will bring up the whole question of the election laws and their enforcement.

In the absence of Mr. Allison in Europe attending to his duties as member of the International Monetary Conference, Mr. Hale of Maine will be acting chariman of the Senate Committee on Appropriations.

THE CASE OF LIZZIE BORDEN.

To Be Taken Up By the Grand Jury To-day—Prosecutors Threatened.

TAUNTON, Mass., Nov. 14.—The Lizzie Borden case will be taken up by the grand jury to-day.

Marshal Hilliard is in almost daily receipt of threatening letters and epistles containing all sorts of advice, from an intimation that it would be well for him to leave the country to a direct threat on his life, with a few words of advice as to the proper method of doing his duty thrown in.

Judge Blaisdell has also felt the influence of the crank.

Miss Borden appears to be suffering no inconvenience and shows no great anxiety respecting the coming grand jury hearing. She is outwardly the same cool and composed woman who entered Taunton jail so many weeks ago.

During the day, when she desires, she takes exercise in the corridors of the woman's apartment, and spends much of her time in the hospital room above, where Mrs. Wright has given her two windows full of flowers to look after and in a measure divert her mind. Her health continues good.

THE NEXT MORNING I FEEL BRIGHT AND NEW AND MY COMPLEXION IS BETTER.
My doctor says it acts gently on the stomach, liver and kidneys, and is a pleasant laxative. This drink is made from herbs, and is prepared for use as easily as tea. It is called

MILITARY BALLOONING.

The Complicated Mechanism Used by the German Army.

In Europe the principal governments now have ballooning corps attached to their armies, by means of which observing balloons may be readily transported and quickly inflated on the field. In Germany, much attention has been directed of late to a new process of ballooning invented jointly by Herr Richter, lieutenant of artillery, and Herr Majert, a scientific chemist, for depriving gas of the moisture it contains, and so lessening its specific gravity, to augment its power of raising and sustaining a balloon, with regard to the size of the balloon and the volume of gas. This process is deemed likely to supersede both the use of the special gas manufactured by the Yon system and that of the condensed gas which is supplied by English and Italian companies. The German military balloon car, also, as shown in our illustration, is suspended from a trapeze, which lessens its oscillation. We are indebted to the Illustrated London News for our engraving.

The rope-winding mechanism, by which the height of the balloon is regulated, is arranged upon a strong wagon, and is operated by a steam engine, the whole presenting the general appearance of a steam fire engine. The hydrogen gas for inflating the balloon is carried to the field in highly condensed form in separate steel cylinders. In operation a central steel cylinder, of larger size than the others, is laid upon the ground and the smaller cylinders are then attached to its sides. A flexible pipe at one end of the large cylinder connects the gas to the balloon. Each cylinder has a stop cock by which the gas is allowed to escape into the balloon.

CAT ELECTRICITY.

How an Original Genius Proposes to Utilize It.

An original genius writes this to the Electrical Review:

I desire through your valuable columns to call attention to a new machine of my own invention, which will undoubtedly work a revolution in isolated plant lighting and power generation.

The illustration of the apparatus at present constructed represents a revolving platform or treadmill, suitable for operation by one or more domestic cats, such as may be obtained in the backyard fastnesses of our large cities. Under the inspiring influences of a bunch of catnip, and refreshed by an air blast from the blower (b), these animals furnish power for revolving the shaft carrying the rubbing wheel (e), the flexible radial arms of which are of light bamboo or wicker-work covered with silk.

The entire portion of the machine so far described is mounted on insulated feet, and by the adjustment of the condenser (g) a constant spark is maintained by the passage of the current generated.

The application of this machine for lighting and power purposes is a mere matter of detail.

To Clean Paint and Glass.

Soap will remove the paint; so use but little of it. Cold tea is the best liquid for cleaning varnished paint, window panes and mirrors. A sharp piece of soft wood, says the Boston Journal of Commerce, is indispensable for cleaning out corners. A saucer of sifted ashes should always be at hand to clean unvarnished paint that has been badly smoked; it is better than soap. Never put soap on glass unless it can be thoroughly rinsed off, which can never be done to window glass. Wash off the specks with warm tea and rub the pane dry; then make a paste of whiting and water and put a little in the center of each pane. Take a dry cloth and rub it all over the glass, and then rub it off with a chamois skin or flannel and your windows will shine like crystal.

Relation of Sounds, Colors and Taste.

The peculiar association of a color with a sound by which a certain sound will at once vividly arouse a definite color is a physical phenomena quite frequently mentioned in medical works. The association of color with smell and taste is, however, of much rarer occurrence. Dr. Fere gives an account of a woman who, after taking a spoonful of vinegar, saw everything red for a few minutes, when there was a sudden change, everything appearing of a bright green for the next hour. Drs. Mason and Kinne say that this is due to a "similarity in the subsidiary emotional effects accompanying the sensations and communicated to the nerves of hearing, sight and taste simultaneously."

HORTICULTURE.

THE only kind of fruit which appears not to flourish in California is the apple.

LONDON will this year, it is said, have an exhibition of fruit from the principal countries serving the London market.

A CACTUS plant in a house at Newportville, Pa., last winter grew so fast that it is too tall to be taken out of doors.

A STRAWBERRY plant set in a dry patch of sand will send out its runners in the direction to which the best soil suitable for its growth lies nearest.

OSCAR WILDE is said to be deep in the development of a new flower, a golden-veined tulip, which he declares to be "a triumph of classic horticulture."

"CONFIDENCE BEGETS LOVE."

CHILD. "Gran'ma, kiss me good-night. Sister is asleep, but we so love to hear you tell of all the ladies that call you Mother."

MRS. PINKHAM. "Yes, darling, when you are older perhaps you may do as I have done."

CHILD. "Everybody loves you, gran'ma; I wish everybody would love me."

MRS. PINKHAM. "Everyone will love you, my child, if they can confide in you."

The above dialogue tells its own story; even the little child, without knowing why her grandmother is so universally loved, sees in her face a light of intellectual sympathy that satisfies her. That sympathy has extended itself all over the world, for wherever civilized women exist, Mrs. Pinkham is known and reverenced.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Is the only Positive Cure and Legitimate Remedy for the peculiar weaknesses and ailments of women.

It cures the worst forms of Female Complaints, that Bearing-down Feeling, Weak Back, Falling and Displacement of the Womb, Inflammation, Ovarian Troubles, and all Organic Diseases of the Uterus or Womb, and is invaluable to the Change of Life. Dissolves and expels Tumors from the Uterus at an early stage, and checks any tendency to Cancerous Humor. Subdues Faintness, Excitability, Nervous Prostration, Exhaustion, and strengthens and tones the Stomach. Cures Headache, General Debility, Indigestion, etc., and invigorates the whole system. For the cure of Kidney Complaints of either sex, the Compound has no rival.

All Druggists sell it as a standard article, or sent by mail, in form of Pills or Lozenges, on receipt of $1.00. LYDIA E. PINKHAM MED. CO., LYNN, MASS.

An illustrated book, entitled "Guide to Health and Etiquette," by Lydia E. Pinkham, is of great value to ladies. We will present a copy to anyone addressing us with two 2-cent stamps.

ESSENTIAL OILS.

Now They Are Supposed to Exercise Bactericidal Action.

M. Omeltschenko has made experiments which confirm the views previously put forward that the vapors of essential oils exercise a bactericidal action. By using specially-contrived culture flasks and passing through them air impregnated with the vapors to be studied, he was able also to establish the quantity necessary per liter of air. Thus the bacillus of typhus was killed by air containing the vapor from oil of cinnamon, 0.0005 gramme per liter, or oil of valerian, 0.0082 gramme per liter, in forty-five minutes. The bacillus of tuberculosis required to be exposed for twenty-three hours to air containing 0.018 gramme per liter of oil of cinnamon before fatal effects were produced. Oil of lavender, 0.0078 gramme per liter, effected the same result in twelve hours, and oil of eucalyptus, 0.0252 gramme per liter, in the same length of time. The degree of saturation must be maintained, or, after the first effects of the vapors pass off, though the growth of the germs is prevented, their vitality is not destroyed. The oils are classified according to their strength as germicides, thus: Cinnamon, fennel, lavender, cloves, thyme, mint, anise, eucalyptus, turpentine, lemon and rose, the last two being very weak in disinfecting power. —Bact. World.

EMERGENCY NOTES.

IF choked, get upon all fours and cough.

FOR apoplexy raise the head and body; for fainting lay the person flat.

IF any artery is cut, compress above the wound; if a vein is cut compress below.

FOR slight burns dip the part in cold water; if the skin is destroyed cover with varnish.

IN case of poisoning excite vomiting by tickling the throat or by warm water and mustard.

FOR dust in the eyes, avoid rubbing; dash water in them; remove cinders, etc., with the round point of a lead pencil.

THE NEWSPAPERS.

THE Paris Petit Journal has now reached the enormous circulation of 1,250,000 copies daily.

THE smallest newspaper in the world is El Telegram, published in Guadalajara, Mexico. It is four inches square.

NONE of the leading London journals publish a Sunday edition, and an American paper which made an attempt to establish one in that city failed for a large sum.

AN Indiana paper found it necessary to publish the following correction: "For 'Burglar Meeting' in the heading of an artiole in our last issue relating to the proceedings of the town council, read 'Regular Meeting.'"

TWO YEARS ago, when the shah returned home from Europe, there were no newspapers in Persia, but he was so impressed with their value as agents in the spread of intelligence that he set about founding a few through a ministry of the press that he established. Now there are twelve.

CIVIL WAR IS IMMINENT

Hayti Again Threatened With Interna. Disruption.

THE POPULATION UNDER ARMS

Reported Uprising at Cape Hayti, Which President Hippolyte Has Set Out to Suppress—Cabinet Composition the Cause of the Present Trouble.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Captain Sansom of the Atlas line steamer Adirondack which has arrived from West India ports brings the news that war is again imminent in Hayti.

Captain J. W. Sansom reports that when his vessel was in port at Port-au Prince on Nov. 6, the place was fairly boiling with excitement.

"Almost the entire population," he said, "was under arms, and President Hippolyte was on the point of setting out with a strong force for Cape Hayti, in order to suppress a threatened uprising there. I learned that the cause of the hostile sentiment toward Hippolyte at the Cape is due to the dissatisfaction felt among the leaders there over the construction of the President's Cabinet.

"Hippolyte is himself a man of the North or Cape region, and it was through the loyal support given him there that he was enabled to descend upon Port-au-Prince in the war with Legitime and overthrow the latter's government. Naturally, therefore, the leaders in the North felt that they were entitled to a large representation in Hippolyte's Cabinet.

"At first they had nothing to complain of, as the President, it is said, gave the portfolios almost exclusively to the men who had helped him to conquer. Latterly, however, it is charged, he has filled vacancies as they occurred with men of the South—men who fought against him under the banner of Legitime.

"The Cape Region has not only resented this exclusion of their representatives from among Hippolyte's advisers, but has grown very jealous of what appears to them to be a surrender on the part of Hippolyte to Southern influences. Hence it is easily understood that they bestow upon him the epithets of 'traitor,' 'renegade,' 'ingrate,' and the like."

A QUEER HALLUCINATION.

Imaginary Evils That Are Besetting a Poughkeepsie Couple.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Nov. 15.—A singular case of domestic affliction has been discovered in this city. John Vaughn and his wife, tenants in a cottage on Talmadge street owned by E. J. Allen of the Astor House, New York, are both afflicted with a hallucination.

They imagine that ether and other deadly gases are being blown into their home by the children of the neighborhood and that at night people pump the gases into their house with invisible pumps.

They have closed the windows and doors of the house tightly and hide themselves there constantly. The woman is splendidly educated and nearly 50 years of age.

The husband fancies the same thing and they say they are hiding from what seems to be universal determination to poison them both.

The case has created much interest in medical circles as well as throughout the city.

M. B. CURTIS' SECOND TRIAL.

A Californian Who Says He Saw the Actor Fire the Fatal Shot.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 15.—The second trial of Maurice B. Curtis, the actor, better known as "Sam'l of Posen," for the murder of Policeman Alexander Grant, Sep. 11, 1891, was called yesterday in the criminal court, Judge Trout presiding.

A new witness has been found, J. W. Cann, a resident of the interior of the State, who says that he saw the scuffle and is positive that Curtis shot the policeman twice in succession. He explains his failure to make himself known at the time by saying he had purchased a ticket for the next morning's boat and did not desire to be detained in the city.

Charged With Altering Returns.

BUFFALO, Nov. 15.—Officers have arrested Edward Duffy, a school teacher, who was pool clerk at the First district of Cheektowago on election day, on a charge of forgery in the second degree, in altering the returns from that district. The complaint on which he was arrested is to the effect that he so changed the returns from his district that the majority of 7 which Mr. Quinby, Republican candidate for district-attorney, rightly had, was turned off, and Mr. Bissel, his opponent, given a majority of 31.

Another Explanation of the Result.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The latest explanation of the election is given by Mr. Fred C. Waite, the special expert of the Census Bureau, in charge of the statistics of true wealth. He says the election went the way it did because a million Republican farmers stayed at home last Tuesday. All the other surprises of the election seem to him to have been but the following out of natural laws well established by statistics.

Fatal Accident at a Jollification.

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., Nov. 15.—Intelligence has reached here that during the Democratic jollification meeting last Saturday night Bakersville, sixteen miles west of this city, by the bursting of a cannon a man whose name was not known had one leg torn off and a piece of the cannon struck Mrs. Ford, who was looking out of the window, and knocked her head off.

A Fugitive Slave Dead.

BUFFALO, Nov. 15.—Humphrey Smith, colored, is dead at his home on Blue Hill in the town of Yorkshire, at the remarkable age of 108. He was born near Richmond, Va., of slave parents, in 1784, but escaped to the North when young and lived on Grand Island for a number of years. Some 60 years ago he moved to Yorkshire.

White's Bail Fixed at $100,000.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Judge Lacombe has decided to admit Charles A. White, charged with the larceny of $70,000 from his wife in Cheyenne, Wyo., in $100,000 bail. His counsel said he could secure the necessary bonds.

FIVE WERE KILLED.

The Boiler Explosion on the Reading Near Schuylkill Haven.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 15.—The cause of the boiler explosion on the Reading near Schuylkill Haven, is a mystery that will be cleared up only by a thorough investigation.

The report of the explosion was heard several miles distant, and the shock caused the buildings in the neighborhood to tremble, awakening the occupants and causing much excitement.

The residents of Schuylkill Haven flocked to the scene, and a sad sight met their gaze. Pinioned beneath a mass of broken machinery was Dobbins, and his groans and cries for relief were frightful. The men set to work, and he was soon liberated, placed on an engine, and taken to his home.

The killed were:

WILLIAM COWEY, engineer, of Port Carbon.

WILLIAM MOYER, fireman, of Palo Alto.

HARRY ALLISON, engineer, of Palo Alto.

CONDUCTOR KENDRICK, of Port Carbon.

C. J. C. MACKAY, fireman, of Port Carbon.

Michael Dobbins, a brakeman, was badly injured.

The engine had just finished making a shift and coupled up to a train. The moment the steam was applied the explosion followed.

Cowey was hurled against rocks and every bone in his body was crushed.

Moyer was hurled one hundred yards away into a field.

The others lay near the wreck.

The engine was No. 563 and belonged to the freight trade.

On Sunday she was put on the coal trade and at the time of the accident was on her way to Palo Alto.

The locomotive is a complete wreck.

Cowey and Moyer belonged to another crew and were deadheading it home to Palo Alto.

The others belonged to the engine which exploded.

The boiler was hurled 75 yards.

Some of the dead were horribly mutilated.

WILL OF CHARLES E. POWERS.

His Divorced Wife Remembered to the Extent of $300 a Year.

BOSTON, Nov. 15.—The will of the late Charles E. Powers, whose former wife is in Denver seeking to have set aside the divorce obtained in the State of Colorado by Mr. Powers, is on file in the Suffolk County Probate Court.

After giving the household furniture to the testator, to his daughters it gives the residue of the estate in trust to Linus M. Child, John Goldthwaite, Marion Powers Lowry and Florence Agnes Powers Harding, the two last of whom are daughters of the deceased.

One clause is to pay from said income to my dear friend and amanuensis, Fanny Sprague, of Hingham, Mass., $900 per annum during her natural life, etc.

The next clause is to pay from said income to my former wife Nellie Powers, in consideration of our former relations and because she is not entitled to any dower of homestead rights or other rights in my estate (by reason of her desertion and refusal to live with me as a wife, I having obtained a divorce from her on said grounds) the sum of $300 per annum during her natural life, etc.

The will is dated Aug. 12, 1891 and in contingencies Miss Sprague will get $10,000 and in other contingencies $17,000.

Large bequests are made to public institutions in Boston, but on contingencies never likely to occur.

It is understood that Mrs. Powers' attempt to set aside the divorce will be resisted, as her success would materially diminish the amount going to the daughters.

KILLED BY A ROBBER'S BRUTALITY.

Mrs. Gruse Lay Ill and Was Choked Until She Told Where Her Money Was.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Nov. 15.—Mrs. John Gruse died yesterday from shock and injuries caused by John Zertioc, a boarder, who went into the room where she lay sick Saturday night, and choked her until she told him where her money was.

She had concealed $140 under her pillow. Zertioc took it and fled to the mountains.

Officials are in pursuit of the miscreant.

Baltimore & Ohio Rumors.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 15.—There is considerable gossip on the Stock Exchange and in the brokers' offices about the future of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. The return from Europe of Robert Garrett just at this time creates new rumors as to how the stock holdings of the Garrett family will be voted at the stockholders' meeting next Monday. Some prominent financiers suggest that Mr. Garrett favors a deal which would practically mean a perpetual solidification of business interests.

Suicide of a Young Preacher.

ORANGE, Mass., Nov. 15.—Rev. G. H. Harris, aged 22, pastor of the Universalist Church, North Orange, committed suicide on Saturday night by shooting. He was unmarried and lived alone. He was not missed until his congregation was seated in church Sunday forenoon. A messenger found him dead in his study with a revolver in his hand. Mr. Harris was ordained last year. He was a native of Pennsylvania.

Anarchy in the French Army.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—Much anxiety has been caused by an exhibition of anarchy in the army. While troops were waiting at the Campeigne station a private insulted and struck an officer, felling him to the ground and crying, "Long Live Anarchy," "Down With the Army and Its Officers."

BIG BLAZE IN M'KEESPORT.

The City Was Without Water—National Tube Works to the Rescue.

MCKEESPORT, Pa., Nov. 15.—At 4 o'clock last evening a fire broke out at the corner of Jenny Lind and Eleventh streets and in less than half an hour six houses were in flames and the fire rapidly spreading.

As the city was without water, the pumps at the water works having given out early in the day and the river over five blocks away, nothing could be done to check it. After ten houses had been consumed the National Tube Works came to the rescue by pumping water into the city's mains from their works, thus enabling the firemen to bring three lines of hose to play upon the now furious flames.

With the assistance of citizens a number of houses were torn down, and, after a hard struggle the firemen succeeded in checking the flames and soon had the fire under control. Had it not been for the assistance of the National Tube Works, at least three or four blocks would have been in ashes by midnight.

The fire originated in a grocery store caused by the explosion of a lamp which set fire to a barrel of oil. The loss is estimated at $60,000. Insurance small.

Homestead Strike to Continue.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 15.—The Advisory Boards of all the Carnegie mills held a conference yesterday afternoon to discuss the question whether the strike should be declared off or continue. According to the statement of President Garland, of the Amalgamated Association, the strike will continue, and the present state of affairs at the Carnegie mills remain unchanged.

Girl of 14 Commits Suicide.

JERSEY CITY, Nov. 15.—Jennie Barker, 14 years old, of 12 Germania avenue, this city, took a dose of paris green last night and was unconscious when discovered. She was sent to the City hospital, and it is said that she will die. The reason for her act is not known.

De Steurs and His Former Wife.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—Chevalier de Steurs, Minister of the Netherlands to France, whose wife secured a divorce in South Dakota, and married again, says that she will be arrested for bigamy if she goes to Holland.

Orphans Get $75 Each.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 15.—The payment of the annuity to flood orphans was made here yesterday, when $26,325 was distributed. Each orphan under 16 years of age was paid $75. There are 271 of them.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

A BIG DEFICIT.

Report of the Life and Reserve Association's Receiver.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 15.—Receiver Waterman has finished his examination of the books and affairs of the wrecked Life and Reserve Association and presents the results of his work to the share and policy holders. The total deficit is $107,423.85.

The statement shows the $2,000 which W. W. Carlin is supposed to have borrowed from the association is without security. It shows that $32,853.94 of the reserve fund has disappeared, which has gone the receiver knows not where, nor can he even specify how the money has been spent.

In view of the charges which have been made against ex-Judge Harlan J. Swift and the other officers of the association, the report is highly interesting.

The order has 6,000 members all of whom will be requested to vote on the continuance or closing up of the wrecked organization.

HIS CONNECTION WITH THE ADAMS.

He Made It the Largest and Most Successful Concern of the Kind in the World—He Landed in New York in 1832 Penniless, and Later Spent Millions.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—John Hoey, millionaire, philanthropist, and man-about-town, passed away at 10:10 o'clock last night in his parlors at Delmonico's. He was surrounded by the sorrow stricken members of his family, to whom he had ever been warmly attached.

Dr. Robertson, his physician, was also present. Father Thomas J. Ducey, of St. Leo's Church on 28th street, had been called in by Mrs. Hoey and had administered the last rites of the Church to the dying man, who had been unconscious for some hours.

Bright's disease was the immediate cause of death. It had been precipitated by a severe cold which Mr. Hoey had taken several days ago. His condition had been known to be critical for three days, but death had not been expected quite so soon.

Few men have had such a remarkable or romantic career as Mr. Hoey. Born in Ireland in 1825 of poor parents, he started out in the world to earn his own living at the age of eleven, securing passage as cabin boy on a vessel coming to this city. Ragged and penniless, he wandered up Broadway, and got employment in a newspaper office. Three years later, he secured a place as an express boy.

In 1840, Adams of Boston started his express company, and William Brown Dinsmore of Boston acted as his agent in this city, with no equipment other than a carpet bag. A man named Beecher was Adams' opposition but when Adams bought out Beecher Hoey went to Adams.

From carrying letters and packages Hoey was put in charge of the wagon delivery. At night he studied in a a Prince street school. From porter Hoey became clerk.

When the gold fever broke out and Adams & Co. of the East became the great bankers, as well as the common carriers of the West, Hoey established an express line in his own name, running to Charleston, S. C., which was subsequently merged in the reorganized Adams Express company, at a good figure. During the gold fever the company controlled the express trade between the East and West.

When Hoey was younger he found much amusement in Billy Burton's theatre in Chambers street. It was here he met Josephine Shaw, the English actress. An introduction followed, and a year later the fair Josephine became Mrs. Hoey. For several years after this marriage Mrs. Hoey was leading lady at Wallack's.

During the war Hoey made over $500,000 in stock speculation.

Eight years ago current report had it that he was financially embarrassed. He opened Hollywood Park in 1882, but as the season was not successful he lost a fortune.

On May 10, 1888, Mr. Hoey was elected president of the Adams Express company, which position he held until displaced on Oct. 12, 1891, by the directors of the company. Malfeasance was charged.

Legal suits resulted, and the affair, it is now said, affected him greatly, so far as his health was concerned.

He leaves three children, George, Josephine and Frederick.

Mr. Hoey was a man of fads and hobbies, but they were hobbies that always led to some refined or refining conclusion. As a very young man he developed a great taste for clothes, a taste which he carried to his grave. He was always scrupulously neat in appearance, not finicky or modish, but dressed like the gentleman of the day.

As the means were acquired to gratify his tastes Mr. Hoey developed a delightful taste for art and bric-a-brac. He was a most intelligent and good buyer, not in the sense of depreciating values, but rather in substantiating them.

He loved to potter about in shops in out of the way places. Though not much of a traveler, he made several trips to Europe, always returning with large additions to his already extensive collections.

When he bought the house at No. 618 Fifth avenue he added a large picture gallery and filled it with the best examples of the modern masters. He bought largely for Mr. Dinsmore also, and his taste and judgment were generally recognized among artists and connoisseurs.

For flowers he had a passionate fancy, his collection of orchids and roses being at one time the finest in the country. For music, too, he had a strong leaning, his box at the old Academy of Music invariably being occupied by himself and Mrs. Hoey.

His first love for the stage seemed to be intensified by the fact that his wife had been an actress, and he was, perhaps, the best known and most indefatigable first-nighter in New York.

As an employer, Mr. Hoey showed some of the best and fairest qualities of his nature. He was adored by those under him. A strict disciplinarian, stern, even, but always just, he never asked any one to do what he couldn't do or hadn't done himself.

John Hoey was more than brave, as physical courage goes. He was absolutely fearless.

Two Railroaders Killed in Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Nov. 15.—About 6 o'clock last evening, while a switch engine on the Nickel Plate was making up a train at the Elk street crossing, this city, it was struck by a fast freight on the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western road. A switchman named Connolly was instantly killed, and Fireman John O'Connell and an engineer, name unknown, were badly scalded. O'Connell is dying at the Emergency hospital. The dead and injured were all D., L. & W. employes. The property loss will reach $40,000.

Helpless for Days in Mid-Sea.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The National line steamer England which left London Oct 16 and has just arrived, reports that on Oct. 29, in lat. 42.35, long. 57.40 her machinery became disabled and the ship stopped, and for thirteen days drifted around, unmanageable. She was favored with very fine weather throughout the voyage. On Nov. 8, at 1.45 p. m., in lat. 56.13, the machinery had been sufficiently repaired to enable the England to proceed slowly to her destination.

PETRILLO DIED HARD.

The Connecticut Murderer Struggled Desperately at His Execution.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 15.—Andrew Petrillo was hanged in the New Haven county jail yesterday. The drop fell at 10:46 o'clock. At 10:55 the body was cut down and life pronounced extinct by the surgeons in attendance.

The crime for which Petrillo was hanged was a cold-blooded premeditated murder. He was an inveterate gambler and made a great deal of money by successful "monte throwing."

One of his victims was Michael Demeo, his brother-in-law, who kept a saloon on Lafayette street, this city. Petrillo won money from him repeatedly before Demeo realized that he was being swindled.

He resolved to get even and win some of his money back, so he engaged a professional gambler from New York to come to this city and play "monte" with Petrillo. The gambler came and Petrillo fell into the trap.

The New Yorker was more skilful than he was, and in one sitting won over $300 from him.

Petrillo afterwards learned of the game Demeo had put upon him, and demanded his money back. Demeo refused, whereupon Petrillo swore vengeance.

On Saturday night, April 18, 1891, Petrillo met his brother-in-law on a street corner near his saloon and again demanded his money back. Demeo again refused, and Petrillo shot him through the heart, killing him instantly.

Fully 800 people were in the jail yard and witnessed the execution.

Petrillo awoke cheerful and joked with the death watch, but when the sheriff arrived to read the death warrant, he broke down and cried aloud.

While he was being bound he repeatedly shouted police and struggled desperately.

He kept up the cry of police until the trap was sprung.

The execution was a bungling job, the culprit slowly strangling to death, moaning at intervals of a few seconds until life was extinct.

TRUMPBOUR ON TRIAL.

The Case Against the Kingston Bank Defaulter Opened.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 15.—The trial of Matthew T. Trumpbour, one of the defaulting officers of the Ulster County Savings Institution, was commenced yesterday afternoon before Judge Fursman, of Troy. The court room was thronged with spectators when the trial opened.

The present trial is on an indictment against Trumpbour for perjury, in swearing falsely to a report returned to the State Banking Department as to the financial condition of the bank.

District-Attorney Vanderlyn and ex-Attorney-General Schoonmaker appear for the People, and Hon. William Lounsberry and D. M. DeWitt for the prisoner.

An extra panel of 300 jurors was summoned, and the balance of the day was occupied in examining jurors who were disqualified for various reasons.

It is believed that the trial will occupy the greater portion of the week.

At the conclusion of the Trumpbour trial the indictment for perjury against Ostrander, another officer of the institution, will be tried.

Both of the defendants were present in court. Trumpbour has been confined in jail for the past two weeks, his bondsmen having surrendered him.

He looks to be a physical wreck, and his counsel endeavored to stave off the trial on the ground of Trumpbour's physical and mental condition, but was not successful.

TWO CHILDREN KIDNAPPED.

A Lad and His Sister Disappear on the Way to Sunday School.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 15.—John Smith, aged 10, and his sister, aged 13, are supposed to have been kidnapped in this city Sunday.

They left home to attend Sabbath school, and no trace can be found of them in or about the city.

An unknown man was seen with the children near the railroad depot.

A Big Suit Against Lancaster.

LEBANON, Pa., Nov. 15.—A suit will soon be tried in the Lebanon county court in which $100,000 is involved. It is brought by the Lancaster county commissioners against the City of Lancaster to recover $100,000 paid by the county for damages for opening streets in that city. The suit hinges upon the construction the court will place upon an act of Assembly regulating the opening of streets.

Had His Nose Bitten Off.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 15.—In a political quarrel here growing out of the Democratic parade ratifying the election of Cleveland and Stevenson, Edward Riley, City Hall Commissioner, had part of his nose bitten off by Frederick Schnatz. Riley had attempted to knock a tin rooster off of Schatz's hat. Schnatz was arrested and held to the grand jury under $1,000 bail, which he gave.

Two Queens to Attend a Bull Fight.

MADRID, Nov. 15.—The Queens of Spain and Portugal will be present at a bull fight, on Wednesday. The Queen of Portugal is anxious to see a bull fight and the Duke of Veragua has promised eight bulls of his famous Andalusian breed for the occasion. This is the first time Queen Christina, of Spain, has attended such an entertainment since the death of her husband.

Trainman Monroe Will Die.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 15.—William M. Monroe, the trainman, who was shot at Lyons yesterday, has not yet regained consciousness, and his recovery is thought impossible. Three men, who give their names as George White, Edward Kirby, and George Stevens, are under arrest at Lyons, suspected of complicity in the crime.

Failure of Building Contractors.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Nov. 15.—Lindsey Brothers, building contractors, have failed. Their liabilities are about $30,000, and the nominal assets are about the same. The firm was hard pressed by creditors, though doing considerable work, employing about 100 men.

Manchester Martyrs to be Honored.

CORK, Nov. 15.—The Fenian societies are preparing for an imposing demonstration in this city on Nov. 27, to celebrate the memory of the Manchester Martyrs, Allen, Gould and Larkin, who were hanged 26 years ago for complicity in the Fenian movement of that time.

THE BOWLING LEAGUE.

ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING SATURDAY NIGHT.

A New President Elected—Schedule Committee Appointed—The Contest to Begin Soon and Will be Rolled in One Section, With Plainfield's C. Y. M. L. and the Crescents.

[Elizabeth Journal.]

A very important meeting of the Journal Bowling League was held Saturday night and considerable business was transacted.

There were represented the Arthur Kulls, the Alcyones, the Plainfield Crescents, the Field club, the C. Y. M. L., of Plainfield, the Pioneers and the Roselle Casino.

In the absence of president Wooten, the meeting was call to order by vice-president Davis, and after the roll-call, the minutes of the previous meeting were adopted as read by secretary Cooley.

Mr. Cooley then read a letter from president Wooten in which that gentleman stated that owing to the fact that several of the members of the Villa Lintas would reside in New York city this winter, it would be impossible for the club to enter a team in the league.

The resignation of Mr. Wooten as president of the league, which was necessitated by the withdrawal of the Villa Lintas, accompanied the communication, and was accepted with many regrets.

The election of a new president was then considered. Mr. Warner of the Roselles and Mr. Shreve of the Alcyones were both put in nomination, but both declined the honor, as they said they could not find time to perform the duties.

Vice-president Davis was also nominated. He at first declined, but finally was prevailed upon to resign as vice-president and was immediately and unanimously elected president of the league.

This created a vacancy in the vice-presidency, which J. W. Shreve of the Alcyones was elected to fill.

The offices all being filled, the regular business was resumed.

Mr. Tobin presented the report of the committee on sections, which divided the clubs as follows: First division—Y. M. C. L. A., Arthur Kulls, Alcyones, Pioneers, U. C. R. Second division—Crescents, C. Y. M. L., Roselle, E. F. C and Cranfords.

The Cranfords were not represented and had sent no word to the league, and from conversations which some of the gentlemen present had had with members of the club, it was thought that the Cranfords would not enter the league.

Under these circumstances the committee changed its report and recommended that if found possible the games be rolled off in one section, as with nine clubs competing it would be unfair for the winner in a section of four clubs to compete for the final honor with the winner of a section of five clubs.

This seemed to be the general feeling of the meeting and the report was received.

Acting on the recommendation of the report, the constitution and by-laws were suspended, and under the suspension a motion was unanimously adopted that the games be rolled in one section.

This will mean that each club will roll sixteen games during the series, and that at the rate of one game per week for each club the season championship will not be decided until next March.

President Davis then announced his appointments on the schedule committee: Messrs. Lyman, Crescents; Warner, Roselles; and Tobin, Field Club, were his selections.

After some informal discussion about the arrangement of the schedule, the meeting was adjourned.

The schedule committee will meet tomorrow night and prepare a draft of the games, copies of which, it is understood, will be mailed to each member of the league, so that final changes may be made at the next meeting of the league, which will probably be called for next Saturday or Monday evening.

Printed copies of the constitution and by-laws will soon be ready and will be distributed to each contesting club. The committee also expect to have neat schedule cards printed on which a record of the league games can be conveniently kept.

The members of the league are very enthusiastic and all are anxious for the series to begin. The games promise to be of great interest and the contesting teams are doing some hard training preparatory to the coming struggle.

SURROGATE PARROT'S THANKS.

He Can Only Express His Gratitude to His Many Friends, Through the Press.

Surrogate Parrot, unable to meet and personally thank those who gave him their hearty support at the recent election, has prepared the following card for publication, and requests its insertion in THE PRESS:

The Board of Canvassers have this day officially declared my election to the office of Surrogate of Union county. The large vote cast for me is appreciated as an evidence of the most kindly feeling on the part of my fellow citizens irrespective of party affiliations I cannot adequately express my gratitude for this renewed expression of their confidence and regard, but I desire thus publicly to convey to them the thanks it is impossible personally to tender, as well as the assurance that my earnest efforts shall be so to administer this office that no one of these many friends will ever have cause to regret the support so generously given. GEORGE T. PARROT.

Elizabeth, N. J., Nov. 12, 1892.

Regeneration.

To secure a normal and regular tissue change throughout the body use BRANDRETH'S PILLS. This tissue metamorphoconsists in constantly proceeding waste of tissue and its regeneration. BRANDRETH'S PILLS are the best solvent of the products of disintegration of the tissues and increases their elasticity. They are an alterative and eliminative remedy, which allay irritation and remove obstruction by aiding nature and are of great benefit in cases of temporary and habitual constipation, torpid liver, biliousness, headache, indigestion, rheumatism and diseases arising from an impure state of the blood.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS are purely vegetable, absolutely harmless and safe to take at any time.

TRESPASSED ON HOSPITALITY.

A Tramp Is Kindly Treated, and Robs a Woman.

A well-dressed man giving his name as James Dwyer visited the house of Mrs. Samuel Bowden, corner of Pond place and South Second street, yesterday afternoon, ostensibly looking for board. Mrs. Bowden showed him around, and he seemed to be pleased with the house, saying that it suited him all right and that he would be near to his work as he worked in the blacksmith's shop at Potter's. After being shown about the house, he asked for a needle and thread to sew a button on his trousers. The mistress helped him to the thread and needle. He then asked leave to go into the parlor and sew it on, which leave was granted to him. After he had the button sewed on, he ransacked a chest of drawers that stood in the parlor, and finding a purse, he emptied it of its contents and skipped. It is time such business as this was stopped. Every day people are bothered with tramps around the western part of the city, who sometimes get haughty answers. The police have been notified about the theft of yesterday and it is hoped he will soon be lodged behind the bars.

No Cause for Alarm.

Janitor S. R. Hope of Bryant school wishes THE PRESS to state that there is not a single case of diphtheria in the school, nor does he expose himself to the disease, not even going home to where his dear little granddaughter lies at death's door.

The World's Columbian Exposition.

The interest in the work of the World's Fair in the State of New Jersey is rapidly increasing. The work claiming especial attention at the present time being the part that women will take in its representation.

The Newark exchange for women's work decided at its last meeting to make an exhibit and in this action the other exchanges will probably join. It is desired that all representative work done by women be put upon exhibition and fully believed that in that exhibit the State will stand second to none. A meeting in the interests of women's work in New Jersey will be held in the Prudential building, corner Broad and Bank streets, Newark, on Monday next at 3 p. m. All women of the State are cordially invited to be present.

Interesting speeches from prominent leaders in the work may be expected and it is hoped the women of Plainfield will show by their attendance their appreciation of the stand it is to be hoped New Jersey will take.

Plainfield Vets Attended.

The annual inspection of the Kearney Soldiers' Home took place at Harrison yesterday. Gen'l B. A. Donnelly, Department G. A. R.; Senior Vice Commander, Jacob White; Junior Vice Commander A. D. Blanchet were present. Dr. John Youngiove, Chairman of the Committee on the Home, reported 48 deaths during the past year the principal causes being dropsy and softening of the brain. The management of the Home was highly extolled by the Inspectors for the evident care taken of the grounds and buildings and the neatness and cleanliness of the comrades and their quarters.

At the conclusion of the inspection, the superintendent, Major Peter Boyers, who has long been Commandant at the Home, led the Inspectors to the family dining room where an elegant spread had been prepared and at which his wife and daughter did the honors.

In Charge of the Board of Health.

Edwin D. Fluck, of 7 North Front street, a man with a large family of children, lost one of his little ones from malignant diphtheria yesterday. The body was buried at once, and the house subjected to fumigation. There are several scattered cases of the disease in town. The board of health is doing all in human power to prevent an epidemic.

BY THE WAY.

—The "Y" devotional meeting will be held in the "Y" rooms to-morrow at 4. The subject will be "Service". All interested are cordially invited to be present.

—It's the No. 1 company with its own horses, that's coming here in "The Midnight Alarm", this evening. The big house given the play in this city last season, secured an engagement of the other company.

—A conversational sociable will be held by the Young People's Christian Endeavor society of Trinity reformed church Thursday evening, in the lecture room of the church. The social committee hope for a full attendance, and look forward to an enjoyable evening.

—Many Plainfield women are students in china decorating, and turn out very creditable work. Fine china for decoration is kept in full stock at Gavett's, where all wants in that line are readily supplied.

—An audience of the very best of Plainfield's people filled the boxes and a large part of the orchestra and dress circle, at Music Hall, last evening. The play was Tennyson's "Foresters", well set and with an unusually complete caste.

All alone, both in the way it acts, and in the way it's sold, is Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription for women.

It acts in this way:

If you're weak or "run-down," it builds you up; if you suffer from any of the painful disorders and derangements peculiar to your sex, it relieves and cures. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, brings refreshing sleep, and restores flesh and strength. For all functional weaknesses and irregularities, it's a positive remedy. Hence, it's sold in this way:

It's guaranteed to give satisfaction, in every case, or the money paid for it is refunded.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets prevent and cure Sick and Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. They're the smallest, the cheapest, the easiest to take.

But all that would be nothing, if they weren't also the best to take.

A PASTOR'S POSITION.

HE HOLDS THE BIBLE TO BE NOT INFALLIBLE.

The Rev. Hobart Clark Explains His Church's Belief, in His Last Sunday Evening Sermon in All Souls' Pulpit, of Which the Following Is an Abstract.

Although it is often said by those who do not know, that the Unitarian church does not believe in the Bible and has no use for it, the saying is not true. The Bible occupies the same place upon our pulpits that it occupies in other churches, and is read by us in very much the same way. The only practical difference between our use of it and theirs is caused by our somewhat different conception of the nature and meaning of inspiration. We hold firmly in common with all Christian churches to the belief that the Bible is inspired and that its inspiration is of God, but we plainly see that it has come to us through men who shared in all the necessary and natural limitation of humanity, even though they were inspired by the Holy Spirit, and we feel compelled to make all due allowance for those limitations. We see that if the Bible is as we certainly believe it to be the Word of God it is still more truly the word of men whose souls were filled with a sense of God's presence in his world, and we find it all the more valuable, interesting and inspiring when its human elements are firmly recognized. We value the letter of the Bible but we care more for the Spirit within the letter, because we see that the mere words of the Bible are necessarily human as God can speak to men through men in no other way.

The speaker then gave a list of the contents of the Bible, mentioned the circumstances and condition under which it was written, and then through which it has been transmitted to us, and the simple facts regarding the Bible which are commonly admitted by all men. Dwelt upon some of the results of the highest criticism and said that those results were heartily accepted by the Unitarian church of to-day without any mental reservations whatever. Although the Unitarian church of the heart had in common with all the churches struggled against the inevitable inferences of modern scholarship, but now frankly give up the old theories that the Bible had a supernatural origin and still possesses a supernatural authority, because they find that a natural interpretation of these books gives them a greater interest and value, he said: On the one side of us stand those older churches which seem half afraid of the results of the so-called higher criticism even among their own best scholars, but try to accept them while rejecting the inevitable conclusions which they involve, and sometimes suspect us of not caring for the Bible because we accept those results without the least fear and with no innovations whatever. They love the Bible honestly and ardently, but not wisely; not understandingly, and still cling to the old theories of inspiration in a vague wise way, because they think they merit trying to ignore those plain and simple facts of which they do not yet perceive the full value.

And on the other side of us stand those crude and narrow-minded critics of the school of Mr. Ingersoll who hate the Bible because they have been deceived about it by its unwise friends. They also try with some success to ignore the plain and simple facts, and they turn their backs contemptuously upon the teaching of the higher critics because they find it easier to attack the Bible upon the old ground which is known as Orthodoxy. And away out beyond these stand a multitude of honest people who know absolutely nothing about the real Bible, and care less just because they have no use for the imaginary Bible which has been thrust upon them. On the one side of us are the unwise friends of the Bible, and on the other its foolish and ignorant enemies. Between them we stand as the defenders of the real Bible, yielding no supremacy for the sacred book itself to the one party, and no supremacy in the free and natural criticisms of the Bible to the other party. The speaker touched upon the fact that there are Bibles in existence written by inspired men of other races and religion possessing much beauty and interest, good in their way no doubt, but not so good for us as our own Bible which comes to us with a wealth of holy meaning and association, and that touches us more nearly and meets our own peculiar needs. He concluded as follows: The Unitarian church of to-day accepting the Bible as a perfectly natural revelation of God to human thought through human life reads it as God's word without forgetting that it is still more truly the word of man. Giving up those theories of supernatural inspiration which were partly the result of ignorance, and partly the result of a necessity—at the time of the Reformation—that some infallible authority should be found to stand against that claimed by the church of Rome; we are better able to feel the power of its natural inspiration: and its natural authority, the authority of men who knew the things of which they spoke because they had descended into the lowest depths and climbed the loftiest heights of spiritual experience, becomes more evident, and the Bible, and the men of whom it speaks, even God himself, becomes more real to us. The inconsistencies, the contradiction and the scientific errors of the Bible become unimportant in the light of God's great law of evolution; they do not trouble us when we know that God did not write the Bible but that God's men lived it and wrote it out of the fullness of their own hearts and minds as they were moved by the Holy Spirit. And so the position of the Unitarian church of to-day regarding the Bible is this: We believe it to be the most remarkable and valuable collection of ancient writings in the possession of the modern world, and place it at the head of the world's literature, not because we suppose it to have had a supernatural origin or to contain any supernatural wisdom, but because of the real power, truthfulness and beauty which we find in it. As we read its pages we discover the far-away sources, and to a certain extent the explanation of all that is best in our modern life; its religion, its civilization, its thought, its spirit, and the bright hopes of still greater good; and we also find the reason why these old books have exercised such an immense influence upon the moral and spiritual development of the human race. Our position differs from that of other Christian churches only in this: They place it apart from all other books as too holy and sacred to be read, or understood, or spoken of in the same way that others are. We place it among all other books, and comparing it with them on common ground we find it to exceed them all in its power to instruct, to comfort and to inspire the human soul. They regard it as a miraculous key to the attainment of a supernatural knowledge of invisible things. We go to it for religion; for Spiritual help and guidance, rather than for theology; for life rather than doctrine, not hoping by its aid to gain a knowledge of things unknowable, and for us unnecessary. We interpret it by the light of the world's acquired knowledge and experience, making such allowance as may be necessary for the circumstances under which it was written. Believing what we can; what we find to be true and good; and seeing no reason why we should try to believe anything which if written elsewhere would seem to us false and wrong. We have no theories whatever about the Bible: for us the simple facts are all sufficient. It is certainly the human record of a mighty revelation of spiritual things, we have no other like it, and its light has not grown dim in all these centuries; but it is incomplete; it does not tell us all that we know, much less all that we shall know. God has not remained silent ever since the last page of that old book was written, and is not silent now. He has never been without a witness in the world. In every age there have been prophets, apostles and martyrs. Even the Christ told men that he should come again and he has done so more than once, but we have not known him because he has borne some other name. He had many things to tell men which they could not hear in those old days, but some of them have been spoken since by other lips, and manifested forth in other lives filled with His spirit. Our Bible is all that it ever was; yes, it is something more and something better than men have imagined it to be, but it is still only a part of God's word.

"Slowly the Bible of the race is writ,
And not in paper leaves nor leaves of stone.
Each age, each kindred, adds a verse to it,
Texts of despair, or hope, of joy, or moan,
While swings the sea, while mists the mountain shroud,
While thunder's surges burst on cliffs of cloud,
Still at the prophet's feet the nations sit."

The next lecture of this course will be given on Sunday evening next, Nov. 20, on the position of the modern Unitarian church regarding Jesus the Christ.

NO CLAIM TO THE CREDIT.

The Republican Ring Organ Seeks to Father a Scheme It Has Always Opposed.

Final decision in the matter of selecting a new site for the freight-house has not yet been made by the railroad company, but the officials are considering various propositions, and something definite will soon be decided on. One thing is certain—the freight-house is to go, and the present location will be transformed into an ornamental, park-like entrance to the passenger station, by way of East Fourth and Sycamore streets. The company is inclined to favor the old Boice lumber yard, as told exclusively in these columns Saturday.

Credit in the freight-house enterprise is now sought by the Courier, which said last evening: "Plainfield people will not forget that it was the Courier that first suggested the burned district as a good location for a new freight-house. Its desirability is in every way most pronounced."

As a matter of fact and record, it was THE PRESS that on Friday, Dec. 4, 1891, in its report of the big fire of the day before, said that the Boice lumber-yard site was an excellent location for the freight-house, and THE PRESS that urged the opportunity upon the railroad company. In opposition, the Courier for weeks kept insisting, as its files will show, that such a plan was "preposterous" and the product of "a picturesque imagination". It was the Courier that ridiculed the idea, and held that the company would not consider such a thing a possibility.

The people all know what paper has alone been fighting, in the public interests, for the freight-house removal. That paper is THE PRESS. Whatever part the Courier took was always the part of an obstructionist.

Why Not Mayor Fisk?

THE PRESS has no right or power to interfere with the privilege of the Republicans of Plainfield to nominate and elect whom they please as mayor. But as it is current rumor that Mr. Gilbert wants to retire, and as even we Democrats are interested as citizens in who shall rule over us, we would inquire:

What's the matter with Charles Fisk?

A VOICE FROM ATLANTA

Mrs. Iverson Denies the Soft Impeachment.

SENATOR HILL IS SAYING NOTHING.

The Southern Lady Apparently Much Put Out Over the Rumor—Says She Would Not Know the Statesman Should She See Him Again.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 15.—The report of Senator Hill's engagement to Mrs. Fannie Iverson, of Atlanta, is unequivocally denied.

She met Senator Hill five years ago on his first visit to Atlanta at one of the receptions tendered him here. The report of their engagement was circulated a short while after Mr. Hill's visit at that time, and the report has been revived at intervals.

To ascertain the truth or falsity of the rumors a reporter called upon Mrs. Iverson. Although somewhat indisposed by constant nursing of one of her little boys, Mrs. Iverson granted the reporter an interview, and upon hearing the object of his visit assured him in the most emphatic manner that there was absolutely no ground for the association of her name with that of the New York Senator.

"Why," said the lady, "I have never met Senator Hill but once, and that was but for a very brief period at a reception in this city when I, in common with many other Georgia ladies, was formally presented. I am sure that I should not know Senator Hill if I should meet him, and I feel quite sure in asserting that he would not know me.

"The publicity these rumors have occasioned is exceedingly embarrassing to me and I suppose they are equally so to Senator Hill. I have been so annoyed about the matter that it has become a necessity for me to decline to answer the telephone. I really cannot conceive how the story was started and I trust it may be speedily dropped. When the rumors first reached me some time ago, Mrs. Barret called on me in connection with the matter and I then as now with great surprise pronounced them entirely unfounded."

Mrs. Iverson is justly regarded as one of the most beautiful women in the South. In manner she resembles Mrs. Grover Cleveland and as her friends here claim, she certainly has all the attributes that go to making up an ideal Southern woman.

It has been stated that Mrs. Iverson met Senator Hill in New York during the winter and that he had there paid her marked attention. This statement the lady pronounced erroneous, reiterating her statement that she had met the Senator but once and that was at the reception given him in this city heretofore mentioned.

Run Down by a Steamer.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 15.—The Pinafore was run down and sunk in the Patapsco river early yesterday morning by the steamer Tred Avon. Jessie Adams, one of the crew, was drowned. The captain and the remainder of the crew, six men in all, were picked up by the steamers Tred Avon and Joppa, and taken to Cambridge, from which port they arrived in Baltimore yesterday, when Captain Roe reported the accident. The Pinafore was an oyster-dragging craft and was bound for Baltimore with a cargo of bivalves when the collision occurred.

OF PROFOUND INTEREST.

Something Which Startled Our City.

Right at Home in Our Midst, Where We Know All the Parties.

What Is More the Parties Stand Ready and Willing to Tell All About It.

From the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle

The name of Dan Rice, of 755 Plymouth Avenue, Rochester, N. Y., is well known throughout the country. His wife, while enjoying a less wide fame, is the favorite of a large circle of friends and acquaintances, who became very much alarmed at the condition of serious ill health in which Mrs. Rice has been for some time past. She grew terribly nervous, weak and prostrated, frequently dropping upon the floor unconscious, until all were in despair of ever seeing her in health again.

Of late, however, there has been a great change in her condition. Where before she was so terribly run down in health and strength as to make life a burden, she is now strong, healthy, vigorous and enjoys life thoroughly again.

Her acquaintances are not only surprised and pleased, but greatly mystified as to the cause of so sudden a return to health, when, as everybody knew, she had been very low and prostrated.

To a friend, however, she explained the secret of her sudden restoration to health.

"I had a heart and nerve trouble of long standing. I had fainting spells, sometimes as many as 9 or 10 in a day. The neighbors frequently found me unconscious. I could not sleep, many times I never went to sleep all night.

"I had a great deal of pain in my side and stomach, and I could not sleep on my left side at all. I had an attack of numbness in my right side which made it difficult for me to speak or swallow.

"I used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and when I had taken two bottles the numbness had left me and I have not fainted but 4 or 5 times in the last six months, and I have not had any fainting spells for two months. I can now sleep and rest well.

"My friends are more than surprised at my improved health."

Her friend and neighbor, Mrs. A. Borne of 15 Brook avenue, Rochester, had often found Mrs. Rice unconscious in these terrible numb and fainting spells before she took Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and is delighted, as well she may be, with the effects of this wonderful medicine.

We have for years advertised this remarkable remedy in our columns and our readers can readily turn to such advertisement in almost any issue of our paper. We know of a great many similar cures effected by this deservedly popular medicine—cures from nervousness, weakness and exhaustion, insomania, malaria, poor blood, dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, kidney and liver complaints, constipation and the weakness of general debility. Many of us are in a weakened and nervous state, lacking our old time strength and vigor. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is the very best thing to take to tone up the system and restore our strength. Most everyone needs a medicine to strengthen the nerves, invigorate the blood and start up the action of the liver and kidneys, and this is the greatest and best of all remedies. It is purely vegetable, too, and perfectly harmless. All druggists keep it at $1 00 per bottle.

We assure sufferers from disease that they cannon do better than to use this really wonderful medicine.

Dr. Greene of 35 W. 14th Street, New York, its discoverer, is a specialist in the cure of nervous and long standing diseases, who has the largest practice of any physician in the world, and can be consulted personally, or by letter free of charge. Call or write him about your case, or send for symptom blank to fill out, and a letter, fully explaining your disease, giving valuable advice, etc., will be returned without charge.

This remedy, being the prescription and discovery of this great physician, is not a patent medicine, but on the contrary is a remedy which all doctors recommend and endorse because they know it will cure.

USEFUL NOVELTIES.

Two Little Conveniences for Every day Use.

An Ornamental String Box and a Letter and Photograph Frame Combined—Diagrams Explaining Their Construction.

"Get me a string, quick, will you?" cried pater familias.

"Yes, yes, in a minute; there are some somewhere, I know."

Then there is a rush and a hunt for some twine. The diagram, Fig. 1, will give an idea of one of the novelties of the season. The box may be ornamented in any way you please. There should be a hole in the center of the cover through which the end of the twine passes. Tie all the strings that come around packages together, and wind. There may be a ball of cotton twine, and one of linen. Fasten a pair of scissors to the side, to cut the twine; set the box in a place easy of access, and all the household will bless you.

Have you never missed the post in your haste to find the letters you had carefully directed and stamped—and mislaid? The diagram No. 2 is letter case and photo-frame combined; hang it near the writing desk and slip letters in it that are ready to post.

Cut the pieces in the shape of a shamrock, mark the ovals for the photos and cut with a very sharp knife. Cover the outside with plush and the inside with silk, and finish with silk cord, or use odds and ends, and bind the pieces with narrow ribbon.

These little conveniences in the home make the domestic machinery run smoothly and teach the children, and father and mother to keep everything in place, by having a place for everything.—Claribel, in Ohio Farmer.

ABOUT LADIES' GLOVES.

They Have Much to Do with Giving a Gown a Stylish Air.

When the home dressmaker has completed a gown her next thought is of the hat and the gloves to accompany it. The latter does much in giving the gown a stylish air, or if the gloves be illy selected the whole garment is ruined in the eyes of all beholders. Suede or undressed gloves do not wear as well as glace or dressed kid, but are still favored for dressy calling and church wear in eight-button mousquetaires, unless a four-button glace of the most expensive brands is preferred, as it often is by very conservative taste. The ordinary four-button glace glove is worn for shopping and traveling. The buttonless Biarritz glove at one dollar is very stylish for traveling and morning wear, and should fit looser than a "real" kid glove. Heavy kid gloves, pique sewed, that is, with the raw edge lapped over and stitched down, are worn by many well-dressed women with morning costumes donned before two p. m. Heavy kid gloves having tilburied or faced palms are worn for driving, with four brass buttons fastening them. Gauntlet gloves of castor, undressed reindeer or heavy doe skin, often miscalled "dogskin," are fashionable for horsewomen. White suede gloves are worn in the evening with any color, or the toilette is completed with harmonizing gloves of a delicate shade, as lavender, flesh, palest of yellow, pearl, etc. Self stitching is more stylish than black on any glove just now. Tan and gray shades lead for day wear, though some fancy shades of English tan, a brownish red, willow green and navy blue are to be seen, but they should be worn with costumes of the same tone and avoided unless one possesses many changes. The lacing glove suits persons having fleshy wrists. A perfect fit does not mean a cramped appearance of the hand.—Ladies' Home Journal.

For Tired Feet.

Bathe the feet in cold water, if possible: if cold water is unpleasant use warm and plenty of plain, unscented soap, dry thoroughly with a soft towel and then sponge off with equal parts of cold water and alcohol.

Salt for Table Use.

Salt for table use should have mixed with it a small quantity of cornstarch before putting it into either salt cellar or salt shaker. This will prevent the tendency it has to form into solid lumps.

To Clean Stained Woodwork.

A little cold tea mixed with warm water and applied with a soft woolen cloth will make stained woodwork look bright and fresh.

Just What He Wanted.

"I feel discouraged," said the young M. D., whose practice was slow in coming.

"You must have patience."

"Yes, I know. If I had patients I wouldn't be discouraged."—Truth.

Scriptural Authority.

Teacher—In what part of the Bible is it taught that a man should have only one wife?

Little Boy—I guess it's the part that says no man can serve two masters.—Good News.

If You Saw Your Own Wood

and saw enough of it, your digestive organs may perhaps be equal, ostrich like, to any task you impose—even to the digestion of lard-cooked food.

If however, like thousands of other people, you have learned that you must "draw the line at lard," this is to remind you that there is a clean, delicate and healthful vegetable substitute, called which if used in place of lard, permits you to eat pies, pastry, patties and such "good things" without fear of dyspeptic consequences.

There's abundant proof, but none so convincing and so pleasant as a trial for yourself. We invite it. For sale everywhere.

LABOR KNIGHTS MEET

National Assembly in Annual Session at St. Louis.

MR. POWDERLY ON IMMIGRATION.

He Thinks the Gates of the Nation Should be Closed for Ten Years—He Will Speak Positively on the Subject of Ballot Reform.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 16.—The National Assembly of the Knights of Labor met in annual session here yesterday. It is expected that General Master Workman Powderly will deliver his annual address to-day. It is understood that he will speak very positively on the subject of ballot reform, and probably will discuss some other leading reform issues.

The only business transacted was consideration of the reports of minor committees and the Committee on Credentials.

Quite a breeze was stirred up by some of the members when it was discovered that the hall that they were meeting in belonged to August Delebar, a man who had fought the Knights for years. Some of the delegates flatly refused to sit in the hall, so a committee was sent out to find another hall.

In an interview Mr. Powderly said: "There ought to be some legislation upon the restriction of immigration. We are being overrun by a very undesirable class of Europeans, and the sooner indiscriminate immigration is stopped the better for the laboring classes of this country.

"Senator Chandler's proposed bill will require all persons desiring to come from Europe to this country to make application to a United States Consul three months in advance, but I think it better to close the gates completely for ten years."

"Will you advocate that in the Knights of Labor," was asked.

"I have thought of so many plans on the subject that I am not prepared to say what would be the best," was the evasive reply. "We are not opposed to good immigrants, and I have met some who were intelligent and whom I liked."

Mr. Powderly was asked if there was any truth in the statement that he would refuse to serve again as General Master Workman of the Knights of Labor. He replied:

"Ever since I first became General Master Workman of the organization it has been said at each election that I would not accept the office again. Now I don't say that I would serve and I cannot help what other people say about it. I resign because my present term is up and I cannot refuse to serve as I have not been re-elected."

FATAL RAILROAD WRECK.

Collision on the Pittsburg & Chicago Near Nevada.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 16.—A Lima, O., special says:

A bad wreck ocurred at 6:30 o'clock last night on the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne & Chicago railroad at Nevada, 49 miles east of this city. The mail and express train, No. 7, west bound, collided with east bound freight No. 74 at the west end of Nevada siding.

The engineer and a brakeman of the mail are fatally injured.

An unknown tramp was mangled beyond recognition, and several mail clerks are reported injured.

Owing to the reticence of the local officials, it is impossible to get names and full particulars.

Five mail and express cars are piled up on top of the ireight engine. The cause of the wreck was disobedience of orders by the freight crew, who attempted to make Nevada siding on short time.

$98.000 "IN THE HOLE."

A Big Deficit Resulting from New York's Celebration.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The Finance Committee of the Committe of One Hundred met in the mayor's office yesterday to settle the Columbus celebration accounts.

The cost of the celebration is estimated at $183,669, which, after all expenses are paid, would leave a deficit of more than $98,000.

Comptroller Myers claims that all income from grand stands, programmes, and the banquet—about $70,000—must be turned into the city treasury to offset the amount of the bonds issued by the city. This would leave a deficit of over $96,000.

Corporation Counsel Clark will be asked to give his opinion in the matter.

Safe Companies Combine.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The Diebold-Mosler-Damon Safe company, a consolidation of 11 principal companies and firms which manufacture fire and burglar proof vaults and safes, has been incorporated in the office of the Secretary of State of New Jersey, with a capital of $5,000,000. The consolidated companies, whose properties are taken over by the new corporation, have factories in New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Ohio, and branches throughout the country.

Big Dry Dock Rendered Useless.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 16.—The dry dock at the League Island Navy Yard has been rendered useless for weeks to come by the bursting of the monster water main by which the dock is emptied. The dock was being put in readiness for the repair of the cruiser New York's running gear. Over 150 feet of brick work was thrown 20 inches upward into the air.

Made No Indictments for Bribery.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 16.—Many politicians of both parties drew a sigh of relief yesterday when it was announced that the grand jury of the county had adjourned and indicted nobody for bribery at the polls on election day. Half a dozen prominent men were charged with the offense. The grand jury spent two days in investigating the complaints, only to throw them out, however.

The Garvin Trial.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 16.—The feature of the Garvin case yesterday was the testimony of the defendant himself, who told of the events previous to the killing of his wife; of his intention to kill himself, and the testimony of Mr. Yost, who told of Garvin's strange actions. Several witnesses testified to the defendant's good character.

WHAT YALE MEN ARE DOING.

Friday Morning They Will Leave for Springfield.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 16.—The Yale football team will practice but one more day in this city. To-morrow they will line up in Alumni Hall for a final practice of signals and tricks. Friday morning they will leave for Springfield, where they will remain at the School for Christian Workers until they leave for the field of battle.

Yale's tried and true mascots will be on hand in full force at the game. The venerable "Pop" Smith, hoary whiskered, but with as much enthusiasm as the youngest, will be among the victory bringers. He is 80 years old, and has followed every contest in which Yale has participated for 30 years.

Another coach has been added to the already long list of coaches. This time it is "Tot" Harvey, the running full back of the '91 team. He will assist Bull, McClung, Heffelfinger, Terry, Corbin, Corwin, Rhodes, Camp, Knapp, Wallace, Gill and Hartwell in training the men until after the big game.

It will be seen from the above list that there are more coaches than positions on the team.

Some fear that the old proverb, "Too many cooks spoil the broth," will come true, but there is little danger of that, for Yale coachers are altogether too enthusiastic to allow anything but harmony and unanimity to enter their work.

Each takes under his wing the man trying for the position which he played while on the Yale team.

BABES IN THE WOOD.

A Little Boy and Girl Play Fairy Tales in Life.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 16.—John Smith, aged 10, and his sister, aged 13, who were supposed to have been abducted on Sunday last on their way to Sabbath school, were found yesterday hunting rabbits in Cranston.

They had camped out when night overtook them, and conceived the exploit from the fairy tales of an old colored woman.

Beaver Falls Mills to Start Monday.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Nov. 16.—Notices were posted in the Carnegie mills this morning stating that applications for work would be received until Saturday, and that the old men are preferred. From present indications the rod mill will start next Monday. Supt. Dillon states that positions are open to all of the old men, providing that they make application as individuals.

Smallpox in Brooklyn.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 16.—Eight cases of smallpox were discovered on one block in this city yesterday. The infected buildings were at once thoroughly fumigated and placed under strict quarantine, while the Health Department began vaccinating the occupants of the houses in the immediate vicinity.

Reformed Gambler Quinn in Boston.

BOSTON, Nov. 16.—John Quinn, the reformed gambler, has arrived here from Chicago, and from his special car, sidetracked at the foot of Sumner street, has begun his crusade against gambling. He will also deliver several addresses in public halls here.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

—F. L. Chollar, aged 76 years, died from the effect of burns at Easton, Pa.

—The Democrats of Ladonia, Mo., celebrated the election of Cleveland by burning the hats of all the male residents of the town.

The suicide of Rev. G. H. Harris, pastor of a Universalist Church in Orange, Mass., was the result of an unfortunate love affair.

—At Allentown, Pa., a 7-year-old son of Henry Nadig, while playing in an out building, set fire to some paper and was burnt to a crisp.

—Prairie fires in Eastern Colorado have burned up stock, barns, stacked hay and straw, thousands of acres of pasturage, and are still burning.

—The annual banquet of the New York Chamber of Commerce was held last night. President-elect Cleveland, Secretary Charles Foster and Dr. Depew were the principal speakers.

—The large dry goods house of Vanderveort & Slinglands at Paterson, N. J., was destroyed by fire last night. Loss, $60,000 to $70,000. The fire is supposed to have been caused by an electric light wire.

—It has been ascertained that the amount embezzled from the Lombard Investment company, of Kansas City, Mo., by Wm. H. Russell, now in Mexico, will approximate $100,000. His offense does not come within the extradition treaty.

GEN. ROSECRANS IN DANGER.

He is Threatened With Paralysis and May Not Recover.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Gen. W. S. Rosecrans, Register of the Treasury, has been ill at his residence here for several weeks, and it is reported that the chances are against his recovery. His daughters have been summoned to his bedside, and one of them arrived yesterday.

Gen. Rosecrans was first taken down with a severe cold, but since then other and more alarming symptoms have appeared, and there is now a threat of paralysis. The fact that he is nearly 70 years old increases the danger.

No change has been made in the office of Register of the Treasury during this administration, as the result, it is said, of the influence exerted by Chauncey M. Depew, who married a niece of Gen. Rosecrans. Mr. Cleveland had appointed the General to the office, and Gen. Harrison, at Mr. Depew's request, retained him.

SHOT AT HOMESTEAD.

A Non-Unionist Gets Into the Wrong Room and is Killed.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Nov. 16.—An unconfirmed rumor is current that the strikers' local advisory board have declared the strike off.

One non-unionist shot and almost instantly killed another early yesterday in a bunk-house of the Carnegie steel works. The murderer is Max Newman of New York.

About 2 a. m. the occupants of the houses were aroused by hearing two shots fired, followed by a cry of agony and then death-like stillness.

While the police were searching a man walked into the watch house of the mill police with a revolver in his hand and said:

"I want to give myself up. I have shot a man."

It was Newman and he conducted the officers to the lodging house where the victim of the shots was lying on the floor.

"There he is. I think he is a striker," remarked Newman.

A physician was called but when he reached the mill the injured man was dead.

A mill pass and check found on his person denoted that he had been a mill worker, but none knew him to positively identify him.

Newman was taken to Pittsburg jail to await the action of the coroner.

It has since been learned that Patrick Coyne is the name of the victim of Max Newman's bullet.

Investigation shows that Coyne was very much under the influence of liquor, and in this condition mistook his own room and entered that occupied by Newman and four companions. Coyne failed to answer when he was addressed, and staggered against Newman's cot. The shooting then occurred.

TO ENLARGE THE CARNEGIE PLANT.

The Company Decide to Make Desired Improvements in the Works.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—H. C. Frick, chairman of the Carnegie Steel company, called at the Navy Department and had a conference with Secretary Tracy regarding the delay of the company in furnishing armor-plate for the new warships. The most important part of the conversation related to the enlargement of the Carnegie plant.

Secretary Tracy has been anxious for the company to enlarge its plant for some time, and Mr. Frick informed the Secretary that the company had decided to do this.

The company, he said, would soon begin the desired improvements. They would enlarge their floor space, secure new machinery, and otherwise improve their works, so as to be able to promptly fulfill contracts.

Mr. Frick says the company are now recovering from the recent strike.

"COUNTESS" BETANCOURT HELD.

Charged With Conspiracy to Defraud Druggist Toplis.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 16.—The hearing in the case of Mrs. Anita McMorrow, better known as the "Countess" Betancourt, who is charged by William G. Toplis, a Germantown druggist, with obtaining $2,500 by false pretences on the representation that she possessed $32,000,000 of Spanish bonds, took place before Magistrate Durnham yesterday. The charge of obtaining the money under false pretences, was dismissed, but the magistrate held the "Countess" under $1,000 bail for court on the charge of conspiracy.

The allegation of conspiracy came up at the beginning of the hearing and was to the effect that the "Countess" and Elmer M. Billings, Secretary of the Mercantile Safe Deposit company, New York York, had conspired to defraud druggist Toplis. To substantiate the charge of conspiracy, letters from Billings to Mrs. McMorrow were offered in evidence and read. They were of a sensational nature.

NEW JERSEY ODD FELLOWS.

Fiftieth Annual Session of the Grand Encampment at Trenton.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 16.—The fiftieth annual session of the Grand Encampment I. O. O. F. of New Jersey was held in Masonic Temple, this city, yesterday, Grand Patriarch James C. Robbins, presiding.

The following officers were elected: Grand Patriarch, Evans Dalrymple of Clinton; Grand High Priest, W. H. Biddle of Atlantic City; Senior Grand Warden, Albert Munn of German Valley; Grand Scribe, Louis Parker of Trenton; Grand Treasurer, W. H. Courter of Jamesburg; Grand Representatives, J. Barton Smith of Newark and Thomas R. Blackwood of Camden; Grand Marshal, George Dompierre of Jersey City.

The Grand Lodge of New Jersey, I. O. O. F. convenes here to-day.

Caused by an Old Woman's Stories.

JERSEY CITY, Nov. 16.—Nellie Barker, the 14-year-old girl of Germania avenue, this city, who tried to kill herself on Monday, has recovered sufficiently to tell her story. She said that a German woman named Kinnop, who lived next door, had circulated stories affecting her character. The stories were false, but she knew no way of refuting them so she resolved to kill herself. Mrs. Kinnop denies that she ever circulated any stories about the girl.

Fatal Accident at Bethlehem.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Nov. 16.—While Mrs. Stout, aged 70 years, and Mrs. Cole, aged 45, both of Bath, this county, were about to board a Lehigh & Lackawanna train at Bethlehem Junction, yesterday, they were struck by the fast express and Mrs. Stout was instantly killed. Mrs. Cole was dragged a considerable distance and both of her limbs were cut off. She cannot live.

CREAM'S TWO MANIAS

Peculiarities of the Notorious Criminal Just Executed.

HE WENT CALMLY TO THE SCAFFOLD

The Poisoner's Crimes—The Panama Canal Officers to be Proceeded Against by the French Government—A Cabinet Crisis—Other Foreign Notes.

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—Lawyer A. S. Trude of this city, who defended Cream successfully when he was on trial here in 1881 for the murder of Mary Faulkner, is well acquainted with his peculiarities. In an interview Mr. Trude said:

"The man was possessed of two manias. One was to acquire all the knowledge he could of anatomy and surgery. To that end he studied medicine and obtained diplomas as doctor in Germany, France, England, Canada and America. His knowledge on these points was consequently great, and he used it, through me, most effectually to confound the doctors at the trial. His other mania was a desire to get rid of women who were in a condition in which they were a menace to society. It was the same mania of which 'Jack the Ripper,' whoever he may be, was possessed.

"After the trial was over, Cream came into my office several times and talked incessantly about these two things, human anatomy and his desire to rid the earth of these unfortunate beings. Once he pulled a revolver from his pocket and, after firing it at a chair, said: 'I would kill them that way.'

"Cream was a most charming talker, and if let loose on his pet theories regarding the human structure, would hold his listeners by the hour. That he was mad I have not the least doubt, but his magis was one which it is difficult to classify."

CREAM'S EXECUTION.

He Met His Doom Bravely—Story of His Crimes.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Thomas Neill, alias Cream, was hanged at 9 a. m. yesterday at Newgate, by Billington, for the poisoning of Matilda Clover and other girls on authority of the High Sheriff of the County of Lonton, no reprieve having been obtained.

The murderer was silent, firm, and pale, but made a brief speech of courtesy to the prison officials. Death was instantaneous.

Thomas Neill Cream was born in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1850, of Irish parentage. He was taken by his parents when only eight years old to Canada. After a good school education his father entered him in the medical department of M'Gill College, Montreal. There he matriculated, took his degree and gained some distinction by writing a letter on chloroform.

He soon afterwards left his lodgings, and was next seen in Quebec. He had been in the habit of going to a place called Waterloo, some miles from Montreal, where he formed the acquaintance of the daughter of an hotel keeper, whom he nearly killed by a surgical operation, and was forced by her father to marry her.

Cream left his wife the day after the wedding and went to Quebec, and after being lost sight of for some time turned up in London, Ont., where he practiced medicine.

At this place he was visited by a young woman, who was one morning found dead in a closet at the rear of the house with a bottle which had contained chloroform beside her. Cream was suspected, but escaped prosecution.

Cream then migrated to Chicago, and started a surgery in West Madison street. Here he soon earned an unenviable reputation.

A young Indian woman, while being treated there, died, and Cream told his black servant to put a white handkerchief in the window to denote that she had gone out, and he would then set fire to the house, a wooden one, in order to destroy all traces of his crime. A policeman, however, obtained an inkling that something was wrong, and effecting an entry to the building, discovered the young woman dead in bed.

Inquiries led to the capture of both Cream and the colored woman, but they were discharged for lack of evidence. That was in 1880.

In the following year Cream was advertising a specific for the cure of epileptic fits, and a railway official sent his wife, a young woman of prepossessing appearance, to his surgery for the prescriptions.

Cream used to send her to a druggist in Clarke street for the medicine, and upon one occasion he added something to the mixture, and the husband died twenty minutes after taking the first dose.

In the meantime Cream had tried to insure the man's life but failed.

A local doctor was called in and as the deceased had been suffering from fits he was buried in the usual way.

Cream upon hearing this telegraphed to the coroner, informing him that the chemist who prepared the medicine put in too much strychnine. Getting no answer from the coroner, he wrote to the district-attorney, who decided to take action in the matter.

The body was exhumed and it was discovered that the man had died from an overdose of strychnine.

Both the wife of the deceased and Cream were arrested, but the former gave State's evidence against the latter, who was found guilty of murder in the second degree and sentenced to imprisonment for life.

He remained in Joliet prison until July 31, 1891.

In explanation of his early discharge it is stated that some influence had been brought to bear on the governor, who commuted his sentence to seventeen years, and allowing for good conduct, etc., his term expired on the date already mentioned.

After his discharge Cream went to Quebec, and after staying for a time with his brother Daniel his friends sent him to England.

Cream soon after began the series of crimes which resulted in his detection and execution. He selected as a victim a girl named Matilda Clover, one of those wretched women whose friendlessness and social isolation render them an easy prey to such persons as Cream. He poisoned her with strychnine pills contained in gelatine capsules.

Matilda Clover died on October 21, 1891, a week before Helen Donworth, or Lindell, fell down in the street in agonies similar to those from which Matilda Clover afterward suffered. Taken in a cab to a hospital she died on the way. An inquest was held—poisoning by strychnine was diagnosed.

On April of this year, at No. 118 Stamford street, two women were seized with the agony of death. Alice Marshal died on the way to an hospital. Enough strychnine to poison three or four women was found in her stomach. Her companion, Emma Shrivell, lingered a little while in the hospital, but also died unmistakably from strychnine.

The death of these women, of course, set the police in motion, and the crimes were traced to Cream.

PROSECUTION ORDERED.

Officers of the Panama Canal Company to be Proceeded Against.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—The Council of Ministers has decided, upon the responsibility of the Minister of Justice, M. Ricard, to proceed against the Panama Canal company. M. de Lesseps, three administrators, and all the contractors are to be made parties to the proceedings.

A Ministerial crisis is imminent, and great scandal will doubtless be the outcome of this.

The Ministry was divided upon the question. There were frequent and violent debates, the stormy scenes being caused by M. Ricard, M. Viette, Minister of Public Works, and M. Bourgeois, Minister of Public Instruction, who strongly urged the prosecution.

The others were opposed to it for political reasons.

At the Council held yesterday, M. Carnot presiding, Minister of Justice Ricard said:

"As the Chief Justice of France I order the prosecution of the administrators of the Panama canal."

His colleagues could scarcely believe their ears.

It was true, however, and they were obliged to bend.

Before anything can be done, the Deputies believe that the Ministry will fall, and fall to-day, perhaps upon the Press bill, for not having taken the responsibility for that measure.

One Year for a Bogus Prince.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Frederick Evans alias Helmbold, the pretended Prince of Teck, has been sentenced to one year at hard labor. The authorities became assured, on investigation, that he was as much a knave as a fool. He is said to be of respectable American parentage, and was formerly convicted of fraudulent practices in Liverpool.

COL. CHINN SHOT.

The Famous Starter Fatally Wounded at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 16.—Col. John Chinn, starter at the East St. Louis Jockey Club track, was shot and fatally wounded yesterday by Captain D. Anthony. Some time ago Ed Corrigan of the Hawthorne track, Chicago, asked the officials of the East St. Louis track to allow Mr. Chinn to officiate for them for a time. The East St. Louis people consented to the arrangement and installed Kit, a son of the famous starter, at the post.

Young Chinn's starting has been unsatisfactory of late and the East St. Louis managers demanded that the elder Chinn return here. He came back Monday and took his place. However, his work was not of a kind to grow enthusiastic over. Three horses were left at the post in as many different races and the starts in all were anything but good. Lillian, who was left at the post in the fourth race was quite heavily played and muttered oaths were plenty.

Yesterday Chinn was presented with his discharge. He refused to accept the paper, at the same time catching hold of Secretary Alexander's coat collar with one hand, and reaching down into his boot with the other and drawing a large dirk knife.

Two police officers caught him and tried to disarm him.

Capt. Anthony came upon the scene at this moment, and, seeing that he was about to get the best of the officers, he drew his revolver and fired full in his face. The bullet struck him in the mouth and ranged upward, coming out back of the ear.

Col. Chinn was known all over the country in turf circles, and has handled the flag at all the great tracks.

Gompers Calls for Aid.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, has issued a circular in which he appeals for financial aid for the Homestead strikers. Mr. Gompers says it has been decided by the association, the representatives of the men, and the executive council of the American Federation of Labor to designate Tuesday, Dec. 13, as Homestead Day, and he calls upon the wage workers, as well as all liberty-loving citizens, to make a contribution of a portion of their earnings of that day to aid the Homesteaders in their contest to defend themselves before the courts.

Arrested for Brakeman Monroe's Murder.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 16.—Henry Insley, a dilapidated young man, is under arrest on suspicion of having shot Brakeman Monroe at Lyons. It was reported that in the fight with tramps on the freight train the brakeman cut one of his assailants on the hand with a lamp. Insley's hand is cut, and he answers the description in other ways. At first he denied that he had been in Lyons lately, but later admitted that he was there on the night in question.

Killed by a Firework Bomb.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Nov. 16.—During a Democratic jollification at Middletown a firework bomb that was intended to explode in the air went off prematurely on the ground. The flying pieces struck Richard Shearon on the face, breaking his jaw and otherwise injuring him so that he died a few hours afterwards. A man passing on the sidewalk was accidentally shot through the hand by an unknown person.

Defaulter Trumpbour's Case.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 16.—Eleven jurors were obtained in the Trumpbour trial by the time of the closing of court last night. The trial will probably last all the week. Trumpbour looked considerably weaker when brought into court. Out of 70 jurors examined yesterday only five were accepted.

Agnes Huntington Married.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The marriage of Agnes Huntington, the actress, to Paul D. Cravath, the well-known young Ohio lawyer, took place at noon in St. Thomas's Church. The Rev. Dr. John Wesley Brown officiated.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

Forecast Till 8 P. M. Thursday: For New Jersey, Rain, Clearing To-Night; Slightly Colder; Northwest Winds.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The Ragan lectures begin to-night.

—Everybody who ventured out of doors last night got thoroughly drenched.

—The special meeting of the Prohibition league, last evening, was adjourned until to-night.

—The heavy rains of last night and to-day are soaking the earth and swelling all the streams preparatory to a cold snap.

—One moment please! Thanks! Before you stop reading, read J. F. MacDonald's advertisement.

—There will be a mother's meeting led by Mrs. Fernald, in the W. C. T. U. rooms, to-morrow afternoon, at 3:30.

—A pumpkin-pie sociable for the benefit of the Ladies' Aid society of the Monroe Avenue chapel will be held at the chapel to-morrow evening.

—All people who enjoy nice things will want to witness the "Cradle Songs for All Nations", interpreted by leading young women of Plainfield, at the Casino to-morrow night.

—Elsewhere will be found the ordinance in full granting the Plainfield street railway company a franchise for the extension of its tracks and service into the borough.

—The regular sewing meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary society will be held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church, Friday afternoon. All women are cordially invited.

—Manager Leggett of the Central pharmacy, is the introducer of all the newest features and novelties in his line, to Plainfield. His latest is a box of the choicest baby powder at 25 cents, and he gives you a big baby with it.

—Joseph A. Haynes, who made such a gallant run for Councilman on the Democratic ticket in the First Ward two years ago would be the most popular and successful candidate the Democrats could nominate this year, if he could be induced to run.

—A large hole has been torn out of the earthen embankment between Christ church and Green brook. Leaves had clogged the mouth of the sewer and caused the water to overflow the sidewalk and wash the earth away. It will require quite a number of loads of earth to repair the embankment.

—The terrible storm of last night prevented the giving of "The Midnight Alarm" as was desired. The special scenery was drenched and it was impossible to get the horses and steamer through the flooded streets and into Music Hall. The curtain did not rise until 9, but those present were very patient, made every allowance for circumstances and enjoyed as much of the play as was given.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

H. P. Reynolds was able to attend his office Monday and to go to Newark to see his physician. He is feeling greatly relieved since his optical operation.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Beach of East Second street, will spend the winter months at the home of their granddaughter, Mrs. H. T. Crawford, Williamsport, Pa.

Thomas Schaefer, the popular young drum-major, is a valuable addition to the Plainfield Cornet band, in their street parades. He makes a fine show in his natty uniform, and his manipulation of the stick is highly creditable.

George DeMeza, a graduate of Jackson & Codington's law office, will hang out his shingle as attorney at law this afternoon. He has secured a nice office in the First National bank building, where he will dispense legal lore to the satisfaction of all comers.

The Courier seems to be in a great hurry to shove postmaster Pope out of his office. It is naming a number of possible and impossible successors. Mr. Pope will undoubtedly remain where he is until a year from next year, and the people will not be a bit sorry.

Heman L. White, who died at Vineland Monday, was the son of the late Heman L. White, a prominent merchant of New York, and a grandson of the Rev. Dr. Dunbar, for many years pastor of the MacDougal Street Baptist church in New York. Mr. White was formerly connected with the Wall street banking house of J. Monroe Brown & Co., but through ill health has been out of business for several years. With his widowed mother and sisters, he was a resident of Crescent avenue, this city, for many years.

William M. Buckman, foreman of the PRESS composing room, has the heartfelt sympathy of his many friends in the sorrow that for the past three days has been hanging over his home, 15 Linden avenue. On Sunday he rejoiced in the advent of a son, his firstborn, and in the report that mother and child were doing well, but before nightfall his good wife was seized with convulsions, and since then has been hovering on the brink of death, unconscious and almost lifeless. All has been done in the power of skillful physicians, and this afternoon there are encouraging signs. It is sincerely hoped that a turn for the better will now be taken, and that the hand of affliction may be lifted from the devoted husband. The little boy is strong and thriving.

HEALTH BEFORE ALL.

East Ender Replies to West Ender, Tells What the Inhabitants of His Section Want, and Advises the Nomination of Councilmen Accordingly.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—My attention was called to an article in the Courier of Oct. 31, signed "West End", the purpose and intent of which seemed to be to disqualify some statements made by me in an article on the needs and necessities of the First ward. I could not but be forcibly convinced of one very evident fact, that the writer rushed into a controversy that he seemed by his evident flat contradiction of himself to be little prepared for.

None of the needs stated by me were magnified, but rather touched upon lightly. If the writer of the article referred to can in any iota point out an error in my previous communication, I will then admit that I most certainly know nothing about the West End although I have property interests in that section. There certainly was a failure of penetration on the part of "West End" inasmuch as his interpretation of the sentences of my article, were not what their reading showed, and as for jealousy that is a component part of ignorance to which I plead not guilty.

My very intelligent friend from the West End certainly must bear in mind that as he says his end of the city is taxable nearly one-half of the city's taxable property, our end therefore is tax one-half and also the extra amount that is necessary to make up what "West end lacks of the other half. As for valuable property, manufacturing plants, etc., I think I had better say no more on that subject, or simply ask in honest good faith has he ever been east of Park avenue? If not let him take a walk, or rather a drive, through this end of the city, and I can assure "West End" he will be surprised at his lack of knowledge and the valuable properties, churches and schools, and I think without a pair of opera glasses "West End" may be able to discover some "manufacturing plant" blooming especially about noon hour. If he has ever been at this end of the city, he certainly is affected by loss of memory for which he will find remedies advertised daily in THE PRESS.

The evidence adduced by his article shows plainly on the face of it that "West End" is an old residenter in Plainfield. I draw the inference from the fact that a new comer to the city would be enterprising enough to make a tour of the city and note all the improvements and industries so that when speaking of his new home he could converse intelligently, which I can hardly attribute to "West End's" article. He must be one of the old landmarks that once or twice a decade stroll beyond the confines of their own grounds to view with astonishment the gigantic strides our city is making.

In once more touching on the water question, I repeat what has already been written. We are "blessed with an abundant supply of water". In my statement no reference was made to the Water company supplying residents at that end of the town. The sentence referred to our wells. Had "West End" carried out the Biblical injunction of "Reading and inwardly digesting", he would never have been led into making such egregious blunders in his article. I can safely say that if "West End" was as thoroughly versed in all appertaining to the wants and requirements of the east end, as the writer is with his section, then could he enter into a lucid discussion of the questions at point. I can with my friend of the west end, also make the same assertion of houses a mile and over from fire protection, and still taxed by the city. With all good feeling towards my friend from the west, I will say that if he joins forces with his compatriots and in the coming election for councilmen place only such men on the ticket who have the interests of the ward at heart, and will carry out all measures necessary to the safety and advancement of their section, then will something be accomplished. In "West End's" reply to my article he but exercises his right to stand up for his end of the city, as I do most earnestly advocate my end. Our necessities are great, but with the determination to have them catered to we at this end will work. The evils we are bound shall be remedied and then instead of losing growth we will find an increase. They at the west can call for fire protection, but we of the east shall cry for the utter and entire elimination from our midst of the plague spot of our fair city—the gravel pits—then the street railway, then a little work done on our streets, one or two of the many lights the west end has, and then we will wait patiently for a while the coming of "fire protection". But first above all give us health protection. N.

A Sensible Fellow.

(From The New Brunswick Times.)

The Press says that an anxious Republican in North Plainfield was so absent-minded as to carefully fold a receipted grocery bill, put it in the official envelope and vote it. Sensible fellow was that North Plainfield Republican. Far better was it to vote a receipted grocery bill, than to vote for Harrison and Reid.

AMERICAN INVENTIONS IN INDIA.

Something of Interest to all Americans.

A Calcutta letter says that American inventions and discoveries are fast displacing the older ones of English manufacture in the Indian Empire. Thus, a few years ago, the American harvesters and reapers were entirely unknown, where now there are many. The American telephone has been introduced in most of the large cities. Stranger than all, the old-fashioned, huge pills are fast giving place to Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, or "P. P. P.", which were first introduced in London some years ago by their American proprietors. Every Englishman who enjoys good eating, must have his dinner-pill, and it is not unusual to see distinguished persons draw from their waistcoats a tiny little vial of these Pellets, and take one with their wine.

After taking one you feel well instead of bilious and constipated; your sick headache, dizziness and indigestion are gone. It's done mildly and easily, too. These are tiny, sugar-coated, but thorough in results. One Pellet's laxative, three to four are cathartic. They regulate and cleanse the liver, stomach and bowels—quickly, but thoroughly. They are guaranteed to give satisfaction.

RELICS OF THE PAST.

The Kind of Literature Our Ancestors of This Locality Reveled in.

A. S. Runyon of Lafayette place has a number of interesting documents of considerable age.

Among them is a copy of "The Little Apostle", a discussion "in the cause of God and truth", published at Pittsburgh in 1812.

Another yellow, time-stained pamphlet is a record of the minutes of the New York Baptist association held in the First "Baptist" church, New York, May 26-27, 1819. The churches of this locality were represented by "messengers" as follows: Piscataway—Daniel Dodge, John Pyatt, Peter Runyon, jr., David D. Stelle, John Dunham, George Drake; Sampton—Lebbeus Lathrop, Samuel Drake, James I. Compton, Martin Runyon; Scotch Plains—Thomas Brown, Dugal Ayres; Plain Field—Jacob F. Randolph, Robert F. Randolph, John Manning, Daniel F. Randolph, Abram Laing. At this session much interesting business was transacted. A curious document is the covenant signed with the church by a long list of Indians, such as Wm. Maukhekowwennuk, John Konkapott, Jacob Powwokhiyantauth, Jamson Owwohthommany, Jamson Pauskap, Solomon Quohcheppoon, Thomas Tautaukeen, Paul Wanpect-khard, Jeholakim Awthanpom-mist, Francis Pohk-now-want, Henry Seekhekow-woh, Johnathan No-tom-mauth, Abram Man-mann-tuth-e-con, Ichalakim Abrams, and Timothy Pmanpan-how.

Two musty newspapers have been preserved by Mr. Runyon. One is a copy of the Times and New Brunswick Advertiser, printed at New Brunswick April 1, 1819; the other is an issue of the Middlesex and Essex Advertiser, published at Rahway Nov. 29, 1825. In these there is the usual budget of queerly written news from everywhere but the locality where the papers are published. Money must have been scarce, and payments poor, for tradesmen publish warning notices that their customers must pay up or be dunned by a professional collector. Short Hills farmers announce that gunners must not trespass on their lands. The freeholders of Rahway-Neck earnestly solicit a teacher to take charge of a prospective school which will "probably" have 30 or 35 pupils. The munificent reward of 6 cents is offered for a runaway negro lad. So one studies out the story of the "good old days".

POOR IGNORANT THINGS!

The Somerset Street Swamp-Cabbage Has n't Yet Heard of North River.

The fool sheet tells how a belated European steamer arrived in New York by "running into her North avenue pier". Jerry Garretson says that must be one of the piers at the railroad station.

In this connection old residents grow reminiscent, and tell the story of how a woman from over the mountain enjoyed her first trip from Plainfield to New York. In those days it was a common remark that the traveler went "through by water", meaning that he left the cars at Elizabethport and finished the journey by boat. This bucolic female bought her ticket, and placidly took a seat in the waiting room of the Plainfield station. Trains came and went, and still she sat there, serenely waiting. Presently some one asked her why she had not boarded a train. "Why"—she said simply—"I'm goin' through by water, an' am waiting for the boat to start". The fool sheet does n't seem to be any more up to date than that old country woman.

That Electric Road to Plainfield.

The town committee of Linden met at Roselle Monday evening to receive the application of the proposed Elizabeth and Plainfield Railway company for the location of the tracks through the township The meeting was well attended. Not enough consents of property owners were obtained by the company to run the tracks through South avenue, as was at first laid down on the route, so it is to be changed to Third avenue, to Locust street, down Locust street to First avenue and so on to Cranford township. Another hearing will be held at American Hall, Roselle, Monday evening, December 5, to which all interested are invited to be present.

Felicitous Honors to Their Moderator.

The Rev. W. E. Honeyman has been moderator of the First Presbyterian church during its lack of a regular pastor, and for the past nine months has had entire charge of its affairs. His office expires with the coming of the new pastor. At a recent meeting of the congregation a resolution was unanimously adopted thanking him for his kind, faithful and efficient work, and several complimentary speeches were made. Every one was pleased that matters had progressed so nicely, and the clergyman was fairly burdened with expressions of good wishes and good will.

A Sturdy Old Citizen Stricken.

Voorhees Van Vliet, one of the oldest residents of Plainfield, lies very low from a stroke of paralysis. He stopped to chat at Warren Stewart's wheelwright shop, Somerset street, Monday afternoon, and left at 4 for his home, corner of Duer and Emily streets. On the way a strange numbness came over him, and when he reached his dwelling he could not speak articulately, nor remove his coat. Now he is at the point of death. He has been a sturdy old citizen, but is of ripe years, and the stroke is attributed entirely to the enfeeblement of old age.

What the English Thought of Mr. Ragan.

[From The Nottingham Express.]

Mr. Henry Harger Ragan, the distinguished American lecturer, who is now at the Albert Hall, gave the fourth lecture of a series last evening to a large and delighted audience. The subject was "A Trip to Alaska", and it was treated in a most able manner. Here and there Mr. Ragan related anecdotes appropriate to the subject, and the information he luminously imparted was important and unfamiliar. The illustrations, as always, were excellent, each evoking much applause from the audience.

YOUNG KOECHLI ACQUITTED.

The Clergyman's Son Satisfies a Jury of His Innocence—Judge Ulrich's Stirring Plea.

An interesting case, that of a Plainfield clergyman's son accused of petit larceny, was tried in the Union county court at Elizabeth yesterday, when the prosecutor moved the case of the State against Alfred Koechli, a youth of eighteen, charged with having robbed his former employer, Eugene Laing of Park avenue, of $2, the indictment against him being that of petit larceny.

After a jury had been empaneled, Mr. Laing, the complainant, was sworn, and on taking the stand swore positively that on the night of August 6 he saw the accused make a feint as though he was putting money into the cash drawer, and upon going to the drawer after Koechli had walked away saw a $2 bill lying on a box under the drawer.

Having, he said, suspected Koechli for some time of being dishonest, he concluded to watch Koechli and see whether he would not come back and put the money in his pocket. Being busy, he called the attention of his son Allen to the circumstance and told him to watch the drawer, and his son finally saw Koechli edge up toward the counter and take the money.

Witness said that Koechli had been in his employ for some time, working Saturday nights; that for his work he refused to take any pay, saying that he was anxious to learn the business.

Upon Allen Laing being sworn he substantiated the testimony given by his father, and furthermore acknowledged that he and another clerk in the store had tantalized Koechli on his nationality.

On the cross-examination Mr. Laing said there was another boy employed in the store whom he had charged with stealing from him.

Koechli, on being sworn in his own defense, declared that the charge was entirely false, and explained the $2 bill circumstance by saying that on the night in question a gentleman came in for his laundry and handed him a $5 bill in which to take out 35 cents change; that he went to the cash drawer and took out, as he supposed, two $2 and one $1 bill; after which he went to the laundry drawer, took the required 37 cents out of the one dollar bill and handed it with the other bills to the gentleman, who at once said to him: "Here, you have made a mistake. You have only given me two $1 bills", when he repaired again to the cash drawer and took out the remainder, taking $2 more than he intended, and laid it on the box under the drawer in order to put it in the drawer when an opportunity presented itself without his being seen. It was all a mistake of $2 against the laundry drawer. He took the $2 bill from the main drawer, and placed it on the box as described to await an opportunity to put it in the laundry drawer. He denied taking the money from the store.

Mr. Laing in turn declared the statement of the accused to be false and furthermore said that he believed that Koechli's stealings would amount to $150; that in fact the young man had acknowledged to him his guilt and had promised to pay him back. The only money, however, paid by Koechli was 35 cents.

The father of the accused, the Rev. Frederick Koechli, testified that after May 11 he saw Mr. Laing at the store. Mr. Laing told him his son had stolen money from him to a considerable amount, at least $150. Laing also said that the boy was a spendthrift, visited pool rooms, etc. The witness investigated this, and was satisfied the story was untrue. Mr. Laing threatened to prosecute the boy, and believing his son innocent he refused to compromise.

Allen Laing, recalled, positively testified to seeing Koechli near where the money was, and saw him acting in a suspicious manner, as though he had taken it.

The case closed at 12 noon, when the Hon. John Ulrich, counsel for the defendant, made a strong appeal to the jury in his client's behalf, expressing himself as being fully satisfied that the boy was innocent.

At 2:15 the jury entered the court room and returned a verdict of not guilty. The defendant was at once discharged.

In connection with the case, the following statement is made by a friend of the family, with request for publication:

"A few months ago a young man by the name of Koechli was accused of theft by Eugene M. Laing of Park avenue, in whose employment the young man had been for a time. Mr. Laing for a long time tried to compromise the case, first with son, subsequently with father. But the father being convinced that his son was not guilty refused to do so. After all Mr. Laing went before the grand jury in Elizabeth and got an indictment for petit larceny. Yesterday the case was tried in the county court in Elizabeth before a jury. The case was thoroughly investigated, and the jury, having retired but a short time, brought in a verdict of not guilty. The Hon. John Ulrich, attorney for the defendant, handled the case in a masterly way, and made a splended defence."

Welcome to the New Pastor.

The installation services of the Rev. C. E. Herring as pastor of the First Presbyterian church will take place next week Tuesday. In the afternoon at 4, the Presbytery of Elizabeth will meet at the church, to receive Mr. Herring from the Presbytery of New York. The congregational exercises will be held at 8. The Rev. Mr. Kerr of Elizabeth is expected to preach the sermon. Dr. Gillespie of Elizabeth will deliver the charge to the pastor, and the Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards the charge to the people.

In these days of disappointments it is a gratification to know that one can buy a bottle of Salvation Oil for 25 cents.

WHY CLEVELAND WON.

A Third Party Man Sees the Hand of the Lord Directing the Democratic Policy.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—God never destroyed or punished any nation or part, while they were obeying his orders and doing right with his fellow men. From the early history of the world, sin and disobedience have been at the bottom of destruction and death. The history of the Jews, or Children of Israel, proves this, that when they obeyed God they prospered; but when they deserted God, and went off and mixed up with heathen nations and worshipped idol gods, He allowed them to be destroyed by their enemies; but when they obeyed they prospered. What became of the ten tribes? They were a chosen people for a purpose; but they were mostly wiped out for their wickedness. The Children of Israel had the promised Land before them, and were told to go up and take it; but they were not willing to go up and take it, for fear. They sent spies over to spy out the land; but they returned a set of cowards, saying, we can never take the land—save Caleb and Joshua. The others said there were monster giants over there, but Caleb and Joshua said it was a beautiful country, flowing with milk and honey, and they brought wonderful clusters of grapes, and said, we can take the land, trusting in God. All they had to do was to go forward; but they refused, and they were suffered to remain in the wilderness of sin forty years until all the old cowards to whom the promise was made died, save Caleb and Joshua; and they only, with the children of the dead, were permitted to enter the promised land. God allowed many a landslide to the Jews. Many claimed to be Jews that were not, as many people of to-day claim to be Christians that are not; for they are trusting in other gods, and worshipping the golden calf and doing as the heathen do, and teaching for doctrine the commandments of men and politicians. God allowed many a landslide on account of his proposed followers. He despised hyprocrites, those that professed loyalty but followed after other gods. Christ came into the world to destroy the works of the devil. He had no use for the Scribes, Pharisees and hyprocrites, and said, "Depart from Me". He preferred a people either hot or cold; but spewed them out of his mouth, as God and the nation's people have spewed the Republican party out of their mouth. "God works in mysterious ways his wonders to perform". This is the third landslide of our nation. The great Whig party of our land attempted to live and hold together half slavery and half freedom: but God said: "Break every yoke and let the oppressed go free;" but instead they continued to compromise in the interest of the devil, and work in the interests of the slave power; passed the fugitive slave law, making all people slave catchers under a penalty of fine and imprisonment. This brought a landslide, and the Whig party died, their death being a hard one. This opened the door for a new party, and the Republican party came into being. God's command still was on record, "Break every yoke and let the oppressed go free". But no, said the Republicans; we will drive the slave power back into the old slave States and starve them out. But that was not God's will, and He allowed the rebellion to arise, and the nation was in danger; but the Republican party attempted to put down the rebellion without removing the cause; and God allowed thousands to be slain and to die in the swamps as He did the Israelites in the wilderness. Women and children all over the land were crying for husbands and fathers that were not. The Abolitionist cried out, In God's name free the slave and remove the cause; and until that was done God would not permit the Rebels to lay down their arms. God saved the nation, and the Republican party claimed the victory; though they never intended to free a slave, only to save themselves and the nation, leaving the slaves in existence. This same party to-day exists, half-rum drunk and half sober, compromising with the devil, claiming Christianity and voting with the heathen as did the Jews, and praying good Lord and good devil. Is it any wonder that the Lord allowed the Democratic party to wipe out by the landslide as it has, for being neither hot nor cold in their profession. God never designed his church and a Christian nation for politicians, bankrupts, and thieves to serve the devil in. History repeats itself all down through the ages. There is none so blind as him that won't see.

PROHIBITONIST.

BLESSINGS ON THESE SPORTSMEN.

They Killed the Rascal that Stole the Farmer's Poultry.

Lewis VanDyke and R. H. Rushton had great luck hunting near Ash swamp, yesterday. In addition to five rabbits, they shot a fine silver fox of very large size. The animal weighed over 15 pounds.

People of the neighborhood will bless the sportsmen, for this is doubtless the fox that has been robbing hen roosts promiscuously. Mrs. Burgess, who lives within 30 feet of where the fox was killed, has lost 104 chickens this fall, and others of the locality have been losers in a similar way.

Rushton will have the fox set up in good shape.

Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup takes the lead of all cough preparations on our shelves. Carpenter & Balmeter, Jamestown, N. Y.

Oh, What a Cough!

Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease, Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50c., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will sure your cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves croup and whooping cough at once. Mothers, do not be without it. For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by A. D. Mallinson, 65 North Ave., opposite railroad station. 5-16-7

AN ORDINANCE

Locating the tracks of the Plainfield Street Railway company within the Borough of North Plainfield, and regulating the construction and operation of the same, and granting permission to said company to use electric motors as the propelling power of its cars.

The Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. That the tracks of the Plainfield Street Railway company be and they are hereby located pursuant to the route designated in their petition to extend their tracks into the borough of North Plainfield, in the following streets and avenues of the Borough of North Plainfield, to wit:

Beginning at a point in Somerset street at the line dividing North Plainfield township and the city of Plainfield and running thence northerly along Somerset street to Johnston's Drive, being the northwesterly boundary line of the borough of North Plainfield.

And said street railway company is hereby given the right to construct, maintain and operate its street railway in said street within the borough of North Plainfield.

A detailed plan of the construction shall be filed with the borough clerk by said company and approved by said Mayor and Council before any work is done under the permission herein granted.

SEC. 2. That the said company shall construct, maintain and operate a single track street railway to be laid upon the middle line of the street (except when by ordinance or resolution the Mayor and Council shall otherwise expressly determine) with suitable turnouts and switches; provided that no turnout shall be more than one hundred and fifty feet in length nor within two thousand feet of any other turnout in the same street; and provided also that every turnout shall be laid equally on each side of the middle line of the street.

SEC. 3. That said company shall keep in repair to the satisfaction of the committee on streets and public health, the paving or other surface material of the portion of the streets, roads and bridges occupied by its tracks, and in addition shall so keep in repair eighteen inches on each side of the portion of said streets, roads and bridges occupied by its tracks, or, if not so kept and maintained, the repairs thereto may be made by or under the direction of said committee on streets and public health, and to their satisfaction, and the expense thereof shall be paid on demand by said company to said borough; provided, that the said committee on streets and public health, or a majority of them, shall give at least ten days notice, in writing, of the intention to make such repairs; the said notice to be served upon any officer or employee of said company who may be found at their office or depot.

SEC. 4. The said company and its officers, servants, agents or employes shall not nor shall any or either of them be allowed to shovel, throw or place any snow, ice, slush or any other material alongside the said track or tracks, in any street or streets, in such manner as to obstruct other public travel therein, but, when removing snow, ice, slush or any other material from said track or tracks, the said company or its said officers, servants, agents or employes so offending to said borough, for each and every offence.

SEC. 5. The rails to be used for said railway shall be of steel of the pattern of the pattern of sidebearing grooved rails known as the Section Y. 62 lbs. weight to the yard, as made by the Johnson company. And the sleepers, ties, chairs and spikes shall severally be of the best quality of their respective kinds; and both material and workmanship shall be subject to the inspection and approval of the committee on streets and public health; and said railway shall not be operated for the transportation of passengers, or fares be collected thereon, until such approval and acceptance by said mayor and council or a majority of them.

SEC. 6. The company shall, in laying its tracks, switches and turnouts, conform in all cases to the grade line of the streets, as now in fact existing, or as they may be hereafter changed or established by the mayor and council; and said company shall, in case of any such change of grade, conform thereto, and alter such tracks, switches and turnouts at their own expense, and without unnecessary delay, and under the direction of said committee on streets and public health; or, in case of default, the said committee on streets and public health shall make such change, or cause the same to be made, and the expenses thereof shall be paid, on demand, by said company to said borough; provided ten days' notice of the committee's intention to make such change shall be given, and served in the same manner as in case of repairs as aforesaid.

SEC. 7 In passing over the gutters of any cross street where the bottom of such gutters is or may be below the grade line of such railroad, the rails shall be securely laid and fastened upon bridges of the most approved pattern; and such bridges shall be extended on each side of the track or tracks to the gutter line of the street in which said track or tracks is or are laid; the bridges and work to be subject to the inspection and approval of said committee on streets and public health, in every particular.

SEC. 8. During the construction of said railroad, lighted lanterns shall be kept and maintained by said company from sunset to sunrise each and every night, not less than fifty feet nor more than one hundred feet apart, along every part, where the work of construction shall have been begun, of any and all street or streets designated by the said mayor and council for laying of tracks by said company, and no unnecessary hindrance or obstruction to ordinary travel upon any such street or streets, shall be permitted; and if any accident or other casualty shall happen or occur, at any time, to any person or property, because or by reason of any work connected with such construction of said railroad or afterward because or by reason of any operation thereof, or through the carelessness or negligence of any of the company's officers or servants, agents or employes the said company shall be liable therefore, and shall indemnify, and save said borough harmless from all cost, loss or damage by reason thereof.

SEC. 9. No car shall be used by the said company upon any part of its tracks in said borough except on switches and curves; nor shall any car belonging to said company be allowed to stand in or obstruct any cross street or to stand upon any cross-walk, for any purpose or purposes whatsoever; nor to stand or remain in any one position upon any street, for more than five minutes at one time, except when said car shall be unavoidably obstructed or detained without the fault or negligence of said company, or any of its officers, servants, agents or employes, under the penalty of twenty-five dollars to be paid by said company to said borough for each and every offence.

And that cars stopping to take up or let off passengers at any street crossing, shall in all cases do so upon the far side of such crossing.

SEC. 10. The said borough reserves the right for said borough and anyone authorized by it to dig or excavate in or upon any such street in which said railway shall be so constructed, for the purpose of laying, examining, repairing or replacing any water or sewer pipe or other pipes or making or shutting off any connection therewith, or for the purpose of making any other improvement, or of doing any other work of any kind whatsoever; and the said company shall not have any recourse against said borough therefor, for damages or otherwise, because of any detention or obstruction to the travel upon said railroad arising therefrom.

SEC. 11. If the said company shall fail to build or construct the whole of said railroad, with its said turnouts and switches in the manner aforesaid, and to put the same in complete operation for the transportation of passengers, within seven months next after the passage of this ordinance, or shall afterwards fail or neglect to operate the same as aforesaid, daily and every day for the space of sixty consecutive days or shall fail to operate the same for a total number of days exceeding ninety in any one year, all the rights, powers and privileges, and every one of them, of said company, their successors or assigns, under and by virtue of this ordinance, shall thereupon cease and be determined, and this ordinance shall become null and void, so far as the grant of any such right, power or privilege to said company is concerned and, in either of such cases, the mayor and council expressly reserve the right to cause the said railroad, or any part or parts thereof, so constructed, to be removed from said street or streets, or any of them, and to sell and dispose of the materials thereof by public auction, and, after paying all the expenses of such removal and sale and of repair to the said street or streets, and of restoring the same as nearly as possible to its or their original condition to pay the balance of the proceeds of such sale to the said company, or its successors or assigns; provided, that no notice of such sale shall be required to be given, other than an advertisement, signed by the borough clerk, and published in one or more newspapers printed and published in the city of Plainfield.

SEC. 12. The cars shall be lighted by electricity and properly heated in winter, and shall be of the same design and construction as the cars now in use by the said Street Railway company in Plainfield, New Jersey.

The company shall use upon its cars the most approved noiseless gearing, and shall have proper bells or gongs, and shall be run at a speed of not more than twelve miles an hour.

SEC. 13. The cars to be used upon said railroad shall be propelled by electricity supplied by overhead wires; the poles necessary for the overhead electric construction shall be of steel or iron, they shall be placed between curb lines and sidewalk, opposite each other, and shall be located as nearly as may be one hundred and twenty-five feet apart. The trolley wires shall be properly guarded so as to prevent other wires coming into contact therewith. The current used by said company to propel its cars shall not exceed five hundred volts.

SEC. 14. That the fares charged for transportation of passengers over said railway within the borough of North Plainfield, and to or from any point in the city of Plainfield, shall be as follows: Borough marshals when on duty, and firemen when going to fires and within thirty minutes after the extinguishment of the same, FREE; children under four years of age, FREE; children over four and under ten years of age not occupying seats required by other passengers, THREE CENTS. All others, FIVE CENTS. School tickets shall be sold for three cents to all children actually attending school, and to all teachers actually teaching school within the borough of North Plainfield.

That said company shall maintain a system of transfers for a continuous ride within the combined limits of the borough of North Plainfield and the city of Plainfield for a single fare on all lines now or hereafter owned or operated by said company, and also shall give and receive like transfers to and from all the lines of other street railways upon any equitable basis that can be agreed upon by said companies. And in case of failure of any two of said companies to agree upon any such equitable basis of transfer, the question shall be submitted to five arbitrators, one to be chosen by each of the disagreeing companies, a like number by the mayor and council of the borough of North Plainfield, and a fifth by those so chosen, the decision of a majority of such arbitrators to be final and conclusive and binding upon each of the companies.

SEC. 15. That no license fee shall be charged for the running of the cars of the said company for the period of two years from the date of the adoption of this ordinance; that thereafter, beginning at the expiration of said period of two years, there shall be paid to said borough by said company as a license fee for the running of its cars, the sum of fifty dollars for the first year, one hundred dollars for the second year, one hundred and fifty dollars for the third year, two hundred dollars for the fourth year, two hundred dollars for the fifth year, two hundred dollars for the sixth year, two hundred dollars for the seventh year, two hundred dollars for the eighth year, and two hundred and fifty dollars for each and every year after the expiration of the said eighth year; such payment to be made annually.

SEC. 16. That the cars of the said company shall run under the following minimum headway; between six a. m. and ten a. m., fifteen minutes; between ten a. m. and three p. m., thirty minutes; between 3 p. m. and eight p. m., fifteen minutes; between eight p. m. and midnight, thirty minutes. The said headway to be reduced as the service requires.

Said company shall run its cars in both directions along all the portions of its route so that there shall be an equal number of trips each way daily.

All cars used upon the tracks located by virtue of this ordinance shall be run through by the shortest line controlled by said company from Johnston's Drive to the point of nearest approach by any tracks of said company to the station of the Central Railroad of New Jersey on North avenue in the city of Plainfield, and returning shall likewise be run through from said last mentioned point to Johnston's Drive, so that passengers shall not be required to change cars in traveling by said street railway between said railroad station and any point in North Plainfield on the line of the tracks located by virtue of this ordinance.

SEC. 17. That when any improvements or other method of furnishing the power for the propulsion of cars shall have been determined to be a practical success, by a commission consisting of three engineers, one to be selected by the mayor and council, one by the said company, and the third by the two so chosen, such company shall, within six months after the passage of a resolution by the mayor and, council requiring the same to be done, and notice thereof given to said company to adopt such improvements, take down their overhead construction and substitute therefore such new methods of propulsion; provided such commission may be appointed at any time the mayor and council may by resolution require, and the said company shall appoint its representative within thirty days after the adoption of said resolution, or forfeit the permission hereby given; and if such commission shall report in favor of the adoption of such improvements or method for propulsion of cars hereby permitted, another commission may be appointed as often as the mayor and council may require in the same manner and subject to the same condition.

SEC. 18. In case such substitution is made, or the said company shall forfeit the permission hereby given by any refusal to appoint a member of the commission as in the last section provided for, the mayor and council may order the poles and overhead construction of the said company taken down and the said company shall within ninety days from the service of such order upon the president or any director of said company take down and remove such poles and overhead construction, and restore the pavement of the street or streets to its original condition within that time. In case the poles and overhead construction are not removed or the street restored to its original condition by said company within ninety days from the service of such order, the same shall be done by the said mayor and council, at the expense of said company, and the said company shall in that case pay all expenses connected therewith on demand, and in case the aforesaid borough shall remove such poles and overhead construction, the same shall thereupon become and be the property of the borough.

SEC. 19. That said company upon final adoption of this ordinance and before exercising any of the rights and privileges hereby granted, shall file a condition precedent file with the borough clerk of the borough of North Plainfield a contract to be executed by said company and duly approved by the corporation counsel, wherein said company covenant and agree with the mayor and council of the borough of North Plainfield to abide by and perform all the matters and things herein, on the part of said company to be observed, kept and performed; and it will, at any and all times hereafter, fully indemnify and protect the borough of North Plainfield of and from all suits, actions and proceedings that may be brought and maintained, or sought to be brought and maintained, by any person or corporation for, on account of or by reason of, the adoption or maintenance by said company, its successors or assigns of said electric or other system or anything connected therewith, or any act of omission or commission by said company, its successors or assigns or any of its agents or servants, at any time or times, and shall whenever requested by said borough, fully defend every and any such action, suit or proceeding.

SEC. 20. That said company shall also at the same time herein above specified for filing said contract, file a bond to the borough in the sum of twenty thousand dollars to be approved as to form by the mayor and council and corporation counsel of said borough, conditioned for the full and faithful keeping, observance and performance of the terms and conditions in this ordinance contained, on part of said company to be kept, observed or performed.

And in case the conditions or terms upon which said company is granted permission to locate its tracks and maintain and operate its road or any of the terms or conditions of the said contract are violated, the borough reserves to itself the right to revoke the permission herein granted, to remove all the tracks of the said company and all the constructions made in the streets of the borough by said company, its successors or assigns.

SEC. 21. That this ordinance shall take effect November, 25, 1892.

Dated, Nov. 11, 1892.

A FEMALE COBBLER.

The Only Woman Shoemaker in New York City.

She Learned the Trade of Her Father in England and Now Makes a Fair Living Out of It in the American Metropolis.

The woman who has the distinction of being the first woman shoemaker in the city, says the New York Sunday Journal, is Mrs. Elizabeth Gill, whose place of business is No. 295 Mulberry street. Her home is also there as well, and by careful attention to the former, she manages to keep the latter moving along merrily.

There is something decidedly astonishing as you enter her workshop. It is situated in the front room on the ground floor of a big tenement flat house. As you pass the wide doorway, into a trifle dingy hall, a smaller door within it bears this sign:

MRS. ELIZABETH GILL,
Boot and Shoe Maker.

Within the flat is a square little room, in which is a broad work bench, such as shoemakers always use. There are the traditional shoemaker's implements on every side; there are a few rolls of leather on a few chairs; shoes half and fully made; some that need repairing and others that have been repaired are scattered about the room.

The only evidence of feminine refinement is in the big pot of flowers that stands there on one end of the work bench.

The shoemaker is seated upon the work bench, busily pegging a pair of shoes, and meanwhile softly whistling to herself. That is the only tribute she pays to her mannish employment, she explains, when making a bit of apology for her tunefully ringing accompaniment to the deft blows that are bringing leather into the shape of a shoe.

Mrs. Gill is comely, with a few strands of shining silvery white hair amid her brown braids. She wears spectacles, not on account of age, she says, but because of near-sightedness, when at work, for at other times she takes them off, and looks at you with a frank sincerity that makes her face a lovable one.

"I always knew how to make shoes," Mrs. Gill said. "You see, I was born in Northampton, England, and my father was a shoemaker. His shop was in a cottage where we all lived. I used to play in my father's shop, and I fancy that my first plaything was a shoemaker's awl, or some other one of his tools. So you see I was brought up in the atmosphere of a shoemaker's shop. I never learned the trade. It was born in me, and before I knew A from Z I knew just how my father tapped a pair of shoes."

Mrs. Gill went on to describe her girlhood, with the prosaic, homely touches in it that come to the child of a poor English cobbler. Then she married. And marriage in her case seems to have been a failure.

"There soon came two children," Mrs. Gill added, "and the problem of getting bread was one that I had to face, because you can't make a man work if he won't. So then I opened my little shoe store in London. I cobbled; I made shoes; I did all I could to keep us all alive, but seventy-five cents a day isn't much to keep four hungry mouths on, and that was all we could make in London."

Then the next step was America. One October day fifteen years ago, Mrs. Gill, the two children, a pet cat and Mr. Gill sailed for the new world, and when they reached it they moved into their present quarters at No 295 Mulberry street. They have been there ever since. Mr. Gill died there. The two boys are growing fast, and are almost big men. They are employed in downtown business houses, and they are willing and anxious to "help mother."

"But I peg away at my business," says Mrs. Gill, "just as if nothing had happened. I don't want to be a burden on my boys, you know, and I want to leave them a few dollars that I have tucked away in a savings bank, so they will be forehanded in the world."

The Rain Tree of Peru.

In the northern part of Peru, in what is otherwise an arid desert, the celebrated "rain tree" grows. This species, Batas vapero, though not large or of much commercial value, is a veritable South American wonder, having the extraordinary property of condensing what little moisture there is in the atmosphere so as to cause a continual mist to exude (seemingly) from its leaves and branches. The leaves are of a thick, succulent nature, and when examined with a strong glass exhibit many of the qualities of the common sponge.

National Banks.

Three years ago last February there were 3,170 active national banks with an aggregate capital of $596,569,330. Their resources amounted to $2,837,406,213. To-day there are 3,777 national banks in active business, with an aggregate paid up capital of $693,331,704, and with resources amounting to just about $3,500,000,000. That shows an increase of 607 national banks and an increase of $95,000,000 in capital and about $668,000,000 in resources.

Cyclists Peddling Coffee.

A Berlin letter says: A new industry has been established in Berlin for cyclists. About a week ago several coffee peddlers appeared on the various streets in the laboring quarters of the city. These were mounted on bicycles provided with an arrangement for keeping coffee hot for several hours. They are not allowed to stand still, but must sell their coffee while in motion. They have done a thriving business all through the quarters where the poorer classes live, for the coffee is good and cheap, one penny buying a tineupful, and as they are constantly kept going they cover a vast amount of territory during the day.

A Modest Demand.

Sam Tantry, a clerk on Harlem avenue, is a young man who suffers from defective eyesight and a long tongue. Not long since, in consequence of an unrestrained use of his unruly member, he received a challenge from a friend.

"I accept the challenge," said Bantry, "but as I am short-sighted I have one condition to demand."

"What is that?"

"As I can't see as far as my opponent I demand that he be placed at least ten feet nearer me than I am to him."—Texas Siftings.

Mystery of a Night.

First Pullman Porter—Golly, chile, but I had a time las' night.

Second Pullman Porter—What's de matteh?

"Thought I los' a shoe. Looked fo' it high and low, den gub it up an' waited for the passenger ter kick."

"An' did he?"

"Huh! Reckon he didn't. Come out atter while, stumpin' roun' widone leg."—Chicago News Record.

Friendly Advice.

Hostetter McGinnis went to a Harlem doctor for advice.

"What is the matter with you?"

"I am as hungry as a wolf and work like a horse but I can't sleep."

"I guess you had better see a veterinary surgeon," said the doctor, sarcastically.

"What do I want to see him for? I am no veteran."—Texas Siftings.

A Difference in Dates.

He (after the introduction)—I don't suppose you remember me, but I think we used to be in the same Sunday school class together.

She—I don't think so. When I was a little girl in Sunday school, I was always in a girls' class.

He—But this was when you were a teacher.—Truth.

An Inexperienced Youth.

Married Man—And you are engaged to Miss Blankie?

Young Friend—Yes, I watched her a whole day on a railroad train and became so interested in her that I followed her up, got an introduction, and now we are to be married.

"Was she traveling alone?"

"No, she was with her mother, and her kindness to her mother is what captured me."

"But, gee Willikins, old man, she'll go on being kind to her mother."—N. Y. Weekly.

The Ambiguous Boy.

The boy had been passed on the conductor at half fare rates, and later the official saw him in a seat by himself and began to talk with him.

"How old are you, sonny?" he asked.

"Ten years old," said the boy.

"Aren't you rather large for your age?"

"Maybe I am on a train, but I ain't on shore," was the ambiguous answer, and the conductor let him alone.—Detroit Free Press.

A Bamboozle.

First Dude—How much did you pay for this cane?

Second Dude—Three dollars—it's genuine bamboo.

First Dude—The man who sold it to you bamboozled you very nicely. It's only imitation.—Texas Siftings.

On His Dignity.

"Is Mistah Gwaynus in?" asked the sable caller.

"He is, sah," replied the dusky functionary at the door, "but he is occupied."

"How soon, sah," said the caller, pulling up his shirt collar, "will Mistah Gwaynus be vacant?"—Chicago Tribune.

Why They Went.

Mrs. De Fashion—And so you were at Berlin while abroad. Did you stay long?

Little Bobby De Style—Only 'bout a day.

"What did you go to Berlin for?"

"So w'en folks asked mamma if she'd been to Berlin she could say 'yes,' of kourse."—Good News.

Bobbie's Naughty Act.

Marjorie—Bobby was awfully naughty on the beach, mamma.

Mamma—What did he do, my dear?

Marjorie—He picked up a clam shell and buried it. The poor clam will come home to-night and won't be able to find his house.—Harper's Young People.

A Seraphic Temperament Needed.

Col. Clumsy (after the dance)—You waltz like an angel, Miss Squires.

Miss Squires (whose train has suffered—It needed an angel to waltz with you, colonel.—Chicago News Record.

Full of Spirits.

Tanks—Old Soak reminds me of a haunted house.

Banks—How so?

Tanks—Almost every night he is full of spirits.—Brooklyn Life.

Not a Question of Age.

"All the girls wear them."

"Do you still call yourself a girl?"

"Why not? My husband is still one of the boys, though my senior by twenty years."—Life.

An Identification.

"Pa, who was the old woman who lived in a-shoe?"

"She was originally a New York girl who married a Chicago shoemaker, and was left a widow without a home."—Life.

Charity.

Mother—What did you do with that medicine the doctor left for you?

Small Boy—I heard there was a poor sick boy in the back street, an' I took it around an' left it for him."—Good News.

We have just received a big shipment of Ladies' Dongola Button Kid Shoes which we have marked $1,90; they'll out wear any $2.50 shoe you have seen.

Just now we have some very good values in Men's Shoes at $2.50 and $3.

We would also remind you that our store is brimful of brand-new lines of footwear suitable for fall and winter wear and you will do yourself and your pocketbook justice by buying at

REORGANIZATION PLANS

The President in Touch With Suggestions of Leaders.

EXTRA SESSION STILL TALKED OF.

Senator Carlisle's Views on the Subject—Superintendent Porter Gives Petroff His Walking Papers—Gen. Rosecrans' Health Better—The Great Slaughter of Seals by Poachers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Officials and others who have talked with President Harrison since the election say that he takes a deep interest and an active part in the consideration of plans for the future conduct of the Republican party.

They say that in all his talks with them the President's utterances have tended to encourage them to activity in the work of organizing and strengthening the party.

There has been no despondency in what he has said, and he wastes no time in vain regrets, but is earnest in the feeling that more than ever there is need for compactness and unity of purpose in the party.

The discussion of the reorganization, not in change of principle or policy, but of perfection of the management and methods, has already been taken up by leading Republicans, and correspondence looking to the strengthening of the organization has begun.

A permanent organization, with workers who will keep up the work all the year round and every year, instead of trying to do the work of four years in the few months before a Presidential election, is what is aimed at.

A TALK WITH CARLISLE

The Kentuckian Says No One Can Tell About an Extra Session.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Both Senator Carlisle and Gorman are here to-day. Senator Carlisle denies the story that he is booked for a Cabinet place, and no one here seriously considers him in any of the slates.

Senator Carlisle, in talking about an extra session, said: "No one can tell what will be done in the matter. It is too early to predict either way. There are other measures besides the tariff which may cause the new President to call an extra session. What is done by the coming session of Congress will determine what the President will have to do.

"We cannot tell now whether the Sherman Silver bill will be repealed, whether the tariff bills which have passed the House will become laws and what the condition of the Treasury may be on March 4, so you see it is a question for serious consideration and cannot be settled at once or at the present time."

Special Agent Petroff Discharged.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Supt. of the Census Robert F. Porter has discharged Ivan Petroff, the special agent, who prepared the reports of Alaska for the Tenth and Eleventh censuses. In his letter to the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Porter says: "Having acquainted myself with all the facts in relation to this matter, I regret to say that I see no extenuating circumstances, and therefore ask your approval of my action."

Outrageous Work of Seal Poachers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Mr. Tingle, agent of the North American Commercial company has returned from the islands of St. George and St. Paul. He says his company killed only the number of seals allowed by law—7,500. He declares that during the season, poachers killed and secured 60,000 seals and destroyed 400,000 more that they did not secure.

Gen. Rosecrans' Health Better.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The report that Gen. Rosecrans, Register of the Treasury, is dying, is untrue. In fact, the General is better to-day. He was out riding yesterday, and, although still weak and feeble and unable to go to his office, he is improving. His daughter arrived from Montana yesterday, and will remain with him.

Catlin May Succeed Raum.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—It is reported that Mr. Cleveland has decided to appoint Gen. Isaac S. Catlin of Brooklyn Commissioner of Pensions.

Buchanan May Continue as Governor.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 17.—It now looks as if after a hard fight to defeat him, Governor Buchanan will be Governor for two years more. Gov.-elect Peter Turney is dangerously ill. The constitution says the Governor shall keep his seat until another has been elected and inaugurated and then if the latter dies the same shall appoint his successor. Turney has not been inaugurated and therefore if he dies Buchanan will remain in the Governor's chair another term.

Oppose Three Days of Grace.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 17.—The Bankers' Association of Illinois is in session here. At yesterday's meeting the following resolution was adopted: "That we indorse the recommendation of the National Association for the abolition of three days of grace, and that our Executive Committee is hereby authorized to use its discretion as to the advisability of presenting to the coming Legislature a bill for the amendment of the present law."

Freshet in New Brunswick, N. J

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 17.—The heavy rains started a freshet in the Raritan river which has caused considerable damage. About 500 feet of the temporary bridge at Albany street has been carried away and the temporary structure at the Pennsylvania railroad bridge has been totally destroyed. The lower part of the town is flooded and work has been stopped in some of the factories on account of the high water.

Suicide of a Retired Merchant.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Edmund Titus, a wealthy retired merchant, formerly of the firm of Titus, Frazee & Titus, feed merchants of James' slip, New York city, committed suicide yesterday by hanging himself in his carriage house at Scarsdale. Mr. Titus was 67 years of age and leaves an invalid wife and one daughter. No cause is known for the act.

THE TRUMPBOUR TRIAL.

Defense Alleges a Conspiracy Not to Proceed Against Ostrander.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 17.—The last juror in the Trumpbour case was obtained yesterday afternoon, and the District Attorney opened the case. After describing the crime, he stated that the prosecution would prove by several reputable witnesses that Troumpbour had confessed his connection with the robbery of the Ulster Savings Institution, and explained the system adopted to take the deposits and falsify the books.

Counselor DeWitt during the examination of witnesses stated that the defense would claim there was a conspiracy to imprison Trumpbour and not push the indictment against Ostrander.

A Minister Threatened.

WARSAW, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Quite a sensation has been created here by the announcement that a letter has been received by the Rev. Mr. Nassau, pastor of the Presbyterian church here, demanding $15,000 or he would be shot. It was signed by Fred Bartlett, a young man 30 years old, a native of this place, where he at one time owned considerable property. He returned home about two weeks ago. The letter was shown to the authorities, and Bartlett was arrested.

Smallpox at Birmingham, Conn.

BIRMINGHAM, Conn., Nov. 17.—Ernest Russell, Peter Gillis, James Brennan and Michael Hurley, living in different parts of the town, all have smallpox. The cases cause much excitement, and fears are entertained that the disease will become epidemic. The Health Board is taking every precaution.

Sued for Causing Timber Fires.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 17.—Heavy suits for damages have been brought here by the Cumberland land owners against the New York & New England railroad for loss of timber by woodland fires started by sparks from locomotives.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

New London a Port for Steamers.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 17.—Stonington, which has been a terminal for the Stonington steamboat line since 1837, is to be abandoned by the New York, New Haven & Hartford. The big passenger steamers will soon make a port at New London.

Date for the Combine Hearing.

ALBANY, Nov. 17.—Attorney General Rosendale has named Nov. 29, at 10 o'clock, as the day for hearing before him of the coal combination matter. The Reading, Lehigh Valley and Delaware & Lackawanna roads have been notified to appear.

Four Years for Obstructing the Track.

NEWCASTLE, Pa., Nov. 17. — Judge Hazen has sentenced "Farmer" Adams, the man who placed obstructions on the Fort Wayne track at Enon, to pay a fine of $500 and undergo imprisonment in the penitentiary for four years and six months.

TROUBLE OVER A TROLLEY LINE.

Citizens and Pennsylvania Railroad Employes Fight at Marcus Hook, Pa.

CHESTER, Pa., Nov. 17.—There was a clash at Marcus Hook yesterday between the borough citizens and Pennsylvania railroad employes. The Union railway company, of Chester, which is building a trolley line to Marcus Hook, laid six pieces of track in the borough, one on either side of branches of the Pennsylvania and Reading roads.

A gang of the railroad workmen tore up the trolley line, and later two gangs laid tracks alongside of the Pennsylvania branch.

Councilman Richardson ordered the workmen to stop, but they paid no heed to him.

Mr. Richardson then summoned other members of the council and a number of citizens, and they arrived on the scene with shovels and filled up the excavations as fast as the laborers shoveled them out.

Finding that the objectors were getting the better of them the workmen threw in cross ties to block them, but the citizens threw the cross ties in a ditch as fast as the workmen piled them in the road. Finally the section bosses ordered the sectionmen to place a rail across the road but the citizens got hold of it and a tussel for possession began.

The citizens outnumbered the workmen, who were forced to let go. All got out of the way except Dennis McClung, a workman, whose left leg was badly injured.

The borough policeman by this time reached the battle field, and he was ordered by Councilman Richardson to clear the street of the Pennsylvania's workmen. He ordered them away.

They refused, when, jumping on a pile of dirt, revolver in hand, he ordered them to disperse. Only a section boss, W. H. Sanford, refused, and he was placed under arrest. Burgess Vernon held him in $1,000 bail for court.

LIZZIE BORDEN'S CASE.

It Will be Several Days Before the Grand Jury Reports.

TAUNTON, Mass., Nov. 17.—Eavesdroppers have no chance at getting a crumb from the grand jury room where the Borden case is under examination. A deputy sheriff and a stalwart policeman guard the door and people are kept at a proper distance.

When witnesses arrive at the court house they are quickly secluded from interviewers, or if one succeeds in eluding the watchful eye of an officer for a moment and talks with an innocent stranger, the thread of conversation is snapped short when the eye of the warden takes in the situation.

It is given out that it will take all of this week and a portion of next before a report is made to the court. There are hints, however, that there is a lot of new evidence that will clinch the matter of an indictment and that much of it will come from chemical experts who did not show their hand at the preliminary examination.

A 200-POUND MAN AND A PEANUT.

The Man Rolled the Nut Down a Hill in Payment of His Election Bet.

YONKERS, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Last night M. Walford, of this city, was seen rolling a peanut down South Broadway to Main street.

Mr. Walford weighs over 200 pounds, and before election agreed with Henry Bower that if Cleveland was elected the loser was to roll a peanut the full length of Broadway.

Mr. Walford kept his word and was followed by a large crowd.

It took him nearly an hour to perform the task, and when he had finished he was hardly able to stand erect on account of the attitude he was in during the rolling of the peanut.

PETONE'S AWFUL DEED.

He Killed His Two Children and Then Cut His Own Throat.

BOSTON, Nov. 17.—At noon groans were heard issuing from a room at No. 2 Thatcher court, and the neighbors burst open the door and found Giuseppi Petone, an Italian, dying on the bed, and the bodies of his two children, aged 6 and 11, beside him.

The man had murdered his children and cut his own throat. He left a letter saying that he was determined to kill his children. He was taken to the hospital.

His wife died some six weeks ago, and his loss is supposed to have made him insane.

Caused by a Crossed Wire.

JERSEY CITY, Nov. 17.—A crossed wire set fire to the Western Union's Hudson river cable station at the Pennsylvania ferry in this city last evening, and in less than an hour the building was gutted, only the corrugated iron walls being left standing. There were 185 Western, Southern, and Erie wires running into the building, and of these only two were left intact.

Martial Law Suspended in Coeur d'Alene.

BOISE, Ia., Nov. 17.—Gov. Wiley has issued a general order directing Gen. Curtis, commanding the troops in the Coeur d'Alene mines, to suspend martial law in Shoshone county. The county has been under martial law since last June. The Federal troops have been ordered to withdraw, and now the civil authorities will resume control.

New Hampshire's Official Vote.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 17.—Official returns to the Secretary of State give Smith, Republican, for Governor, 33,741; McKinney, Democrat, 41,434; Smith's plurality, 2,317, and majority, 643. The scattering vote has not yet been returned from 90 of the smaller towns, and when these come in Smith's majority will be reduced to about 400.

OLD WORLD HAPPENINGS

Stormy Scenes in the French Chamber of Deputies.

BITTER OPPOSITION TO M. LOUBET

Many Convicts Killed and Wounded in a Spanish Prison—Nine Dead from the Collapse of a Building in Salamanca—United States Delegates to the Monetary Conference Honored.

PARIS, Nov. 17.—In the Chamber yesterday M. Loubet and his colleagues were caught between two storms, and were tossed about pitilessly by the Conservatives and Moderates on one side, and the Radicals on the other.

It was known in advance that the question of amending the Press law would come up, and the leaders of every party and faction were in place prepared for the attack.

M. Loubet gave them without delay the desired opportunity. He proposed to amend the Press law of 1881 in such a manner as to "curb the license of the extremists."

The amendment contemplated would be a dragnet sort of affair, by means of which editors could be handled largely at the discretion of the government.

Loubet explained and defended the amendment, drawing illustrations from the excesses of the Socialistic, Anarchist and extreme Radical press during the dynamite outrages, and the labor troubles of the last few months.

He was interrupted frequently by manifestations of disapproval and shouted comments.

No sooner did he cease speaking than the attack on the Government was begun by Moderates and Conservatives. The burden of most of the speeches was that the Ministry were proposing measures against an evil which they themselves had encouraged. The timidity of the Government in treating with the Carmaux strikers was condemned, and the Ministry were asked what they could expect but license and excess when they showed such weakness in dealing with the Carmaux lawbreakers.

Several attacks were made upon the Ministers for general inefficiency and cowardice.

The Radical speakers addressed themselves directly to the proposed amendment. This, they said, was so worded as to allow the government at its discretion to curtail the freedom of the press, and to hold French editors in the slavish dependence of the German editors. The designs of the Ministry to terrorize the French press were also described as palpable efforts to bolster a falling government.

The debate was interrupted by adjournment. Throughout the speeches there was much confusion.

DEATH AT A WEDDING FEAST.

Nine Persons Killed and Many Hurt by the Fall of a Building.

MADRID, Nov. 17.—A sad story of the fatal interruption of wedding festivities is reported from Bejar, a town 45 miles south of Salamanca. A young couple had just been married in the church there, and the wedding party had gone to a restaurant, where a wedding feast was served.

After the banquet dancing was begun, when suddenly, and without an instant's warning, the walls of the building collapsed. The entire party, together with the employes of the restaurant, were buried in the ruins.

In a few minutes the work of clearing away the wreckage was begun.

When the wreck was cleared away sufficiently for it to be known that no one else was in the ruins, nine bodies were lying in a ghastly row on the sidewalk.

The injured numbered 30, some of whom, it is thought, will not recover. Others will be crippled for life.

The disaster has caused general gloom in the community. The building was thought to be perfectly safe. It is supposed that the movements of the dancers were responsible for the collapse.

A NEWS PIRATE CONVICTED.

Hawkins Stole the "Thunderer's" Thunder and Sold It.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Henry Hawkins, a journalist, who has been caught in the attempt of stealing early copies of the "Times, through the agency of one John Sawyer, for the purpose of cribbing news collected by that paper and sending it to other papers, appeared before Recorder Hall, of the Central Criminal Court yesterday and was found guilty. Sentence was deferred.

He is liable to a heavy fine and imprisonment.

NINE SPANISH CONVICTS KILLED.

Mutiny in the Tarragona Prison Which Came Very Near Being Successful.

MADRID, Nov. 17.—The convicts of Tarragona prison overpowered the warden, but before they could get into the governor's quarters the troops were summoned, and had a desperate fight with the men.

A volley was followed by a hand-to-hand encounter, and by sharp shooting by the soldiers under orders from their commander until the convicts were driven to their cells.

Nine were killed and 16 badly wounded.

U. S. Delegates Honored.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—United States Senator Jones, President Cannon, of the Chase National bank, and Director Leech, of the United States Mint, members of the United States Commission to the Monetary Conference in Brussels, will dine with Sir William Harcourt to-night, and with Henry White, United States Secretary of Legation to-morrow. At the last moment it has been decided that Canada shall not be represented at the conference.

Escape of a Notorious Criminal.

MOSCOW, Nov. 17.—Savin, the Russian Cagliostro and Bulgarian pretender, whose remarkable life was narrated throughout Europe last year, has escaped from his guard of 20 men while being moved between stations in Siberia.

Appeal Taken in Peck's Case.

ALBANY, Nov. 17.—The District Attorney of Albany county has appealed to the General Term the demurrer in the Peck case.

KNIGHTS AT ST. LOUIS.

The Annual Address of General Master Workman Powderly.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 17.—It is not thought that the convention of Knights of Labor will adjourn before next week, as a number of important matters are to come up for discussion and decision.

The first part of the proceedings yesterday was devoted to reading a statement of the finances of the order.

The annual address of General Master Workman Powderly was extremely lengthy, occupying over an hour in its delivery.

He congratulated his hearers upon the present condition of the order, reviewed its many periods of prosperity and depression, and said that although since its existence the membership of the order had ebbed and flowed, yet to-day it was on the increase, and all through the exciting times incident to the Presidential election the order had steadily grown in membership and influence. At no time, however, had the membership exceeded six hundred thousand in good standing.

Reviewing the labor movement Mr. Powderly said that there are too many labor organizations struggling for supremacy. The tendency of the labor movement seemed to be to divide up, while that of the opposing force—capital—was to consolidate, and thereby to gain strength to combat the forces of industry, when, single handed they were arrayed before them.

After speaking at length on the question of ballot reform, and on the initiative and referendum scheme, and urging that the General Assembly take specific action on both questions, Mr. Powderly proceeded to dwell in detail on the matter of immigration.

He said that six years ago he had declared in favor of the restriction of immigration, and although his views were not received with favor by the Order he had not changed them, but on the contrary, had made them more rigid. He believed in the total exclusion of all immigrants who are not self-supporting on landing in this country.

There should be a fixed term of years, ten would be enough, during which no immigrant should be permitted to land with a view to remaining, unless he could prove that he had sufficient means to sustain himself and those depending upon him for one year.

Strikes and lock-outs next claimed Mr. Powderly's attention. He said that during the last six months the people of this land had witnessed such attempts at making the power of aggregated wealth supreme as were never dreamt of before. Whether it was at Coeur d'Alene, at Homestead, at Buffalo or in Tennessee, the instinct which guided the rapacious hand was the same.

The underground wires which directed these attacks all ran to the same center from all these places.

The organization of labor will, if it has sense, take up these questions for consideration.

The railroads are public highways, belonging to the whole people and the whole people should know it. The campaign which has just closed witnessed an interesting, if not very intelligent discussion of the tariff, but there is more of a revenue illegally drawn from the pockets of merchants, manufacturers and workmen in one month of the year by the railroads and telegraphs than we pay in tariffs in a year.

These, and all questions connected with them, must occupy the attention of the industrial organization of the future, and the strike of a future must be a strike for the rule of the people. They could decry politics as they pleased, but they must be politicians, or be slaves of politicians.

Chute Remembered His Poor Relative.

HARTFORD, Nov. 17.—The rich Hartford man referred to in the despatch from London as having left $12,000 to a poor English woman is Peter Chute, a Hartford liquor dealer, who was killed by a New York & New England train about six weeks ago. His estate inventories $60,000, out will eventually amount to $100,000. There are two other heirs, Mrs. Boyce, the English legatee, lives at Burnley, Lancashire.

John L. Sullivan Drunk Again.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 17.—John L. Sullivan arrived in Harrisburg on his way to New York decidedly inebriated. He frightened the wits out of a farmer in the car by inviting him to fight. Before leaving Sullivan said to the crowd, who gathered around him: "I can lick any man in the ring if he stands still. I am no race horse." During the few minutes he was here the ex-champion made things lively.

New Haven's Smallpox Epidemic.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 17.—The smallpox epidemic at the General Hospital continues unabated. Despite every possible effort to check the progress of the disease new cases are breaking out each day. Yesterday Miss Metoxen, the trained nurse who attended Platt, the first patient, was taken with the malady, making the eighth case since the disease first appeared at the institution.

Lady Somerset Returns to England.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Lady Henry Somerset, the temperance leader of Great Britain, and Miss Francis E. Willard, of Chicago, who have been attending the convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union at Denver, sailed yesterday for England. Miss Willard accompanies Lady Somerset to the latter's castle at Eassnor, near London.

Miss Gwendolyn Caldwell Very Ill.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Miss Gwendolyn Caldwell has been ill for the past month. She is at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. Her illness is the result of an attack of typhoid fever, and her physicians fear it will leave her a cripple for life. Miss Caldwell has contributed liberally to charitable objects. She gave $100,000 to the Catholic University of Washington.

End of a Kentucky Desperado.

MIDDLEBOROUGH, Ky., Nov. 17.—The body of Bob Slaughter, nearly devoured by hogs, was discovered about two hundred yards from the Belt Line road yesterday. Slaughter was a noted desperado and was continually in trouble with the police. It is quite probable that some other ruffian waylaid him and shot him in true mountain style.

One Wave Undid Another's Work.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Nov. 17.—Charles E. Llewellyn and Russell Broughton, fishermen on the schooner Lizzie J. Griffin, in a recent gale were washed out of their dory by one wave, and the next big roller washed them back again, so that they could reach their overturned boat, and were rescued later.

Forecast Till 8 P. M. Friday: For New Jersey, Fair, Followed by Increasing Cloudiness and Rain by Friday Night; Warmer, Southeast Winds.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The second of the Ragan lectures will be given next Monday evening. Subject—"Shakespeare and the Avon."

—Superintendent Passmore, of the Plainfield Street Railway company, has filled the positions of conductors Roberts and Staats with others.

—There will be skating at the Crescent rink Thanksgiving afternoon and evening, with band music and exhibitions from 2 to 5 and 7 to 10:30.

—The meeting of the Young Ladies' Missionary society of the First Baptist church will be held in the lecture room to-morrow afternoon at 2.

—The New York city Seventh-Day Baptist church will hold no service next Sabbath, the 19th, on account of the yearly meeting to be held in this city.

—The second meeting of the week of prayer for young men will be held at the Y. M. C. A. rooms this evening at 8. All men are invited to be present.

—Prices have been reduced at Krewson's billiard parlor, 25 West Front street, where billiards may now be played for 40 cents an hour and pool at 3 cents a cue.

—The few reserved seats that are left can be secured at $1 15 each for the balance of the Ragan course of illustrated lectures. Diagram at the Central pharmacy.

—The King's Messengers invite their friends to hear Miss Alice Green tell of her work in Utah and take tea with them to-morrow afternoon from 4 to 6, in the parlors of the First Presbyterian church.

—The Democrats will hold no primaries for the nomination of candidates for the city election of Dec. 6, except, possibly, a councilman in the Fourth ward; and there will be no Democratic city convention nor a party nominee for mayor.

—The Bound Brook jollification parade will take place to-morrow evening as stated in THE PRESS, and not "Saturday evening" as stated in the Courier. The Cleveland and Stevenson Campaign club and the North Plainfield Democratic association have been invited to take part.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

W. C. Emory, of West Sixth street, is the happy father of a baby boy weighing nine pounds. The little fellow's birthday anniversaries will occur Nov. 10. His father named him Grover C., in honor of the people's choice.

Mrs. William M. Buckman, of Linden avenue, North Plainfield, of whose serious condition mention was made in yesterday's PRESS, is very much better to-day, and her ultimate recovery is anxiously looked forward to by her many friends.

Henry A. Thorne, jr., of this city, has joined the rank of Benedicks. His bride is Miss Inez M. Weldon, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Weldon of Mooer's Forks, N. Y. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Charles Temple, yesterday.

In the Westerly Daily Tribune last Monday, was published a two-column letter by Ethan Lanphear of this city, which gives his view as a Prohibitionist of the late election. He says the Republican party has supported a drunken nation, and calls out "Will some clergyman who voted the rum Republican ticket, set me right, if I am wrong!"

C. J. Noel of Netherwood avenue is favorably spoken of for councilman from the First ward. His views on the subject of improvements for that section are well known. The grading of North avenue back of Netherwood depot was accomplished through his instrumentality. He can be relied upon to further the interests of the ward in particular and the city in general.

Rev. Koechli on His Son's Case.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Will you kindly give space to the following corrections of your yesterday's article under the heading "Young Koechli Acquitted":

1. About the time of working in Mr. Laing's store. My son came the second time to Mr. Laing as clerk May 9, and remained till June 11, and after that he went to the store on about five different Saturday evenings to help out. Mr. Laing said the same on the stand.

2. Mr. Laing not only admitted that there was another boy in the same time coming in question, whom he charged with stealing, but even so he admitted that since he had compromised with him.

3. My son said that the gentleman on whom he waited and gave him the $5 bill had to pay 39 cents. That after his attention was drawn to the mistake he had made, my son went to the laundry drawer, which was nearer where they stood, took the $2 out of that, and handed it to the customer, having given him $2 69 (not 37 cents). Now the laundry drawer was $2 short, and the main cash drawer had $2 too much, which he had to correct, etc.

4. It was not May 11 but Sept. 9, that Mr. Laing informed me first about the trouble, and I said so in court. Furthermore, I said that Mr. Laing said to me not only that my son had taken at least $150, but he also said "to $150 I can swear, and how much more I can't tell".

5. Allen Laing was not recalled to the stand, but admitted on cross examination that he had not seen my son take the $2 bill. F. KOECHLI.

I was so much troubled with catarrh it seriously affected my voice. One bottle of Ely's Cream Balm did the work. My voice is fully restored.—D. F. Liegenser, A. M., pastor of the Olivet Baptist church, Philadelphia, Pa.

ROBBED HER EMPLOYER.

Nurse Girl Minnie Morris Disappears When Her Guilt Is Discovered—Trouble for the Pawnbrokers Who Aided Her.

A bold robbery took place at the City Hotel yesterday afternoon, when Minnie Morris, a colored nurse girl, stole jewelry and clothing from the wife of the proprietor, Mrs. John Beerbower, and ran away.

Mrs. Beerbower missed the articles while dressing for the afternoon, and from various circumstances judged that Minnie had taken them. She spoke to the girl in accusation, and the culprit ran down stairs and out of the building, leaving not only her own hat and other goods behind, but a parcel of things belonging to the Beerbower children, including a plush sack and other garments, which she had wrapped up to take away.

Investigation showed that Minnie had taken the jewelry she had stolen from Mrs. Beerbower's bureau, to Dreier's pawnbroker shop. First she had gone there with a garnet ring, which Dreier had refused to buy because it was defective. Then she took a diamond ring valued at $75, and sold it for $3 Mr. Beerbower says that the Dreiers at first denied having the ring described, saying that no such transaction was entered on the books. Later, after Mr. Beerbower had threatened prosecution, they restored the property.

Mr. Beerbower has had a warrant issued for Minnie, who cannot be found, and says he will have the Dreiers officially investigated. The pawnbrokers are under bond to the county to conduct a strictly legitimate loan business.

Minnie had worked for the Beerbowers about a month. She cannot be found by the police.

Mrs. Dreier denies all knowledge of the transaction, and says that a son in the store down stairs bought the ring, and very honorably returned it as soon as he found out it was stolen. The Dreiers all have a record for just and honorable dealing, and were deceived by the girl's misrepresentation.

The missing girl is said to have stolen a watch from the hotel cook also.

A DELIGHTFUL SERIES.

Everybody Pleased and Edified by the New Course of Lectures in Music Hall.

To the traveler, to the enthusiastic lover of French literature, art and history, and to the casual listener, Mr. Ragan's illustrated lecture on "Paris, the Magnificent" afforded the greatest pleasure last night, when the celebrated lecturer appeared for the first time this season in Music Hall.

Mr. Ragan will be heard in this city three times before January 1, under Mr. Demarest's management, and if last night's programme of instruction and entertainment is to be thrice augmented Plainfield is fortunate in having this year the finest course of lectures ever delivered in Music Hall. On Monday of next week the theme of the lecturer will be "Shakespeare and the Avon."

The orchestra and dress-circle of the opera house were filled with an intelligent audience when Mr. Ragan appeared on the stage last night. The lecturer addressed those present with a few friendly sentences, meeting many as old friends, and gracefully acknowledging the pleasure of meeting new ones. He easily passed on to the intellectual entertainment he had to offer, and for nearly two hours invited the attention of his hearers upon the gay life, the beautiful architecture and the sombre history of the magnificent Paris, old and new.

During the last year Mr. Ragan has traveled extensively, and the many days he spent in Paris were well employed in gathering numerous beautiful views of that wonderful city. These reproductions of life, and objects inanimate, were thrown upon canvas last night. Their brilliancy of coloring and beauty have not been surpassed by any seen in Plainfield. The shifting of each new view was the signal for applause and exclamations of wonder. It is safe to say that not one of those present last night will miss any of the subsequent entertainments in this course.

HYMENEAL.

Day—Mitze.

The marriage of Miss Emma Laura Mitze to James Day, both of New Market, took place last evening at the home of the bride's father, Joseph Mitze. The affair was private, only the near relatives of both families being present. The Rev. J. H. Cubberley tied the nuptial knot, and after a bountiful spread the happy couple left for Elizabeth where they will reside in the future. Showers of rice were heaped upon them as they departed in the coach.

The bride wore a dress of grey faille silk trimmed with steel passamentrie and carried a bouquet of bride roses. Mrs. Peter Finger of Cranford, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. She wore a dress of lavender china silk trimmed with white swansdown. Stanley Day, jr., brother of the groom, filled the position of groomsman. The tables where the presents were displayed, showed the high appreciation of the guests towards the bride.

DR HURLBUT SPEAKS.

He Tells What Rewards Attend Sunday-School Teachers' Work.

The fourth triennial convention of the New Jersey Sunday-school association was held in the Roseville M. E. church yesterday.

A prominent figure in the gathering was the Rev. Dr. Jesse L. Hurlbut of Plainfield, general secretary of Sunday-school work in the M. E. church, who at 11:15 made an address on "The Gains of the Sunday-school Teachers". He said in part: "I always like to attend a Sunday-school convention. I have known people who have gone away from a convention who thought they were not competent to teach their classes. The convention had been of too high a character. I always believe in giving a little encouragement. The poorest Sunday-school and the weakest teacher in the land hold a power of good. I thank God for the Sunday-school teachers. What are the wages the Sunday-school teacher gets for his or her toil? The first reward and gain is recreation. People may say that it is not very much recreation to teach some classes. I believe in putting women in charge of boys' classes and men in charge of the girls. The men and women have a monotonous routine of work through the week and the teaching of Sunday-school is often a great relief.

"I don't know of anything that will give a man more exercise than to put him in charge of a Sunday-school class"—he continued.—"There is no department of the church that reaps such a harvest at so small an outlay of money. The superintendent and teachers are not paid with money, but they receive their reward, which is more glorious than any money that could be paid. Another benefit that comes from teaching, the teacher gets knowledge and a spiritual uplifting which can be received in no other way. Another benefit to the teacher is the love of the scholars. There is just one more gain for the Sunday-school teacher. He gets his reward in the good he does for the scholars."

The point—says the Newark Advertiser—was well illustrated by an amusing story with a moral lesson. The speaker is a good story-teller and holds his audience under complete control.

A great reward to the teacher—he said—was the good he did as he saw the class transformed under his faithful teaching.

"Many teachers want to give up their classes after listening to the standards set up by conventions, but, truly, the poorest teacher is better and can do more good than no teacher at all. The millions of teachers in our Sunday-schools are more consecrated than any other company in the world.

"The first reward of the Sunday-school teacher is recreation, for after the week of hard or monotonous work in the home or office, Sunday, with its class, is a recreation. More people die from doing nothing than by being worked to death. The need of the church to-day is to come in contact with people and in factory or shop the activity is gained which gives us an honest development. Knowledge comes from association with people and books. So from that one Book, the Bible, the strength is gained, and this makes the Sunday-school teacher powerful.

"The benefit is the love of his scholars; the teacher will gain it if he is faithful; moreover, what a priceless treasure it is to gain the love of a bright young heart!"

M. M. Dunham of Plainfield was elected to represent Union county on the executive committee to serve for three years. Andrew Wilson of North Plainfield was one of Somerset's delegates present.

In the afternoon Dr. Hurlbut spoke on "The Early Christian Church", and led the teachers in a conference meeting.

A PASTOR ON THE ELECTION.

He Thinks God's Wrath on the Rum Curse Crushed the Republicans.

[Rev. L. E. Livermore of New Market in The Sabbath Recorder.]

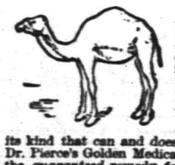
The presidential campaign has been very quiet in New Jersey as well as in most other States this year; more parties in the field, but much less dependence on stump oratory, torch-light processions and martial music. The "still hunt" has seemed to suit political leaders better, and results show that there was a much stronger opposition to the present administration than was generally supposed. The victory of the enemy was overwhelming and the New York Tribune compares the Republican defeat to the defeat of the Union forces at the memorable battle of "Bull's Run". God is in history now as certainly as then; and after a series of most signal defeats of the Union forces in the days of the Rebellion our nation began to recognize the chastening hand of God uplifted in displeasure and punishment for its complicity in the great sin of human slavery. When this sin came to be recognized and banished our victory speedily followed. Now we are in league with a greater curse, and it is evident that God's chastening hand is again uplifted against our nation, because of its apathy toward this monster iniquity—the rum traffic.



All back—every cent you've paid for it, if it doesn't benefit or cure you. A medicine that promises this is one that promises to help you.

But there's only one medicine of its kind that can and does promise it: Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It's the guaranteed remedy for all Blood, Skin and Scalp Diseases, from a common blotch or eruption to the worst scrofula. It cleanses, purifies, and enriches the blood, invigorates the system, and cures Salt-rheum, Tetter, Eczema, Erysipelas and all manner of blood-taints from whatever cause. Great Eating Ulcers rapidly heal under its benign influence.

It's the best blood-purifier, and it's the cheapest, no matter how many doses are offerd for a dollar—for you pay only for the good you get.

Can anything else, at any price, be really as cheap?

Nothing else is "just as good" as the "Discovery." It may be better—for the dealer. But he wants money and you want help.

We are all subject to pain occasionally and it is well to have a good liniment in the house, such as Salvation Oil. 25 cts.

THE BOND WILL CASE.

The Plainfield Marshalls Still Contesting for Annie's Estate.

In the Orphans's Court at Newark, Tuesday, the Bond will case came up again. As has been published in these columns, Mrs. Annie E. Bond willed the bulk of her property to the Home for Aged Women. The will is contested by her husband; her brother, J. Lott Marshall, of Park avenue, and her nephew, Harry Marshall, proprietor of the American Steam laundry, East Front street, and treasurer of the Cleveland and Stevenson club, on the grounds that she was devoid of testamentary capacity at the time the will was signed.

At the previous hearing of the case it was shown that the will was drawn by Daniel Lawrence, read to Mrs. Bond, taken away in Lawrence's pocket, and a paper, which Lawrence says is the same document, later placed before Mrs. Bond for her signature and signed by her.

Miss Mary Baldwin—says the Newark Evening News, in its report of the interesting case—was the first witness on the stand Tuesday. She testified that she had been on very friendly terms with Mrs. Bond and that on her advice Mrs. Bond agreed to make a will in favor of William and Mary Dunn, the brother and sister of her first husband. It was through the insurance on her first husband's life that she became possessed of means, and Miss Baldwin always thought that it was only just to will that money to the Dunns, especially as Mr. Bond and the Marshalls did not need it. In the end of January Mrs. Bond told her that she had remembered her in a will which she had made. The sum of $1,000 was mentioned, and Miss Baldwin urged her to be just before she was generous.

"You would n't take that $1,000 if she had willed it to you?"—asked Lawyer Guild.

"No, sir; I would give it to Mary Dunn"—was the answer.

"Was Mrs. Bond penurious?"—Mr. Guild asked.

"Well, she was thrifty"—answered Miss Baldwin, and when the laugh had subsided she said in an apologetic way:—I consider it derogatory to a woman to be stingy."

"What do you think of stinginess in a man?"—asked Lawyer Guild.

"Oh, that's ten times worse"—replied the witness.

For months before the making of the will, the witness stated, Mrs. Bond was not in a sound condition of mind. She had a habit of repeating things over and over, and saying at times that she feared she should go to a lunatic asylum.

The witness, in answer to lawyer Guild, said that Mrs. Bond had never shown her letters addressed to Mr. Bond from another woman or even spoken about his being unfaithful. She was jealous of his taking his own daughter out riding and not taking her. She complained of his having neglected her in such ways as that.

Daniel Lawrence testified that the whole property is worth about $8,000 or $9,000.

Vandeveer Bond, the husband, swore that his wife had a bad memory for a long time previous to her death. She had a habit of throwing her arms around men who were comparative strangers to her and kissing them. She was easily angered and was violent when angry. He never knew her to give a cent for any charitable purpose. He said in answer to his lawyer that at one time the woman labored under the delusion that he was dead.

"Was she drunk?"—Judge Kirkpatrick asked sharply.

"She was,"—answered the witness.

Mr. Guild got the witness to admit that his wife was always able to manage her property, and had sense enough to consult a lawyer if in any doubt as to its management. In answer to Craig A. Marsh he said his wife would sometimes stay out at night until midnight or later and would not tell him where she had been. He also stated that she used to get up out of bed at night and wander aimlessly about the house.

Mrs. Phœbe Marshall, the mother of the deceased, went on the stand and swore that she did not think her daughter competent to make a will.

Miss Hettie Allen, a stenographer, swore that Mrs. Bond had told her she would leave nothing to the Marshalls, but would leave all equally to Mary Dunn, Miss Allen and a Mrs. Fisher. About a year and a half ago she drew up a will at Mrs. Bond's request, providing for the disposal of the property in that way, but leaving blank spaces for the names of the beneficiaries. In January of this year Mrs. Bond got her to change a couple of minor clauses in the will, and a few days before her death she told the witness that she had disposed of her property in the way which she had spoken of.

The uncertainty of Mrs. Bond's memory was testified to by Harry Marshall, her nephew, from this city, one of the contestants. She told him at one time, he said, that she was going to leave him all her money, and again said that she was going to give him a portion of it. In a few minutes she would change her mind from renting the house furnished to renting it unfurnished, and to selling house and furniture. He saw her have what he called a "laughing and crying spell", and he saw her attempt to embrace his brother-in-law.

"She would never let me go upstairs alone"—said the witness.

"Why?"—asked Mr. Guild.

"I suppose she thought I would steal something"—said the witness.

He related other instances of his aunt's eccentricity.

A sister of the last witness, according to her testimony, was promised that she would be given all of Mrs. Bond's wealth. She noticed that Mrs. Bond acted queerly and did not think her competent to make a will.

Mr. Guild moved for the dismissal of the cavest. He said he had plenty of witnesses, but he did not think the other side had made out a case and he did not like to trouble the court unnecessarily.

Counselor Craig A. Marsh objected. He said that Mr. Guild was merely trying to sound the court in order to get an idea whether it was inclined to a decision in his favor. Judge Kirkpatrick decided to hear the evidence, and the case went over for two weeks.

LOCAL MATTERS VIEWED ABROAD.

Interesting Matters of Plainfield Life Told to Good People All Over the World.

The following paragraphs of Plainfield news and comment appear in this week's Sabbath Recorder from the pen of J. D. Spicer:

The recent death of Brother Rudolph M. Titsworth strikes a severe blow in our church and community, but more especially in a household where the silent messenger has been so frequent a visitor, having taken from it five adult members within less than ten years. The deeply afflicted family have the warmest sympathy of a large circle of friends.

The visit of the Rev. Dr. A. E. Main and Bro. E. B. Saunders to our church on Sabbath, the fifth instant, was an occasion of unusual interest. Each presented the cause he represented by stirring and enthusiastic addresses. The earnest appeal of Bro. Saunders to our young men and women to remain loyal to God's law, and to fit themselves to fill useful and responsible positions that are ever opening up to those who are capable and willing to fill them, was strong and inspiring. Would that the young people in our churches could listen more frequently to such earnest and sensible talks instead of the time-worn and doleful story of "nothing for our young people to do and keep the Sabbath!"

The Rev. Charles B. Mitchell, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of this city, has just resigned that position and accepted a call to a large and growing church in Kansas City. Until the appointment of a new pastor the pulpit he vacates will be supplied by the Rev. Dr. Huribut, well known in Sunday-school work throughout this country. Mr. Mitchell has been one of Plainfield's most eloquent and acceptable pastors and will be greatly missed.

The Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham, for many years pastor of the First Presbyterian church, and the Rev. Asa Reed Dilts, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, have also resigned their pastorates during the last year. The Rev. Chas. E. Herring, of New York city, has accepted a call to the Presbyterian church, and the Rev. John W. Richardson, of Brooklyn, comes to the Baptist church. Both of these gentlemen are spoken of as successful preachers and pastors.

We are looking forward with interest to the Yearly Meeting of the New Jersey and New York city churches, which will convene with us on the eighteenth instant, and hope we may find much help and inspiration by large delegations from the sister churches.

New Market matters are treated by the Rev. L. E. Livermore, who says: The day after election brought us our first snow, and even then it came much earlier than usual in this part of Jersey. This was followed by rain which was very much needed, for the supplies of well water in this State, quite generally, have been seriously affected by the long continued drouth. Crops in this vicinity were very good as the drouth came too late to do much harm to vegetation.

We were favored on the first Sabbath in this month with the presence and faithful words of brethren A. E. Main and E. B. Saunders. They presented to our people some of the important lines of work demanding our increased sympathies and support. We were strengthened, stimulated and encouraged.

Our young people's ranks have again been broken; this time by the marriage and removal of one of our most prominent and faithful members, Miss Mamie Titsworth. We are confident, however, that our loss is a great gain to Prof. D. I. Green, who has drawn the prize, and also to any community where they may locate. At present their home is in Baltimore, Md.

The New Market church has voted to spare their pastor to make a tour of a few weeks among the scattered Sabbath-keepers of the South, in company with the Missionary Secretary. They anticipate visiting North Carolina, Alabama, Louisiana, and perhaps some points in other States. The Southwestern Association is to open on the 1st of December, at Hammond, La., which meeting we hope to attend.

Congratulations on His Acquittal.

The verdict of the jury in declaring young Alfred Koechli, of Plainfield, as not guilty of the charge of larceny, was very generally approved. The jury were out a short time only.

Koechli is a son of the Rev. Mr. Koechli, of Plainfield, and has always borne an exemplary character. He received many congratulations on the announcement of the verdict by the jury.

THE HEIRS DISSATISFIED

Barnum's Legatees and J. A. Bailey at Variance.

THE "GREATEST" TO CHANGE HANDS

There Does Not Seem to be Room in the Corporation for all the Partners—Each Side Apparently Willing to Sell Its Share—Cause of the Differences.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Nov. 17.—The difficulties which arose during the last season between James A. Bailey and the heads of departments of the "Greatest Show on Earth" were nothing compared to the feeling which has arisen, it is said, between Mr. Bailey and the heirs of his late partner, P. T. Barnum. Such is the condition of affairs that from present appearances, well informed people say, either Mr. Bailey will purchase the interest of the Barnum estate or the heirs of the latter will buy out Mr. Bailey, or it may be that a third party will purchase the interest of one or the other, or both.

But it is quite certain that the Barnum & Bailey show will be known no longer as such. It will be either the Barnum Show or the Bailey Show.

The differences began when Mr. Bailey wanted to take the show to California on a 10 weeks' trip last summer. Each side professes to be willing to sell to the other, yet, doubtless, both desire the vast profits that are made every year. Mr. Barnum thought he had arranged that his name should be perpetuated with the show, and he foresaw no trouble.

If Bailey gets the show he will be the biggest circus man in the world, for he also owns the Forepaugh show.

There is talk of getting Mr. Hutchinson or Mr. Cole to return to the business, either as owners of Mr. Bailey's interest or as manager of a stock concern. Both these men are living on fortunes they made in the circus business.

The gross receipts of the Barnum & Bailey show last year were $1,200,000.

YALE'S FINANCES.

Over $475,000 Added to the Different Funds During the Last Fiscal Year.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 17.—Treasurer Farnum of Yale University has submitted to the corporation his report for the fiscal year ending July 31, 1892.

During that period the sum of $473,447.59 was added to the different funds. The addition to the University fund aggregated $160,467.45, $150,241.59 of which was from the estate of the late Daniel B. Fayerweather in part payment of the legacy.

From the Rev. C. Ray Palmer of Bridgeport, Conn., the sum of $5,000 was received to found the "Alfred Barnes Palmer Scholarship Fund."

Additions to the Theological funds were as follows:

To the H. W. Allis fund $4,243.50; to found the Susan B. Dwight Fellowship, $4,000; to found the W. H. Fogg Fellowship, $38,000.

The Sheffield Scientific School funds were enriched $75,120.78 by the payment of part of the Fayerweather legacy.

For the Winchester Engineering Building private and other subscriptions amounted to $159,325, and for the Yale Infirmary $35,398.

Seventy-seven private subscriptions were received amounting to $6,479.52 to repair the loss sustained by the fire in Divinity Hall.

Hon. William C. Whitney, '63, and others, provided $1,500 for the Chair of Professor W. G. Summer during his absence in Europe.

VINDICATED BY THE JURY.

Hattie Ackers, Who Shot Her Former Lover for Slandering Her, Acquitted.

BELVIDERE, N. J., Nov. 17.—The trial of Miss Hattie Ackers, who shot and seriously wounded Michael Quinn, a telegraph operator, at this place several weeks ago for slandering her, terminated last night by a verdict of not guilty.

Miss Ackers, in her own behalf, told the story of her wrong treatment by Quinn, which had made her frantic, and she therefore resolved to shoot him and then herself.

She admitted having married, when quite young, a man named Westley Savercool, who was not divorced from his wife. She related the circumstances of Quinn's breaking his engagement and then deserting her.

Miss Ackers told in a dramatic way of her walk to the Delaware station and her pleading with her lover for a reconciliation.

She admitted buying the revolver with which to shoot him and the poison to kill herself.

When the jury rendered the verdict of not guilty the spectators in the little court room applauded.

Public sympathy is with Miss Acker, and people in the village express themselves as satisfied with the result.

A Train Falls 75 or 100 Feet.

FARRELTON, Que., Nov. 17.—A construction train on the Gatineau Valley railroad was derailed on a bridge over Stagg creek, near here yesterday and the engine and 13 cars fell 75 or 100 feet in the canon. Engineer Saul Wilson, Fireman Robert Meagher, Brakeman William Blakely, and a boy, name unknown, were killed. The loss to rolling stock will amount to thousand of dollars.

A Deserted Spanish Town.

An interesting discovery was recently made by Special Agent Horn of the interior department while traveling in Oklahoma through a territory that the foot of white man has seldom reached. In a wide canyon among the mountains he came across the ruins of an ancient walled city that showed many evidences of Spanish civilization. The Indian who guided him to the scene told him that their traditions related that men had come there, built a town, and dug from the earth much precious metal, which they melted into yellow bars and carried away with them to the south. After awhile the metal became scarce and many of them left, the remaining ones being finally massacred by the Indians. Near the town were the ruins of a large furnace, in which were tons upon tons of wood ashes, and not far from this old furnace appeared to be an old worked-out quartz lead.

Regeneration.

To secure a normal and regular tissue change throughout the body use BRANDETH'S PILLS. This tissue metamorphosis consists in constantly proceeding waste of tissue and its regeneration. BRANDETH'S PILLS are the best solvent of the products of disintegration of the tissues and increases their elasticity. They are an alterative and eliminative remedy, which allay irritation and remove obstruction by aiding nature and are of great benefit in cases of temporary and habitual constipation, torpid liver, biliousness, headache, indigestion, rheumatism and diseases arising from an impure state of the blood.

BRANDETH'S PILLS are purely vegetable, absolutely harmless and safe to take at any time.

STORY OF OLD LETTERS.

Howard Fielding Tells of a Blighted Affection.

Showing That Good Fruit Cannot Grow Up from the Root of All Evil—Re-Seeding on His Sins—Old Bones Was Waiting Below.

[COPYRIGHT, 1892.]

When Maude found that packet of letters in my desk she instantly knew by the exercise of her fine feminine faculty of intuition that they were from a woman. She also knew that this woman was perfectly horrid, and that I had loved the dreadful creature all the time, and never said one word about it to my wife. She knew that if she read them she could never be happy again, and she immediately sat down with tearful enthusiasm to do it. She wished that I were present so that she could see me squirm; but though I was due to return in about two minutes she decided not to wait. With her heart full of that harrowing satisfaction which comes to all of us when our worst fears are realized, she broke the seal, and taking the oldest letter from the bottom of the packet read these sentimental lines:

68 THAYER, May 12, 1879.

DEAR HOWDY: Fate has got me by the bosom of the trousers. I am a goner. Old Bones is waiting on the stairs. He will have his money or blood. I would skip out of the back window, but the rope is in Nicholson's room and I owe him ten. Promised it to him to-day. Send me all you can raise, and if you haven't any money, for Heaven's sake send me another rope.

FOXY.

P. S.—Or a gun.

I came in just as Maude, having finished this letter, was trying to look as if she hadn't expected to find anything in particular.

"So you thought you'd found some love letters?" said I. "Well, they're not what you took them for, but there's more real affection, and more genuine, nineteenth century blight on it in that little bundle than you'll find in a month's session of the divorce court. Since you've brought these letters to the light, let's look them through and see what became of the only man I ever really loved."

"Who was he?"

"Henry Nelson Brown, called 'Foxy' at college, where that note was written. Those are his letters to me. You will observe later that while the expression is charmingly varied, the subject is substantially the same in all. In answer to that note I sent him $10 and a ball bat, telling him to pay Nicholson and kill Bones. But Foxy was too shrewd to pay a whole debt when he could scale it down, so he gave Nicholson $5 and only half killed Bones. Both were entirely satisfied, and Foxy bought a plug hat with the $5 which remained. Let us turn to his next letter, which is on the paper of Holcomb, Reardon & Co., hides and leather, of New York. He was clerk for the firm at $6 a week, after his graduation with highest honors in music. Here is the letter:

"NEW YORK, Oct. 12, 1879.

"DEAR HOWDY: Send me fifteen dollars. Quick. The old man is coming to town, and if he finds me without my watch he will send up a horrible howl. But if everything is O. K. I will work him for enough to pay back the fifteen and the rest that I owe you, and then we will go and have a red-eyed racket with it. Ever yours.

"FOXY."

"So you used to go on rackets?" said Maude, in the severe tone of a woman who thinks that she has drawn a shrewd and damaging inference.

HE REFLECTS ON HIS SINS.

"I didn't go on any with the money Foxy speaks of," I replied. "I never saw it. The old man Brown came to town with all his pockets sewed up."

"And didn't he pay you at all? I think he was real mean."

"No, he wasn't mean in those days. He was poor. He would have given me anything he had—in the days when he didn't have anything. Take this note for instance:"

"December 23, 1879.

"DEAR HOWDY: I will turn up every cent I can for you. My winter overcoat is in hock already, but I'll spout the light one if the weather moderates. Meanwhile, if you can spare a quarter for lunch I'll give it to you with the other. Perhaps the firm will give me a raise. I asked the head clerk what he thought of my chances, and he said the firm would either raise me or bounce me the first of the year, but if he was a betting man his money would go on the bounce. I'll see you Saturday. FOXY."

"Did he give you any money on Saturday?" asked Maude.

"No; but he would have done it if I had let him. I met him just going into a pawn shop with his light coat on his arm. It was pretty nearly the coldest day I ever saw in New York, so I lent him the money to get his heavy coat out. Then he hocked his light coat and went to the theater.

"Here are a number of notes I received during that winter, but they're all more or less like the others. Here is one which I got the next June:

"DEAR HOWDY: I'm flat on my back. Digestion all gone to blazes. Can't keep anything on my stomach, nor get anything to try the experiment with till I fix the landlady. The doctor says that I can pay him now what I've saved the past year by eating free lunch. I would, dear boy, but I haven't it with me. He also says that Croton water is bad for invalids, and he advises me to drink iced champagne. He seems to know his business, but he evidently doesn't know mine. Can you send me fifteen or twenty? The firm has sent me a check for $1.11, balance of salary. There were a few little memoranda in the cash drawer which brought it down to that. Why don't they send money? What in the name of Beelzebub's bull pup can I do with a check while I'm tied to this bed? If I give it to the landlady she'll absorb it and there won't be any change. And it wouldn't buy much champagne anyway. Come and take my ante-mortem statement. FOXY."

"I went to see the boy and found him very low in his mind. But the champagne which I brought with me braced him wonderfully, and his strong constitution pulled him through. It was on the August following that I got this note:

"DEAR HOWDY: I have turned over a new leaf. No more recklessness for me. Henceforth it's strictly business. Lying there, with death staring me in the face, I did a heap of solemn thinking. I thought up schemes to advance me with the firm, and one of them has caught on. I never saw old Reardon so tickled in my life. 'Brown,' says he, 'you've got the making of a business man in you. I'll consult a lawyer about this plan of yours, and if he says we can follow it and keep out of state prison, we'll do it and put you in charge of it.' I just drew my salary, and it was doubled, which was lucky for me, as I had taken about twice the usual amount in advance. However, I have a dollar, and if you can raise ten or so let's celebrate to-night. I believe my fortune is made.

"FOXY."

"There's a death-bed repentance for you," said I, "and he was right; it was the making of him. He got to be a sort of chief robber for Holcomb, Reardon & Co., with a good salary and nothing to do but stifle his conscience and discourage competitors. I did not hear from him for some months, and then, in response to a note, I got this:

"DEAR HOWARD: I will try to do what I can for you, but the demands upon my purse are very heavy just now. Why don't you strike Jennings? I hear that he has money to throw to the birds. Yours, BROWN."

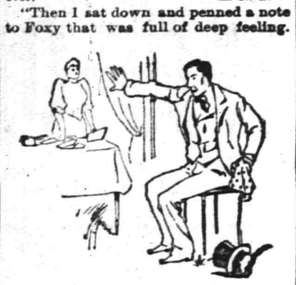
"Jennings wasn't throwing any money to the birds when I arrived at his place of business, but I managed to pull through, and it was almost a year before I got into a tight place again. Then I wrote to Foxy and received this on the paper of Holcomb, Reardon & Brown:

"DEAR FIELDING: I am exceedingly sorry to find myself unable to help you at this time. I have no doubt, however, that you will get along all right. Come to see me. I would like to show you my apartments in the Regent. I am just going up town to buy a piano. Regret that I am unable to spare you the ten. Yours as ever. H. N. B."

"Then I sat down and penned a note to Foxy that was full of deep feeling.



"PUT THE LETTERS AWAY."

I asked him whether he was not throwing away the best part of his nature in the race for wealth. I described the awful hole I was in, and asked him, in the name of our ancient friendship, to go into his clothes and come out with the cash. Probably my note was lost in the mail, for I got no answer. But a year later it happened that I was caught between the devil and the deep sea. I wanted money worse than the thirsty sands of the desert want water. Then I wrote to Foxy, and this was the reply. I can forgive the English, for that is evidently his stenographer's, but the sentiments, I fear, are Foxy's:

"NEW YORK.

"HOWARD FIELDING, Esq.—DEAR SIR: Yours of the fifteenth is at hand and contents are noted. I do not see now how at present I shall be able to comply with your request. Business is not as good as it was last month, and our expenses is heavy. My balance in the bank is small compared to what it ought to be.

"In conclusion let me give you a little advice: Why don't you straighten up and save a few dollars? If you got a thousand or two dollars ahead, these little financial troubles wouldn't bother you. Put aside a few dollars every week and try and live more in accordance with your income. Yours Sincerely,

"Dictated. HENRY N. BROWN, per T."

"And that was the end of it, Maudey. From 'Yours ever' he has grown to be 'Yours Sincerely,' with a capital S. I am glad the stenographer put so many dollars in that last paragraph. They show where the trouble is. Put the letters away. Few men have such a collection, but almost any poor man can get one if he has a few of the first numbers as a beginning."

UNCLE SAM'S FINANCES

A Deficiency Probable for the Next Fiscal Year.

REVENUES NOT UP TO THE MARK.

Secretary Foster Says Taxes Must be Increased, or Else Appropriations for Public Buildings, etc., Must be Abandoned and Work Suspended.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Secretary Foster and those Treasury officials who have intimate knowledge of the receipts and expenditures of the Government are giving much thought and attention just now to the subject of a probable deficiency in the revenues for the next fiscal year. This question comes up naturally in considering what the probable revenue of the Government will be so that he may submit to Congress, as he is by law required to do so, the amount of revenue expected.

The estimate of the Secretary of the Treasury must be taken for their action as a guide by Congress upon the appropriation bills. In arriving at this estimate the average receipts from customs, internal revenue and incidental sources of revenue, have to be taken into consideration.

The receipts from internal revenue it is expected will continue to naturally increase with the growth and population and as no legislation has recently passed to effect it. But it is not so with customs duties. These duties, with no disturbing element to affect them, would be stable, subject only to the law of supply and demand and the condition of the money market.

With a new administration coming into power, expected to lower duties on a number of articles and to put others on the free list, a state of uncertainty is created that prevents a close estimate of revenues from tariff duties collected.

Merchants will not buy goods not actually needed when they expect the duties on them to be lowered or put on the free list.

The practical effect of this is to reduce the customs revenues. It is already felt at the Treasury Department, the revenues for this month being less so far than for the same part of the corresponding month of last year.

The expenditures, however, must continue at the same rate until July 1, being regulated by Congressional enactments, which cannot be repealed until the next fiscal year.

Take the sugar bounty, for instance. This year it will reach $10,000,000, an increase over last year of $2,000,000. This bounty will have to be paid by March 4, 1893.

The pension outlay is increasing with each month, and it is anticipated that this month it will reach $16,000,000, and grow each month for the next three years, until it will take $18,000,000 or $20,000,000 a month to pay pensions. These pensions are fixed by general laws.

In view of the condition that confronts him, Secretary Foster says that there will be a deficiency this year and probably a larger one next year.

To meet this, he says, he would not be surprised if taxes were increased or else appropriations for public buildings and river and harbor improvements abandoned and work suspended.

MISS PLUMMER'S SUICIDE.

The Tragedy Causes a Great Sensation in Lowell Society Circles.

LOWELL, Mass., Nov. 18.—The suicide of Miss Annie Plummer has created a tremendous sensation in society circles, and different causes are given for her rash act. She bought two ounces of chloroform yesterday morning, and in the afternoon she shut herself in an air tight closet in her home and turned the drug into a piece of cotton that she held in her hand.

Half an hour later the housekeeper discovered her, but she was dying. Dr. Lawler and Dr. Pillsbury were called in a hurry, but she was dead when they reached here.

One month ago Miss Plummer's father died and she was left alone in the world and well off financially. She was one of the handsomest girls in the aristocratic section of the city. Her home is opposite General Butler's residence.

Wednesday night the son of a mill owner, it is said, called upon her and remained until a late hour. Whether there was a lover's quarrel and the suicide of the girl is the result of a threat made by her, is a question.

Friends of the young man say that he is not responsible for the terribly sad event.

A Grand Jury Censured.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 18.—When the garnd jury of this county finished their labors, instead of being thanked as usual, they were censured by Judge Woodruff for failing to return indictments against the politicians charged with bribery at the polls on election day. The court insinuated that they had violated their solemn obligation to do their duty, and sent them back for half an hour to reconsider the cases. At the expiration of that period they returned to court again, but with no indictments.

Mines Running on Half Time.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 18.—The mild weather has caused such a depression in the coal trade that the mines of the Delaware & Hudson Company, in this city, have been put on half time operation, beginning yesterday. As a direct result of this the employes of the Gravity railroad can only work three-quarters of their customary time and unless the condition of affairs changes soon its effect will be felt on all lines of business.

MIRAJES IN NEW YORK.

Complications With Venezuela Likely to Result from Capt. Chambers' Act.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—International complications will probably result between Venezuela and the United States because of the action of Capt. Chambers, of the steamship Philadelphia, in leaving Laguayra without clearance papers.

The Philadelphia reached quarantine at 10 o'clock last night, having on board ex-Governor Mirajes, of Caracas, who served under the Presidency of Pulido.

When Crespo gained the ascendancy many clamored for the head of ex-Gov. Mirajes.

Feeling that his life was in danger he secured a passage ticket for New York on the steamer Philadelphia, and put himself under the protection of the American flag.

He had hardly got aboard the steamer when a party of troops marched down to the quay. Captain Chambers had run up the American flag on the stern of the steamer and warned the soldiers to keep off. This they refused to do. Captain Chambers called his crew, who without violence compelled the boarding party to retreat.

The Philadelphia was then taken out in the stream. Captain Chambers went ashore, reported to Minister Scruggs and got the Consul's clearance papers. His application for clearance papers at the Custom House at Laguayra was refused because of the presence of Mirajes in the steamer.

The Laguayra officials claimed that they wanted Mirajes for other treasons than that he was a political refugee. This the ex-Governor denies, claiming it was only a ruse to get him off the steamer. United States Minister Scruggs' report on the affair is on board the Philadelphia and will be forwarded to Washington to-day.

FATAL END OF A CELEBRATION.

House Blown to Atoms During a Democratic Jollification.

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Nov. 18.—The Democrats of Mountain View held a Presidential election celebration in the district schoolhouse there two nights ago and a terrible disaster ended the proceedings prematurely.

An anvil firing and the discharge of fireworks were features of the jollification and as a consequence a large quantity of explosives had been provided.

A portion of these had been stored in the schoolhouse.

During the speech-making, and while the building was packed with men, women and children, two kegs of powder exploded.

The schoolhouse was totally wrecked and most of the occupants buried in the ruins.

The debris took fire in several places, and it required hard work to prevent the cremation of the persons who were imprisoned.

The flames were subdued, however, with only one person suffering from the fire.

A son and daughter of Silas Graham were taken out dead, and Berry Sherod, one of the most prominent residents of Washington county, was so badly injured that he has since died.

Another man, whose name has not been learned, was also fatally hurt.

Fifteen other persons were seriously injured, but their names have not been ascertained.

Berry Sherod suffered horrible agonies mentally as well as physically before he was got out of the ruins. He was pinned down by timbers, and was burned beyond recognition.

He lived several hours after being rescued.

WEIR WAS POISONED.

Mrs. Marsh, Who Was Arrested at Staten Island, Accused of a Crime.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 18.—There is now no doubt that Gamble Weir, the late chief of police of this city, was poisoned.

Hugo Blanck, the chemical expert, has completed his analysis of the dead man's stomach, and states positively that he found three different poisons in sufficient quantities to cause death.

Mrs. Marsh, who was arrested at Staten Island, N. Y., and with whom Weir boarded, is accused of the crime.

Rev. E. C. Weeks Acquitted.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—The sensational trial of the Rev. Edwin C. Weeks, who was accused by his servant, Lena Onderdonk, with being the father of her child, which has been going on at Morristown, N. J., for the past few days, ended last night when the jury brought in a verdict of acquittal. The trial attracted a good deal of attention, and the court room was crowded at every session. The Rev. Mr. Weeks was pastor of the Baptist Church at Butler until last spring, when he accepted a call to Fort Monmouth.

Two Barges in Distress.

CHATHAM, Mass., Nov. 18.—The barge Sooloo is sunk on Pollock Rip and the barge Storm King is ashore there. Both barges were in tow of the steamer Saturn bound from Newport News to Boston with full cargoes of coal. They struck the Rip during the heavy sea of Wednesday night and are leaking badly. The crew of the Storm King remain aboard and part of the Sooloo's crew have been landed at the life-saving station. The tug Underwater is on the scene. The Saturn has arrived here.

Victimized by a Woman.

HOULTON, Me., Nov. 18.—A good-looking young woman, calling herself Annie Murphy of Tacoma, Wash., and claiming that she was looking for a long lost father, has victimized a number of people in this county, by bogus checks on the First National bank of Tacoma. She is said to be wanted in Minnesota and New York for a similar work. The last heard from the swindler she was in Montreal.

YALE VERSUS HARVARD

The Great Contest at Springfield To-morrow.

NEW HAVEN MEN TO ASK BIG ODDS.

They Will Do This Because of the Injuries to Sanford and Bliss—Weak Points in the Harvard Team—Several of the Blues Thought to be Overtrained.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 18.—The Yale football team will leave this city this afternoon for Springfield, where to-morrow afternoon will occur the great contest with Harvard. The team took the last practice yesterday afternoon.

Most of the team were in good playing condition and the rushes were fierce and rough. The team had played but a few minutes when L. T. Bliss, right half back, opened a wound in his knee and was compelled to retire.

An examination showed that the injury is not serious, but the chances are against his playing to-morrow. He is very anxious to take part in the game and may, in case his knee improves sufficiently, be given a chance to enter the game for a few minutes, but it will be absolutely impossible for him to stand the strain of the entire game.

His absence makes it certain that his brother, C. D. Bliss, who has been first substitute half back for three years, but who has never yet taken part in a Harvard or Princeton game, will be given a chance at Springfield.

DeWitt, a member of the Freshman class, has been playing a phenomenal game the past fortnight, and in case Graves also is disabled, he will take his place as left half back. The eleven has practiced three times a day the past fortnight and several of the men are thought to be overtrained. All of their practice during that time has been secret and designed to perfect the players in the new tricks which the twelve coachers, who have been in constant attendance upon the eleven, have been teaching them.

A special force of six experienced rubbers have been engaged to keep the men in as good physical condition as possible till the struggle opens. Yale men will ask large odds on the game Saturday because of the crippled condition of the team owing to the injuries of Bliss and Sanford, which will prevent their playing.

THE HARVARD TEAM.

Eager for the Fray and Confident of Giving Yale a Tough Pull.

BOSTON, Nov. 18.—The Harvard football team, which will meet Yale at Springfield to-morrow, took its last practice at Cambridge yesterday, and demonstrated that its game will be a strong one.

The team will consist of Brewer, full back; Gray and Lake, half backs; Trafford, quarter back; Hallowell, right end; Newell, right tackle; Mackie, right guard; Lewis, centre; Waters, left guard; Upton, left tackle, and Emmons, left end. Lee, Corbett, and Fairchild, will be substitutes.

Nearly every man has been through the ordeal of a Yale game, and the new men are such "thoroughbreds" that they will more than fill the shoes of their predecessors. The coming contest has no terrors for them. They have now been working together steadily under the coachers for a month.

The points of weakness, in all probability, will be Mackie at right guard, and Trafford at quarter back.

MRS. LEASE FOR SENATOR.

The Movement to Send Her to Washington Growing Stronger.

TOPEKA, Kas., Nov. 18.—The Populists and Democrats are getting wider apart over the Senatorial squabble. Judge John Martin wants the position, but the information that he received yesterday that there are 35 Populist members who will stand with Mrs. Lease in the middle of the road and against any Democrat has discouraged him.

Whether these 35 will vote for Mrs. Lease is unknown, but she will have a great influence with them, and to prevent them going to Jerry Simpson or a Democrat she will be a candidate herself.

When she was asked if it was possible for her to get enough votes she said: "Anything is possible with God and the farmers of Kansas."

A. L. Williams of the Union Pacific railroad says:

"I see no constitutional reason why Mrs. Lease should not be a Senator. There is nothing to prevent it but the idea that a Senator should be a man. I hope she will be elected. She would keep the Senators pretty busy if they sent her to Washington."

Shoe Workers on Strike at Haverhill.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Nov. 18.—The price list trouble in the turned work department of the Byron-Noyes shoe company's factory has culminated in a strike, and 200 employes are out. The company opened a free shop, and signs indicate that a settlement will not be reached at present. The strikers claim that the company's prices are much less than those paid for the same work by other manufacturers, and that it would be an act of injustice to them to accept its price list.

Swept by a Cyclone.

REDBUD, Ill., Nov. 18.—The City of Redbud, population 2,000, situated 30 miles southeast of St. Louis on the Mobile & Ohio railroad, was visited by a cyclone at 3:30 o'clock yesterday morning. Eighty-four buildings were demolished, two persons killed, twelve seriously hurt and many more injured. It is estimated that $160,000 worth of property was destroyed.

Stepped Before a Rushing Train.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., Nov. 18.—S. Nelson Woods of Brooklyn, N. Y., stepped in front of the 8:15 Central train as it was entering this city yesterday morning and was instantly killed. It is believed that Mr. Woods intended suicide, but for what cause is unknown. He was a son of the late Judge Woods of this city.

Beaver Falls Strikers Yielding.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Nov. 18.—More new men are entering the Carnegie mill, and there are unmistakable evidences of a break in the strikers' ranks. Yesterday there were 102 applications for work made at the company's office. Among them were a number of the former employes.

TRUMPBOUR'S TRIAL.

There Seems to be No Way of Escape for the Prisoner.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 18.—In the Trumpbour trial Alfred Van Nostrand, for several years bookkeeper in the bank with the accused, was on the stand the greater portion of the day explaining the system adoped by the accused in abstracting the deposits and falsifying the books. Numerous deposits were not entered in the book. Sums ranging from $1,000 to $10,000 were taken at a time and false entries made.

The general opinion is that there is no avenue of escape for the prisoner, and people are wondering what the defense will be.

Judge Furman announces that he will begin the Ostrander trial next Monday. An additional panel of 100 jurors has been drawn.

A Woman Illegally Committed.

ALBANY, Nov. 18.—Judge Enrlich, on the certificate of two physicians practicing in New York, sent a woman to the Hudson River State Hospital. The State Lunacy Commission has notified Judge Ehrlich that these physicians acted without authority, and that in subscribing their names they committed perjury. The names of the physicians and the patient are withheld for the present.

McComas Made a Judge.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—The President has appointed Louis F. McComas, of Maryland, to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, vice Montgomery, resigned. Mr. McComas was an active member of the 51st Congress, and is now secretary of the Republican national committee.

Dynamite Explosion at Holland, N. Y.

HOLLAND, N. Y., Nov. 18.—About 9 p. m. a dynamite cartridge exploded in the residence of Leonard Hills, killing his oldest son, Ralph, and seriously injuring his wife.

LIZZIE BORDEN'S CASE

Indictments May be Brought Against Two Witnesses.

GRAND JURY PROCEEDING SLOWLY.

They Are Giving the Evidence a Very Thorough Sifting—The Murders and the Subsequent Proceedings Again the Great Topic of Conversation in Fall River.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Nov. 18.—The Borden murders are again the prominent subject of conversation in this city, and a rumor is being generally circulated that indictments may be brought against two persons other than Miss Lizzie Borden, provided the jury finds a verdict of guilty against her.

These persons have been intimately connected with the case, more particularly since police attention was directed to it. On the stand they have proved to be not only unwilling, but even misleading, witnesses.

Attorney-General Pillsbury pressed one of these witnesses very hard, in a manner which left no doubt in the minds of the jurymen that he proposes to have the whole truth, if the hearing is prolonged three months.

Because of the reticence of the persons indicated, the police and other the authorities have been to a great deal of trouble and expense in getting evidence of the family relations a day or two previous to the murders; consequently there is much feeling expressed against them in police circles.

The closest friends of Miss Borden, who have thought the prisoner may possibly be proven guilty by the law have contended all along that some kind of a conspiracy must have preceded the affair, and that perphaps one, probably two persons talked of were accessories before the fact.

It is evident from the few words spoken by local witnesses who have given testimony within the past two days, that the present grand jury is a very exacting body and proposes to hear all the government can offer before agreeing that Lizzie Borden committed the crimes.

They ask many pointed questions and are giving the evidence a very thorough sifting. It is expected that the grand jury will visit this city to-day and view the scene of the murders.

THE COMET COMING NEARER.

It is Now Visible to the Naked Eye in the Constellation of Andromeda.

Boston, Nov. 18.—The comet is coming nearer the earth, and is now double the size it was when first discovered.

It occupies 13 minutes of the arc of which it, at first sight, occupied only 5. Prof. Pickering so informed a reporter who questioned him about the new wanderer.

He said it had been photographed several times nightly, but these photographs, when shown to the reporter, looked like mere black dots on the negative glass, surrounded by a fainter brownish band.

The fact that the comet is headed almost directly this way is sufficient explanation why only the head can be seen. The general opinion is that the comet is becoming fainter, its light more diffusive, in fact, that it is scattering. This may be in part caused by its nearing the sun.

Prof. Pickering, on being asked if he had yet been able to make an estimate as to how near the earth it would come, which question involved another as to when it would turn in its path around the sun, replied that its orbit could not yet be determined.

No computations have been made here, for as yet not enough of its arc has been revealed.

The comet is now visible to the naked eye in the constellation Andromeda. With a field glass the sight is very good.

After an Escaped Murderer.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 18.—Sheriff Worden and Deputy Fryer of Saratoga, N. Y., have arrived here after Martin Foy, an escaped murderer. The latter was arrested several days ago at Oakland, Cal. He followed Henrietta Wilson from New York to Saratoga and shot her in the street. He then tried to kill himself. After being lodged in jail he escaped, making his way to the Pacific coast.

Only One Championship Next Year.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Baseball will not be played in divided championship series by the National League next year. The season will open the last Thursday in April and close the last Saturday in September. During this period each team will be scheduled to play 132 games. The league decided this important point late last night and then adjourned to meet in New York on March 7.

Former Gomer Acquitted.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 18.—Samuel Gomer, a wealthy farmer of Hanover township, charged with the murder of Martin Zipkta, was acquitted last evening. The murdered man entered Gomer's premises to pick cherries and was shot from ambush.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

The Misses VanBoskerck gave a musical at their home on Seventh street, Tuesday afternoon.

The M. E. pulpit Sunday will be occupied by the Rev. Dr. S. F. Upham of Drew Theological Seminary.

The Rev. Cornelius Schenck will preach a sermon to Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., Sunday evening.

Miss Maggie Milligan, of Clinton, is visiting the family of her uncle, S. W. Milligan, of Fourth and New streets.

Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Ralli of Netherwood gave a small dinner last evening at their home on Belvidere avenue.

Miss May Billian of this city was married to Asa Hoffman of Somerville, by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Wednesday.

M. A. Haven, manager of the Plainfield Beef company, leaves to-morrow afternoon for a Calcago trip. He will give his attention while away to the interests of the company.

The Young Women's Christian Temperance Union will hold a Thanksgiving sale Nov. 23. Miss Augusta Holmes will have charge of the pie counter; Miss Florence Titsworth, cake; Miss Lulu French candy; and Miss Della Bowers, fancy articles.

A sociable was given to about thirty-five young people of this city, Elizabeth and Fanwood, Wednesday evening, at the Dolbeer homestead, Terrill road. Refreshments were served, and music for dancing was furnished by Mr. Reilly. All agreed that Mrs. Richards (Aunt Huldah) was a charming hostess, and entertained royally.

A CHRYSANTHEMUM WEDDING.

A Very Pretty Ceremony at St. Francis Church, Metuchen.

The St. Francis church in Metuchen was gay with bright lights and rich in garlands and festoons of many colored chrysanthemums Wednesday evening. The occasion was the marriage of Miss Josie Heenan, daughter of Jeffrey Heenan, of South Plainfield to Daniel Manly, of this city. The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Father O'Rielly, of Metuchen. The bride wore a cream-colored cashmere gown, with Duchesse lace and lillies of the valley. She carried a garland of bride roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Julia Heenan, wore a pretty empire gown of pink, with satin puffed sleeves and diamond ornaments. She carried a garland of bride roses. The best man was John Carney, of this city. The ushers were William Gary and John Powers. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where in a bower of chrysanthemums and under the wedding bell of the same graceful flowers the young people received the congratulations of a large company of friends.

A SLIPPERY CUSTOMER.

Minnie Morris Is Captured, and Breaks Jail.

The police last night arrested Minnie Morris, the colored nurse girl who stole jewelry from Mrs. John E. Beerbower, at the railroad station.

This noon she escaped from the lock-up. Sergeant Lynch let her out in the jail yard to empty a pail of slops, and she scaled a fence ten feet high and has n't been seen or heard of since.

THE NEW PASTOR "RECOGNIZED."

Rev. J. W. Richardson Officially Installed at the Head of the Park Avenue Baptists.

Members of the various Baptist churches in this city and vicinity joined last night in "recognition" services to the Rev. John W. Richardson, the new pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church.

The Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes presided as moderator over the session, and conducted the preliminary devotional exercises.

The installation sermon was by the Rev. Dr. Middleditch, of Brooklyn, and was largely in the nature of a religious essay on the qualities essential to a good clergyman's make-up. He rejoiced that those characteristics were possessed in full measure by Mr. Richardson.

The Rev. J. A. Cubberly, of New Market, offered the prayer of recognition, giving thanks for the clear, commendatory record of the new pastor, and invoking blessings on him and his helpmate. He prayed that they might have access to the hearts of the people and be in full sympathy with them in all the walks of life.

The Rev. R. M. Luther, of Newark, gave the charge to the pastor. He was both grave and facetious, one moment telling Mr. Richardson that as Mr. Richardson was younger he did n't know as much as Mr. Luther did, the next giving him earnest brotherly advice.

Mr. Luther counseled the new pastor to be a practical man of affairs as well as a preacher, to take part in all public matters, to strive to purify local politics, reform abuses, Christianize the primaries. "For the Lord knows"—he said—"that nothing needs Christianity more than do ward primaries, unless it is the saloons."

Mr. Luther congratulated Mr. Richardson on the beauty of his new field. Down in Newark where he came from they were accustomed to consider Plainfield a sort of "half-way house to Heaven". Yet there were lots of people who moved from Plainfield to Newark because in Newark they could have things more their own way, just as they'd like to run things in New York. This they could n't do in Plainfield.

Mr. Luther's "half-way" remark was the opportunity for more funniness, somewhat far-fetched, from the Rev Joseph Sagebeer of Flemington, who gave the charge to the church.

Mr. Sagebeer introduced himself as the "fellow from up country", and thanked Mr. Luther for acknowledging that Plainfield was half-way between Newark and Flemington.

The hand of fellowship was given to the new pastor by the Rev. Dr. Robert Lowry, who made a very happy speech.

Mr. Luther cautioned the new pastor to be an over-shepherd, not an under one; for where the congregation rode over the pastor it was a bad thing for all concerned.

Representing the local clergy, the Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards gave hearty ministerial welcome to the newcomer.

The choir sang some beautiful anthems, and the congregation hymns.

Being now officially recognized as pastor of the flock, the Rev. Mr. Richardson dismissed the people with the benediction.

THE CRADLE SONGS.

Plainfield Young Women Give a Creditable Entertainment at the Casino.

The entertainment given at the Casino last evening by the young ladies of Plainfield in aid of the Day Nursery was a great financial success.

The programme was long and varied and consisted of tableaux representing the mothers of many nations, who rendered their national cradle songs in a charming manner. The tableaux were interspersed with musical selections by Mr. Pollock on the flute, and Peter Conde on the violoncello. Mrs. B. T. Barnes was accompanist.

The Casino was crowded and chairs were placed in the aisles. The only drawback was the tedious intermissions, which, however, can be condoned in an amateur performance.

The young ladies taking part in the performance were:

Miss Elizabeth Stuart, Miss Florence Huntington, Miss Lena Bass, Miss May Kirkner, Miss Amey Green, Miss Fieda Whiting, Miss Augusta Holmes, Mrs. William Saunders, Miss Lulu Lewis, Miss Bessie Pound, Miss Clara Shepherd, Miss Clara Hellwig, Miss Minnie Morse, Miss Gussie Murray, Miss Minnie Murray, Miss Mary E. Brown, Miss Bessie Cornwall, Miss May Tracy, Miss Jessamy Harte, Mrs. Esther K. Miller Mrs. Chas. Munn, Miss Emma Miller, Miss Robinson, Miss Eleanor T. Morrison, Miss Constance Patton, Miss Wilhelmina Patton and Miss Lulu Howard.

Union Thanksgiving Service.

Union services will be held as follows next Thursday at 11 a. m.: The congregations of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian, Park Avenue Baptist, and Congregational churches will meet in the Crescent Avenue church, and the Rev. J. W. Richardson of the Park Avenue church will preach. The congregations of the First Presbyterian, First Baptist, Methodist, Trinity Reformed and Seventh-Day Baptist churches will meet in the First Baptist, and the Rev. Dr. Hurlbut will preach.

Election Police are Kicking.

It 's hardly satisfying to the policemen in this city to work for twenty-three hours on election day and have offered in payment for such services a paltry $3. Yet that is the way the Plainfield "finest" were treated for running a miniature "Force bill" about the Plainfield polls last week. Captain Grant ordered the men on duty, so they hope to receive full compensation from the city for their work, instead of the $3 fee allowed by the county election board.

MRS. DREIER'S STORY.

She Says It's All an "Unqualified Falsehood."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In your issue of last evening you quote Mr. Beerbower as stating that the Morris girl had brought the ring which she stole to my establishment and that when he made inquires about the ring I denied all knowledge of the matter; also that when he threatened me with prosecution, I restored the stolen property. Now in justice to myself and for the knowledge of the public with whom the statement might carry weight, I must pronounce the above as an unqualified falsehood, as Mr. Beerbower never called at my place in reference to the ring, never threatened me with prosecution, and never received from me the stolen ring, as it was not in my possession to return.

The facts of the case briefly stated are as follows: On Wednesday evening Mrs. Beerbower called at the pawnshop and inquired whether I had received in pledge a diamond ring. I informed her that I had not and showed her my books to certify to the truth of my assertion. I furthermore informed her that I had not seen the girl who she claimed stole the ring, as that she was not in my place. Mrs. Beerbower went away satisfied.

Later in the evening my son, Harry, came up stairs from his store for supper and in the course of our conversation I mentioned Mrs. Beerbower's visit. He inquired whether she had mentioned what kind of a party had stolen the ring, and I informed him that she had stated it was a colored girl. He then informed me that he had purchased a ring from a colored girl in his store in the morning, and immediately sent his brother around to the City Hotel and interviewed Mrs. Beerbower, asking her to describe the ring which she did satisfactorily, whereupon he turned over the ring to her and received the purchase money.

I ask you to kindly insert this explanation and I challenge Mr. Beerbower to prove the truth of his assertion. I thank you for the courteous manner in which you have treated me in winding up the article of yesterday.

MRS. SAMUEL DREIER.

BISHOP VINCENT MAKES A STIR.

He Has a Novel Scheme to Hear All Ministers' Belief.

At the annual session of the Conference Institute of the New York East Methodist Conference in the Sumner Avenue M. E. church in Brooklyn, yesterday, Bishop John H. Vincent, formerly of this city, spoke on "The Itinerants' club," the original name of the Institute, describing the true aims of the work.

Dr. Vincent urged work by lectures, conversations, class study, and drill in preaching for the better training of Methodist ministers, with illustrations of what had been effected in the sessions of clubs already held.

In conclusion he said he proposed to hold an Itinerants' club in Buffalo. He hoped to get a Roman Catholic priest to explain his beliefs, a Unitarian minister to tell his reasons for his faith, and so on with other denominations. As to the name of the organization it made little difference, but he preferred the Itinerants' club, but if he could not have that he would adopt the Conference institute as an expressive title.

A numer of those present discussed Bishop Vincent's suggestions in detail.

Found His Hat in an Old Friend's Hands.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Smalley, who have been missed by their old North Plainfield friends for a long time, have been discovered at Ashville, N. C., by J. Ran. Dunn, of West Fourth street, who recently took up his residence in that place. Mr. Dunn found them at church, and met them under laughable circumstances. In making his exit from the pew, before the services were ended, he picked up the wrong hat, and discovered his mistake in the vestibule. He returned for his own, and again made a mistake. Then he waited till service was over, and in straightening out the mixed-up state of hats he found that his hat was in Mr. Smalley's hands. Greetings were exchanged, and reminiscences were indulged in to the gratification of all.

6,439 New Jersey Republicans Tired of Sewell's Rule.

It has been the practice of the Gazette for years past, and especially during the late campaign, to denounce the Democratic party in New Jersey as "ring ridden" and "boss ridden" and to make of this false cry an appeal to the rank and file of the party to abandon its support.—True American.

Plurality in New Jersey for Cleveland, anti-ring candidate for President, 13,709. Plurality for Werts, ring candidate for Governor, 7,270.—State Gazette.

Mr. Werts has the normal vote of the Democratic party. The plurality for Abbett, in '83, was 6,809; Green, in '86, had 8,020. The difference between the vote for Cleveland and that for Werts this year, represents the Republicans who were tired of the ring rule of "Boss Sewell and McKinleyism".

HERE'S GOOD ARGUMENT.

"Pater" Shows Plainfield How the One-Session School Plan Is Operated in the City of Culture.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I intended to finish all I had to say on our High School system in my last letter, but I found that it would be trespassing too much upon the space you could spare in a single edition to do so. I crave your indulgence once more.

My criticism, it must be remembered, has dealt chiefly with the classical course, or, as it is called in some institutions, the college preparatory course, and the strictures have been confined merely to the methods pursued. The course itself is excellent, as has been abundantly proved by the graduates who have entered college upon the preparation it affords, to say nothing of the compliment paid the school by the colleges which offer to admit its graduates without examination.

But this fact only emphasises the importance of making such a change in the plans as shall enable, and also induce, a larger number of pupils to take the course. That number is now very small. Only ten out of about seventy pupils in the two classes to which the full course is confined are in it. This includes two juniors only out of the thirty-six in that class and three seniors who had to drop part of the course last year on account of its exactions but had the pluck to go back and try again. And of this little group of ten some are in danger of sacrificing their health to their praiseworthy ambition.

If the simple change to one session a day would be sufficient to relieve the pressure complained of, as many believe, the problem may be easily solved. That experiment would seem to be worth trying. It really ought not be considered an experiment, as very many High schools have been conducted for years upon the one-session plan. In some of these, like the Boston High schools, Greek is not a part of the course. It is this study which is the most exacting and deters the pupils of our school from pursuing the classical course. If a school that does not include this study in its work finds it advantageous to have but one session, much more desirable must the one-session plan be for a High School like ours.

The value of this plan is not necessarily in the reduction of the time to be spent in the school room. That time need not be lessened materially. The gain will come in transferring the hour and a half devoted to a noonday recess, and which it is practically out of the power of a pupil to utilize for study, to an afterpart of the day when it can be used to manifest advantage by the studious pupil.

The actual time spent in the class room daily in the Boston High schools, for example, is four hours and fifteen minutes. Fifteen minutes are given to the opening exercises and a half hour to recesses, making a five hours' session. One hour of the five is given to study, and the course is so planned that "pupils will not be required to study out of school more than twelve hours a week", to quote the words of an official document. This indicates the thoughtful care there given to the physical limitations of the pupils. Besides, there is a regular course of physical training by means of gymnastics and military drill, "and no class or pupil is allowed, without good reason, to omit these physical exercises."

There is no reason why the plan of work in the Plainfield High school should not be adjusted with a similar regard to the physical well-being of the pupils, so that no one of average health who may desire to take up the studies of the classical course will be hampered by any limitations except what mental incapacity may impose.

The people offer a splendid opportunity to the boys and girls of our city to lay the foundations of a liberal education. Graduates of our High school who have appropriated the highest benefits it confers are well equipped to carry forward by themselves, if their academic career must end there, the studies which lead on to the broadest culture.

It is surely to be regretted that only a little over one per cent of the pupils to whom that opportunity is presented today are taking advantage of it. I contend that it is not the pupil who is to blame for this state of affairs as much as it is the unfavorable and discouraging conditions under which the classical course is pursued. PATER.

A Great Thing When It Comes.

[Elizabeth Journal.]

The enterprising people of Plainfield are naturally in a fever of exultation over the prospect of another railroad. They have recently added electric cars to the other progressive institutions of the city, and now it is rumored that the Pennsylvania railroad company has decided to run a branch road from Newark through the Oranges, thence through Milburn, Springfield, and Scotch Plains, and ending for the time being at Plainfield. This ought certainly to be of great advantage to Plainfield, and it is not marvelous that the people are more or less excited over the project.

A Musical Comedy Coming.

"The Voodoo; or, A Lucky Charm" is the title of the new musical comedy production with which managers Frank W. Sanger and Gus Bothner, have, it is said, scored the big hit of the season. Manager Demarest has secured this new comedy skit for Music Hall, next Tuesday evening.

The piece is described by those who have seen it as being something of an entirely new nature in a comedy line. The story is original, the dialogue witty, crisp and bright, so much so that the the comedy keeps its audience in one continuous roar of laughter from the rise to fall of curtain. A young married woman tries to obtain a charm which will bring her good fortune, and in her efforts to accomplish this, her dearest wish, arise the comical situations and oddities that have made the comedy such a wonderful success.

The supporting company is without doubt one of the strongest and best selected of anything in its order that has yet been given to American theatre-goers during this age of farce comedy. Thos. E. Murray, the celebrated Irish comedian, so long associated with that memorable "Our Irish Visitors" combination, is the bright particular feature of this new success. Among our large number of theatre-goers, no doubt the greater majority are more than partial to good high-class comedy. This is assured in "The Voodoo".

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

ANOTHER VICTIM.

Will Small Boys Never Learn to Let Moving Cars Alone?

George Ruggles, a colored lad, age 13, was crippled for life on the Jersey Central railroad this noon. He was playing on the tracks near Richmond street, jumping on and off moving coal trains. Suddenly he slipped, and fell with his leg across a rail. The heavy wheels crushed the limb so that his foot will have to be amputated. The lad lies unconscious at Muhlenberg Hospital.

The frequency of such accidents should be a solemn warning to the youthful railroad trespassers of Plainfield.

Winter Tours to California, Florida, and Other Points of Interest.

Some idea of the amount of traveling done by Americans as a people, and the comfort and luxury at their command, is gathered from the Pennsylvania Railroad company's announcement of its personally-conducted tours for 1893.

First comes a series to the Golden Gate, starting from New York, Philadelphia, and Harrisburg, February 8, March 2, and March 29, 1893. Tourists will travel by superbly-appointed special trains of Pullman drawing-room sleeping, dining, smoking, and observation cars, under the supervision of a tourist agent and chaperon.

Next in importance comes a series of five to Florida—January 31, February 14 and 28, March 14 and 28. The first four admit of two whole weeks in the sunny South, while tickets for the fifth tour are good to return by regular trains until May 30, 1893.

They will be conducted on the same general principles, and maintained at that high standard manifested on all Pennsylvania railroad company's personally-conducted tours. For information and detailed itineraries now being prepared, apply to ticket agents or tourist agents, 849 Broadway, New York; 860 Fulton street, Brooklyn; or 233 South Fourth street, Philadelphia.

Trying an Experiment.

A prominent Harlem journalist recently applied for the fifth or sixth time to a wealthy friend for a temporary loan.

"Don't you know," was the reply, "that it is very painful to be always lending money?"

INVESTIGATING THE PINKERTONS.

The Senatorial Committee Begins Examination in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire and Senator Peffer of Kansas, of the Senatorial Committee of seven appointed in August by President Harrison to investigate the Homestead affair, have begun their examination of the Chicago end of the relations between the labor organizations and the detectives.

Superintendent Frank Murray of the Chicago Pinkerton Agency, was the first witness called. In reply to questions Mr. Murray said the Pinkerton Agency kept on hand Winchester rifles, revolvers and ammunition for strike cases, gave special rates to corporations, required references as to character of men employed for strike purposes and exercised as much care in selecting them as in selecting men for the patrol and detective services.

The witness denied that the men sent by the agency to Homestead were armed here, but admitted that arms were transmitted in advance of their departure. He did not know at what point the men were armed.

Assistant-Supt. Davidson, of the Pinkerton agency, was also called, but his testimony was not of much importance. Asked whether the men sent to Homestead had been sworn in as deputy sheriffs, he said he did not know. William A. Pinkerton and Robert A. Pinkerton, the witness said, could give the desired information.

Senator Gallinger said he would ask those gentlemen to appear before the committee in Washington in December, and Mr. Robertson was commissioned to convey letters to them from the Senators.

H. O. Devereaux, Mr. Pinkerton's superintendent, and R. K. Pinkerton, brother and partner, both gave testimony, but did not furnish any additional information.

Charles Renke, who had worked for various detective agencies, also gave testimony.

Frank C. Newell and Samuel Richards, employes of the Illinois steel company, advocated compulsory arbitration as the only remedy for strikes. The investigation is being continued to-day.

THE COMPLAINT DISMISSED.

"Count" Mitkiewicz Declared Innocent of Certain Charges Against Him.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—"Count" Eugene de Mitkiewicz, the famous promoter of Chinese concession schemes, appeared at the Tombs Police Court yesterday for examination on the charge of having obtained $1,750 under false pretenses from Arthur E. Tomes, of Brooklyn.

The "Count" came on from Washington, where he has been living recently. Wednesday night, and surrendered himself to Police Justice Grady, who paroled him in the custody of his counsel.

Before the case was begun lawyer Burke, counsel for Tomes, said he did not care to go on with the case until he had all the witnesses present.

Justice Grady thought the case could proceed until they ran out of witnesses, and Tomes then began to testify. He told how he met Mitkiewicz, and how the latter induced him to place a mortgage on his home in Brooklyn, assuring him that the money would be returned by Col. Elliott F. Shepard and others.

The court then said that the only point involved was whether the money had been obtained on a false pretence that it would be returned by Col. Shepard and others.

William P. Burr was the next witness after Tomes. He testified that through all the transaction he understood that the money was to be repaid by Col. Shepard.

On cross examination, witness said that Mitkiewicz once told him "that he had Col. Shepard on the hip, and that he could force him to pay the money back."

Lawyer Brooke, counsel for Mitkiewicz, asked for the dismissal of the complaint on the ground that no evidence had been submitted showing that the Count had handled one cent of the money in question.

Justice Grady thereupon granted his motion.

PEARY MAY TRY AGAIN.

He Will Go North if He Can Obtain Leave of Absence.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Lieut. Peary, who recently returned from Greenland, has been requested by a number of Philadelphia gentlemen to make another trip to that region.

Mr. Peary expressed his willingness to do so, provided he could get the necessary leave of absence from the Navy Department.

He is an engineer on the roll of the Bureau of Yards and Docks. He applied for three years' leave, but his application has not yet been granted. Secretary Tracy can not see his way clear to excuse him for this period, as engineers are needed in the service, according to the report of Commodore Farquhar.

The Commodore, however, is said to have approved Peary's request.

A Family's Narrow Escape.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., Nov. 18.—Some one broke into the house of Joan L. Johnson early yesterday morning, and, pouring a quantity of kerosene oil over a lot of inflammable material near the doorway of the room in which Mr. Johnson and his family were sleeping, set fire to it and fled from the building. The smoke and flames aroused the family. By heroic efforts they escaped from the room. Nothing was stolen from the place.

"Little Black Trunk" No More.

BOSTON, Nov. 18.—There is not likely to be any further agitation over the "little black trunk" which has figured so conspicuously in the legal proceedings against ex-President Potter of the Maverick bank. The trunk has been opened and its contents examined by the prosecution, and there is not a single paper in it which would bear in the slightest degree on the case against Potter.

Important Suits to be Settled.

SUNBURY, Pa., Nov. 18.—The suits of the farmers along Shamokin and Mahanoy creeks against the Reading Coal & Iron company and individual operators, in which over $1,000,000 is involved, will be amicably settled. The cases were the result of coal dirt washing down the streams and on the lands of the farmers.

Prize Fight Near New Haven.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 18.—John Huggins of this city, and Eugene Hornbacker of New York, engaged in a prize fight near the centre of the city Wednesday night. Three desperate rounds were fought and as neither man had an apparent advantage the affair was called a draw. The spectators were mostly Yale students.

New Jersey's Official Pluralities.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 18.—The official returns have been received from all the counties by the Secretary of State. They show the plurality for the Democrati, Presidential electors to be 14,855c and Judge Werts' plurality over Kean, Republican, for Governor, 7,709.

I have been troubled with chronic catarrh for years; Ely's Cream Balm is the only remedy among the many that I have used that affords me relief.—E. W. Willard, druggist, Joliet, Ill.

"A God-send is Ely's Cream Balm. I had catarrh for three years. Two or three times a week my nose would bleed. I thought the sores would never heal. Your Balm has cured me."—Mrs. M. A. Jackson, Portsmouth, N. H.

MONTANA'S PORTIA.

The Legal Adviser of the New State Is Miss Knowles, Attorney General.

HELENA, Mont., Nov. 18.—This young State will have the first female Attorney General ever elected in the United States. Miss Ella Knowles, who was chosen last week over three opponents, made a brave contest and was elected solely upon her qualifications as a lawyer. Her plurality is 300.

She was born 28 years ago in Northwood, N. H. She is a graduate of Bates' College at Lewiston, Me., and has taken the degree of Master of Arts from that institution. She studied law in Manchester, N. H., and later in this city.

She induced the Legislature—it was the Territorial Legislature of 1888-89—to pass a bill admitting women to practice law. In December, 1890, she was admitted to the Bar. She was elected on the People's ticket.

Miss Kate Drexel Married.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Miss Katharine Drexel, daughter of the late Joseph W. Drexel, was married at noon to Dr. Charles Bingham Penrose of Philadelphia in St. George's Church, Stuyvesant square. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. S. Rainsford. Mr. A. J. Drexel, uncle of the bride, gave her away. State Senator Boies Penrose, acted as best man. The bridesmaids were Miss Josephine Drexel, Miss Cornelia Redmond, Miss Christine Biddle and Miss Amanda Fell, all attired alike, and wearing hats of white felt, adorned with ostrich.

Election Fraud Charges Against Balfour.

MANCHESTER, Nov. 18. — Professor Munroe's petition against the election of the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, as Member of Parliament for East Manchester on the alleged grounds of bribery, etc., has been practically abandoned.

Bartlett Adjudged Insane.

WARSAW, N. Y., Nov. 18.—Fred Bartlett, the writer of the letter to Rev. Dr. Nassau, demanding of him $15,000 on the penalty of his life, has been adjudged insane and taken to the Buffalo Asylum.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

—The Homestead strikers have voted to remain out.

—The Schuylkill River channel is closed to commerce by a sunken vessel.

—Pugilist Corbett's father says that his son has promised to leave the ring after he has had a fight with Charlie Mitchell.

—The Stewart wire plant in South Easton, Pa., will soon start up on double shift, employing twice as many hands as it did a year ago.

—Policeman Hennessey of Portsmouth, N. H., was set upon by four United States marines and terribly beaten. Two of them are under arrest.

—The Blackstone Manufacturing company, cotton manufacturers of Blackstone, Mass., will advance wages Dec. 5. Prices have not yet been made known.

—The smallpox epidemic at Seattle, Wash., is still spreading, and the authorities have became thoroughly alarmed. There are now about twenty cases in the city.

—The Shenandoah Normal College in Basic City, Va., was destroyed by fire early yesterday morning. The 100 students escaped, but many of them lost their effects.

—Captain Frank B. S. Morgan, of Cleveland, has been granted a decree from his wife, Elizabeth, the daughter of the novelist, Mrs. Amelia E. Barr, on the ground of desertion.

LIFE IN A COAL MINE.

Busy Workers Who Spend Half Their Life Underground.

The West Has Secured the Best Miners Driven Out of Pennsylvania by the Greed of the Anthracite Barons —Visit to a Mine.

[Special Letter.]

Coal miners have formed the subject of scores of recent newspaper articles, not because the public is particularly interested in this branch of labor, but because the importation of thousands of Hungarian miners by the great anthracite coal companies of Pennsylvania has become a national scandal. The contract labor law passed a few years ago has, in a measure, corrected the abuse, but enough of the most degraded Huns were brought to the United States during the period from the fall of 1877 to 1886 to menace the social and economic conditions of a number of once prosperous and law-abiding communities.

Whenever these Hungarians, who at first came in small detachments, became imbued with American ideas and asked for increased pay, they were soon defeated by their own countrymen, who came by thousands to take the places of their emancipated brethren. At the present time scores of mining villages in Pennsylvania are inhabited exclusively by Huns. The Welsh, English and American miners have drifted westward. Lawlessness and almost incredible disregard of moral and sanitary rules and regulations prevail in communities once noted for their cleanliness and enterprise.

The mining of coal became an important industry in the west many years ago, and mine owners in Illinois and Iowa were glad to get hold of the workmen whom stern necessity had compelled to leave their homes in the east.

A recent visit to Iowa, made after an investigation of the condition of the miners in Pennsylvania, impressed me more than any previous comparison between the labor problem of the east and the west. In the anthracite region ignorance and squalor go hand in hand; in the bituminous coal region of Iowa a fair degree of comfort makes the life of the hard-working digger for the black diamonds endurable. Schools and churches are to be found in every settlement, and drunkenness is, to say the least, not a prevailing vice.

The life of a coal miner is not a healthy one. Exposure and impure air claim thousands of victims each year. Many who use coal every day have not the remotest idea of how it is brought to the light of day and made ready for shipment.

The first descent into a coal mine produces a sensation not easily forgotten. At the invitation of an Iowa mine owner I accompanied him on a downward trip not long ago. Stepping from the clear air into a crazy-looking little structure, dignified with the name of "tower," we entered a sort of elevator, which in the twinkling of an eye landed us on the main thoroughfare of the subterranean industrial city. Although supplied with a miner's lamp, the unsophisticated visitor will remain virtually blind for several minutes after reaching the bottom.

The mine itself is divided into streets and alleys. East street was the name of the main artery invaded by the writer. It was nothing more than a long, narrow passage about eight feet wide and six feet high. Slate forms the top of the halls, and this is held up by rafters at intervals varying from five to six feet. A railroad, whose cars are propelled by mule power, runs through the hall. Along the "street" are innumerable small openings closed with heavy curtains. Rolling back one of these the discovery was made that it concealed a small apartment in which two miners were busily at work.

When the men in one of these apertures have dug two or three loads of coal they ring a bell for the mule train. The equipment of this primitive transportation line consists of a truck mounted on wheels and a pair of disreputable looking mules. After the car has been loaded it is taken to the lift. The teamster—or "engineer," if you please—rings the mine bell once, the international mining signal that a load waits to be hoisted up. Before the miner allows the load to leave the gloomy vault he attaches a metal tag to the cart, so that he may receive proper credit for his work on the books of the company. After the coal has reached the surface it is weighed, and the net weight placed to the credit of the man whose ticket was found on the truck. It is, of course, needless to add that all miners are paid by the piece.

After the coal has been weighed it is rolled down over a long chute, at the end of which is an immense screen, which separates and assorts the product.

I have made mention of curtains covering the openings of the mine apartments. They are put up so as to allow only a limited portion of the air from the main shaft to go into any one room. Not a particle of air is allowed to go to waste, as carelessness in this respect might jeopard the lives of all workmen.

The tools of the miners are extremely simple. They have picks, short and very sharp and perfectly flat at the end. Their drills are about an inch in diameter and from six to ten feet long. After a hole is drilled to sufficient depth, the auger is removed and powder put in the hole. A fuse is then attached and lighted. The explosion following this operation makes a fearful noise. As many as twenty tons of coal have been loosened by one discharge in the mine of which I am writing.

Most of the coal now taken from American mines is blown loose by powder or some other explosive. In former years this work was performed by hand, and in some portions of Europe the old system still prevails. After the coal has been loosened it is broken into pieces of various sizes by the miners with the aid of their picks.

The social life in a mine is, of course, restricted and monotonous, but still the busy workers find time to exchange an occasional call with their fellows. When one of the miners stands in need of a little gossip he simply shoulders his pick and visits one of his chums in an adjoining hole or takes a stroll through the main street, where he can always find more or less company.

From the description of these social functions it must not be supposed that a miner's life is an easy one, for such is certainly not the case. To earn one dollar and fifty cents a day a miner must labor most industriously ten hours a day amid surroundings that would strike terror to the heart of the ordinary citizen. One trip down into a coal mine aroused in me a hearty sympathy for the men who brave indescribable dangers for the sake of providing for their loved ones. Many a noble heart beats under the rough jackets of the humble diggers upon whom the plutocrats of the east look with contempt.

AT THE CHUTE.

It is not necessary to tell of the heroism of some of these men. It is a matter of history that many times young fellows have risked, and sometimes sacrificed, their lives to save their companions from death by suffocation or other dangers peculiar to mining life.

That the west has succeeded in absorbing the best of the eastern miners shows that, despite all arguments to the contrary, the region lying west of Chicago must henceforth and forevermore be considered the mecca of the American wageworker. And this holds good not only of unskilled labor, but of the highest-priced artisans.

The only relief asked by the miners of the west is the immediate passage of an immigration law which would effectually keep out of America the pauper labor of Europe, and to such legislation they certainly seem entitled.

THE GREAT GAME TO-DAY

Struggle of Crimson and Blue for Supremacy.

YALE THE FAVORITE IN BETTING.

Odds Offered That the New Haven Men Will Win—Their Supporters Very Confident—Harvard's Admirers Hopeful—Bliss Not So Severely Hurt as Reported and He Will Play.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 19.—To-day the streets of the city are resounding with the college cries of old Yale and the swelling slogan of Harvard. The blue and the crimson are everywhere.

If money and the confidence with which it was wagered last night could determine the result of the game Harvard might better have stayed at home. Fortunately, however, the lucre does not weigh either one way or another. Brawn and skill and speed will determine the contest and Harvard is anxious to measure brawn and skill and speed against the pride of Yale. Her sons have no fear of the result.

Last night Yale money held the town. It was everywhere and always ready to flow into the hands of a stakeholder when any were so bold to doubt Yale's ability to triumph over Harvard. Before the coming of the Yale team there was some even money, but when the boys in blue arrived their supporters could not get a wager, even though they offered 2 to 1. Emboldened by the absence of Harvard dollars, they offered even money that the crimson would not score, and at these odds some wagers were made.

This morning, however, Yale money did not go begging as it did last night, and nearly all of it offered was snapped up by the Harvard backers.

Laurie Bliss, who is of so much importance to the football world just now, arrived with the Yale team, and will start in the game. He is not so seriously injured as was reported, and will be in his position at half back when the game starts.

"We will go into the game determined to win," said Capt. McCormick this morning, "and Yale, you know, never goes in half hearted or half fixed. Bliss is not in the best of condition, but he will be there, and his runs around Harvard's ends will be a feature of the game. Butterworth will also be at full back, and I will endeavor to hold my own at quarter. Harvard may have some new tricks, but we have some that will counteract them. Yale is never beaten until the gong sounds, and we will be there at the finish."

Special trains are arriving every hour filled with the enthusiastic of both colleges, and every hotel in the city is crowded.

The Springfield Four Hundred gave a ball last night at the City Hall to the visiting footballists and their friends, and outside of the players every one was down for a good time. The Springfield Club, which is composed of the foremost citizens of the pretty city, held open house and throngs were at their beautiful home.

Fatal Mistake of a Drug Clerk.

HUNTINGDON, Pa., Nov. 19.—Mrs. Peter Bowman, aged 21 years, is dead at Saltillo, this county, from poison given by mistake by Newton Hamilton, a drug clerk, two days ago. Mrs. Bowman asked for Epsom salts and received acetate of magnesia instead. She was married but three months ago.

A Novel Suit for Damages.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 19.—A novel case is being tried in a local court here, in which G. W. Collom sues for $5,000 damages because a clerk at Diller's Hotel last December took possession of and kept his umbrella. A jury has been wrestling with the question for thirty-six hours without reaching an agreement.

Charter for a New Railroad.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 19.—A charter has been granted to the Turbotville & Williamsport Railroad company with a capital of $800,000. The road will be 30 miles in length and will extend from Turbotville, Northumberland county, to Newbery Junction, Lycoming county.

Desecration of a Cemetery.

MARTINSVILLE, Ind., Nov. 19.—Vandals painted the tombstones of all the veterans in the Wilbury Cemetery last night with red paint. Their desecration of these graves has occasioned great excitement and if the perpetrators are found there will be trouble.

TO MAKE IRELAND FREE.

An Organization With This Object Said to Have Been Formed in New York.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—A morning paper publishes the following:

A new organization, having for its object the freedom of Ireland, has just been formed in this city by the members of the Irish-Republican Brotherhood. The men in the new insurrectionary movement were prominent in Ireland in the uprising in 1863 and 1867, and some of them suffered imprisonment and faced death for loyalty to the land of their nativity.

On the death of Parnell the Irish-Republican Brotherhood refused to hold communication with the Irish Parliamentary party, led by Mr. Timothy Healy and others, whom they accused of being renegades and blamed them for the premature death of the Irish leader.

The Clan-na-Gael is also distrusted by the new organization, who believe the Clan-na-Gael a drag on the efforts for Irish freedom.

The new departure is intended to supercede both organizations. It is to be a secret revolutionary organization, whose principal defined objects are to assist "the men in the gap" with money, men and arms, and whose motto will be the "Freedom of Ireland."

A circular has been issued calling upon all Irishmen who love their fatherland to come forward and help in the movement.

VICTORY FOR TELEGRAPHERS.

The Baltimore & Ohio Men Get Part of What They Demand.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 19.—The telegraph operators employed by the Baltimore & Ohio company have won a partial victory in their struggle for higher salaries. An agreement has been reached between the Grievance Committee of the Order of Railway Telegraphers and Superintendent Charles Selden, which it is reported gives the operators an increase of $55,000, a little more than a quarter of the amount demanded.

Payment will be made in case of unjust suspension and for over time. The schedule of rates and rules constituting the agreement will, it is expected, be signed to-day by General Manager J. T. Odell, Superintendent of Telegraph Charles Selden, Chief D. K. Ramsay of the Order of Telegraphers and H. C. McAdams of the Grievance Committee.

Chief Ramsay expressed himself as well pleased with the agreement and thinks the Order has been treated very courteously by the Baltimore & Ohio officials.

MAY OPPOSE M'COMAS.

Reported Antagonism to the Newly Appointed District Judge.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—There is some talk of opposition in the Senate this winter to the confirmation of Mr. McComas as Judge of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

It is impossible to tell at this time how far the matter may go. It is probable that both the Maryland Senators will oppose his confirmation and there will be some opposition from Republicans not in Congress, as well as from members of the District Bar, who are sticklers for the proposition that appointments in the District should go to some District man.

McComas is very popular in Congress, however and it is not improbable that the opposition to him will be dissipated in a short time and his confirmation will be secured without serious difficulty.

BREAK AT HOMESTEAD.

Two Hundred and Fifty Men Apply for Work and Get It.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Nov. 19.—Another big break in the strikers' ranks occurred yesterday when over 250 men applied for positions at the Carnegie mill. Very few were turned away.

The applicants consisted principally of day laborers, But here and there a mechanical man was seen in the crowd.

The mechanical men and day laborers held a meeting in the morning and it was decided to declare the strike off so far as they were concerned.

The Alliance Proceeding to Samoa.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Nothing to confirm the report from Sidney, N. S. W., that Samoa is in a state of internal war, has been received at the State Department, but the last advices received indicated that trouble might occur at any time. Consequently the Department officials are inclined to put credence in the cabled reports. At last accounts the U. S. S. Alliance was on her way to Samoa, where she had been ordered by Secretary Tracy at the request of Secretary Foster, to protect the interest of United States citizens in the event of trouble.

Two Women Hurt in a Collision.

SHENANDOAH, Pa., Nov. 19.—Engine No. 76 of the Lehigh Valley railroad ran into the rear of Philadelphia & Reading passenger train No. 205, which ran between here and Mahanoy Plane, while the latter was passing Packer Colliery No. 4, at Lost Creek. The rear car was thrown down an embankment and two ladies, whose names are unknown, were seriously hurt. The other passengers and trainmen had narrow escapes.

Lawyer Butler's Bail Forfeited.

BOSTON, Nov. 19.—Lawyer John E. Butler has been defaulted by Judge Ely of the Municipal Criminal Court, and his bondsmen will be obliged to pay $5,000. Butler was before the court on a charge of embezzlement and of obtaining money under false pretenses from his mother.

Shocked By Lightning.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., Nov. 19.—During a heavy thunderstorm which visited Crawfordsville during Thursday night several buildings were struck by lightning and much damage resulted. The barn of Harris Reynolds was burned and a number of persons were severely shocked.

INDIAN OUTBREAK FEARED.

Hunger is Making the Cheyennes and Arapahoes Cross and Restless.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 19.—A serious outbreak among the Cheyenne and Arapahoe tribes in the Indian Territory is threatened and men familiar with their ways declare that unless prompt action is taken by the government over 3,000 redskins will be on the war path by Jan. 1 next.

Since July 1 the government has been giving the Indians only half rations, for the reason that they were expected to aid in their support by cultivating their land.

The attempts of the redmen in this direction have been miserable failures and hundreds of them are in actual distress.

The ghost dance has been in progress since the appearance of Sitting Bull, a distant relative of the great chief killed during the Pine Ridge trouble.

C. C. Painter, of Great Barrington, Mass., general agent of the Indian Rights Association, an organization of eastern men which takes a philanthropic interest in the welfare of the redmen, reached Kansas City yesterday from the Cheyenne and Arapahoe country where he went to investigate the stories of prospective trouble.

"The Indians are cross and restless," said Mr. Painter, "and they are sure to put on war paint unless the government gives them food.

"They are really in a bad plight and have already suffered from hunger. Besides this, they believe that they were swindled by unscrupulous white men in the sale of their lands and their feeling toward the government is one of intense hatred."

TWO CHILDREN FATALLY HURT.

A Brooklyn Building in Course of Erection Blown Down by the Gale.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 19.—The gale which prevailed in this city yesterday afternoon blew down the walls of a three-story building, which Samuel Roebuck, a weather strip manufacturer, was having erected at Thirteenth street and Hamilton avenue.

Three little girls, Sophia and Amelia Gottlieb and Maggie Shubert, who were passing at the time, were buried in the ruins. They were speedily rescued, when it was found that the Gottlieb children had sustained probably fatally injuries. The Shubert girl escaped with a few slight bruises. Three of the workmen employed on the building, Martin Swanson, Ben Johnson, and Edward Christopher, were struck by flying timbers and received painful injuries.

The financial loss is but $1,000.

MITCHELL IS SANGUINE.

Sure to Fight Corbett and Believes He Will Win.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 19.—Tom Allen, retired champion of the world, who keeps a saloon on Market street, has received a letter from Charley Mitchell dated London, Nov. 7. Mitchell says:

"I am sure to fight Corbett, as you know, Tom, unless he pulls out. I shall be better, stronger and bigger when I face him than I ever have been in my life, and, between you and me, I am very sanguine as to my success.

"Now, you ask me on the frank what I think of Corbett. I fancy Corbett very much, but keep that to yourself. They think I am fat and done with, but there will be a surprise party for them in ten rounds, I am certain."

Schooners Collide in the Sound.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., Nov. 19.—The schooner Jennie Parker, of St. John, Capt. Cesner, from Sherbrooke, N. S., for New York, with a cargo of laths, and the barge Robena, from New York for Boston, with a cargo of coal, in tow of the steam tug Wrestler, collided near Squash Meadow shoal, Vineyard sound, about 3 o'clock in the morning. Both put in here damaged.

An Austrian Steamboat Sunk.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—A dispatch says that the Austrian steamship Stefanie collided off Barletto in the Adriatic with the steamship Arrigo, from Ragusa, and sank five minutes afterward. The captain and 18 of the Stefanie's crew were saved. The rest of the crew, eight men, were drowned. The sinking of the Stefanie involves a loss of 26,000 pounds.

Bill for European Disarmament.

ROME, Nov. 19.—It is reported here that the leaders of the German clericals are drafting a bill contemplating a general disarmament in Europe and the appointment of a tribunal of arbitration. The Pope warmly endorses the plan proposed by the bill, and is said to have expressed his willingness to preside over the tribunal in question.

Driven Back from Greenland.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 19.—After two months' battling with the elements of the North Atlantic and with a crew almost worn out from exposure, misery and privation, the British bark Salina, Capt. Peterson, having failed to reach the port of Ivigut, Greenland, returned to Philadelphia yesterday.

Gen. Rosecrans Removed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Gen. Rosecrans, Register of the Treasury, was removed to Fortress Monroe last night in the hope that the change will remove the present danger in his case of paralysis. He has already lost the use of his hands, and is almost completely helpless.

The Switzerland's Rough Passage.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 19.—The Red Star line steamship Switzerland, Capt. Mills, with 382 passengers, has arrived here, 15 days from Antwerp, after an unusually severe passage. After leaving the Channel the Switzerland experienced terrific westerly gales and breasted mountainous seas. Several times the ship had to be slowed down. She averaged but little over four knots an hour.

BOLT IN THE ALLIANCE

Dissatisfied Delegates Decide to Withdraw.

A NEW PARTY TO BE ORGANIZED

Alleged by the Seceders That the Convention Was Captured by Members of the People's Party, Who Arranged a Slate of Officers to Suit Themselves.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 19.—The knot in the Farmers' Alliance has culminated in a bolt and those opposed to the People's Party capturing the body, held a caucus and concluded to form a new association embodying the doctrines of the Alliance, but holding aloof from politics.

The Taubeneck crowd having captured the conference, many of the delegates refused to attend the executive session. They got together and effected a temporary organization and began to shape matters for the issuance of a manifesto.

Dr. McCune makes the following statement:

"I withdrew from the convention hall because the National Committee of the People's Party have come here and are attempting to secure control of the Alliance. They have used foul means and have gone as far to make up a slate of officers.

"Considering that these men were in control of the convention and had determined to carry out their measures contrary to all Alliance traditions and principles I withdrew from the hall and shall remain out as long as such methods are being used to divert the purpose of the Alliance. The delegates who left the hall felt the same as I did about the matter."

"Does this mean that you will try to form those thinking as you do into a separate organization?"

"Not necessarily; but if such an association is formed the demand for it is from the people who don't care to see the principles advocated by the Farmers' Alliance go to naught because designing politicans have succeeded in capturing the present organization. Taubeneck and half a dozen national committeemen of the Third party have held secret sessions here daily, and so far have shaped the entire policy of the organization through their tools on the convention floor."

Mr. McCune retired into another room where the bolting delegates had assembled, and the work of mapping out a programme of action was begun.

Additional details of Thursday night's secret session are leaking out. Tillman, of this State, called Scott a liar and a coward. Scott started toward him, and half a dozen hands reached for hip pockets. Scott was pulled away.

Gov. Buchanan made a remark that was not pleasing to a delegate, and the latter rushed at the Governor with a baseball bat used by the sergeant-at-arms to keep the peace. He was pulled away.

The election of officers resulted in the choosing for another term of H. L. Loucks of South Dakota. The Third Party slate was not broken. I. E. Can of New York and H. C. Deming of Pennsylvania are on the executive board.

A number of these delegates insist that as soon as they return to their homes and announce the result of the action of the convention to their State Alliances that a withdrawal from the National body will at once take place and a new order will be formed.

Loucks's opponents held a meeting and issued a manifesto against the methods of the Third Party men, accusing them of an attempt to disrupt the order.

JAMES G. BLAINE ILL.

Confined to His Bed for Four Days—He Is Better Now.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—James G. Blaine is quite ill.

He has been confined to his bed for four days under the care of two physicians.

Part of the time he has had a high fever.

This morning he is said to be resting comfortably.

The Reading Litigation.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 19.—Chancellor McGill has granted an order permitting counsel for the State in the Reading litigation to cross examine President Maxwell of the New Jersey Central, and all of the officers of the Wilkesbarre Coal and Iron company, touching the negotiations under which the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron company procured control of the Wilkesbarre company's output. President McLeod is spared the ordeal of a rigid examination.

Verdict Against Millionaire Greenough.

SUNBURY, Pa., Nov. 19.—By direction of the court the jury in the case of Mrs. John J. Youngman and Elizabeth and Joseph Lazarus of Philadelphia against Millionaire Wm. L. Greenough of this city, rendered a verdict in favor of the plaintiffs for one-sixth of the land described in the ejectment. Real estate at over $100,000 was involved. The suit was brought many years ago and has passed through a number of courts.

Col. McEwan's Resignation Accepted.

ALBANY, Nov. 19.—Governor Flower has accepted the resignation of Col. John McEwan as Assistant Adjutant General and has transferred him to the Supernumerary list. Upon the recommendation of Gen. Porter the Governor has appointed Col. Frederick Phisterer of Albany as Col. McEwan's successor. The change is to take effect Dec. 1.

May Be Rewarded By Cleveland.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—A dispatch from Port Townsend says that W. H. Tibballs, jr., who managed the Democratic campaign in Jefferson county so successfully as to make it a banner Democratic county of the State, will likely be appointed by Mr. Cleveland to succeed Watson as Collector of Customs for the Puget Sound district.

Appointments by Gov. Pattison.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 19.—Gov. Pattison has made these appointments: William Quinn, alderman Fifth ward, McKeesport, vice David C. Hughes, deceased. Walter Rynkiewicz, justice of the peace, Fourth ward, Shenandoah, vice Joseph Seibert, deceased.

Indicted for Murder.

GREENFIELD, Nov. 19.—Edward Beauregard has been indicted by the grand jury for the murder of Mrs. Rogers of Wendell. The trial will not take place earlier than February.

Note the date.

Marion Harland,

Author of "Common Sense in the Household," writes, February 5, 1892: "After long and careful trial of others, I prefer Baking Powder. Cleveland's is a pure cream of tartar and soda mixture, not containing alum or ammonia or any other substance deleterious to the human stomach."

Cleveland's

FOUL PLAY SUSPECTED.

Believed That James Cunningham, of Hanover, Mass., Was Murdered.

HANOVER, Mass., Nov. 19.—It is now thought that James A. Cunningham, of this place, whose remains were found scattered along the railroad track, was murdered.

About the length of 13 rails from where the greater part of the body was found was discovered a pool of blood. This blood could not possibly have come from the body after the train struck it.

It is just learned that on the night of his death Cunningham was seen on the depot platform in spirited conversation with two men, one of whom he told to "shut up."

Cunningham played first base on the Dartmouth college nine of '87, and was graduated from the college in '88.

WILL BECOME AMERICAN CITIZENS

The Veteran Commanders of the Inman Line Racers to Remain With the Company

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Capt. Frederick A. Watkins, of the Inman line racer City of Paris, is to become an American citizen. So is Capt. Lewis, of her sister ship, the City of New York.

Both vessels have received American registers by special act of Congress.

As the veteran commanders cannot be naturalized immediately, they will be placed in charge of two fast freight steamers now being constructed on the Clyde for the Inman line. When they become full-fledged American citizens, Captains Watkins and Lewis will be restored to their former commands or assigned to the new racers which have been contracted for.

Baseball Games on Sunday.

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—It leaks out that before adjourning the baseball league magnates decided that next season they would play Sunday games. There was some opposition to this course, but the majority contended that something must be done to wipe out some of last season's losses. No formal resolution was adopted but a verbal agreement was entered into, and the proposition will be placed on the official minutes at the March meeting in New York.

The Brake Failed to Work.

NEW BERLINVILLE, Pa., Nov. 19.—By the failure of a brake to work on a car loaded with steel on the Colebrookdale railroad near this place yesterday, Bennerville Conrad and Frank Speak were seriously injured. The steel was displaced by the car being thrown with great force into a siding, and Conrad and Speak were caught by the steel and pinioned fast, so that they could not move.

Warning From Paris Anarchists.

LONDON Nov. 19.—A dispatch to the Reuter Telegram Company from Paris says it is rumored that the Anarchists have warned the Prefecture of Police that if Francois, the Anarchist accused of having been implicated in the explosion at the Rue Magenta is extradited from England, the outrages of last April will be repeated, and the British Embassy will be wrecked.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Another old musket has been dug up at Laing's hotel.

—There is a special sale of broken candy at Tier's to-day.

—A great welcome meeting will be held at the Salvation Army to-night.

—A praise service will be held in the W. C. T. U. rooms this evening.

—George Stevens bowled 220 on the Crescent League alleys this afternoon.

—There will be a shooting match at live birds at Ellis Campbell's Thanksgiving Day, and a raffle the night before.

—Y. M. C. A. classes in light gymnastics and English branches for foreign young men will meet as usual to-night.

—Elegant felt slippers that give your feet solid comfort and neat appearance, are a specialty at Springer's 32 West Front street.

—The German church fair will continue Monday and Tuesday, on account of the rain, as there are many articles left to dispose of.

—The last of the special meetings in connection with the week of prayer for young men will be held at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-night.

—An enjoyable time is promised all those who attend the fifth annual ball of the Twilight Social club, at the Crescent rink, Thanksgiving Eve.

—The Plainfield Camera club will hold their sixth annual exhibition all next week. 'Twill be a great event. The specimens are unusually good.

—A regular meeting of the Exempt Firemen's association will be held at Fireman's Hall (Coward's building), 9 Park avenue, this evening at 8.

—L. H. Bigelow, jr., will sing one or more beautiful solos at the young men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. to-morrow at 4:15 p. m. Twenty-five men spoke last Sunday.

—To-morrow will be "Veterans' Day" in the Methodist churches throughout the New Jersey conferences, the collections being especially for the worn-out preachers' fund.

—If the freight house isn't moved pretty soon it will fall down itself. During yesterday's storm the whole building shook and rocked so that those inside got ready to leave.

—A $9,000 addition is being added to the Harned academy on Park avenue recently purchased by Prof. Edward Harned from James E. Martine. A. L. C. Marsh is the architect.

—A Harrison and Reid banner is still swinging in Cranford. Either the news of election has n't reached that village, or else all are ashamed to own the banner their's and pull it in.

—The members of Franklin council, No. 41, and Somerset council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., are requested to meet at the lodge rooms of the former to-morrow evening at 7, to attend divine services at Trinity Reformed church.

—Michael Seader, William Westerfield, Michael McCarthy and Robert Wood have pooled $15 and agreed not to shave off their beards before Dec. 16. The one who shaves before then forfeits his share of the money. It is an election freak.

—A stout stone wall is being built the entire length of George H. Babcock's property along Green brook, also along the race-way south of the present stable buildings. This is to keep the brook confined and prevent washouts of the improved property.

—Those who still claim there is danger in the trolley, should have seen the men on top of their wagon wiping the bare overhead wire and greasing it with oil and plumbago, during the snow and rain storm of Wednesday of last week. The full current was on and all the cars running at the time.

—The way the city park is mutilated is a disgrace. The cinder paths that were laid at considerable expense have been perverted to the use of milkmen and cows, and even private carriages, so that they are not in fit condition for pedestrians. The trespassing should be summarily stopped. Let the councilmen of the locality take a hand.

—Edsall's advertising space this week is mostly used in advertising Doane & Edsall's immense stock of new fall and winter dress shoes, which they claim surpasses anything this side of New York, and in many cases compares favorably with some of the largest houses there. Edsall says he can always make it to the interest of purchasers to buy their dry and fancy goods, carpets, etc., at his store.

—"The Voodoo; or, A Lucky Charm" is the title of a bright new musical comedy that Frank W. Sanger and Gus Bothner are starring Thomas E. Murray in this season. Mr. Murray is well remembered the country over through his long connection as the bright particular light of the late Murray and Murphy "Our Irish Visitors" combination, in which he starred for over seven years under J. M. Hill's management. "The Voodoo" will be given at Music Hall next Tuesday evening.

—Among the new musical comedies that are bidding for public favor this season is Frank W. Sanger and Gus Bothner's production called "The Voodoo; or, A Lucky Charm". Thomas E. Murray who will be remembered for his long connection with "Our Irish Visitors" combination is being starred the piece. The story of the comedy deals with Voodooism, a certain superstition which still exists, to a great degree among the negro element in the Southern States and West Indies. The play has been well received and highly spoken of everywhere presented. It will be presented at Music Hall, next Tuesday evening at the usual prices.

YEARLY MEETING IN PLAINFIELD.

Seventh-Day Baptists from All Over, Come to Town.

The yearly meeting of the Seventh-Day Baptist churches in this district, is being held to-day in the Seventh-Day Baptist church in this city. Members from the various churches in this State and New York are present, the attendance being very large.

A quartette consisting of Miss Nancy Randolph, Miss Nettie Titsworth, Harry Maxson and Frank Clawson, rendered excellent music at this morning's session. Miss Jessie Utter presided at the organ.

On the platform were the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, pastor of the church, the Rev. I. L. Cottrell, of Shiloh, and the Rev. Mr. Livermore of New Market.

The Rev. I. L. Cottrell preached the sermon which was both forcible and impressive. Dr. Lewis had charge of the service and made the opening prayer after a selection by the choir. He then conducted the responsive reading, which was taken from the 43d page and 29th selection of the church hymnal.

The Rev. I. L. Cottrell then read the Scripture, taking the 23d of Luke, 1-28 verses. After a prayer by the Rev. Mr. Livermore and singing by the congregation, Dr. Lewis made the announcements for the week and introduced Mr. Cottrell who preached from the 11th verse of the 23d of Luke—"And Herod with his men of war set Jesus at Naught."

At the conclusion of the sermon the Rev. Mr. Burdick, of New York, administered the ordinance of baptism.

The services will be continued this evening.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mr. Keyes of Brooklyn will be present at the meeting of the W. C. T. U. this evening.

Mrs. John Heyl Vincent, wife of the Bishop, returned home yesterday from her visit to Plainfield friends.

W. P. Hendeson, instructor in languages at Leal's school, is in attendance at the great foot-ball game at Springfield to-day.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Ross, of 112 Grant avenue, will spend next week in New York, attending the wedding of Mr. Ross's sister Hattie.

Voorhees VanVliet is better from his stroke of paralysis. He now recognizes members of his family, and neighbors. There are chances of his recovery.

Mrs. Joseph W. Yates and Miss Kathie Yates, who have been visiting Mrs. Yates's son Samuel Yates and his family at Denver, are expected home next week.

A lad coming from school the other day was overheard comparing some of the Plainfield clergy thus: Positive, Goodrich; comparative, Richardson; superlative, Richards.

The many warm friends of Mrs. Wallace L. Serrell are rejoiced to know that she is to spend the entire winter in Plainfield, where as Miss Fannie Halt she was a reigning favorite. She is a guest at the Serrell home on West Front street, where her bright little babe is the pet and pride of the household. Her husband is kept by his business interests in the West.

Miss Burr, of LaGrande avenue, entertained a party of friends Thursday evening. Progressive whist was the chief feature of the evening. Miss Patten, of Plainfield, and Mr. Bauchelle, of Elizabeth, took first prizes, and Miss Honegger and Mr. Fritts each obtaining a "booby". Among those present were: Miss Bauchelle, of Elizabeth, Miss Patten, Miss Bowers, Miss Crane, Miss Lowrie, Miss Ross, Miss Thorne, Miss Honegger, Miss Green, Miss Saltzman, Miss Covert, Miss Holmes and Miss Abbott, of Plainfield; Miss Sackett of New York; Messrs. A. Fritts, A. Hiarichs, H. Patten, F. Smith, H. Williams, Dr. Baker, H. Lowrie, E. French, C. Faber, G. Drayton, V. Rockwell, M. Day, A. Freeman and G. Stevens, of Plainfield; Mr. Ingalls of Verona; and Messrs. C. Cree, M. Bauchelle and G. Allen, of Elizabeth. Informality reigned supreme, and a most genuine good time was enjoyed by all.

"THE GROWING SENTIMENT."

Democrats All Over Join With THE PRESS in Support of Speaker Lane.

(From The New York Evening Post.)

A growing sentiment exists among Union county (N. J.) Democrats that to Thomas F. Lane of Summit belongs the Speakership honor of the next Assembly, and the county partisans will urge in every way his election. Lane won his re-election this year, they assert, in spite of tremendous opposition from the time he went in for the nomination until Election Day. Union county Democrats say that for many reasons their representative is entitled to the Speakership chair. They believe he has much executive ability, and urge that his service to the party also entitles him to consideration.

Regeneration.

To secure a normal and regular tissue change throughout the body use BRANDETH'S PILLS. This tissue metamorphosis consists in constantly proceeding waste of tissue and its regeneration. BRANDETH'S PILLS are the best solvent of the products of disintegration of the tissues and increases their elasticity. They are an alterative and eliminative remedy, which allay irritation and remove obstruction by aiding nature and are of great benefit in cases of temporary and habitual constipation, torpid liver, biliousness, headache, indigestion, rheumatism and diseases arising from an impure state of the blood.

BRANDETH'S PILLS are purely vegetable, absolutely harmless and safe to take at any time.

PLAINFIELD AGAINST ITSELF.

That's the Opening Game in the Bowling Series.

The schedule for the Elizabeth Journal Bowling League series of 1892-93 has been arranged. It provides for seventy-two games to be rolled, or sixteen games by each team.

Tuesday, Nov. 29, has been selected as the opening date, on which evening the Arthur Kulls and the Alcyones will contest on the former's alleys, and the C. Y. M. L. and the Crescents, both of Plainfield, on the latter's alleys.

Games at the rate of four each week will be rolled, which will bring the series to a close the last week in March.

The schedule has not yet been declared official and to provide for any absolutely necessary changes the schedule committee will meet at the Journal office next Monday evening, Nov. 21, from 8 to 8:30 o'clock, when clubs who desire changes made may present their objections.

Copies of the games scheduled have been sent to each club, and the games scheduled for clubs who do not send representatives on Monday evening will then be declared official.

Copies of the constitution, by-laws and rules of the official schedule will be in readiness next week and will be mailed to each club in the League.

How Somerville Celebrated.

The Democrats of Somerville had a jubilation Wednesday night, celebrating the election of the Democratic candidate to the presidency. At an early hour the streets were thronged with people awaiting the great event promised. A huge bonfire was built in front of the County House, and blazed cherrily for two hours, while bombs, rockets, Roman candles and colored fires illuminated the surrounding heavens. Two bands of music and one drum corps, accompanied by myraids of small boys with horns and trumpets, added to the din. Inside the wigwam the Hon. James J. Bergen talked to a large crowd, telling them how thankful they ought to be that the people's party had won. He was frequently interrupted by applause and a large horn carried by Louis Wittnebert, an old-time Democrat, who in celebration of the victory has cut a four years' crop of whiskers and hair and sported a silk hat as a side feature. The first blast of the horn caused a gentle smile to drift across the usually passive face of the speaker, and with each successive blast of the horn the smile grew broader. This only proves with what enthusiasm the penned up Democrats unloosed themselves.

The smoke hangs over the town so thick that one can scarcely see the paper he is writing on, and the victorious shouts of the half-delirious multitude is wafted to one's ears often and intense.

Three young Republicans were compelled to furnish motive power and wheel their more fortunate fellows for five blocks between lines of shouting cheering people. The wheelbarrows were gaily decorated with flags and bunting, and the Democrats occuying the perches of victory held aloft a banner bearing the words "Four, four, four years more".

The loser in the bet made one week before election in which he was to roll in the mud for a block, and not materalize. He squaled and "set up" the victor in a handsome manner. This, together with his other losses, makes a neat little thing for the man who had "the dead cinch" to be out of pocket.

The American Institute Fair.

As the time approaches for the closing of the American Institute's sixty-first exhibition, it is well to remember that the announced time is December 10. The fair has done well, and the exhibition hall on Third avenue near Sixty-third street is a resort where there is always an interested and sociable audience willing to be benefited by explanations of what is to be seen and amused at the variety of exhibits and to enjoy the good music every afternoon and evening. The many attractions appeal to every one. The Institute gives its fair on the broad principle of bringing together the best novelties of mechanical art, household goods, food products and the most important improvements and inventions, and the fair is open daily from 10 a. m. until 10 p. m.

Donation to a Worthy Pastor.

Pastor Franklin G. Warnick's people know how to encourage him in a way that he will ever appreciate.

Last evening at the close of the prayer service a large number of the church and congregation, led by Mrs. Wm. Manning, followed the pastor and wife to the parsonage, where they loaded the large table with provisions for the winter.

The friends spent an hour in music and song, after which lemonade and cake were served. The company then retired, leaving the pastor and his good companion to enjoy the many tokens of their appreciation and love for his services.

A Worthy Object.

The teachers and pupils of Warren Union mission will give to-morrow afternoon a Thanksgiving donation to the Children's Home. Individual gifts from any one interested in the home may be taken to the mission at the regular Sunday-school session at 2:30 p. m.

A Man Well-known to the Theatrical Profession Tells His Story.

The following story is told by N. Helmer of Helmer & Lietz, Prigmakers, No. 125 Fourth Avenue, New York. "I have had a combination of catarrh and bronchitis from my early infancy. Two years ago the symptoms became greatly aggravated, and I was afraid of running into consumption. Have tried inhalations, douches and medicines numerous, but none with as marked success as Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, coupled with the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery (for the Bronchitis and the blood). Having used two bottles of the 'Catarrh Remedy' and a like amount of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' I find myself a well man."

The makers of Dr. Sage's Remedy lose $500 if you're not cured of Catarrh.

Dr. Sage's Remedy has proved a cure for 99 out of 100 cases of Catarrh in the Head, and its makers can afford to take the risk of your being the one hundredth.

The only question is—are you willing to make the test, if the makers are willing to take the risk?

If so, the rest is easy. You pay your druggist 50 cents and the trial begins.

If you're wanting the $500 you'll get something better—a cure!

NOT HER FIRST OFFENSE.

The Fugitive Nurse Girl Had Stolen from Other People.

Minnie Morris, the colored nurse girl whose escape from jail after arrest for stealing Mrs. Beerbower's jewelry was told of exclusively in these columns yesterday, has not yet been recaptured by the police, but is believed to have left the State.

It transpires that Minnie is an old offender. During her employment at Hotel Grenada, six weeks ago, before she went to the City Hotel, she stole two overcoats and a diamond collar button. She also stole the skirt of a fine new dress from a chambermaid and wore it to a colored ball in the Crescent rink. The chambermaid had wanted to wear the garment to the same ball, and was very angry when she saw the missing finery on another girl. She made Minnie take the skirt off then and there. The girl was to be arrested for her thefts, but landlord Wallace V. Miller relented owing to her mother's pleadings and let her go with a warning.

Bound Brook Democrats Celebrate.

Bound Brook was ablaze with red light and enthusiasm last night over the great Democratic cyclone which swept over this grand country of ours on the 8th of November last. It was the intention of the managers to have a celebration over the event on Tuesday last, but the rain prevented it. Last night, despite the inclement weather, the "faithful" determined to have the "good time" promised, and they had it. Over 150 horsemen were in line, and some 500 torch-bearers, with transparencies. There was the ancient Salt River boat with prominent Republicans riding in it. Farm wagons, bearing inscriptions favorable to the Democracy and people, were also in the line. A brass band and two drum corps enlivened the occasion with fine music. Rockets, red fire and other illuminations helped to make the occasion one of enthusiasm. The muddy condition of the streets did not deter the enthusiastic Democrats from shortening the line of march, which was a long one. The decoration of public places and private residences were numerous and fine. The most prominent was that of the Mansion House, where Johnny Force, son of mine host, James H. Force, did himself credit. It was a beautiful sight when the processionists passed over the iron bridge across the Raritan river. The brass cannon, belonging to the Democrats of Plainfield, belched forth thunder notes in honor of the event, under the management of John Bowman. The marshal of the evening was Andrew Algaire, and the management under Charley Hilpott. Everything passed off in a satisfactory manner, and the good citizens of Bound Brook are now expected to settle down to business.

The officers of the evening were:

Chief Marshal—J. Erwin Hilipot.

Assistant Marshals—Andrew Algaire, chairman of the Democratic committee; Frank Vreeland, Frank Bonney, A. Hodge, Wm. Schuess, Thos. Rielley.

Among those who had fine illuminations and decorations were Richard Brokaw, cashier of National Bank, mayor Perry, ex-mayor Whiting, Bound Brook Hotel, Middlebrook Hotel, Theodore Hodge, Frank Vreeland, John Donohue, Willian Dooley, Thomas Reilly.

A feature of the parade was a banner wagon from Somerville under the guidance of a son of ex-sheriff McMurtrie.

A number of prominent Republicans illuminated and decorated their residences.

Miss Julia Fitzpatrick, an ardent Democrat, joined in the procession on horseback.

A feature of the parade was a wagon bearing the huge legend "Mason Must Go!" This referred to W. B. R. Mason, the Republican postmaster and editor of the Bound Brook Chronicle.

Dr. Hurlbut's Bible Anecdotes.

The Newark Advertiser is a great admirer of the Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut of this city. It says of the conferences, representing different phases of work, at the State Teachers' institute at Newark, that all were more or less technical except that led by the popular Plainfield clergyman, where many advanced ideas were presented, the most important of which was to have the schools graded and to promote the children at stated times. The need of using the Bible in the study of the lesson was referred to in the following illustration: Dr. Hurlbut was called on to review the lesson at a school he was visiting. Not seeing any Bibles around, he asked the superintendent for one. None was to be had in the entire room. Dr. Hurlbut said: "I noticed one in the pulpit this morning; will you please get it for me?"

The superintendent remarked: "But it is a large one."

"All the better; it can be seen by all and they will be surprised at seeing the book in the school."

The superintendent afterward meekly said: "Come and see us next year and I promise that you will find Bibles enough here then."

Helping the Unfortunate.

A man and his wife and boy from Newark, the boy with an arm broken, applied to overseer-of-the-poor Bauersachs of the borough, yesterday for assistance. He provided them a place to sleep, and a good supper, and the good-hearted letter-carriers and clerks of the post-office made up a purse and purchased tickets for them to go to their home in Newark. But at train time they did n't show up, and their tickets still await them.

They left Newark to join the workingmen on the railroad near Somerville. Work soon gave out, and left them destitute. They walked through the terrible rain of yesterday afternoon all the way from Somerville. They were very anxious to reach Newark to have the boy's arm reset in the hospital. The fracture was not properly attended to.

I have been troubled with catarrh for 10 years and have tried a number of remedies, but got no relief until I purchased a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. I consider it the most reliable preparation for catarrh and cold in the head.—George E. Crandall, P. M., Quonochawntaug, Rhodg Island.

I was so much troubled with catarrh it seriously affected my voice. One bottle of Ely's Cream Balm did the work. My voice is fully restored.—S. F. Leguear, A. M., pastor of the Olivet Baptist church, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Country Circus in the City.

C. B. Jefferson, Klaw & Erlanger's "Country Circus" pitches its tent on the stage of the Broadway theater, Monday, Nov. 21, for a limited engagement. The presentation of this mammoth indoor entertainment on this date marks its second season in New York, and as it is generally conceded to be a show sui generis and of the first magnitude, an extensive patronage may be predicted. "The Country Circus" burst upon the metropolis just a year ago, and its varied and harmonious programme of comedy, spectacle and arenic programme considerately set a fad. This year new features have been added and there is promised one of the most gorgeous reproductions of a circus parade ever done on the stage. 500 people and 75 horses and ponies will be employed in this scene, and in the circus proper the greates performers of the foreign and domestic circuses will be seen in marvelous exploitations. Messrs. C. B. Jefferson, Klaw & Erlanger have spent $10,000 on this venture and the natural inference is that "The Country Circus" will be as big as its fame has foreshadowed. A special matinee will be given on Thanksgiving Day.

Want More of the Trolley Transit.

Already they want more of the electric road in North Plainfield. They have n't yet begun to lay the tracks on Somerset street before the people of the Notch and Washingtonville are desirous of having the line extended to French's grist mill at the cross roads in the Notch. All the property-owners between Johnston's drive (the present proposed terminus) and the mill have signed a petition for such a purpose.

Buy Your Clothing at a Clothing Store, and Your Toys at a Toy Store.

When you see a person with a clothing bundle under his arm and a checker board or other toy in his hand you may be sure he has not been to Watson's, as there are no presents of any kind displayed in any of their Broad or Market street windows, Newark, to attract customers.

Sensational advertising, gifts, prizes, fares paid, discounts to clubs, expensive signs on fences, personal solicitation and commissions to runners are not needed to sell the kind of clothing Watson & Co. get up, and if they gave presents to all their customers it would compel them to raise their low range of prices fully twenty per cent., besides many would not like to be seen carrying these trashy toys home; and twenty per cent. added to their prices would mean $18 for the suits they now sell for $15, and so on through their entire stock.

Better buy your clothing at net cash prices and your toys where you like, as you may then save a big discount, or make your own commission.

The truth is that correct cut, perfect fitting clothing, made up as it should be, is in demand as soon as finished, and if the prices are low and uniform to all alike, needs very little in the way of advertising to sell it. Watson & Co., from their long experience in the making of clothing, know how to select a very high class of cutters and have connections in New York to furnish them all the latest tailoring designs long before they reach Newark and with the immense stock they carry are able to offer such attractive styles that they practically have no competitors in the finer grades of garments.

Try them once, if you are not already a customer of this popular clothing house, and see how their hand-cut garments will improve your dress appearance.—Newark Item.

The Only One.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway is "the only one" running solid vestibuled electric-lighted and steam-heated trains between Chicago, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Milwaukee, LaCrosse, Winona, St. Paul and Minneapolis, making direct connection at Council Bluffs and Omaha with all lines for all points in Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Oregon, Washington, Nevada and California; at St. Paul, with all lines for all points in the Northwest and Puget Sound.

It now operates over 6,000 miles of thoroughly equipped road, in Illinois, Wisconsin, Northern Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Iowa, South and North Dakota.

There will be Holy Communion at 7:30 a. m., morning prayer, litany and sermon at 11 a. m., Sunday-school at 3:30 p. m., and evening prayer at 4:15. Two free stages will leave the railway station on North avenue in the morning, for the church, at 10:30, and return at the conclusion of the services.

Who Was It?

The historic conundrum "Who struck Billy Patterson?" is cast into the shade by the puzzle "Who Mullins was arrested?" James says 't was John, and John says 't was James. The arrest took place two weeks ago, for drunkenness, and the culprit paid his fine. The prisoner gave his name as James, but the only James in town says that 't was n't he. So the blame has been laid on John, but the only John says 't was some one else.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following ordinance has been introduced before the common council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the council to adopt the same at a meeting to be held at the council chamber, No. 7 Park avenue, Plainfield, N. J., on Monday, December 5, 1892, at the hour of 8 o'clock p. m., at which time and place prior to the adoption of said ordinance, said ordinance will be considered by the common council and all persons interested may be heard before the common council.

F. W. RUNYON, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., November 9, 1892.

AN ORDINANCE

To lay out and open Sycamore street from the northerly side of East Fifth street to the southerly side of East Fourth street.

The inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, by their common council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That Sycamore street in the city of Plainfield from the northwesterly side of East Fifth street to the southeasterly side of East Fourth street be laid out and opened so that said street shall be of the uniform width of twenty-five (25) feet on each side of the centre line thereof, which said centre line is described as follows:

Beginning at a point in the northwesterly side line of East Fifth street, said point being distant twenty-four and eight-tenth (24.8) feet in a magnetic course of north forty five degrees and forty-three minutes west (N. 45 deg. 43 min. W.) over lands of Elizabeth Chapin, Charles H. Hand, Agnes Littell, Catherine Lynch, Margaret Thatcher, William H. Brower, Justus H. Cooley, The Plainfield Bicycle club and Michael Quinn, a distance of three hundred and sixty-two and twenty-one one hundredths (362.21) feet to a point in the southeasterly side line of East Fourth street; said point being distant twenty-four and seventy-nine one-hundredths (24.79) feet in a course of South forty-five degrees and forty-three minutes east (S. 45 deg. 43 min. E.) from a stake in the centre line of East Fourth street and there to end.

The land to be taken, in addition to the land already dedicated to the public, consists of a narrow strip beginning at the intersection of the northerly side of East Fifth street with the easterly side of said proposed street, and running thence northwesterly along the said line of said proposed street seventy and eighty-five one-hundredths (70.85) feet to a point in line of lands now or formerly of Charles H. Hand; thence along the said Hand's westerned line south thirty-nine degrees and thirty-two minutes west (S. 39 degrees 32 minutes W.) a distance of ten and eight one hundredths (10.08) feet to a point; thence south forty-five degrees and fifty-four minutes east, (S. 45 degrees 54 minutes E.) a distance of sixty-nine and forty-eight one-hundredths (69.48) feet to a point in the northwesterly side line of East Fifth street; thence along said northwesterly side line of East Fifth street north forty-eight degrees and eight minutes east, (N. 48 degrees 8 minutes E.) a distance of nine and eight-four one-hundredths (9.84) feet to the place of beginning.

That the lands and real estate and the portions necessary therefor shall be taken and appropriated for the said laying out and opening of Sycamore street as aforesaid, pursuant to the charter of the city of Plainfield and the general statutes in such case made and provided.

The land to be taken and the lines of said street as the same is hereinbefore ordered be laid out and opened are shown on a map on file with the City Clerk entitled "Application Map to Lay Out and Open Sycamore Street from the northerly side of East Fifth street to the southerly side of East Fourth street, city of Plainfield, N. J., April 1892." Fees—$5.

WAR ECHOES.

Exciting Experience of Commander David Noyes.

One of the Most Popular G. A. R. Veterans in the Country.

A Wonderful Thing and We Believe It To Be True.

He escaped being killed in battle.

But he came dangerously near death since.

This in brief is the experience of Past-Commander David Noyes of Manchester, N. J.

That Mr. Noyes is a most popular and honored citizen is evident from the fact that he has been elected five different years commander of Reno Post, No. 84, G. A. R., that he is a Free Mason of high degree, a Justice of the Peace, Ruling Elder and Treasurer of the Presbyterian Church, a member of the Board of Education and has been sent as delegate to county, state and congressional conventions. The word of a man so highly honored at home must carry the greatest conviction and weight throughout the country. His story is interesting.

"For over 27 years, since the close of the late war I suffered from dyspepsia, paid out hundreds of dollars but got no relief.

"I suffered from heart disease for 6 years, was carried out of church and from my work three times, and for the past two years was unable to do anywork whatever.

HON. DAVID NOYES.

"I was told by my physician that I never could get well.

"I was also paralyzed on the right side from my hip down, and suffered severely with lumbago and a trembling of the hands.

"I took Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and feel entirely cured of all these troubles and feel like a well man.

"I could not sleep on my right side for years, now I can sleep well and eat anything.

"It has proved to be a wonderful remedy for me and I am a living witness to testify to the truth of my statement. It is the grandest medicine ever made, and all my friends are amazed at the cure."

Postmaster Edward F. Larrabee and Wm. Montgomery, master mechanic New Jersey Southern R. R., both of Manchester, N. J., have known Mr. Noyes for 25 years, and are familiar with all the facts about his wonderful recovery.

We can only say in commenting on this case, that it is truly marvellous what this remarkable remedy will do in curing disease. It certainly makes most astounding cures, and we do not wonder that, as druggists tell us, the demand for it among the sick is enormous. Its price is only $1, and it is purely vegetable and harmless. Another thing which gives the people the greatest confidence in it is that it is prepared by Dr. Greene, of 35 W. 14th Street, New York, who is an eminent specialist in nervous and chronic diseases. He can be consulted by all free of charge, personally or by letter.

SEVEN-ROOM COTTAGE.

Plans of a Neat, Convenient and Roomy Home.

Only Materials of the First Quality to Be Used in Its Construction—Its Cost Should Not Exceed Fifteen Hundred Dollars.

This is a very desirable, neat, convenient and roomy, yet cheap cottage. The plan has four good rooms downstairs and three above, besides the accessories, such as pantry, entrees and closets and a large attic over the kitchen, which could be finished and made into a good room if necessary. It has been erected and fully finished complete at Carthage, Ill., for a total cost of $1,500, including the foundation. Constructionally the house is of the best, the materials being of first-class quality.

The frame is of pine, sheathed with shiplap overlaid with paper. The outside finish is of pine with cypress siding on the sides and shingles of the same material on the gables.

Referring to the floor plans, the front entrance is found to be from a porch through the vestibule into the parlor or sitting-room. These rooms are each of good size. To the left of the sitting-room is a bedroom 11x13½ feet. The sitting-room and parlor are connected by wide sliding doors, enabling them to be thrown together on occasion. We pass from the sitting-room into the kitchen, which is quite large and intended to be used also as a dining-room. A bath-room and well-fitted pantry open off this room, and stairs to the cellar go down from here under the main flight, which rises from an entry between the kitchen and sitting-room and rear porch.

On the second floor a hall furnishes entrance to three well lighted and ventilated chambers of ample size.

The timbers are sound and well seasoned; sills 6x8; first floor joist 2x8, for entries and porches 2x8; second floor joist 2x10 for main house, and 2x6 for attic over kitchen; rafters, studding and collar beams 2x4. All to be spaced 16 inches from centers. The floor joists well bridged. The height of stories are for cellar, 6 feet 6 inches; first story, 9 feet 6 inches; second story, 8 feet 6 inches, in the clear. The floors throughout are of selected fence flooring, well seasoned and dry when laid. The doors are all stock made. Outside and sliding doors 1⅝ inches thick, all other interior doors 1⅜ inches thick, all principal doors having transoms over them. All windows, except sash, to be hung with weights. The plastering is of three coat work of the best materials and workmanship. The interior finish for all of first floor is of S. Y. pine, smooth wrought and finished natural. Drawers are placed under the projecting window in the sitting-room and the recessed window in the bedroom. A sink and drain table are placed in the kitchen. The finish of the second floor and closets is of good ordinary white pine and painted. The hardware is of best quality and workmanship throughout. The sliding doors are hung with Prescott hangers. The painting outside is three coat work, done in best manner, of best materials, hand mixed, of colors selected to best harmonize with the surroundings. E. A. PAYNE.

HOMESTEADERS' PLIGHT

Leaders Denounced for the Collapse of the Strike.

A STRUGGLE FOR EXISTENCE NOW

Starvation Staring Many of the Strikers in the Face—Only a Small Proportion Can Hope to Re-enter the Carnegie Mills—Non-Union Men Will Not be Displaced.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Nov. 21.—Now that the agony is over, and the great Homestead strike has been declared off by the strikers' advisory board, the men are not backward in expressing their opinions of the men who have posed as leaders, confidently promising a victory when they knew for a certainty that the battle was hopelessly lost. These men are furiously denounced.

According to Supt. Wood, of the Homestead works, not more than 800 or 900 of the total number of employes will be able to secure employment.

Before the break of last Thursday there were left in Homestead 2,800 of the original 3,800 men who were locked out on June 25.

Of these 2,800 men, 2,200 were mechanics and laborers, and 600 were Amalgamated Association men. Up to date, 1,100 men have applied for work, and it is estimated that not more than 350 have been supplied with work.

The question of declaring the mill open began to agitate the minds of certain Amalgamated men as soon as it became apparent that the mechanics intended breaking away in a body. Not only the rank and file but many of the leaders recognized that without the numerical aid of the mechanics and laborers they could not hope to carry the day.

Money, or lack of it, also became an important factor. The failure to receive promised money of large amounts, together with the unfulfilment of other promises, all came in for consideration. They could not subsist upon promises and so told their leaders, who, seeing that it would be useless to try and hold the men together longer took steps to place their brethren upon equal footing with the mechanics in the grand rush for work.

Saturday's meeting was attended exclusively by Amalgamated Association members, much to the chagrin and disappointment of the sympathetic mechanics, who were turned aside. They turned to their homes in silence, hope dead within them. The meeting was not a large one, and considerable surprise attended the announced resignation of Chairman Crawford.

When his resignation had been accepted a striker arose and moved that the lockout be declared at an end and that the men be allowed to seek employment in the Homestead mill.

Discussion of this question continued until 6 p. m., when the meeting adjourned without result. Yesterday the same question was taken up, but those for and against such a move were afraid to force the question to a vote, so evenly were they divided. Only about 200 men attended the meeting.

Those opposed to bringing the fight to an end struggled hard to prevent a ballot, pleading, arguing, and predicting the disintegration of the Amalgamated Association.

These patriotic steel workers, who have repeatedly stated that they would prefer nakedness and starvation rather than defeat, were in the minority, and they knew it. Yet they pleaded with their brethren to stand firm, if for no other reason than to show the world that they had not forgotten the men who were lying in prison cells awaiting trial.

It was of no avail. The question was put, the vote being a standing one. When Vice-President Carney announced the result, 101 to 91, there was no joyous outbreak.

For a few minutes the men sat and stared at each other. Then followed angry denunciations. The men slowly left the hall in twos and threes. They seemed loth to leave the building, the very rafters of which have quivered with the declaration, made a thousand times, that victory was theirs if they would only be patient.

Last evening the men stood in small groups about the streets, discussing the plights they found themselves in. With winter upon them, they see nothing in store now but a struggle for existence, which may assume the proportions of a famine.

The oft-repeated declarations of the Carnegie officials that the non-union men will not be displaced to give employment to the strikers gives absolutely no hope for 2,000 of the defeated steel workers.

REJOICING AT BEAVER FALLS.

The Settlement of the Labor Troubles at the Carnegie Mills the Cause.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Nov. 21.—There is great rejoicing here on all sides at the action of the three lodges of the Amalgamated Association in declaring the strike at the Carnegie mills off and of the Carnegie people in reinstating all of the men who applied for work.

The men themselves feel as happy as anybody and are being congratulated on all sides. About 600 men are employed by the Carnegie Company at this place.

MRS. AUGUST BELMONT.

Death of the Widow of the Financier—She Was a Leader of Society.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Mrs. August Belmont, widow of the financier and turfman, died yesterday afternoon at her home, No. 109 Fifth avenue. Her death had been momentarily looked for, and when it came she was surrounded by her family.

Mrs. Belmont had not been in good health since the tragic death of her youngest son, Raymond, on Jan. 31, 1887.

Mrs. Belmont was the daughter of Commodore Matthew Galbraith Perry, and a member of one of the old historical families of America. Her grandfather was Christopher Raymond Perry, who served in the navy during the Revolutionary War. Christopher Perry married, in 1784, and the male members of his family have served in the navy with distinction.

The two most notable were Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry, the hero of Lake Erie, who was Mrs. Belmont's uncle, and Commodore Matthew Perry, her father.

When August Belmont met Miss Perry her father was commandant at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Mr. Belmont was 35 years old, and Miss Perry but 18. Miss Perry had many admirers, but she gave her hand to August, who was then but little known.

She was a good conversationalist, a patron of art, and a fine musician. These qualities, together with the wealth of her husband made her a leader in the world of fashion.

At her bedside when she died were her children, ex-Congressman Belmont, August Belmont, jr., Oliver P. H. Belmont, and Mrs. S. S. Howland.

The funeral services will be held at the church of the Ascension to-morrow.

GLEASON'S RE-ELECTION.

Residents of Long Island City in a Fever of Excitement Over the Matter.

LONG ISLAND CITY, Nov. 21.—Residents of this city, and more particularly those of the anti-Gleason faction, have not yet recovered from the bombshell hurled into the political camp by City Clerk Burke, an appointee of Mayor Gleason, declaring his superior re-elected by a majority of 732 votes.

Everybody had accepted the recent election returns as final, Gleason's defeat for re-election as Mayor settled and Sanford's triumph over him complete.

The matter will undoubtedly be carried to the courts, but as Gleason, on the strength of the clerk's certificate, has been sworn in, he has the possession advantage of the matter.

It is understood that Gleason claims the office on the ground that nearly a thousand defective ballots were cast for his opponent, Sanford.

Sanford was the candidate of the Jefferson Democracy. When City Clerk Burke counted the defective ballots where the names of the candidates were written on the ballots instead of being printed, he found 1,000 of them on which Sanford's name was written in many ways. Nearly all were wrong.

On many were written Santford, on many others Sandford, Sansford and Sanaford. After placing these various names in their proper columns and footing up the totals, City Clerk Burke found that Gleason's ballot showed a majority over Sanford's proper ballot of 732 votes.

Sanford is in Washington with his family. He went there to recuperate over his supposed victory over Gleason.

A BRUTAL MURDER.

An Old Woman at Farmers' Valley, Pa., Found Hanging.

BRADFORD, Pa., Nov. 21.—Mrs. Lucette Grossmeyer, aged 50 years, was found hanging in her cow stable at Farmers' Valley yesterday. For a time it was supposed to be a case of suicide. Investigation, however, brought to light a most brutal murder.

The old lady had gone to the stable to milk her cow. The murderer, evidently knowing her habits, was lying in wait for her. As she entered the stable door she was seized from behind and beaten and choked into insensibility.

A large pool of blood was found on the floor; marks of fingers were on her throat, and frightful bruises from blows upon her head and face were plainly discernible. Her clothing was nearly torn from her body, and her hair was matted with filth from the stable floor.

After committing the deed the murderer hanged the old lady by the neck from a rafter.

Mrs. Grossmeyer's husband died last year. Owing to domestic difficulties, the old couple had not lived together for a long time.

Mrs. Grossmeyer had much difficulty in getting possession of her husband's farm, which was claimed by her son. This son, Ralph Grossmeyer, was at Smithport, but his present whereabouts is unknown. He was the only enemy of the old lady. The coroner is now investigating.

O'Connor Quits His Barrow.

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 21.—Ex-Assemblyman James K. O'Connor is back in this city. He reached St. Johnsville on Saturday, wheeling a barrel of apples from this city to New York in payment of his novel election bet. At that place he received a telegram stating that his father was very ill. If his father's condition is materially changed for the better to-morrow, Mr. O'Connor will resume his toilsome journey.

Rabbis Here to Begin To-morrow.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Nov. 21.—Gen. R. T. Dyrenforth and his party of government rainmakers will begin their experiments here to-morrow if the weather is favorable for the work. Batteries have been planted on a ridge three miles north of the city, from which place the experiments will be conducted, and there are also large quantities of the new roselite powder being mixed and the gas tanks filled.

ECHOES OF THE GAME.

Nothing But Praise for Harvard for Her Plucky Fight.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 21.—Yale men are still rejoicing over the victory over Harvard on the football field Saturday, and it cannot be denied that they have not yet recovered from the surprise they received, for they firmly believed that they had a walkover with the Harvards this year. The odds offered by their friends in the betting indicates just how sanguine they all felt.

Well may the Yale men be proud of their victory, for there is no denying that it was the hardest and most scientific football battle on record, and Harvard proved to be no mean opponent, but on the contrary developed unexpected strength, and her team, although beaten, was one of the best that has represented the college in years.

The game throughout was really a contest between coachers.

An old foot-ball player, referring to the game, said:

"What a struggle it was! They fought so evenly that the great mass of humanity looking on was kept in a continual state of exuberance and violent emotion.

"But the end came, and Harvard had to succumb. Not, however, until irreparable injury had been done to her ranks through injuries to Emmons and Upton. Both men retired near the end of the second half. Who knows but what the score would have been a tie and Yale would not be reveling in the joy of victory had not these men been injured?

"Those who had predicted that Yale would win by a score of 30 to 0 had little knowledge of the strength of Harvard. Those who had wagered their money at three and two to one felt so shaky as the game progressed that they would liked to have gone after a "bracer" had it not been that they were penned in so they could not move.

"Harvard's defeat can be laid primarily to the absence of Upton and Emmons. The former was injured first, and retired when the second half was about half over. Emmons had his leg injured in the second half, but after a short delay he hobbled along on one leg and continued to play."

THE MIJARES INCIDENT.

No Action Yet Decided Upon by Our State Department.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The morning mail which arrived at the Department of Sate contained no letter from United States Minister Scruggs, but there was a communication from Consul-General Hanna at Laguayra.

The Consul-General reported the facts in the case of the futile attempt of the local authorities to arrest Mirajes on board the "Red D" line steamer Philadelphia, and their refusal to surrender the vessel's papers.

The writer kept strictly within the lines of his duty as a consular officer, and made no attempt to discuss the diplomatic aspect of the case.

At present the Department of State has not determined upon any action in the case, and indeed none seems to be called for just now. If there should be any trouble experienced by the steamship company, when the vessel returns to Venezuela, the department will be prepared to meet it.

News has reached the Navy Department that the United States steamer Kearsarge, which has been up the Orinoco river in connection with the detention of United States Consul Underwood, and was the only United States vessel in Venezuelan waters, has gone on a cruise in the West Indian waters, having sailed from Trinidad recently.

SHE WAS SHOT BY A HUNTER.

Mamie Jackson's Death May Start a Crusade Against Sportsmen.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 21.—The carelessness of sportsmen who have thronged the surrounding country since the opening of the rabbit season, has been the cause of numerous complaints, but the terrible affair at Lincoln Park, Saturday, will probably cause many of the land owners in this vicinty to forbid hunting on their property in the future.

Mamie Jackson, about ten years' of age, while playing near her parent's house near Lincoln Park was shot and instantly killed by an unknown person, but now supposed to be a hunter. Her body was completely riddled with shot.

Decision in the Hatch Cases.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 21.—United States District Judge Hanford has rendered a decision in the now famous Hatch cases, in which the children of Ezra Hatch are suing for alleged rights to land owned by their father, now the main portion of the city of Everett, which is important as establishing the right of the children to wage suit. The case is now on trial, and is attracting considerable attention, as the amount involved is over $1,000,000.

Threw a Lighted Lamp at His Wife.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 21.—Donald Campbell, a silk dyer, employed by Banford Brothers, threw a lighted lamp at his wife last night. The lamp struck the woman in the back of the neck, and set fire to her clothing. Campbell then ran out of the house, but some passers-by heard the woman's cries, and entered the house and put out the flames. Mrs. Campbell's hair was completely burned off, and her body was terribly scorched.

Fault Found With Diana's Shape.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21. — The statue of Diana the huntress, which was brought here from Madison Square building in New York, and which now pones on the dome of the Agricultural building, is to be broken into pieces, thrown into the melting pot and cast again. Artists who are employed in the Exposition buildings intimate that the goddess' shape is not proper, is not artistic and is not upon the model designed by Sculptor St. Gaudens.

HIS QUADRUPLE CRIME

Terrible Deed of an Insane German in Chicago.

HE NARROWLY ESCAPED LYNCHING.

Hermann Siegler Shot Wife, Mother-in-Law, Father-in-Law, and a Policeman—Two Dead, the Others Probably Fatally Hurt—An Angry Crowd Attempts to Kill the Assassin.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—The later annals of Chicago can record no more horrible crime nor one accompanied by more sensational details than that which brought death into a two-story frame cottage in the northwestern part of this city last evening. By the acts of a man, who is said by some to be insane, a double murder was committed, two people seriously if not fatally wounded and the murderer narrowly escaped violence at the hands of a thousand citizens who live near the scene of the tragedy.

Herman Geigler, a German, lived with his wife and three children at the residence of his wife's parents, Henry and Caroline Siles on Paulina street. Nothing unusual was noticed in his actions until yesterday afternoon, when, gun in hand, he entered the parlor where his wife and children were. One of the little ones saw him first and began to scream.

Mrs. Siles, the mother-in-law, hurried into the room and as she entered Siegler attempted to elevate the gun as though he intended to shoot her. She rushed up to him and throwing her arms about his neck, tried to take the gun from him. He pushed the aged woman aside violently, then he raised the shot gun and pointing the barrel almost directly against her left breast, fired before she could offer any resistance.

She sank to the floor dead. Mrs. Siegler, in the meantime, had carried the children to the house of a neighbor, and on returning encountered her husband, who fired at her, several of the shot taking effect in her neck and breast.

The noise down stairs aroused Mr. Siles, and he descended into the hallway. As he stepped from the lower step Siegler met him. Again raising the gun, which he had previously reloaded, he fired. Mr. Siles received the full charge at close range.

It is believed that Siegler then discharged the other barrel of his gun in his father-in-law's face, for portions of his neck and right cheek were torn away.

By this time a crowd had gathered outside, and as Officer Simonson came up Siegler appeared in the doorway. The people fell back, and as the officer drew his revolver he ordered Siegler to surrender.

The latter's reply was a shot from his gun, but he shot high. Simonson returned the fire, and Siegler staggered back with a bullet in his side. He succeeded in firing another shot, which slightly wounded the officer, before he was overpowered.

As Siegler was being taken to the patrol wagon threats of violence were heard on every hand and a number of revolvers were drawn by citizens who were anxious to get hold of the murderer. Repeatedly Siegler was struck by men whose interference could not be prevented by the police.

Siegler was at last placed in the wagon and the horses were whipped into a gallop. At the station he made a statement which was short, incoherent and indicative of insanity. He was afterwards taken to the hospital. The extent of his wounds is not known.

NOT BIELA'S COMET.

Prof. Boss Says It's Going Away from Us and is Now 250,000,000 Miles Distant.

ALBANY, Nov. 21.—Prof. Lewis Boss, of the Ludley University, who has been watching the comet, whose alleged near approach to the earth has aroused the apprehensions of the nervous and timid, says that he is satisfied that the celebrated celestial wanderer with the nebulous caudal appendage is not only not the Biela comet, but that it is not even traveling in the track of the Biela comet, as was first supposed.

Moreover, Prof. Boss says that while he has not been able as yet to fix the orbit of the comet, he is satisfied that, instead of approaching the earth at the rate of 700 miles a second, and that night before last it was only 11,000,000 miles away, the comet is actually going away from the earth, and is now about 250,000,000 miles away.

As far as he can ascertain at present, the comet is a new one and is unknown to astronomers.

Four Thought to Have Perished.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 21.—The steamer Rosa Lee was burned at her wharf at 6 o'clock yesterday morning. The boat had got in from Ashport at 7:30, and the officers were just leaving her when the cry of fire was raised. The passengers and all above the deck got out in safety. A number of laboring men got on the boat at Ashport, and they were soon in a beastly state of intoxication. It is thought that four of these men were burned to death, as the engineer was not able to rouse them.

The New Duke of Marlborough.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The young Duke of Marlborough inherits the sporting proclivities of his late father. He has already declared his intention of increasing the racing stud he has inherited. His mother, who secured a divorce from the late Duke, again reigns at Blenheim, presiding over her son's establishment.

A Bad Smash-up in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21. — Through the blunder of some one there was a collision of two heavily laden freight trains on the Belt Line railway near the Arch avenue crossing yesterday. Three lives were lost and two men were injured so seriously that they may not recover.

Further Increase of Wages.

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 21. — Four more Rhode Island cotton mills have posted notices of increased wages to take effect the first week in December, while one factory grants an increase on Dec. 1 and another on Jan. 1.

A Slippery Prisoner Escapes.

WARSAW, N. Y., Nov. 21.—James Collins, who is under sentence to three years' imprisonment at Auburn prison, broke jail early yesterday morning and escaped. The job he accomplished is one of the cleverest on record.

One rounded teaspoonful of Cleveland's Baking Powder does more and better work than a heaping teaspoonful of any other. A large saving on a year's bakings.

The best known writers on domestic science, as Marion Harland, Mrs. McBride, Mrs. Parker and Emily Hayes, and teachers of cookery, as Mrs. Rorer, Mrs. Lincoln and Mrs. Dearborn, use and recommend Cleveland's Baking Powder.

HIERARCHS LEAVE FOR HOME.

Pleasant Termination of Their Conference in New York.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The Catholic archbishops who gathered here last week for conference have all, including Cardinal Gibbons, left the city for their homes.

Each archbishop, upon his arrival home, will prepare his pastoral, which will contain, in a general way, the proceedings of the conference, so far as they relate to his particular diocese.

After the closing session of the conference the archbishops had a dinner with Archbishop Corrigan. At the dinner Cardinal Gibbons thanked Archbishop Corrigan for his courtesy and hospitality to the members of the conference. Then Archbishop Corrigan stood up and proposed the health of Archbishop Ireland.

Archbishop Corrigan was the leader of the opposition among the hierarchy in this country to Archbishop Ireland's Faribault plan of education. It has been said that the relations between the two peralates were strained because of this difference.

LANCASHIRE'S COTTON STRIKE.

There is Now a Better Prospect for Its Settlement.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—There is now a better prospect for the settlement of the cotton strike, owing to the discovery that the operatives are willing to consider a proposal for a temporary reduction of wages concurrent with the placing of the mills on short time. The proposal was mooted before the strike, but neither side appeared willing to initiate the offer.

Mr. Mawdsley, the Secretary of the Spinners' Association, says he will consider the matter if the masters propose it. The employes in South Lancashire are willing to effect a compromise, but those in North Lancashire are unwilling. The latter, however, are likely to submit to pressure from the North Lancashire manufacturers.

ASKS FOR A RECONSIDERATION.

Captain Meeker Applies to Have His Sentence Set Aside.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Capt. Edward H. Meeker, of the Marine Corps, who was recently convicted by a court-martial of neglect of duty and sentenced to one year's suspension on half pay, has made application for a reconsideration of his case.

The neglect of which Capt. Meeker was adjudged guilty occurred at Laguayra, Venezuela, during the recent revolutionary troubles in that country.

Capt. Meeker was sent by Admiral Walker with a squad of marines to guard the United States Consulate.

A servant girl in Consul Hanna's household smuggled liquor to the marines, and some of them became drunk in the temporary absence of Capt. Meeker. For his failure to keep his men from indulging in the liquor Capt. Meeker was court-martialed.

SHOT DOWN BY HIS WIFE'S SIDE.

Muhringer's Assailant Then Put a Bullet Through His Own Heart.

READING, Pa., Nov. 21.—John S. Heller shot Sebastian Muhringer through the head in Skegerwald's Hotel on Mount Penn last evening, and then put a bullet through his own heart. The shooting was done in the presence of a number of people.

Muhringer's wife stood beside him when he was shot down.

Heller's motive is unknown. He is what is known as a "pow-wow" doctor, and some think he was incensed by sneering remarks Muhringer had made about his cures. Others think Heller became suddenly insane.

The Anderson Plate Mill Burned.

ANDERSON, Ind., Nov. 21.—The plate mill here burned to the ground last night. This is the factory that became so prominent as a political issue during the late campaign. The fire was of incendiary origin, the entire factory having been saturated with coal oil.

—Friends of Leal's school cadets are invited to witness the full-dress drill in the Crescent rink to-morrow afternoon at 4.

—The Christian Endeavor societies of Plainfield will meet in the basement of the First Baptist church Thanksgiving morning at 9:30.

—The regular monthly meeting of the Plainfield Building and Loan association directors will be held this evening in Jackson & Codington's office, at 8.

—It will pay you to visit the elegant piano warerooms of Vanderbeek & Sattells, second floor, 33 Park avenue, before buying or renting a piano or organ.

—Reserved seats at $1.15 each for the balance of the Bagan course of illustrated lectures, may be obtained at Music Hall this evening, but there are only a few left.

—What's the matter with Miles Ross for a position in Grover's cabinet? He has the brains and his county of Middlesex is next to Union for the title of banner Democratic county.

—Y. M. C. A. classes in mechanical drawing and book-keeping will meet this evening. An opportunity is still afforded to young men to join the eight educational classes of the association.

—Yale men are numerous in Plainfield, and there was considerable jubilant demonstration made in this city Saturday afternoon when the foot-ball score was displayed in front THE PRESS office. Patches of blue that on close inspection proved to be Yale pennants were seen over many porticos Saturday night and yesterday.

—The Plainfield Bicycle club will again this year afford its members the advantages of class gymnastic work. Charles W. Allen, an athlete of the New York Turn Verein school, will lead the class beginning next Wednesday evening, Nov. 23. All members of the club intending to join the class are requested to be present on Wednesday.

—The Relief Association proposes, this year as hitherto, to give out Thanksgiving dinners to its beneficiaries and other poor families. For this purpose donations of poultry, vegetables, fruit, etc., are asked and should be sent to the Relief rooms, 45 West Second street, on Tuesday afternoon, or Wednesday morning before 10 o'clock.

—Among the new enterprises in which manager Frank W. Sanger of New York is interested this season, is a new musical comedy in which Gus Bothner and he are starring Thomas E. Murray of "Our Irish Visitors" fame. The piece is called "The Voodoo; or, A Lucky Charm", and deals on superstition. Voodooism, although not often alluded to in this part of the country, still exists to a great extent among certain elements in the Southern States and West Indies. Mr. Murray has been surrounded by an excellent supporting company and everything that money and energy can do to promote the enterprise has been done. The comedy will be given for the first time in this city to-morrow evening at Music Hall.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

A daughter came to the home of H. A. Voehl, the baker, Saturday night.

The wife of overseer-of-the poor J. W. A. Bauersachs of North Plainfield is seriously ill.

The great player Bliss on the Yale team, Saturday, was a son of Dr. Bliss formerly of Plainfield.

Sidney Gilligan, brother of Hugh, formerly of this city, is to be married to Miss Rogers of Brooklyn this week.

A baby boy has the attention of the household at the home of Charles W. McCutchen, Rockview avenue. He made his advent at 8 Sunday evening.

Gustav Schipper of West Seventh street is to be married Dec. 3 to Miss Eschen of Europe. He has been building a new home for his bride opposite the residence of his brother Charles.

Mrs. Robert Binning of Ashland, Pa., who as Miss Emma Martin was chief operator in the telephone office in this city, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Elijah Stites, of Chatham street, North Plainfield.

The recent proposition of the Samuel J. Tinden trustees to Mayor Grant of New York, asking for aid in the equipment and operation of the proposed Tilden public library, was signed by L. V. F. Randolph, secretary of the Tilden trust.

Miss Rachel V. D. Benton, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Benton of Rahway road, died yesterday after a lingering illness. She was a young woman of rare beauty of character, patient in suffering, and with a divine faith in the Master's will. Her loss will be greatly felt.

The most popular form of amusement this winter seems to be amateur theatricals. Three plays are in course of rehearsal at present, two of them to be brought out at the Casino during December. The third will be private but may be repeated at the Casino later in the season.

THE JUNIORS GO TO CHURCH.

Pastor Schenck Preaches a Most Powerful Sermon to the Order of American Mechanics.

"Take unto you the whole armor of God" was the Biblical counsel given by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck last evening to a large congregation. The sermon was directed with especial force to the local members of the Jr. O. U. A. M., and the text was from Ephesians VI: 13.

Franklin council, No. 41, and Somerset council, 104, attended the services in a body. Fully one hundred of the members were present, all in full regalia. They occupied the two central rows of pews, at the front of the church, and were very attentive listeners.

The councils of the order all over the country go to church the Sunday before Thanksgiving. Franklin and Somerset named Trinity church as the one of their choice, and Mr. Schenck consented to preach a sermon to them.

The discourse was one of his very best. It was plain, practical, easily comprehended, and hard to forget.

Mr. Schenck praised the order for the noble stand it has espoused, that of keeping and reading the Bible in the public schools. He wished them Godspeed in their endeavors. He closed his sermon by a strong appeal, in the words of the text, for all young men to put on the Gospel armor.

CHURCH AND SUNDAY OBSERVANCE.

A Plainfield Woman's Society and Its Interesting Meetings.

The Plainfield branch of the National Alliance of Unitarians and other Liberal Christian women is an organization formed in 1891. It has become by vote of its members a part of the New York League of Unitarian Women. Its object is "to awaken and sustain vital interest in religious worship, ethics and philanthropy, secure co-operation in the advancement of Unitarian Christianity and promote closer fellowship among its members.

Any woman may become, by the payment of one dollar annually, a member both of this branch and of the National Alliance. The payment of twenty-five cents annually constitutes a woman a member of the Plainfield branch only.

Meetings are held on the fourth Tuesday of every month from October to May inclusive. After the usual business and reports of committees, which occupy the first half hour of the session, an original paper upon the subject of the day is presented, followed by a discussion. These meetings are open to all women who desire to attend.

The subjects for the next meeting, at All Souls' church Nov. 22, are as follows:

THE CHURCH.	CHURCH GOING.
SUNDAY OBSERVANCE.
1. Motives for going to church.	What makes you go?
2. What can we get there that we do not get	elsewhere?
3. What changes (if any) would make our	own church more helpful?
4. What is our duty in regard to church-	going?
5. The Sunday opening of the Columbian	Fair.
6. What can the church or Sunday-school do	in the line of temperance work?

GRIST OF THE CITY COURT.

Sergeant Lynch Gets Wrathful and Threatens to Use His Stick.

Merton Holmes is getting to be an old offender before the city court. His latest freak is to interfere with policemen making arrests. For trying to get a prisoner away from officer Frederickson and resisting both him and officer Kiely, judge Codington fined him $15. The judge said, "The police must not be meddled with. There must be no opposition put in the way of their doing their duty. For only by unrestricted doing of their duty can the interests of the city be protected." Holmes must go to jail for 20 days if he does n't pay the fine. "That's the way to do it", he muttered.

Thos. H. Cavalear, drunk and disorderly, was fined $3.

Annie Ward, wearing a jaunty drab hat, a snug fur-trimmed sack and a salmon-colored skirt, spent last night in a cell. She was found helplessly drunk along Seventh street and Madison avenue. She set up her old plea "Let me go this time and I'll never do it again." The court was tired of her promises and fined her $3. She wanted to be trusted a month, but was given only a day's grace to raise the money from her employer, Mrs. Huntington.

Winfield Smalley of Newark was fined $2 for drunkenness. He said he would n't get drunk in Plainfield any more.

Serghant Patrick Lynch was out of sorts during the session of court. He grew very officious and bossed the prisoners about, and loudly threatened that if Holmes had interfered with him in making an arrest he would have used his club on him.

But They Did n't Say "No Bill Force".

The Bound Brook Chronicle, whose editor is the present postmaster of that borough, is discussing the future possibilities of candidates for his post of honor, says: "James H. Force, proprietor of the Mansion House, has his weather eye open. His brother, Billy Force, was postmaster of Plainfield under Cleveland's former administration, and notwithstanding the fact that one of the Democratic campaign cries was 'No Force Bill', this genial boniface thinks he is in it to stay."

Educational Lectures at a Low Price.

A lecture course has been arranged for All Souls' church this winter. The subjects, speakers and dates are: Reading, by C. T. Catlin, Nov. 25; "The Thames", illustrated, Rev. Dr. E. C. Bolles, Dec. 9; "Shakespeare's 'Macbeth' ", Rev. H. H. Woude, Dec. 23; "Thoreau", Rev. John W. Chadwick, Jan. 6; new lecture by Robert Collyer, Jan. 20. Tickets for the course are only $1.

I have been troubled with chronic catarrh for years; Ely's Cream Balm is the only remedy among the many that I have used that affords me relief.—E. W. Willard, druggist, Joliet, Ill.

YOUNG LAWYERS' FEES.

A Plainfield Editor Thinks They Have to Pay Too Much for Their License—They Make Up Afterward, in Their Fees on Their Clients.

A. V. D. Honeyman of this city gives in a recent issue of his New Jersey Law Journal, published on North avenue, an interesting sketch of law students' examinations, such as Plainfield attorneys recently admitted had to pass, and gives some suggestions for the improvement of the system. He says:

"A casual examination of the question papers submitted to applicants for admission to the bar in the interval between the November term, 1881, and the February term, 1890, reveals a great difference in the nature and general scope of the examinations as held from time to time. This holds true as to both the examination for attorneys and counselors. While we appreciate th difficulty under the present system of having a more thorough examination, yet we think that the bar associations of the State should take this matter in hand with a view to bringing about a change for the better. In Pennsylvania an applicant for a clerkship in an office must pass a preliminary examination before a board of examiners before they can register and he begin to serve his clerkship.

"Applicants for such a clerkship must pass an examination on the following subjects, viz.: Grammar, arithmetic, algebra, universal history, particularly the history of England and America; spelling, etymology and geography. Each applicant must publish a notice that he intends to apply for the preliminary examination. A similar notice is required from students about to take the examination for a license as an attorney, and the general result is a beneficial one. Would it not be well if some such system were adopted in this State?

"While speaking of these examinations we would again suggest that the Legislature should make a reduction in the fees now charged to applicants for a license either as an attorney or as a counselor. The charges now made are altogether too large, and why these fees—which, formerly, when they were paid to the justices of the court, were very proper, but which are now turned over to the State—should be so excessive as to be three times as large as in other States, we cannot understand. There is no expense connected with these examinations except that which is entailed in the execution of the license and the maintenance of the roll. Five dollars would be an ample license fee in either case.

"In this connection it seems to us only proper to suggest the propriety of making some small remuneration to the gentlemen comprising the board of examiners for their services. At present they serve without pay. They must neglect their business, must pay their own railroad fares and hotel expenses, and must even pay for the printing of the examinations. We trust that in the near future we may have a permanent board of examiners, to be appointed by the court, and that some arrangement may be made to pay these gentlemen for their services."

Winter Excursion Tickets on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Pennsylvania Railroad company has placed on sale at Elizabeth and all its principal ticket offices excursion tickets to all the prominent winter resorts. This territory includes the resorts of New Jersey, Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Florida, and Cuba. The tickets are sold at the usual low rates, and the return coupons are valid until May 30, 1893.

The magnificent facilities of the Pennsylvania railroad, with its many connections, make this the favorite line for winter travel.

DOES HE WANT THE EARTH?

Fire-bugs in the Borough.

Incendiaries set fire to a lot of rubbish in the rear of Dr. Mattison's drug-store on Somerset street, last week Monday night, and the flames were endangering not only the drug store but Saengerbund hall and Voehl's stables, when Dr. Mattison saw the fire and put it out. The authorities have sought to secure evidence of the identity of the culprits, but without avail.

Bowling.

The Crescent League bowling contest to-night will be between the following teams:

Woolston,	Ulrich,
Ward,	Hetfield,
Tobin,	Dunham,
Codington,	Emmons.

To protect the public from fraud and imposition, the genuine medicines of Dr. R. V. Pierce are now sold only through druggists, authorized as agents. They are the cheapest medicines to use, as well as the best, because in every case, you pay only for the good you get. The money is refunded if they fail to benefit or cure. Being sold on this peculiar plan of "value received or no pay," the prices of the genuine guaranteed medicines always have been, are, and always will be, as follows:

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, . . $1.00 per bottle.
Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, . . $1.00 per bottle.
Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, 25c. per vial.

Suspicion naturally and rightfully attaches to any medicines purporting to be Dr. Pierce's, when offered at any other prices than those above given.

I was so much troubled with catarrh it seriously affected my voice. One bottle of Ely's Cream Balm did the work. My voice is fully restored.—B. F. Lispenard, A. M., pastor of the Olivet Baptist church, Philadelphia, Pa.

AN ATTRACTIVE PROSPECTUS.

A Small Series of Stock in a Big Mining Company Offered Within Reach of Everybody.

The Inter-State Gold, Silver and Copper Mining company of Chicago was organized under the laws of Illinois, with a capital of one million dollars, in September, to develop valuable mineral properties, principally gold and copper, in Arizona, Utah and California, in which section its charter authorizes it to operate. The stockholders of the company at their initial meeting decided by a unanimous vote to retain a majority of stock in the treasury as a reserve, so that the property can be operated for the sole benefit of the stockholders, and valuable mineral claims may not go for a song to enrich others, as is so frequently the case, but the Inter-State shall be a company by the stockholders, for the stockholders and operated in the interests of the stockholders.

12,000 shares of stock have been set aside to be floated at $1.00 per share for a fund to equip a corps to do assessment work in valuable gold, silver and copper properties in Arizona, to lay out the company's town site and prepare for the market some of the properties which the company will expect to place on the market, maintaining, as has been stated, its most valuable holdings. This corps will be in charge of the president, and ex-officio general manager, W. B. Thompson, a practical miner and mine expert who has discovered valuable gold, silver and copper deposits in Arizona, copper in Utah and gold and silver in California. Mr. Thompson has had charge of and operated some of the finest mining properties held by English syndicates, and is recommended by them and by those who know him best in Colorado and in the Joplin mineral region, as uniting two essential qualifications—those of a practical miner and a man of scrupulous integrity.

The vice-president and chairman of the finance committee is judge N. B. Vinyard, manager of the Federal Savings and Building association of Chicago, well known for his probity and financial acumen.

The treasurer, H. R. Campbell, is well and favorably known in real estate and financial circles in Chicago, and is connected with his brother-in-law S. E. Gross, the real estate millionaire, at South-East Corner Dearborn and Randolph streets.

If there had been any previous lack of confidence in the Inter-State, the fact that Mr. Campbell accepted the important trust and selected for the company's bank of deposit such a sound financial institution as the Illinois Trust and Savings bank, these facts would have dispelled every doubt. With such a trio of officers, who are also on the board of directors, of which they constitute a majority, it can be readily inferred that whatever promises or pledges the company have made, or may make in the future, will have been made with the honest and earnest purpose of carrying them out in good faith.

Those who have watched the mineral development in Arizona need not be told that it is the most promising field for development in this or any other country. It may well be called the heart of the mineral kingdom of the Republic. On the north it is bounded by Colorado, Utah and Nevada, famous for their output of precious metals. On the east is New Mexico, famous for its silver and copper mines. On the west is California, that first attracted the attention of the Old World and the New for its wealth of gold, that for over a century has maintained its reputation as a gold producing State.

With a full knowledge of its mineral wealth and anticipating the development in store for Arizona, Mr. Thompson visited the Territory with those fully acquainted with it, going to some portions never before visited by white men, and it was on this prospecting tour that he discovered valuable deposits of minerals, and returning to Chicago interested those associated with him in the organization of this company, and as a result the Inter-State Gold, Silver and Copper Mining company of Chicago was incorporated. It is now the purpose of the company, as said, under a resolution of its board of directors to issue one series of stock at $1 per share to send Mr. Thompson back to take the necessary steps to hold these properties discovered by him, and to carry out other plans that have been matured by the company for future operations. Those who may desire to avail themselves of the chance to secure a portion of the stock now upon the market are assured that the company will never again offer shares at this price, if indeed it will offer any portion of the remainder at any price. One of the rules adopted by the company is to the effect that no additional stock can be issued until recommended by the finance committee, and authorized by the board of directors, and when it is known that it is not their policy to place any more shares upon the market than the 12,000 shares that have been set aside for that purpose, further comment on this score is unnecessary.

No subscriptions will be received for less than 10 shares. Will it pay? some will ask. The directors of this company have an abiding faith that it will not only pay, but that it will pay well and they have invested freely themselves.

At this time when gold mining properties have an additional value owing to a declining silver market, it may not be out of place to say that the properties which this company expect to develop are principally gold and copper, both of which always find a ready market.

The above is submitted to those whom it may concern, and if further information should be desired, it may be obtained by addressing any of the officers of the company.

I have been troubled with catarrh for 10 years and have tried a number of remedies, but got no relief until I purchased a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. I consider it the most reliable preparation for catarrh and cold in the head.—George E. Crandall, P. M., Quonochawntang, Rhodg Island.

"A God-send is Ely's Cream Balm. I had catarrh for three years. Two or three times a week my nose would bleed. I thought the sores would never heal. Your Balm has cured me."—Mrs. M. A. Jackson, Portsmouth, N. H.

HIS ASTONISHMENT GREW.

They taught her both Latin and German, then Greek,
And Science and Physics profound.
Why the girl really knew, before she could speak,
The world was most certainly round.

She sang like a bird, she could play like the wind;
She danced, she could ride, she could row.
'Twas rumored there was not a thing on the earth
Of which she was ignorant; so

When he wrote her a note saying, "I would be pleased
On Wednesday to call once again,"
His astonishment grew at this word he received
(It cost him the deepest of pain):

"Miss Blank regretts her engagments is sutch she will be unabel to recieve Mr. Gray on Wensday, but will be delited to have him call on the day following."

FREDDY'S UNCLES.

They Are All Great Men, and Their Nephew Emulates Them.

Freddy Jones of the Crescent League is a great admirer of his uncles. He has reason to be proud of them. One, Tony Denier, is a star on the stage; another, John Denier, is chief instructor of the American Athletic club at New Orleans, and is famous throughout the athletic world. He brought out Nat Goodwin and LeVanion, the great trapeze acrobats. A third, Al Denier, is the great dude in "The Two Johns". It is a rare trio of celebrities.

Concerning Tony, a writer in the Baltimore Every Saturday says:

Tony Denier has retired, and this, I think, concludes the list of the last, but not the least, of stage clowns. Tony Denier is a thoroughly well taught clown of the French school; he is not a mushroom of a few days growth, but an educated performer, having risen from the ground up in his art. He is a good mechanic and machinist, making his own tricks and dresses, attending to the most minute detail; the consequence was that his pantomimes were perfect in completeness. He, like Augustin Daly, supervised his own productions; the result was perfection.

Denier, together with Geo. J. Deagle, were the first managers to produce "The Black Crook" in the west. Denier directed the stage. The cost of the enterprise was the outlay of over $60,000. It was put before the public in a manner superior to that of New York. The cities of the west not having the population of the Empire City, failed to make it pay, and having a disagreement with the author, caused a loss, which the managers did not deserve. During the run of Denier's "Black Crook", Fanny Davenport played Carline. She now plays Fedora, but it is an incontestable fact that Tony Denier taught Fanny her art.

Clara Morris also was in Tony's employ when she appeared in "Humpty Dumpty" in Cleveland, in 1868.

Tony said of both these actresses when they were girls, "I know what kind of stuff those girls are made of; no sawdust in their heads, but brains."

Denier played the arduous character of Dragonfin in his production, and made it a wonderful performance. After the disbandonment of his "Crook" company he placed "Humpty Dumpty" on the stage. It was an instantaneous success. He then made the rounds of the entire country, winning golden opinions and coin for many years. He wisely invested his hard earned money in that enterprising city of Chicago; he bought land by the acre and sold it by the foot. He now owns rows of houses and may be said to live on "Easy Street." Tony is blessed with a charming wife; she was Miss Anziol, and learned her volts, pirouttes entre chats at the Parisian Opera House. She is still a very handsome woman of the brunette order of beauty and a capital entertainer.

Denier, after playing all over the continent and finding no rival, sighed for a new world to conquer. He crossed the ocean. The idea of an American clown going to England appears preposterous indeed! So thought the English managers, but Tony made the attempt. "He can't do it, you know," but Tony did "put in an appearance" in London and made a great hit. He was asked by the London manager, "Do you dance?" "No", said Tony. "Do you sing?" "No". "What do you do?" said the manager.

"I act", said Tony, and he did, and acted so well that he remained in Great Britain for over three years. Denier is as generous as a prince; he has a staff of poor professionals that he takes care of. He does good by stealth and blushes to find it fame. In all the relations of life he is eminent, an affectionate husband, a good citizen, and a true friend. He is quietly resting 'till the great prompter shall ring down the curtain, and may that time be far, far off is the sincere prayer of his friend,

DR. G. A. KANE.

Tony lives at Chicago, and is prosperous and wealthy, as are also his two brothers.

The Governor's Appointments.

Governor Abbett has appointed Senator Robert Adrain, George H. Barker, George T. Crammer, William H. Martin, John D. Rue and Henry D. Winton, as the State canvassing board. The board will meet at the State House, Trenton, on November 29, and canvass the vote given for President, Governor and Member of Congress.

—The meeting for boys held in Seventh-Day Baptist church yesterday afternoon, was well attended, and full of interest. Several raised their hands for prayers, and three conversions resulted in the after-meeting. It is proposed to hold these meetings every Sunday afternoon at 4:15 in places to be announced hereafter.

WILL TRY FOR THE POLE

Lieut. Peary to Head Another Arctic Expedition.

HE OBTAINS LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

This Attempt Will be Made Under the Auspices of the Academy of Natural Sciences, of Philadelphia—The Exploring Party Will be Small in Number.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21.—Information has been received in this city that Secretary Tracy of the Navy Department has granted a three years' leave of absence to Lieut. Peary, who will head another expedition to the Arctic regions. This report was confirmed to-day by Gen. Isaac J. Wistar, President of the Academy of Natural Sciences.

Owing to the need for additional civil engineers in the Navy Department, Peary's request for the necessary furlough was at first refused, but Gen. Wistar, on behalf of the Academy, wrote to Secretary Tracy, which probably influenced him to change his first decision.

The second Greenland expedition will now be made under the auspices of the academy.

"There are three objects," said the General, "in sending the present expedition, which may be stated briefly as follows:

"The first is to definitely determine the northern coast line of Greenland.

"The second is to determine if any land exists north of Greenland.

"The third is to reach the geographical location of the North Pole, or to get as near to it as possible.

"This journey will be attempted over the frozen surface of the polar sea. I imagine the expedition will of necessity be a small one.

"The journey over the frozen sea will be made by Peary with but one companion."

IN MR. CLEVELAND'S HONOR.

Notable Reception to the President-elect at the Manhattan Club.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The reception given to President-elect Cleveland by the Manhattan Club Saturday night was a most notable affair. the club house of the club, which is known as the chief social organization of the Democratic party, was magnificently decorated and ablaze with glittering electric lights.

As Mr. Cleveland entered, a mighty cheer arose and, gathering volume, echoed up and down Fifth avenue.

He smiled and bowed his acknowledgements he was greeted by Mr. Frederick Coudert, president of the club, and escorted into the great East parlor, where the reception began.

Mr. Cleveland stood on a dais in front of the central window, which was draped with silken American flags.

Mr. Coudert and other prominent members of the club stood near him. The guests passed through the south smoking room into the reception room, and in front of the President-elect.

Very few had to be formally presented. Mr. Cleveland recognized nearly every one and had a hearty grasp and smile for all.

It was a most brilliant and an influential assemblage.

Invitations had been sent to all the Governors and Senators of the Democratic States, judges of the Supreme Court of the United States, and many other prominent personages. All who possibly could responded.

At 10:30 o'clock the guests sat down to the banquet. In the main dining room Mr. Clevelnnd had the seat of honor under an oil painting of himself.

It had been announced that no speeches would be made, but, nevertheless, every man present eagerly awaited a speech from Mr. Cleveland, and they were not disappointed. He replied to the toast, "Our Guest."

Mr. Cleveland's remarks were brief. He outlined the policy of his administration and declared that the Democratic party's hope is to be true to the people and to itself and to redeem its pledges.

Open the Books.

What the country wants and what it will expect to have at the next session of Congress is a clear and distinct statement of the condition of the Treasury, not after the manner of the new system which has been adopted for concealing its true condition, but a statement of the facts that will admit of no question whatever as to the liabilities of the Government and the condition of the Treasury to meet them. Let there be no more juggling with accounts to show an apparent balance in hand for campaign purposes. The election is over, and Secretary Foster can have no party reason any longer for not dealing squarely with the public. It is pretty generally understood that there is a large deficit. Let the cold facts be stated.

The Only One.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway is "the only one" running solid vestibuled electric-lighted and steam-heated trains between Chicago, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Milwaukee, LaCrosse, Winona, St. Paul and Minneapolis, making direct connection at Council Bluffs and Omaha with all lines for all points in Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Oregon, Washington, Nevada and California; at St. Paul, with all lines for all points in the Northwest and Puget Sound.

It now operates over 6,000 miles of thoroughly equipped road, in Illinois, Wisconsin, Northern Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Iowa, South and North Dakota.

Through sleeping cars between Chicago and Portland, Ore., over Northern Pacific railroad via Jamestown, Butte, Spokane Falls, Tacoma and Seattle. If you are going West to locate or visit you will save money by writing to Wm. Kelly, jr., traveling passenger agent, 50 South Third street, Philadelphia, for rates of fare, maps, time tables, and full information furnished free. FIRED SANS CEREMONY.

One of the Peculiar Phases of Journalistic Life.

No Class of Workers Treated with as Little Regard as Washington Correspondents—The Tyranny of Managing Editors.

[Special Washington Letter.]

Margherita Arlina Hamm, in a recent article printed in the Journalist, commented very truthfully upon the treatment which newspaper workers usually receive from the managing editors of great daily papers. Among other things she said that the average newspaper reporter and society writer, as well as the editorial writer, were regarded by the managing editor and the business department of the paper as the farmer regards his horses and cattle. As long as they are fast upon the track and able to win money for their owners, or as long as they are good, hard-working plodders along the field they receive compensation sufficient to keep their souls and bodies together and to dress themselves sufficiently well to appear to advantage in the company in which they must necessarily go, according to the assignments given them by the managing editor. But when they cease to be of first-class value their salaries are reduced or else they are immediately discharged without having any warning given them in order to have time to secure employment elsewhere. Miss Hamm also gave some experiences in this line and followed them with some good advice to newspaper writers of less experience than herself. Another thing she said was that it was always necessary to keep a cheerful countenance and an appearance of prosperity before the world; because when any newspaper writer, or anyone else, makes an acknowledgment of failure, or even partial failure, or a temporary reverse, the entire world seems to be like a lot of hyenas ready to break the bars and tear the unfortunate one to pieces.

Miss Hamm's article upon this subject reminds me of the experiences of a number of gentlemen who have represented reputable leading daily papers of the country in the national capital. I have not consulted with any of these gentlemen, but do not suppose that they will object to the publication of facts concerning themselves; because, inasmuch as they publish facts regardless of the wishes of public men, it is not likely they will object to the publication of actual facts concerning themselves.

Mr. E. B. Wight, one of the most indefatigable newspaper workers in this country, or in any other country, represented the Chicago Tribune for a number of years. I do not know exactly how long, but it must have been at least ten years. One afternoon in 1884 or 1885 a young gentleman whom he had never seen before walked into his office with a letter from the managing editor of the Chicago Tribune informing him that he, Mr. Wight, would no longer represent the Tribune in Washington, but that the young man, whose name was Pepper, would hereafter have charge of the Washington bureau of the Tribune. According to my recollection that was the first notification that Mr. Wight had received that his services would be dispensed with. He was not given any time to seek employment elsewhere, and, so far as the managing editor of the Tribune knew or cared, Mr. Wight might be left without employment for the support of himself and family. But that did not seem to enter into consideration with the managing editor. He had made up his mind, purely for personal reasons, as I presume, to make the change in the management of the Washington bureau of his paper, and he sent a young man to take the place.

It must be said in this connection that he sent one of the best men who ever came to Washington in sending Mr. Pepper. That gentleman still remains here at the head of the Washington bureau of the Tribune, and he is a worthy successor of Mr. Wight, and that is saying a great deal, because Mr. Wight is a gentleman of exceptional ability and probity and high culture and standing.

Mr. Fred Perry Powers represented the Chicago Times in Washington for eleven years. He was a gentleman of education, culture, refinement, wide acquaintance with public men, had a perfect knowledge of the executive department in the national capital, and was one of the best equipped correspondents upon Newspaper row.

Two or three years ago the managing editor of the Chicago Times, without giving Mr. Powers any notification whatever, removed him from his position as Washington correspondent of the Times and turned the paper over to another gentleman, whose name I do not now recall. During the past two years there have been several correspondents of the paper which Mr. Powers represented for so many years; but recently the Times has been under the management of other men and Mr. Powers has been reappointed Washington correspondent of that paper. His dismissal from the Times a few years ago was regarded by all of the newspaper men in Washington as an exceptional piece of unkindness, to say the least of it.

Mr. Jules Guthridge, of the New York Herald, was the representative of the Chicago News, and rendered that paper very fine service indeed. He is a self-made man and has been a hard worker all his life. While he was representing the News he was proud of his position, proud of his work and anxious to render as good service, to say the least of it, as any other representative of a Chicago paper in Washington. In the judgment of newspaper men here—and their judgment is that of maturity and experience—he was a very good correspondent. It was in 1886 or 1887 that he received a sudden notice of his removal from the paper similar to that which was given to Mr. Wight and to Mr. Powers. There was a complete absence of regard for his feelings or immediate future in this matter. Fortunately, however, men like Wight, Powers and Guthridge cannot be cast adrift upon the sea of life, because they are industrious men with more than ordinary ability, and such men will not long remain idle in this workaday world where good men are always wanted.

One year ago Herbert Preston, who had been connected with the Washington office of the New York Herald for at least fifteen years, was as suddenly and unceremoniously removed from his position as either of the gentlemen named above. He is a man of a great deal more than ordinary ability, who has been upon the lecture platform and delivered some of the finest discourses ever heard upon the subject of journalism, because that is a subject with which he is as fully familiar as any other man in the United States. His writings have always been of great value because they are and always have been emanations from a cultured brain which has been trained, not only in books and letters, but in the richer and riper field of experience with public men in the capital of this republic.

I have had a little of the same experience. In March, 1889, I was offered a position on the Pioneer-Press, of St. Paul, at a better salary than I was receiving from the St. Paul Globe. I tel egraphed to the Globe office that I had received this offer and, without waiting to receive a reply from them, declined the proposition which had been made to me by Mr. Carle, of the Pioneer-Press, because I had been with the St. Paul Globe continuously for three years and did not care to make a change. On the evening of April 1, within two weeks of that occurrence, I received a telegram from the St. Paul Globe informing me that they would close their Washington office on that day and date. I had received no other warning and no intimation that any change was to be made in Washington, and the telegram came, as you may well imagine, as a great surprise and shock to me. Unfortunately the place upon the Pioneer-Press had already been filled, upon my rejection of the offer which had been made to me. Thus I was left, so far as the St. Paul Globe knew or was concerned, without any support for myself and family.

The gentlemen named above are still in Washington representing good news papers and making very good livings for themselves; some of them, indeed, accumulating fortunes. Not one of them, so far as I know, has suffered the least inconvenience from the treatment which he has received, and none of them has any complaint to make concerning the manner in which he was unceremoniously dismissed from the employment in which he was engaged. The gentlemen who have been appointed to succeed those who were removed from their positions are men of ability and render their papers good service.

I do not presume that the managing editors who caused their dismissals ever gave any thought to what might become of them or what effect their arbitrary removals might have upon them. This letter is not written for the purpose of finding fault with or questioning the right of the managing editors to treat their employes as they choose. Simple statements of fact have been made as they have occurred before me during my experience here. I will venture to say, however, that the judgment of ninety-nine readers out of every hundred who learn of these occurrences, and the manner in which faithful workers are treated by their employers in the newspaper world, will undoubtedly say that it is little less than brutal to treat any class of workers with such degree of disrespect, not to say disregard, for their welfare. When the organized laborers of the country rise in rebellion against the dismissal of their fellow workmen without cause, they may be assured that, as long as they are within the law in all of their actions, they have the sympathy of the newspaper workers at the national capital; particularly those who have been here for a long time and have had similar experiences.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

A MIRACULOUS ESCAPE

Most of the Blanch Coal Miners Were at Dinner.

THREE KILLED BY THE EXPLOSION

Eight Others Seriously Hurt, and Three of These Will Die—Some of the Men Blown Long Distances—Great Excitement at the Mouth of the Shaft.

STEUBENVILLE, O., Nov. 22.—It seems almost a miracle that the loss of life at the Blanch coal mine at Colliers,' W. Va., was not much greater. The explosion occurred as the men were returning from dinner, which was providential, for had it occurred ten minutes later the destruction of life would in all probability have been something awful.

The force of the explosion is shown by the distance some of the men were blown. Wesley Anderson's body was thrown through the air a distance of over 100 feet.

It is supposed that the explosion was caused by a piece of fuse which became lighted in some manner and conveyed the fatal spark to the boxes in which the powder cans were kept.

The names of those who were killed are as follows:

JOHN FIOSKY,
WESLEY ANDERSON.
MICHAEL COHOKER.

The wounded are:

William Anderson, blown a distance of 50 feet over a trestle, leg broken, face and head badly bruised; will die.

Edward Cook, horribly burned about head and back; will die.

John Gillespie, burned inwardly and cannot recover.

John Anderson, head badly cut.

Lawrence Campbell, burned about arms, head and back.

John Zaging, burned seriously about arms and head.

Matthew Wright, burned about head and back.

George Teeters, injured internally.

John Ramsey, burned about head and arms.

John Hully, a miner, is missing, but it is not known whether he was about at the time of the explosion or not.

The scene at the mouth of the mine following the explosion was one of great excitement.

The entire population gathered, and the women, supposing, at first, that more of the men were in the mine than really were, begged that rescuers go into the mine. It would have been death, however, to have gone in before the air had cleared.

That some of those who were in the mine were not suffocated to death is due to the presence of mind of James Clark and James Borden, who got the outside door of the shaft, which had been blown from its hinges, and replaced it.

The mine belongs to H. Smith, of New Cumberland, W. Va., and William Smith and John McNutt, of Wellsville. About 50 men are employed in the mine, which has been in operation since May, 1891.

MR. CLEVELAND TO GO SOUTH.

In Mountain Fastnesses He Will Hide From the Pestiferous Office Seeker.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—It is stated and generally believed that the place selected by President-elect Cleveland at which to spend the brief vacation which he has planned to take is Newberne, N. C. The place is an ideal winter home, situated in the heart of the Blue Ridge Mountains, and sufficiently inaccessible to daunt the spirits of the most persistent slate maker or office seeker.

Mr. Cleveland's sole object in leaving New York is to get much-needed rest, and to avoid the legion of callers, who adopt every known expedient to get by his butler. Mr. Cleveland will probably leave for North Carolina to-morrow or Thursday.

Mr. Cleveland received yesterday at his residence ex-Secretary of State Thomas F. Bayard, ex-Mayor Carter H. Harrison of Chicago and Mr. Bardeleben of Birmingham, Ala. These three gentlemen called on Mr. Cleveland at his own invitation, and, presumably, the visit was of political significance.

Salvation Army War Council.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The national headquarters of the Salvation Army is a scene of much activity. Men and women in great number are present to attend the Continental Congress and War Council. The feature of the meeting will be the commissioning of the 1,500th officer raised from the ranks. Miss Carrie Smith will receive this honor.

Cable Road Patent Lost.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The Supreme Court has rendered a decision invalidating the patent granted to Henry Root of New York for the method of constructing cable railroads now in common use. The ground for the decision was the fact that Root allowed his invention to be publicly used for two years before applying for his patents.

Pardoned by the President.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The President has granted a pardon to James A. Simmons of New York, sentenced June 26, 1891, to six years imprisonment in the penitentiary for assisting the president of the Sixth National Bank of New York city in misappropriating funds from that bank.

Pardoned by Gov. Flower.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., Nov. 22.—Daniel Carmichael, who two years ago was sentenced to Dannemora prison for forgeries committed in this city, has been released from prison on a pardon by Gov. Flower. He is badly broken in health and would not have lived out his five year sentence

LIVES LOST IN THE WEST.

Many Towns Flooded in the State of Washington.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 22.—Reports received from the districts visited by the recent storm show a far greater loss than was at first anticipated.

At Sedro several lives are reported lost, and fatalities are reported in Skagit and Stillaguamish valleys from the floods.

Mount Vernon, Fir, Laconner, Hamilton, and other towns are under water, four or more feet deep, and people are removing their effects to higher ground, fearing a still greater rise.

The Skagit river is so full of logs and drift that navigation is suspended.

Nearly a million feet of logs came down yesterday, tearing out the pier of the Wadon bridge, at Mount Vernon, snapping the piles off like frail weeds. The banks of the river are lined with people watching the mad torrent.

Several breaks have occurred in the levee, and the valleys and towns are the scenes of desolation. The lower floors of the houses are covered with several feet of water, while the water in the streets is so high as to make pedestrianism almost impossible.

In one place the break in the levee is half a mile long, and six feet wide, and the torrent is rushing madly through the town of Fir.

Beaver Marsh and the town of Laconner are also flooded, and the farmers are driving their stock to high ground.

The damage to the farming district alone will reach hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The telegraph lines are prostrated in many sections, and when communication has been restored, a fearful tale may be told.

Railroad washouts are reported from many sections of the country. In many places big landslides have washed out the road bed for miles.

THE CRITCHLOW TRIAL.

Believed That the Defense Has Proved a Complete Alibi.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 22.—The defense in the Critchlow trial devoted the entire afternoon in proving that the defendant was not at the mill on the day of the riot. Seven witnesses, including one woman, all swore positively that they met Critchlow in the town of Homestead in the afternoon, while several others swore that they saw him between 3 and 3:15, between Twelfth and Fifteenth streets, going to his home.

An adjournment was here taken until 7 p. m. At the night session a number of witnesses swore that they saw the prisoner in the town of Homestead between 12 and 3 o'clock.

The prosecution proved that Conner had been shot after 12 o'clock noon and before 3 o'clock p. m., and it is the opinion of attorneys that Critchlow has proved an alibi and that he will not be convicted.

The case may go to the jury to-day.

The Mayor-elect Declined to be Carried.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Nov. 22.—The largest parade ever seen here took place last night in celebration of the election of Cleveland and Stevenson. Many of those in the parade were farmers. The procession halted in front of the house of Mayor-elect William M. Ketcham, who made an address, after which the paraders attempted to carry him on their shoulders through the streets, but he retired as cheers.

Zimmerman and Sanger Matched.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 22.—Zimmerman and Sanger, the well-known bicyclists, have been matched to race for $10,000. Zimmerman's deposit of $500 was yesterday covered by Sanger, and this virtually ensures a race. The distance will probably be one mile, but the date and other details remain to be settled.

A Receiver Appointed.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 22.—On the application of Maddock & Steel, importers of English crockery, Chancellor McGill has appointed A. L. Worthington as receiver of the Jesse Dean Decorating company, of this place. The applicants declare that the decorating company is insolvent. The assets and liabilities are not known.

Said to Have Regained His Reason.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Nov. 22.—William Lock, who, while insane, cut the throat of his infant son at Harmanville over a month ago and bathed his face in its blood, is now declared to have regained his reason, and efforts are being made to have him released from the Morristown hospital for the insane.

Officers Knights of Labor.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 22.—At the final session of the Knights of Labor Convention officers were chosen as follows: General Master Workman, T. V. Powderly; Secretary and Treasurer, J. W. Hayes; General Worthy Foreman, Hugh Cavanaugh.

Clarkson for Senator.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—It comes here from Iowa that ex-Chairman of the Republican National Committee and ex-Assistant Postmaster-General J. S. Clarkson will soon be at his old home, Des Moines, with his eye on the United States Senatorship, to succeed Senator Wilson. The campaign for the Senatorship will soon open in Iowa, though the Legislature for it will not be chosen for two years.

Millionaire Crouse Dead.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 22.—D. Edgar Crouse, the millionaire ex-grocer, is dead, after an illness of three weeks, aged 49 years. He was a son of John Crouse, founder of the John Crouse Memorial college, a part of the Syracuse university. Mr. Crouse made himself much talked about a few years ago by building a $500,000 stable, the finest of its kind, it is said, in the world.

Panama Canal Co.'s Affairs to Be Investigated.

WILD SCENES IN THE CHAMBER

The Government Denounced in the Severest Language—Deputies Called Each Other Thieves—A Number of Challenges to Duels Follow—Other Suicides May Be Looked for.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—There were wild scenes in the Chamber of Deputies when it was agreed that a parliamentary inquiry should be made as to the affairs of the Panama Canal company.

Jules Delahaye, the Boulangist Deputy from Chinon, denounced the government in the severest language, stating that the authorities had permitted the most colossal crimes to go unpunished. He demanded that the men of influence and wealth, accumulated by gigantic frauds, be brought to exposure and punishment.

There was a clamorous scene while Delahaye was speaking, others denouncing his utterances. Angry recriminations followed, and Deputies charged each other in express terms with desire to protect the guilty.

One speaker said that he could point out men in the Chamber who had shared in the spoils. A dozen Deputies rose in an excited manner to ask him whom he meant.

The answer was lost in the clamor and confusion. Members shook their fists in each other's faces, and several tried to climb the tribunal at once. The President in vain rapped for order, but nobody heeded him.

The melee was more general and disgraceful than any witnessed in the Chamber during the present republic. Deputies called each other thieves, and followed the insulting words with challenges to the death.

No less than three challenges were given for duels.

M. Alexis Delauray, Moderate Republican Deputy for Beauvais, challenged Antoine Germain, member of the Left Centre. Boissy D' Anglais, member from Ardeche, challenged M. Delahaye, and Paul Deroulede, the noted Boulangist, challenged M. Hubbard, of Seine-et-Pise, anti-Boulangist.

It was a bitter struggle, and first really signal demonstration of the Boulangists since the downfall of their party.

It was useless for the Government to oppose the onset, and so the Ministry yielded by consenting to the appointment of a Parliamentary Commission to inquire into the charges of corruption in connection with the Panama Canal, and especially the charges affecting public officials, members of the Chamber and others connected with the public service.

The Commission is to be named today, and will begin the inquiry forthwith.

It is rumored that gigantic scandals will be unearthed and that other suicides may be looked for besides that of Baron de Reinach, who was one of the men deeply involved in the alleged scandals.

The Baron left an immense fortune of about 300,000,000 francs, much of it accumulated in connection with the Panama enterprises.

There is great excitement in Paris and the scene in the Chamber of Deputies and the Panama inquiry are the leading subjects of discussion everywhere.

The police as said to be keeping a strict surveillance over several wealthy men mentioned in connection with the Panama frauds and who are suspected of a design to leave France in order to escape prosecution.

TO INDICT ELECTION BETTORS.

Judge McMullen's Charge at Lancaster Causes Consternation.

LANCASTER, Pa., Nov. 22.—Judge McMullen, in his charge to the grand jury, referred to an offense against the law to which little attention has heretofore been paid—election betting.

He instructed the grand jury to present for indictment all persons known to have made wagers on the recent election, as thousands of dollars were won and lost in this county on the late Presidential contest.

The charge caused quite a sensation, and many bettors are alarmed. They fear that they may be indicted.

SUES FOR $20,000.

Dr. White, of Philadelphia, After the Alienator of His Wife's Affections.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 22.—Dr. F. A. White of Philadelphia has commenced suit for $20,000 against William Jemison of Heightstown for alienating Mrs. White's affections.

Jemison and Mrs. White eloped last summer and went to Canada. Jemison was arrested there for a forgery committed here.

Detectives brought him back and he pleaded guilty, but was allowed his freedom under suspension of sentence.

He is now living in Heightstown again with his wife, who is a wealty woman. He was the leading storekeeper of the village when he eloped.

To Arrange for Skating Matches.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Nov. 22.—Harold Hagen, champion speed skater of the world, arrived here yesterday from Norway, and will go to Minneapolis with ex-champion McCormack. He is willing to skate Fred Breen, at present champion of America, while at Minneapolis. He is also willing to compete with Joseph F. Donoghue, and will write and try to arrange a match at Minneapolis.

Marksman Traeger Dead.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 22.—The parents of Augustus L. Traeger received a cable message yesterday announcing the death of their son on board the steamer Kaiser William on Saturday, Nov. 12. He was 28 years old. At 18 he won the amateur championship of America for trap shooting. His remains will be brought back to America.

To Investigate the Cherokee Strip.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 22.—Senators Higgins, of Delaware, and Perkins, of Kansas, have started for the Indian Territory to visit the Cherokee Indians, and make a report to the Senate in December on the Cherokee Strip question. They, with Senator Butler, constitute the committee, but Senator Butler failed to come.

$150,000,000 of Life Lost Annually.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 22.—Special Labor Commissioner Powers has prepared his report on the loss to workingmen by accidents, and finds it is annually $150,000,000, assuming the value of a life destroyed as $5,000. This is larger than the fire loss of the nation, and four times the amount of the interest of the bonded debt.

Women Students on Strike.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 22.—One hundred women students of the State University struck at noon and left the institution. The cause of this action was the failure of President W. H. Scott to comply with repeated requests from them to ameliorate the sanitary condition of their reception, study and lunch rooms.

Zero Weather in the Northwest.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 22.—The Northwest has got its first cold spell of the season. In Manitoba and the extreme Northern portion of Minnesota the temperature is eight degrees below zero. In this city it is six degrees below, while in both the Dakotas it was below zero last night.

Miss Abell Takes the Veil.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 22.—Miss Mary Abell, daughter of the late Arunah S. Abell, the founder of the Baltimore "Sun," and sister of the present proprietors, took the veil at the Chapel of the Academy of Visitation in Wilmington, Del., yesterday.

Aboney Captured by Gen. Dodds.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—It is announced officially that Aboney has been captured by Gen. Dodds. The French army suffered no loss. It is now camped in and around the capital.

Commissioner Peck Hasn't Resigned.

ALBANY, Nov. 22.—Gov. Flower says that there is no truth in the report that Labor Commissioner Peck has sent in his resignation. The report that Cornelius Haley, one of the labor party's representatives from Oneida county, is to be appointed to Mr. Peck's office is, therefore, somewhat premature.

Hill in Conference in New York.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Senator Hill was in a conference with a number of local Democratic leaders at the Hotel Normandie at noon. It is understood that the principal subject discussed was that of the election of Edward Murphy, jr., to succeed Senator Hiscock in the United States Senate.

HUME SEEKS DIVORCE

Actor Robert Mantell Named as Co-respondent.

PLAYERDOM'S LATEST SENSATION

Manager Hume Has Begun Proceedings Against His Wife, Who is Known on the Stage as Charlotte Behrens—Mantell Has Just Been Divorced.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Theatrical Manager Edward Hume has instructed Lawyer Edmund E. Price to begin an action for divorce against his wife, Charlotte Behrens, the actress, and Robert Mantell is named as co-respondent.

It promises to be one of the most remarkable actions of the kind ever calendared in a New York court. Miss Behrens is an uncommonly handsome and attractive person. Mr. Hume, who is also fine looking, is a manager of excellent repute. He is, and has been for a season or two, manager of "The Fire Patrol." Of course he and she are the central figures in this particular case, but there are others equally well known among players who are interested in the contest between Mr. and Mrs. Hume.

In fact, Robert Mantell, Charlotte Behrens, Mr. Hume and Mrs. Mantell are all mixed up in this matrimonial olla podrida, while Rose Coghlan serves as a sort of a Tabasco sauce to season the ingredients of the bubbling stew. This is not altogether fresh news to the members of the players' fraternity, for it has been leaking out in driblets ever since Mr. Mantell appeared as Orlando in the Arcadian performance of "As You Like It," under the management of "Johnny" Hickey and Harry Lee in Saratoga last fall.

One divorce, another on the books and a shocked actress make up the story of the drama that will be played in the courts under the commonplace title of Hume vs. Hume, and if all those capable of giving spicy evidence are called, it will indeed be a hummer.

As the story goes, Miss Behrens, who has for two or three seasons been Mr. Mantell's leading woman, accompanied him to Saratoga.

He was lonesome and wanted an amanuensis, but when he tried to induce Messrs. Lee & Hickey to foot the bills of his fair companion, those who happened to be standing by declare that Mr. Hickey's vehement refusal might have been heard in Connecticut. As Miss Behrens had no connection with "As You Like It," except as Orlando's companion, the management would not pay her railroad fares or hotel bills.

Miss Coghlan has engaged to play Rosalind to Mr. Mantell's Orlando. She is said to be a great stickler for the proprieties, and she was so mightily grieved by the presence of Miss Behrens at a breakfast table adjoining her own in the Grand Union hotel that she flounced out of the room in high dudgeon.

The story was a nine days wonder, and if Miss Coghlan really knew how the players made merry over her flight from feminine contamination, she might have those who laughed brought up with a round legal turn.

Mrs. Mantell heard of her husband's didos in Saratoga with Miss Behrens, and as it was not his first fault, she brought suit to have her marriage annulled, naming Miss Behrens as co-respondent. As Mr. Mantell did not oppose his wife's action, she got a divorce.

Mr. Hume, who was seen in Portchester last night, said:

"It is true that I have begun suit for divorce from my wife, Miss Behrens. I have not seen her since Sept. 28, 1892, when she came to see me in Buffalo. We stayed two days in the Iroquois hotel. Then she went away. I have not seen her since. Mrs. Mantell and she were inseparable. My first doubts were raised when I heard of her accompanying Mantell to Saratoga. A little later two of her sisters told me some sad things about her. Yes, Mantell will be named as co-respondent. Yes, we had one child—a girl. Thank God, she is dead!"

Watching the Highbinders.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 22.—Dozens of policemen are on guard in Chinatown to keep the Highbinders' societies from carrying out their plan to sacrifice two lives to atone for the murders of last Friday and Saturday. Two excited Chinamen were arrested at the headquarters of the Ong Yek murder society. Each man carried two navy revolvers and a wicked looking knife and wore a mail shirt made of steel links.

Changed the Date of Execution.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 22.—A long petition from citizens of Kent county has been favorably considered by Gov. Brown. The petition requested a postponement of the executions of the eight murderers of Dr. Hill, who were to hang in Chestertown during Christmas week. The Governor changed the date of execution to Jan. 13.

Some Strikers Getting Their Old Positions.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Nov. 22.—The Carnegie firm now seems inclined to favor the old men as much as possible, and there have already been a large number of colored men discharged to make room for old employes. The condition of the plant is such that repairs will shortly have to be made.

Murdered on a Tug.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—James Kerrigan, 30 years old, was found dead at an early morning hour in the engine room of the tug R. S. Carter, at the foot of Adams street, Brooklyn. His skull was crushed in. Two men have been arrested on suspicion of having been concerned in the murder.

Two Boys Carried Over a Dam.

LUNCHBURG, Va., Nov. 22.—Willie Robinson and George Barbour, aged 14 and 16 years, were drowned at Bald Eagle dam, west of this city, in the James river, yesterday. The boys were trying to cross the river in a flat boat, when it went over the dam.

England Will Retain Uganda.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—It is announced semi-officially that the government has resolved to retain Uganda. In this event a special commission will be sent out to supercede the officials of the British East Africa company.

The Eva May Uninjured.

CHATHAM, Mass., Nov. 22.—The schooner Eva May, which went ashore near here yesterday, was floated in the evening and proceeded, apparently uninjured.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
TRENTON, NOV. 15, 1892.

In accordance with the law and established custom in this State, the Executive each year, sets apart a day of thanksgiving and prayer on which the people may rest from their labor and assemble in their homes and places of worship, to acknowledge and return thanks to Almighty God for his goodness and mercy, and pray that He will continue to bless them with abundance and prosperity.

Therefore, I, Leon Abbett, Governor of the State of New Jersey, do hereby designate Thursday, the Twenty-Fourth Day of November, instant, as a day of public thanksgiving and prayer, and recommend that the people of this State on that day abstain from all secular avocations, assemble in their usual places of worship, and give thanks to God for his infinite goodness in the past, and invoke for the future His blessings upon the nation, the State and the homes of our people.

Given under my hand and privy seal, at the Executive Chamber, in the city of Trenton, [L. S.] on this fifteenth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

LEON ABBETT, Governor.

Attest:—LEON ABBETT, JR., Private Secretary.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

Forecast Till 8 P. M. Wednesday: For New Jersey, Fair Till Thursday; Colder Wednesday Morning; Northwesterly Winds.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—"The Voodoo" to-night.

—Don't miss the musical comedy at Music Hall, this evening.

—Twenty-eight men were laid off Friday at the Potter Press works.

—You are wanted at the Bicycle Club house next Saturday night. See "wants".

—Order your Thanksgiving pies and puddings of Stephenson, 27 North avenue.

—Twenty-four students are already enrolled for the study of arithmetic and algebra at the Y. M. C. A. rooms. The class will meet this evening at 8.

—Your Thanksgiving dinner will not be complete without oysters. Rogers, the sea food man of West Second street, has 20,000 of the finest to be procured.

—The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum will give a second grand entertainment in Music Hall, Thursday evening. The play will be, "Eileen Oge, or Dark's the Hour Before Dawn".

—The wonder and admiration of Plainfield's good housewives is the great stock of poultry at J. W. VanSickle's, 10 North avenue. This excellent market man has hundreds of fine turkeys, chickens, ducks, and other game.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Sallie Wilson and Miss Josie Howell, two of New Brunswick's most charming belles, are visiting friends in this city.

The Rev. C. E. Herring will be installed pastor of the First Presbyterian church to-night, and on Friday night he will be given a reception in the church parlors.

The Rev. Dr. Richards of the Crescent Avenue church, has refused to consider a call, that undoubtedly would otherwise have been extended him, to fill the pulpit of the late Dr. Howard Crosby of New York. The salary connected with it is $6,000.

MILLINGTON WINS.

He Leads in a Close Race for Councilmanic Honors.

The fourth ward primary was a long and much-contested affair. There were about as many Democrats running the meeting as there were Republicans. Two factions developed, and they were pretty evenly matched.

The chairman of the evening was Townsend Rushmore, and Robert Loughlin was clerk.

B. F. Millington led the fight for councilmanic nomination, and won. He received 89 votes. Horace Sherwin was a close second with 77. C. A. Sturtevant and others got scattering ballots.

For members of the city executive committee J. Manchester, W. Titsworth and H. A. Weber were elected.

C. B. Post defeated Aaron Mattox for nomination for constable.

Delegates were elected as follows to the city convention:

C. Lester, 73 votes; W. Titsworth, 71; J. Thompson, 73; A. Muir, 70; C. Foster, 75; W. McGue, 72; C. Rote, 74; A. Ayers, 75; T. Rushmore, 76; C. Leland, 73; T. J. Carey, 70; A. Lanamore, 73; W. Kelvie, 72; C. Fulmore, 73.

The vote on the unsuccessful candidates was as follows:

T. Lyness, 63; R. Laughlin, 64; Wm. Classen, 51; J. B. Higgins, 53; C. Myers, 58; H. Force, 52; E. Maynard, 52; J. J. Scriven, 51; Wm. Kline, 53; Jas. Smith, 52; A. Titsworth, 52; C. Stephens, 56; C. Rote, 54; H. A. Weber, 53.

T. J. Gillies was nominated for justice of the peace.

Millington, the councilmanic nominee, is a machinist in Pond's, and is president of the Fourth Ward Republican club.

The result of the primary is understood to be a victory for the "boss".

The city's head kickers consoled themselves last night with the reflection that the "anti-bossites" of the ward made a close and creditable contest.

Another Delightful Lecture.

Beautiful and inspiring scenes in the life and home of William Shakespeare were illustrated and described in fitting language by Mr. Ragan, last night, in Music Hall, in his second lecture, entitled "Shakespeare and the Avon".

In his introductory words Mr. Ragan repeated the fact that all knowledge of the personality of England's bard can be told in one page of a book. There is much, however, that is known of his surroundings in life that is interesting and ennobling. His birthplace, the scenes of his boyhood days, the home of the young man's bride, the many delightful spots whence he drew his inspiration, were thrown upon the canvas in artistic drawing and coloring. Mr. Ragan made the subject one intensely interesting to every listener.

"The Hudson, Lake George and the Adirondacks" will be Mr. Ragan's next lecture, to be delivered Wednesday of next week, Nov. 30.

HE WILL STILL BE BOSS.

THE FIGHT OF THE ANTI-RINGITES ON THE WANE.

The Republican Primaries Not as Lively as Anticipated—The Usual Nominations for Councilmen and Ward Officers, and City Convention Delegates—The Fourth Ward the Only Fighting One.

The effort of local Republicans to depose the "boss" who has so long dominated the party's and the city's affairs is already weakening. For weeks there have been mutterings as of the thunder of a coming storm in the camp of the Plainfield Republicans. It has been openly avowed that a bitter attempt would be made to overthrow the old and notorious ring rule whose yoke has chafed so many necks so long. The one-man power, the insurgents said, would have to go. The sentiment was growing among a certain class of voters who resented the restraints and dictations of the party boss, and they were determined to make united effort to establish a new local government freed of one-man and ring dictation. The avowed and reputed leaders of the movement against anti bossism were men who have at times been prominent in the councils of the "boss", but who were at last coming to feel the stabs that have at times been inflicted on them, and do smart under the sting of the party lash.

The taxpayers would be benefited, it was argued, by a successful outcome of the fight, because then they would be freed from the burden and oppression of the selfish greed fostered in municipal matters under ring rule; and the young Republicans especially were not for gore, because they thought it time some of the "old fossils" took a back seat and gave the younger generation a show.

But the heat of their wrath seemed to die out almost as fast as they gave expression to it.

Not nearly the fight anticipated was made in any of the primaries last night. Instead the "boss" may be said to have strengthened his lines and fortified his position. The kickers say the warfare is not abandoned, but only delayed.

It had been asserted that many of the local Democrats, eager to help the independent Republicans in their fight for the people, were in favor of holding aloof from the fight so far as nominating Democratic candidates was concerned, and also advised lending their strength to the new party in the hope of overthrowing the obnoxious bossism and ring rule. But the anti-ring men were feeble and did not capture the primaries, and will not take an independent stand to nominate a "citizen's" ticket. So the Democrats are going ahead with their regular nominations in the usual way, and will hold their primaries to-night.

"WENT THROUGH LIKE GREASE."

That's the Way They Speak of Councilman Fisk's Renomination.

The wheels of the Third ward primary were nicely oiled. In the language of a leading citizen of the ward, "Everything went through as slick as grease". E. N. Erickson blushingly presided over the gathering, which was another of the "kid-gloved" order. The much-whiskered men seemed in demand for office, for besides Mr. Erickson as chairman there was O. B. Leonard as clerk, and Craig A. Marsh as judge. T. O. Doane as inspector was a happy relief, for he wore only a mustache.

Charles J. Fisk for councilman was nominated by John W. Murray, and F. E. Marsh seconded the nomination. Everybody was glad to vote for the genial and clear-headed "Cupid" of the councilmanic board.

Amos Moffett, the good graybeard constable, was another favorite who had no opponents. He was nominated for continuance in office, with power to arrest.

J. Oakley Nodyne, the perennial peaceable justice, was put up for another term

W. T. Kirk, E. R. Ackerman and Roger Murray were elected to membership in that mysterious star chamber, the city executive committee.

The following delegates were elected to the city convention:

Wm. B. Wadsworth,	E. R. Ackerman,
O. T. Waring,	H. O. Newman,
Jno. W. Murray,	Jno. M. Crane,
Geo. K. Thomas,	J. E. Tracy,
E. L. Finch,	Wm. T. Kaufman,
Dominick McNamee,	Geo. H. Babcock,
G. B. Titsworth.

R. F. Murray, E. L. Finch and E. R. Ackerman were appointed a committee empowered to fill vacancies.

Bowling.

The bowling on the Crescent League alleys last night resulted as follows:

Meeker	142	Jones	149
Haynes	133	Woolston	141
VanAlstyne	135	Buckle	128
Dunham	101	Whitney	149
Teel	161	VanWinkle	157

—The Republican city convention will be held to-morrow evening at 8, at 12 East Front street.

On the road to health—the consumptive who reasons and thinks. Consumption is developed through the blood. It's a scrofulous affection of the lungs—a blood-taint. Find a perfect remedy for scrofula, in all its forms—something that purifies the blood, as well as claims to. That, if it's taken in time, will cure Consumption.

Dr. Pierce has found it. It's his "Golden Medical Discovery." As a strength-restorer, blood-cleanser, and flesh-builder, nothing like it is known to medical science. For every form of Scrofula, Bronchial, Throat, and Lung affections, Weak Lungs, Severe Coughs, and kindred ailments, it's the only remedy so sure that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, you have your money back.

"You get well, or you get $500." That's what is promised, in good faith, by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, to sufferers from Catarrh. The worst cases, no matter of how long standing, are permanently cured by this Remedy.

Salvation Oil should always be kept in the kitchen. For the ready cure of scalds and burns it has no equal. 25 cents.

PRESIDENT GINNA RE-NOMINATED.

The Same Old Ring in the Second Ward—The Only Innovation Is the Abandonment of Unit Rule.

A notable feature of the Second ward primary was the absence of Vincent W. Nash. He is generally looked for in that ward to give voice to any objections that might arise. There is often good sense in the stand he takes, but he is known as a chronic kicker, and his failure to take part in the proceedings, even by occupying a seat and voting, was freely commented on. Perhaps he stayed away because he knew the meeting would be a cut-and-dried "kid gloved" affair. The familiar list of Broadway and La Grande avenue candidates for city convention delegates was floating about in the shape of printed slips. Some of the plebeians of the ward who ventured to intrude into the selectness of the gathering said "It's a mistake to have printed tickets. There should n't be any." Yet they went right on voting that printed ballot in just the same old way.

It is notorious that the Second ward is hide-bound to "parlor circle" rule. A commuters' coterie of good men who are sneered at by the "natives" for the softness and whiteness of their hands meet in private residence and prepare a list of representatives after their own hearts. That ticket usually "goes" in primary.

It had been anticipated that an attempt would be made to wrest the ward from "parlor circle" control. But without the leadership of Mr. Nash, who is recognized as "king kicker", the fighters were as placid as lambs. One who is sly about his kicking was there, and he is a mightier by far than Mr. Nash. But his plottings ran deep, and he raised not his voice in opposition, for his mouthpiece was absent, and he is too sly to appear prominently as an objector. Two other leading kickers contented themselves with standing out in the lobby and criticizing the proceedings. "The same old gang", they kept saying in disgust. "No use to buck against 'em."

The officers of the evening were about as usual:

Chairman—George H. Goddard.
Clerk—C. A. Baynon.
Judge—A. Vanderbeek.
Inspector—H. H. Baker.

The following nominations were made by unanimous choice, the secretary in each instance casting the deciding ballot:

For councilman—S. A. Ginna.
For constable—Wm. R. Mattox.
For justice of the peace—Joseph B. Mosher.

C. A. Baynon, W. R. Codington and John Uirich were unanimously re-elected members of the city executive committee.

The printed list of candidates were elected delegates to the city convention, as follows:

S. A. Ginna, C. A. Baynon, F. O. Herring, R. K. Case, John Johnston, A. Vanderbeek, John Brooks, J. W. Gavett and J. B. Dumont, 77 votes apiece; A. V. Nolen, H. B. Newhall, A. D. Holmes, F. Wood and George H. Goddard, 75 votes apiece.

Dr. Berg received 4 complimentary votes, and George H. Frost 1. Three ballots were cast with 15 names on, and were rejected.

The only cropping-up of an attempt to break away from time-honored and dyed-in-the-wool customs, was the introduction of a resolution, by judge Uirich, to abandon "unit rule". The judge did n't seem much concerned over the adoption of the resolution, and it appeared innocent on its surface. So everyone voted for it, though many would n't had they stopped to study the thing out.

The resolution as adopted was that it was the sense of the primary that the Republicans of the Second ward were opposed to ward unit rule, and the delegates were instructed to exercise their own individual judgment and choice in voting for the respective candidates.

Instead of making an open primary fight against the "boss", an effort will be made, under the liberties of the individual rule, to convert most of the delegates to help make "anti-boss" nominations.

J. W. Jackson passed around the hat for the janitor, and everyone went home.

The delegates were empowered to fill any vacancies occurring among their number.

HYMENEAL.

Bachen—Harberger.

The marriage of Miss Mary Madeline Harberger, daughter of Mrs. John S. Harberger, to Conrad H. Bachen of New York, took place at the homestead at high noon yesterday.

The ceremony was performed by Archbishop Corrigan of New Jersey, assisted by his secretary.

The bride wore a gown of rich corded silk, cream white, literally covered with old point-lace of rare texture, which has been a long time in the family. The garment was trimmed with pearls, and in addition the bride wore sparkling diamonds. The bride was certainly most elegantly dressed. She was given away by her brother, John L. Harberger. The bride's mother wore an elaborate costume of black silk.

The bridesmaids were two nieces of the bride, the Misses Joan and May Anderson, who wore white silk. Little Kenneth Anderson made a beautiful page.

The entire house was gorgeous with flowers and plants from the conservatory. The music room, where the wedding ceremony took place, was especially beautiful in decorations.

The breakfast was served by Maresi. The wedding was a very pretty event, but was limited to the immediate relatives of the family.

Regeneration.

To secure a normal and regular tissue change throughout the body use BRANDRETH'S PILLS. This tissue metamorphosis consists in constantly proceeding waste of tissue and its regeneration. BRANDRETH'S PILLS are the best solvent of the products of disintegration of the tissues and increases their elasticity. They are an alterative and eliminative remedy, which allay irritation and remove obstruction by aiding nature and are of great benefit in cases of temporary and habitual constipation, torpid liver, billiousness, headache, indigestion, rheumatism and diseases arising from an impure state of the blood.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS are purely vegetable, absolutely harmless and safe to take at any time.

There is no better proof of the excellence of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup than that it is recommended by leading physicians.

WHO FOR MAYOR?

MR. GILBERT MAY NOT BE THE CANDIDATE FOR A SECOND TERM.

Republicans Divided on the Question of Chief Executive Nominee—It Can't Be Councilman Fisk, and Most of the Other Candidates Are by Far Less Popular.

The selection of a candidate for mayor is puzzling the Republicans of Plainfield. There is a plenty of men eager for the honor, but many of them are unpopular among voters in their own party, and might stand a chance of defeat. Councilman Fisk was the only candidate who may be said to be universally popular, and he has designedly been put out of the way by being renominated for member of the common council from the Third ward.

Mayor Gilbert may not be the convention's choice. He is a most excellent man, a splendid citizen, of high mental and moral worth, and rare integrity; he is a good mayor, thoughtful, judicious, painstaking, conscientious, ever watchful of the city's best interests. But in studying to serve and benefit the people he has not taken pains to please the ward politicians and their heelers, and as a result he is in disfavor with some.

As strong a feeling as anywhere, is that among the G. A. R. men of Winfield Scott post. It is stated by one of them that few if any of even the blackest Republicans of the post would vote for Mr. Gilbert. They do not forget nor forgive his action in dividing the Memorial Day appropriation made by the common council.

"The money was intended"—said a prominent G. A. R. man to a PRESS reporter—"for Winfield Scott post, who alone and as usual went to heavy expense to celebrate the day properly. The appropriation was made in response to Winfield Scott post's request. Major Anderson post was not entitled to a cent. They made no display, spent nothing to speak of. Their actual expenditure was $10. Yet Mr. Gilbert, who commanded the disposal of the fund of $100, directed that the two posts share alike. Winfield Scott post spent two or three times what the city gave them. Major Anderson post pocketed $40 profits. We feel that in this matter Mr. Gilbert was very unjust."

In many such little matters as these has Mr. Gilbert lost votes, and it will be remembered that his original election was by a surprisingly narrow margin. The usual Republican majority of 400 was cut down to 143.

So Mr. Gilbert is not by some considered a strong candidate.

The "boss" and his followers will strive to have a man nominated who will be a ready tool in their hands. The "anti-boss" element will seek to secure the selection of an independent and untrammeled representative.

A local politician said this afternoon that from a rough canvass of the convention delegates he judged that Mr. Gilbert, in spite of his lack of popularity in some quarters, was after all likely to receive the nomination by a small majority.

Complimentary and Unasked for Notices of Assemblyman Lane,

Thomas F. Lane's candidacy for the speakership of the House of Assembly says the New York World, seems to be making considerable progress in the newspapers, and it will not be his fault if it does not advance with equal celerity elsewhere.

He is young, urbane, energetic and a politician. Whoever runs a race with him for the goal he has in view will be pretty sure to find a pair of flying heels always in front of him.

Unfortunately the speakership does not go always to the swift and the well equipped. Political leaders are apt to get together the night before the time fixed for the organization of the House and render profitless the work of ambitious candidates. Back in the days of Republican control Gen. Sewell had only to nod and wink and it was all over.

But whether he win or lose in his present contest, the bearded young man from Union county will have the satisfaction when it is all over of filing away in his scrap-book some very complimentary and unasked-for allusions to the size and alertness of his intellect, which show that many persons think he ought to have the office whether he gets it or not.

Political Notes From Exchanges.

There will be 25 Senatorial seats vacant at Washington on March 4. Of these 13 will fall to the Democrats, 9 to the Republicans and 3 to the People's party, one of these being Senator Stewart of Nevada, who has deserted the standard of the g. o. p. The Democrats gain Senatorships from the Republicans, one from California, Montana, New York, Wisconsin and Wyoming respectively, while they do not lose one seat they hold at present. The People's party ousted Republicans from Kansas and Nebraska, besides gaining Senator Stewart, who succeeds himself in Nevada. The Democrats have 44 Senators to 40 of the Republicans and the 4 of the People's party—as many as the two parties muster between them—and can, besides, call on the Vice-President's casting vote in case of a tie. As Arizona and New Mexico will certainly be admitted to statehood (and Utah probably), the Democracy will thereby gain two Senators apiece from these new States.

At the Manhattan club banquet to Mr. Cleveland on Saturday night held in the supper room of the club, president Coudert in proposing the health of the guest of the evening dwelt on the fact that the Democratic victory was not only a party triumph, but a popular triumph.

"No man is so great", said he, "that he is greater than the people. The greatest of men is the man who is with the people and for the people, and living in the people's hearts."

"A God-send is Ely's Cream Balm. I had catarrh for three years. Two or three times a week my nose would bleed. I thought the sores would never heal. Your Balm has cured me."—Mrs. M. A. Jackson, Portsmouth, N. H.

THE CAMERA CLUB.

Highly Creditable Work Shown In the Annual Exhibition.

The Plainfield Camera club opened its rooms last evening for another highly creditable annual exhibition of the member's work. Artistically arranged the rooms present a pleasant picture.

From year to year the club has endeavored to show the people of this city as fine work in photography as can be seen anywhere; and, in fact, it is said that there is only one club in this country, which has ever excelled the Plainfield exhibits.

The prizes awarded on the beautiful views of the present exhibitors are as follows:

First prize in portraiture, Andrew J. Gavett, "Our Big Six", "Papa can't find his keys", "Admiration".

First prize in flash-light work, Mr. Gavett's "Pat-a-Cake, Pat-a-cake."

First prize in architecture, "A Glimpse of Trinity". These pictures are beautiful specimens of art.

Harry Squires gets first prize for artistic photography, also first prize for landscape. His exhibits are as usual excellent.

Harold W. Serrell, first prize in rapid instantaneous work: "Animals", "Farm Life" and "Groupings".

J. H. Doane, first prize for life in action: "On the Road".

J. E. Stewart, first prize: "Landscape".

T. E. Hazell, first prize, "Marines".

The following receive honorable mention for work not in competition, their work being exceptionally well done: W. J. Buttfield, "Marines & Animals"; Mrs. Rand, photographs of the Columbian celebration in New York. "Deserted in Farm Life" would have won a first prize had it been put in competition. C. E. Faber, views of Plainfield and vicinity, excellent.

Mrs. C. W. McCutchen's exhibit "Camp life at Camp Pinafore, Summer of 1892" is one of beautiful specimens, and should have been put in competition.

George H. Babcock's exhibition of views on bromide paper are the finest ever shown in Plainfield.

C. H. Davis's work in portraiture is that of a master.

Henry Squires's "Platinitypes" are the finest ever exhibited.

T. E. Hazell has an illuminated exhibition, which is both novel and interesting; the views are excellent.

Henry Coward's hand-camera work shows improvement, and is above the average.

J. Neagle shows a fine lot of views of architecture and machinery.

Edward Rushmore has his first work on exhibition. It consists of groupings, landscapes and architecture, and shows careful work.

Altogether the exhibit is one of real merit, and shows a marked improvement over anything ever done by the club in past years.

Hope Chapel's First Victory.

A friendly game at bowling between a five-men team from Dunellen and a five-men team connected with Hope chapel was played on the latter alleys last evening. The game was very exciting the whole way through and at one time it was thought the Dunelleners would be the victors as they were fifty-one points ahead of the Chapel team in the fifth frame; but by hard work and keeping together the Chapelers got the best of them in the last frame. The score:

HOPE CHAPEL.		DUNELLEN.
Turner	96	Lanntgan	126
Muir	120	Giles	126
Wheatly	97	Gallagher	100
Morning	142	Tingley	146
Gray	133	Wilson	80
	588		578

Taylor of Dunellen umpired the game.

—"The Voodoo, or A Lucky Charm", the musical comedy which is to be presented at Music Hall, this evening, is built on the folly of a woman who is so credulous that she believes that she can suddenly acquire riches through the medium of a certain charm, the receipt of which, according to the formula of a voodoo woman, from whom she obtained it, is—obtain seven hairs plucked from the beard of a man who possesses certain distinct facial peculiarities. They must be extricated by force or be given voluntarily by the owner, who must not, however, be informed of the use to which they are to be put. Then they must be encased in clarified wax and affixed with a red seal to a lottery ticket which will then—as a matter of course—if there are no other lottery tickets under a similar voodoo, draw the capital prize. This superstition has been closely studied by author F. S. Gibbs, who has filled the comedy with numerous funny situations and laughable incidents.

AN ORDINANCE

Locating the tracks of the Plainfield Street Railway company within the Borough of North Plainfield, and regulating the construction and operation of the same, and granting permission to said company to use electric motors as the propelling power of its cars.

The Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. That the tracks of the Plainfield Street Railway company be and they are hereby located pursuant to the route designated in their petition to extend their tracks into the borough of North Plainfield, in the following streets and avenues of the Borough of North Plainfield, to wit:

Beginning at a point in Somerset street at the line dividing North Plainfield township and the city of Plainfield and running thence northerly along Somerset street to Johnston's Drive, being the northwesterly boundary line of the borough of North Plainfield.

And said street railway company is hereby given the right to construct, maintain and operate its street railway in said street within the borough of North Plainfield.

A detailed plan of the construction shall be filed with the borough clerk by said company and approved by said Mayor and Council before any work is done under the permission herein granted.

SEC. 2. That the said company shall construct, maintain and operate a single track street railway to be laid upon the middle line of the street (except when by ordinance or resolution the Mayor and Council shall otherwise expressly determine) with suitable turnouts and switches; provided that no turnout shall be more than one hundred and fifty feet in length nor within two thousand feet of any other turnout in the same street; and provided also that every turnout shall be laid equally on each side of the middle line of the street.

SEC. 3. That said company shall keep in repair to the satisfaction of the committee on streets and public health, the paving or other surface material of the portion of the streets, roads and bridges occupied by its tracks, and in addition shall so keep in repair eighteen inches on each side of the portion of said streets, roads and bridges occupied by its tracks, or, if not so kept and maintained, the repairs thereto may be made by or under the direction of said committee on streets and public health, and to their satisfaction, and the expense thereof shall be paid on demand by said company to said borough; provided, that the said committee on streets and public health, or a majority of them, shall give at least ten days notice in writing of the intention to make such repairs; the said notices to be served upon any officer or employee of said company who may be found at their office or depot.

SEC. 4. The said company and its officers, servants, agents or employes shall not nor shall any or either of them be allowed to shovel, throw or place any snow, ice, slush or any other material alongside the said track or tracks, in any street or streets, in such manner as to obstruct other public travel therein, but, when removing snow, ice, slush or any other material from said track or tracks, the said company or its said officers, servants, agents or employes, shall cause the same to be immediately levelled between said tracks or rails and the gutter lines on each side thereof; under a penalty of twenty dollars to be paid by said company, or by any of its said officers, servants, agents or employes so offending to said borough, for each and every offence.

SEC. 5. The rails to be used for said railway shall be of steel, and shall be of the pattern of sidebearing grooved rails known as the Section Y, 62 lbs. weight to the yard, as made by the Johnson company. And the sleepers, ties, chairs and spikes shall severally be of the best quality of their respective kinds; and both material and workmanship shall be subject to the inspection and approval of the committee on streets and public health; and said railway shall not be operated for the transportation of passengers, or fares be collected thereon, until such approval and acceptance by said mayor and council or a majority of them.

SEC. 6. The company shall, in laying its tracks, switches and turnouts, conform in all cases to the grade line of the streets, as now in fact existing, or as they may be hereafter changed or established by the mayor and council; and said company shall, in case of any such change of grade, conform thereto, and alter such tracks, switches and turnouts at their own expense, and without unnecessary delay, and under the direction of said committee on streets and public health; or, in case of default, the said committee on streets and public health shall make such change, or cause the same to be made, and the expenses thereof shall be paid, on demand, by said company to said borough; provided ten days' notice of the committee's intention to make such change shall be given, and served in the same manner as in case of repairs as aforesaid.

SEC. 7 In passing over the gutters of any cross street where the bottom of such gutters is or may be below the grade line of such railroad, the rails shall be securely laid and fastened upon iron bridges of the most approved pattern; and such bridges shall be extended on each side of the track or tracks to the gutter line of the street in which said track or tracks is or are laid; the bridges and work to be subject to the inspection and approval of said committee on streets and public health, in every particular.

SEC. 8. During the construction of said railroad, lighted lanterns shall be kept and maintained by said company from sunset to sunrise each and every night, not less than fifty feet nor more than one hundred feet apart, along every part, where the work of construction shall have been begun, of any and all street or streets designated by the said mayor and council for laying of tracks by said company, and no unnecessary hindrance or obstruction to ordinary travel upon any such street or streets, shall be permitted; and if any accident or other casualty shall happen or occur, at any time, to any person or property, because or by reason of any work connected with such construction of said railroad or afterward because or by reason of any operation thereof, or through the carelessness or negligence of any of the company's officers or servants, agents or employes the said company shall be liable therefore, and shall indemnify, and save said borough harmless from all cost, loss or damage by reason thereof.

SEC. 9. No salt shall be used by the said company upon any part of its tracks in said borough except on switches and curves; nor shall any car belonging to said company be allowed to stand in or obstruct any cross street or to stand upon any cross-walk, for any purpose or purposes whatsoever; nor to stand or remain in any one position upon any street, for more than five minutes at one time except when said car shall be unavoidably obstructed or detained without the fault or negligence of said company, or any of its officers, servants, agents or employes, under the penalty of twenty-five dollars to be paid by said company to said borough for each and every offence.

And that cars stopping to take up or let off passengers at any street crossing, shall in all cases do so upon the far side of such crossing.

SEC. 10. The said borough reserves the right for said borough and anyone authorized by it to dig or excavate in or upon any such street in which said railway shall be so constructed, for the purpose of laying, examining, repairing or replacing any water or sewer pipe or other pipes or making or shutting off any connection therewith, or for the purpose of making any other improvement, or of doing any other work of any kind whatever; and the said company shall not have any recourse against said borough therefor, for damages or otherwise, because of any detention or obstruction to the travel upon said railroad arising therefrom.

SEC. 11. If the said company shall fail to build or construct the whole of said railroad, with its said turnouts and switches in the manner aforesaid, and to put the same in complete operation for the transportation of passengers, within seven months next after the passage of this ordinance, or shall afterwards fail or neglect to operate the same as aforesaid, daily and every day for the space of sixty consecutive days or shall fail to operate the same for a total number of days exceeding ninety in any one year, all the rights, powers and privileges, and every one of them, of said company, their successors or assigns, under and by virtue of this ordinance, shall thereupon cease and be determined, and this ordinance shall become null and void, so far as the grant of any such right, power or privilege to said company is concerned and, in either of such cases, the mayor and council expressly reserve the right to cause the said railroad, or any part or parts thereof, so constructed, to be removed from said street or streets, or any of them, and to sell and dispose of the materials thereof by public auction, and, after paying all the expenses of such removal and sale and of repair to the said street or streets, and of restoring the same as nearly as possible to its or their original condition to pay the balance of the proceeds of such sale to the said company, or its successors or assigns; provided, that no notice of such sale shall be required to be given, other than an advertisement signed by the borough clerk, and published in one or more newspapers printed and published in the city of Plainfield.

SEC. 12. The cars shall be lighted by electricity and properly heated in winter, and shall be of the same design and construction as the cars now in use by the said Street Railway company in Plainfield, New Jersey.

The company shall use upon its cars the most approved noiseless gearing, and shall have proper bells or gongs, and shall be run at a speed of not more than twelve miles an hour.

SEC. 13. The cars to be used upon said railroad shall be propelled by electricity supplied by overhead wires; the poles necessary for the overhead electric construction shall be of steel or iron, they shall be placed between curb lines and sidewalk, opposite each other, and shall be located as nearly as may be one hundred and twenty-five feet apart. The trolley wires shall be properly guarded so as to prevent other wires coming into contact therewith. The current used by said company to propel its cars shall not exceed five hundred volts.

SEC. 14. That the fares charged for transportation of passengers over said railway within the borough of North Plainfield, and to or from any point in the city of Plainfield, shall be as follows: Borough marshals when on duty, and firemen when going to fires and within thirty minutes after the extinguishment of the same, FREE; children under four years of age, FREE; children over four and under ten years of age not occupying seats required by other passengers, THREE CENTS. All others, FIVE CENTS. School tickets shall be sold for three cents to all children actually attending school, and to all teachers actually teaching school within the borough of North Plainfield.

That said company shall maintain a system of transfers for a continuous ride within the combined limits of the borough of North Plainfield and the city of Plainfield for a single fare on all lines now or hereafter owned or operated by said company, and also shall give and receive like transfers to and from all the lines of other street railways upon any equitable basis that can be agreed upon by said companies. And in case of failure of any two of said companies to agree upon any such equitable basis of transfer, the question shall be submitted to five arbitrators, one to be chosen by each of the disagreeing companies, a like number by the mayor and council of the borough of North Plainfield, and a fifth by those so chosen, the decision of a majority of such arbitrators to be final and conclusive and binding upon each of the companies.

SEC. 15. That no license fee shall be charged for the running of the cars of the said company for the period of two years from the date of the adoption of this ordinance; that thereafter, beginning at the expiration of said period of two years, there shall be paid to said borough by said company as a license fee for the running of its cars, the sum of fifty dollars for the first year, one hundred dollars for the second year, one hundred and fifty dollars for the third year, two hundred dollars for the fourth year, two hundred dollars for the fifth year, two hundred dollars for the sixth year, two hundred dollars for the seventh year, two hundred dollars for the eighth year, and two hundred and fifty dollars for each and every year after the expiration of the said eighth year; such payment to be made annually.

SEC. 16. That the cars of the said company shall be run under the following minimum headway; between six a. m. and ten a. m., fifteen minutes; between ten a. m. and three p. m. thirty minutes; between 3 p. m. and eight p. m. fifteen minutes; between eight p. m. and midnight, thirty minutes. The said headway to be reduced as the service requires.

Said company shall run its cars in both directions along all the portions of its route so that there shall be an equal number of trips each way daily.

All cars used upon the tracks located by virtue of this ordinance shall be run through by the electric line controlled by said company from Johnston's Drive to the point of nearest approach by any tracks of said company to the station of the Central Railroad of New Jersey on North avenue in the city of Plainfield, and returning shall likewise be run through from said last mentioned point to Johnston's Drive, so that passengers shall not be required to change cars in traveling by said street railway between said railroad station and any point in North Plainfield on the line of the tracks located by virtue of this ordinance.

SEC. 17. That when any improvements or other method of furnishing the power for the propulsion of cars shall have been determined to be a practical success, by a commission consisting of three engineers, one to be selected by the mayor and council, one by the said company, and the third by the two so chosen, such company shall, within six months after the passage of a resolution by the mayor and, council requiring the same to be done, and notice thereof given to said company to adopt such improvements, take down their overhead construction and substitute therefore such new methods of propulsion; provided such commission may be appointed at any time the mayor and council may by resolution require, and the said company shall appoint its representative within thirty days after the adoption of said resolution, or forfeit the permission hereby given; and if such commission shall report in favor of the adoption of such improvements or method for propulsion of cars hereby permitted, another commission may be appointed as often as the mayor and council may require in the same manner and subject to the same condition.

SEC. 18. In case such substitution is made, or the said company shall forfeit the permission hereby given by refusal to appoint a member of the commission as in the last section provided for, the mayor and council may order the poles and overhead construction of the said company taken down, and the said company shall within ninety days from the service of such order on the president or any director of said company take down and remove such poles and overhead construction, and restore the pavement of the street or streets to its original condition within that time. In case the poles and overhead construction are not removed or the street restored to its original condition by said company within ninety days from the service of such order, the same shall be done by the said mayor and council, at the expense of said company, and the said company shall in that case pay all expenses connected therewith on demand, and in case the aforesaid borough shall remove such poles and overhead construction, the same shall thereupon become and be the property of the borough.

SEC. 19. That said company upon final adoption of this ordinance and before exercising any of the rights and privileges hereby granted, shall as a condition precedent file with the borough clerk of the borough of North Plainfield a contract to be executed by said company and duly approved by the corporation counsel, wherein said company covenant and agree with the mayor and council of the borough of North Plainfield to abide by and perform all the matters and things herein, on the part of said company to be observed, kept and performed; and it will, at any and all times hereafter, fully indemnify and protect the borough of North Plainfield of and from all suits, actions and proceedings that may be brought and maintained, or sought to be brought and maintained, by any person or corporation for, on account of or by reason of, the adoption or maintenance by said company, its successors or assigns of said electric or other system or anything connected therewith, or any act of omission or commission by said company, its successors or assigns or any of its agents or servants, at any time or times, and shall whenever requested by said borough, fully defend every and any such action, suit or proceeding.

SEC. 20. That said company shall also at the same time herein above specified for filing said contract, file a bond to the borough in the sum of twenty thousand dollars to be approved as to form by the mayor and council and corporation counsel of said borough, conditioned for the full and faithful keeping, observance and performance of the terms and conditions in this ordinance contained, on part of said company to be kept, observed or performed.

And in case the conditions or terms upon which said company is granted permission to locate its tracks and maintain and operate its road or any of the terms or conditions of the said contract are violated, the borough reserves the right to revoke the permission herein granted, to remove all the tracks of the said company and all the constructions made in the streets of the borough by said company, its successors or assigns.

SEC. 21. That this ordinance shall take effect November 28, 1892.

Dated, Nov. 11, 1892.

DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE.

Not Only a Moral but a Physical Existence in Our Bodies.

The morally good or bad within us has been ably set forth in the story of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, but did it ever occur to you that there was a physical application of this remarkable story, more real and terrible than the contrasts of moral attributes?

The moral perfection of Dr. Jekyll is represented in our physical systems by sound, strong vigorous health—the skulking, murderous immorality of Mr. Hyde has its prototype in the weakness or disease of our vital organs, which often exist within us, and which may, at any moment rise, overcome our strong health and hold us in its deadly grasp.

How many diseases there are which thus grapple us before we are aware of our peril! We often neglect a little weakness or exhaustion, nervousness, tired brain, sleepless nights, from which we wake tired and unrefreshed, weary, languid feeling, headache, confusion of mind, dulness, loss of memory, strange sensations—which mean insanity. Cold feet and limbs, numbness, trembling, prickling sensation, extreme weariness of limbs—mean paralysis. Poor blood, low vitality, pale complexion and great weakness—mean consumption. We often disregard the weakness of nervous debility, malaria, the disorder of stomach, liver or kidneys, until fatal disease fastens upon us.

You neglect these symptoms at your peril, for they may run into incurable disease.

You should use immediately that wonderful remedy, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, the pure vegetable medicine, which restores vigor to the tired brain, strength to the weak and shattered nerves, vitality and health to the exhausted body, and thus prevent fatal results. Druggists. $1.00.

"I had poor health for several years. Have been under the treatment of many doctors, but they did me no good. The more medicine I took, the weaker I grew; was so bad at last I could not eat or sleep and had a cough that almost racked me to pieces. I had pains in my chest which made breathing very difficult. As my father, brother and sister had died with consumption, I thought my time had come. With much pleasure and gratitude I can now say that I have been entirely cured of my troubles by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. My appetite is excellent, food digests easily, sleep is refreshing, and altogether I feel restored to health once more. I most earnestly recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to all who are afflicted with obstinate chronic, nervous or painful diseases. I have recommended it to many sufferers, and am pleased to say that it has given general satisfaction.

Mrs. ADDIE I. CRAGG,
101 North Portland ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Dr. Greene, the most successful specialist in curing all forms of nervous and chronic diseases, 35 West 14th st., New York, can be consulted free, personally or by letter. Call or write him about your case or send for symptom blank to fill out, and a letter fully explaining your disease, giving advice, etc., will be returned free.

PROGRESS OF SURGERY.

A Piece of Rabbit Bone Grafted Into a Californian's Arm.

Bone grafting is a new thing, and the surgical world is slowly and cautiously feeling its way toward pronounced opinions about its propriety and safety as a remedial measure. The first operation of the kind made in San Francisco was performed recently upon a lumberman named Smith, and it gives such promise of success as to encourage both the operator and the subject. Smith was rolling logs in a sawmill on King's river, when a big spruce log became loosened and fell upon him, breaking his right arm at a point three inches below the shoulder joint. The fracture was dressed, but in a few days Smith rebroke the partially joined bone, and acting on advice went to San Francisco and submitted himself to a medical college professor who has a reputation for surgical skill. After due study of the case the professor decided that in bone grafting nested Smith's only chance for a useful arm.

THE LETTER A INDICATES THE PORTION OF GRAFTED RABBIT BONE.

The process of making such a graft, as described by the Examiner, is neither long nor complicated. A healthy rabbit is taken and thoroughly washed in soap and water. The beast is then suffocated, so as the hair, with a solution of corrosive sublimate in water to destroy any poisonous germs which might have remained in the coat. The rabbit being perfectly "aseptic," as it is called, is killed by a blow on the neck, and the surgeon lays bare with a scalpel the long bone of the hind leg. The bone is cut from its place with pliers and thrown into a vessel full of the corrosive sublimate, and all is then ready for the actual grafting. The patient is then given ether until unconscious, and in such a case as that of Smith the arm is freely incised over the spot at which the break occurred. When the bone is fully exposed the ends of the fragments are well scraped, or if necessary bits are cut away so that the ends shall present clean, new surfaces. When the scraping is finished the wound is thoroughly washed with an antiseptic solution, the washing extending to every part and being continued until it is certain that no particle of unsound flesh or bone remains. Then the rabbit bone is quickly pounded up in a mortar into fragments, which are thoroughly washed with the mercurial solution, and with the fragments of rabbit bone the space between the ends of the broken bone in the arm of the patient is packed. A final douche of antiseptic fluid is given and the wound is closed and left under light dressings, the arm being fastened to a splint.

If all goes well there is little or no inflammation. Evidences of healing are at once shown. The rabbit bone is partly absorbed and from the human bone are thrown out processes which enter into the bone material stolen from the rabbit. Blood vessels are formed in the new material, and in time a new and sound bone replaces that which was fractured, and the man is restored to health and ability to make a living by manual labor.

ELECTRIC CANE LAMP.

Belated Rounders May Now Have Light on the Way Home.

The cane lamp shown in the accompanying cut is the invention of a German. The idea involved in the device is certainly novel. The handle of the cane contains an incandescent lamp, the two poles of which are connected with the plates of a battery. Below this is a small chamber to carry the battery fluid. Whenever it is desired to use the lamp, says the Philadelphia Record, the cap is taken off and the cane inclined in such a manner that the contained liquid comes in contact with the electrodes. A current is thus produced that will keep the light going for an hour.

Great Men Lost to Literature.

Within the last eleven years the world of letters has lost Carlyle, 1881; Longfellow, 1882; Emerson, 1882; Matthew Arnold, 1888; Browning, 1888; Kinglake, 1891; Lowell, 1891; Walt Whitman, 1892. George W. Curtis, 1892; Whittier, 1892, and Tennyson, 1892.

Fortunately Found Dead.

Probably the largest serpent of which actual measurements have been taken was an anaconda which Dr. Gardner found dead and suspended to the fork of a tree during his travels in Mexico. According to Dr. Gardner it measured 37 feet in length.

NATIONS IN CONFERENCE

Monetary Convention Formally Opened at Brussels.

ITS FAILURE ALREADY PREDICTED

Surprise Occasioned Because the United States Representatives Had No Definite Propositions to Submit--Adjournment Until Friday--Personnel of the American Delegation.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 23.—The International Monetary Conference was formally opened yesterday. The meeting took place at 3 o'clock. M. Beernaert, the Belgian Prime Minister M. Montefiori Levi and the Hon. E. Terrell, United States Minister to Belgium, spoke.

The conference then adjourned until Friday. Spain, Austria, Hungary, Belgium, France, Germany, Great Britain, Greece, Italy, The Netherlands, Portugal, Roumania, Servia, Sweden, Norway, Switzerland and the United States have sent delegates.

Great astonishment is expressed by several of the delegates at the statement, by American representatives, that they had no formal propositions to submit. The English delegates particularly are very much surprised at this, and impatient to get away, if no special programme is brought forward by the United States. The representatives of the latter, however, promise to present their programme before Friday's session.

It seems to be the general idea that the Conference will resolve itself, at the instance of the American delegates, into a discussion of bi-metallism. If so, several delegates consider the failure of the Conference a foregone conclusion. It is evident that the English delegates, at least, will do their share toward making it so.

The following are the United States delegates to the conference:

Senator William B. Allison, Congressman James B. McCreary, E. Benjamin Andrews, president of Brown University; Prof. Ronald Falkner, of the University of Pennsylvania; Thomas W. Cudler, Thomas T. Keller, James T. Morgan, Senator John P. Jones, Henry W. Cannon, president of the Chase National bank, and E. O. Leech, Director of the Mint.

A FAMILY WIPED OUT.

Father, Mother and Daughter Burned to a Crisp at Sharpsburg, Pa.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 23.—The lives of one entire family were blotted out by fire yesterday morning.

The dead are:

HIRAM DANAHAUR, aged 45 years.
MRS. DANAHAUR, aged 43.
A daughter aged 10 years.

The Danahaur family lived in Pleasant Valley, Chara Township, just outside of the town of Sharpsburg.

They had a greenhouse in the basement of the house and placed a furnace in it Monday.

It is presumed that the furnace became overheated, setting fire to the woodwork.

The family died before their neighbors knew of their danger.

When the fire was discovered the house had been burned to the ground and the charred remains of father, mother and daughter were found among the ruins.

Danahaur was a tinner by trade and quite well connected.

The terrible holocaust has caused the greatest sorrow throughout the valley, as the Danahaurs were socially inclined and were well liked by their numerous friends and neighbors.

The unfortunate victims' remains were burned entirely beyond recognition, nothing being left of them but a mass of charred and blackened flesh and bones.

Electric Road for Corning.

CORNING, N. Y., Nov. 23.—Articles of incorporation will be filled in the office of the Secretary of State in a few days for the Citizens Electric Railway company of this city, which has just been formed with a capital stock of $100,000. The company is made up of New York capitalists and prominent local citizens. They will build an electric railway running through the city and to the hamlets of Gibson and Painted Post.

Bravery of a Policeman.

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 23.—Policeman Michael Tully was almost killed while endeavoring to save the life of Edward Buffin, colored, who was driving the team belonging to H. P. Jones, valued at $8,000. The team ran away and Tully, in attempting to stop it, was thrown under the wheels of the carriage and was cut and bruised.

On Trial for Killing Her Husband.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Nov. 23.—Mrs. Alvin De Long, who shot and killed her husband Oct. 10, 1891, is being tried here on the charge of murder. De Long was a libertine, spending much of his money in saloons. One night De Long struck his wife and then she shot him. It is believed her mind is affected.

Meadville's Insane Man Identified.

MEADVILLE, Pa., Nov. 23.—The stranger who became suddenly insane on a train Sunday night has been identified as Martin Higgins, by his brother, George Higgins, of Rochester, N. Y., who came here to take him home. Martin appears to be suffering from the effects of delerium tremens.

Notorious Moonshiner Caught.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 23.—T. A. P. Sprouse, a notorious moonshiner, suspected of being prominent in the murder of a revenue officer during the famous raid in the Tennessee mountains, was captured last night by a deputy sheriff and taken to Birmingham for imprisonment.

Mrs. Belmont's Funeral.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The funeral of Mrs. August Belmont took place yesterday afternoon from the Church of the Ascension which was crowded by representatives of all the principal families in this city. To-day the body will be taken to Newport where interment will take place.

Death of an Old Jeweler.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23—Henry Muhr, the founder of the big jewelry firm of H. Muhr's Sons, is dead, at his home in this city, aged 77 years.

Will be a Total Wreck.

WOODS HOLE, Mass., Nov. 23.—The schooner E. B. Coombs is ashore on Long Shoal. She will be a total wreck.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

CONVENING OF THE REICHSTAG.

Opened in Person by the Emperor—Commendations for His Address.

BERLIN, Nov. 23.—The Kaiser opened the Reichstag in person. Nearly every member was in attendance, and the closest attention was paid while His Majesty delivered his address.

He spoke with a depth of intonation that seemed to indicate his feeling in regard to the coming struggle over the Army Bill.

There was a general attendance of the Imperial Ministry, Chancellor Caprivi occupying the place of honor near the sovereign.

The Kaiser said he regretted that the cholera had caused such suffering and loss of life in portions of the Empire. Besides the suffering caused, the cholera had damaged the economic situation, especially in regard to exports. Contrary to expectations, the cholera still lingered in the country, but he hoped that it would soon disappear.

The speech appeared to make an excellent impression, largely because it so carefully avoided giving any pessimistic reason in explaining the necessity for the Army Bill. The friends of the government were pleased, and its opponents were relieved by the cautious and conciliatory wording of the Kaiser's address.

DEPUTIES DECLINE TO SERVE.

Hard Work Obtaining a Commission to Investigate the Panama Co.

PARIS, Nov. 23.—The Chamber of Deputies rose last night without having accomplished anything toward choosing the commission of 33 to investigate the affairs of the Panama Canal company.

The last proceeding took place amid great confusion. As member after member was elected to serve, and as often declined the honor, the uproar became almost unbearable.

Shouts, hisses, and applause frequently drowned the voices of those trying to speak. Most of the Deputies were quite worn out when the sitting closed.

The attempt to get together a commission will be resumed to-day.

M. Ribot's declaration that the Colombian government had not yet consented to prolong the canal company's concession has excited general comment. It was understood that at least a year more had been allowed the company.

CONVICTED OF ARSON.

Georgiana Bishop, 14, to be Sentenced at Poughkeepsie To-day.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Nov. 23.—Georgiana Bishop, 14 years old, was tried here for arson, in attempting to burn the barn of Sydney Smith of Pine Plains. She had also attempted to burn five other buildings. Testimony for the prosecution showed that she had confessed the crime.

The defense produced testimony to show that she was induced by means of threats and promises of immunity from punishment.

The jury returned a verdict of guilty of arson in the third degree with a strong recommendation to mercy.

The girl will be sentenced to-day.

FATHER AND SON ASSAULTED.

James and Albert Fish Robbed and Shot at Pontiac, R. I.

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 23.—James Fish and his son, Albert, were murderously assaulted by three strangers in their store at Pontiac Monday night.

Two of them pointed revolvers at their heads, while the third robbed the drawer of $50.

One of the men fired a shot at the elder Fish, which penetrated his neck. The son, in attempting to divert the attack from his father, was shot in the left ear.

The assailants escaped.

Wanamaker Will Stick to Philadelphia.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The attention of Postmaster-General Wanamaker was called to a published statement that he contemplated the establishment of an immense retail business in Washington. He pronounced the story unfounded, and said that such an idea had never occurred to him.

A Syracuse Girl Missing.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 23.—May Demong, a 15-year-old girl, disappeared from her home in this city on Sunday. She had become acquainted with a member of the "Eight Bells" company, and circumstances point strongly to an elopement. The company is now playing in New York city.

To Build a Big Steel Plant.

READING, Pa., Nov. 23.—Negotiations are pending between a steel syndicate representing $4,000,000 and Jonas Shalter, of Muhlenberg township, for the purchase of his farm of 170 acres. The syndicate, it is believed, will erect a plant similar to that at Steelton, near Harrisburg.

Republicans Win in Dover, N. H.

DOVER, N. H., Nov. 23.—The Republicans elected Alonzo M. Foss mayor yesterday by 537 majority, and elected eight out of ten aldermen and twelve out of fifteen councilmen. There was a Democratic mayor last year and the Republicans are very happy over their victory.

Remarkable Pacing Record.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 23.—At Riverside Park the gelding John Carpenter has just performed the remarkable feat of pacing a mile in 2:12 with hobbles on. It is the fastest pacing record ever made in the Gulf States.

New York's Mayor-elect in California.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Nov. 23.—Thomas Gilroy, Mayor-elect of New York city, accompanied by his family and a few friends, has arrived in this city.

THE GREAT GAME TO-MORROW.

Nearly Every Seat at Manhattan Field Already Sold—Yale the Favorite.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Lovers of football who intend to see the great struggle on Manhattan Field on Thanksgiving Day between Yale and Princeton are already arriving in the city, many coming from long distances.

They are veritable enthusiasts who journey so long a distance, but it is almost an assured fact that a grand contest will reward them for their trouble. Nothing in the line of sports is talked of outside the holiday match between these collegians, and it is now announced that practically every seat in the grand stands has been disposed of.

Betters are planking their money on Yale at four and five to one. Princeton money is scarce, and most of it is handed down at evens that the Zebras will score anyhow.

Both teams are enjoying a season of calm just at present, Yale laying off after her "run in" with Harvard last Saturday, and Princeton simply resting until her 'leven shall fall up against Yale Thursday.

The main idea now is to get seats for the game—that is seats where every movement of the bushy-haired, iron-muscled Titans may be seen.

Fifteen hundred seats were sent to New Haven, but an hour after the sale opened, the supply had been exhausted and not half the college had been satisfied. It was about the same at Princeton, to which the same number of seats had been assigned, and at old Nassau they howled, Oliver-Twist-like, for more.

Granted that to-morrow is a fine day, Manhattan Field will overflow with a throng such as never invaded it before. But it will be an uncommonly well dressed crowd, and it will be decorous to a nicety in its demonstrations of approbation for good and clever plays.

EXONERATED TRAINMAN RUPP.

Second Coroner's Inquest Over the Wreck at West Manayunk.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23.—An inquest was held here yesterday by Coroner Ashbridge on the death of Hiram Gottschall, of Reading, Pa., who died at St. Timothy's hospital, Roxborough, Nov. 7, from injuries received in the Reading wreck above West Manayunk on Oct. 24.

It was the first death in Philadelphia county as the result of the accident, and a second official inquiry was necessary.

In the first inquiry, held at West Manayunk, Montgomery county, John R. Rupp, trainmaster at West Falls, was held responsible for the disaster, and was arrested for criminal negligence.

The second coroner's jury, however, exonerates Rupp, and holds E. H. Gerlacher, conductor, and Engineer Charles Billig of the coal train, which crashed into the express, directly responsible.

Gerlacher and Billig will probably be arrested. Rupp is under bail for appearance at court at Norristown Dec. 5.

FIVE YEARS FOR TRUMPBOUR.

His Eyes Filled With Tears and He Shook Nervously When Sentenced.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 23.—Trumpbour, the Ulster Bank wrecker, has been sentenced to five years in Dannemora prison.

When the court addressed the prisoner his eyes filled with tears, and when his fate was announced he shook nervously. Upon the conclusion of the judge's sentence, Trumpbour was taken back to the jail.

He is 66 years old.

Manchester Martyrs Remembered.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Under the auspices of the Clan-Na-Gael the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Manchester Martyrs was celebrated in Cooper Union last night with songs, music and oratory. The hall held an audience of 1,000 people and the stage was profusely decorated. Hon. John Fitzgerald of Boston presided and Judge Wahope Lynn made the oration of the evening.

Alleged Bribers Discharged.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 23.—The Federal officials have discharged from custody two Democrats who had been held to bail in the United States Court on a charge of bribery at the election. These are Major Michal Hurley and John Darcy, Deputy State Labor Inspector. The evidence produced against them before United States Commissioner Lowthorp was pronounced insufficient.

Treasury Department Statement.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The "ten days'" statement issued from the Treasury Department shows that the net gold balance is $128,601,457, a decrease of $1,080,000 during this month, and more than $2,000,000 since the first of the calendar year. Since the first of the fiscal year, however, the gold balance has been increased more than $8,000,000.

Indicted for Abducting Ivy Roche.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Jacob Storm, alias Harry Lawrence of Yonkers and Mrs. Rose Lock of this city, were jointly indicted by the grand jury for the abduction of 15-year-old Ivy Roche. Storms was indicted for rape and abduction, and a bill of abduction was found against Mrs. Lock.

Order of Amitie Assigns.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23.—The Order of Amitie, a beneficial organization, assigned yesterday to its solicitor, Francis J. Gallagher, of Philadelphia. The step was due to public lack of confidence since the Iron Hall trouble.

Salvationists Imprisoned in Alsace.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—A despatch says that in Basle six Salvation Army officers have been imprisoned for three weeks each for having used the new army barracks despite an official order to the contrary.

NO STOP TO THE FLOOD

Property Damage in Washington Will be Enormous.

SEVERAL LIVES REPORTED LOST.

The Valleys Have Become Lakes—Railroad Traffic Almost Entirely Suspended—Many Houses Swept Away—Still Raining, and the Worst Yet to Come.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 23.—Five deaths are reported as the result of the floods, while the loss of property in the shape of farm buildings carried away and wrecked will amount to many thousands of dollars.

The valleys of the Snohomish, stretching to the northward, are vast lakes. In the Stuck valley, as far as the eye can see is one great lake, in which logs, shingles, railroad ties, wrecked buildings, uprooted trees, and other debris are jammed together 10 to 20 feet deep. In Chehallis county, near Elma, the Northern Pacific bridge on Gray's branch is so weak that trains dare not cross.

The Great Northern will not be able to run trains until the bridges are repaired, the slides removed and the track rebuilt. The Seattle, Lake Shore & Eastern runs trains to the international boundary, but a transfer is made around the slide at Blackman. Three or four small steamers are reported sunk in the Snohomish river. A steamer is carrying passengers to Whatcom to take the rail connection to the East.

Frame houses of all descriptions have been seen floating in nearly every stream of any size west of the mountains.

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 23.—Rain has fallen in torrents all day in Oregon and Washington, west of the Cascade mountains, and the local railroad traffic on Puget sound, north of Tacoma, is entirely suspended. The damage already done in the Puget sound country will probably reach half a million dollars, and the prospect now is that much greater damage will result.

The Northern Pacific has repaired the damage to the main line, and the trains for the East are now running regularly. The landslide on the Union Pacific at the Cascade continues to come down with increased energy.

A heavy rain fell there yesterday, which washed tons of earth down the mountain side.

TACOMA, Nov. 23.—Not a single train has passed between Tacoma and Seattle since the flood began.

HE QUIETLY STOLE AWAY.

The President-elect Started for the South Last Night.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Mr. Cleveland left this city very quietly at 8 o'clock last night. He was driven in a closed carriage from his residence in West 51st street to the Desbrosses street ferry and crossed to Jersey City. One of the Pennsylvania railroad officials escorted him to a special car, which had been attached to the regular 8:15 p. m. train from Jersey City south.

Mr. Cleveland's departure was unobserved. All information as to the hour of departure, the direction to be taken, and the destination of the President-elect was kept secret during the day, and when Mr. Cleveland, muffled in a big overcoat, walked through the railway station he was not recognized by the few people who were present.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23.—President-elect Cleveland is on his way to EXMOOR, Md., for a two weeks' gunning and fishing trip, in company with Charles Jefferson, son of Joseph Jefferson, and L. Clark Davis, editor of the "Public Ledger."

CRITCHLOW'S TRIAL.

Confidently Believed That the Verdict Will be One of Acquittal.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 23.—Yesterday afternoon John S. Robb occupied one and a half hours in his address to the jury for the commonwealth in the case of Critchlow, and Wm. Erwin of St. Paul made a two hours' speech for the defense.

Court then adjourned until this morning, when Thomas M. Marshall, sr., began the closing arguments for the defense. Clarence Burleigh will finish for the prosecution.

Judge Kennedy's charge will let the case go to the jury early this afternoon and a verdict may be expected before evening.

It is now confidently believed that the verdict will be one of acquittal.

Dedicated to Salvation's Cause.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The dedication of the three weeks' old daughter of Commander and Mrs. Ballington Booth to the cause of the Salvation Army was the chief feature of the continental congress in Carnegie hall last night. The hall was crowded even more than on the first night, and hundreds were turned away.

Child Fatally Burned.

BOSTON, Nov. 13.—The 3-year-old child of Mrs. Poole, of Cambridgeport, while at the house of Mrs. Chambers, a neighbor, Monday night, set fire to her clothes and was fatally burned. Mrs. Chambers was also critically burned in an effort to save the child.

Bottlers in Convention at Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 23.—The fourth annual convention of the American Bottlers' Protective association is in session here. Three hundred delegates are present, representing the leading associations in the United States. Charles Jolly, of Philadelphia, presides.

First Interstate Case On.

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—The trial of the first of the Interstate cases, that of the United States vs. Thomas Miller, agent of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad, has begun before Judge Bunn in the U. S. District Court.

No Reduced Rates to the Fair.

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—The mass meeting of passenger men of the United States and Canada, which has been in session two days, adjourned without committing the delegates to any plan of action concerning reduced rates to the World's Fair.

Frisco Chinamen and the Exclusion Law.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 23. — Chinese merchants here declare that as a result of the Exclusion Law many of the Chinese firms here will disband and the majority of the members return to China. A financial crash among them is imminent.

One rounded teaspoonful of Cleveland's Baking Powder does more and better work than a heaping teaspoonful of any other. A large saving on a year's bakings.

The best known writers on domestic science, as Marion Harland, Mrs. McBride, Mrs. Parker and Emily Hayes, and teachers of cookery, as Mrs. Rorer, Mrs. Lincoln and Mrs. Dearborn, use and recommend Cleveland's Baking Powder.

MRS. DEACON GAINS A POINT.

The French Court Decides That Her Child Must Stay in France.

PARIS, Nov. 23.—The Court of Appeal has given a decision substantially in favor of Mrs. Deacon on her appeal from the decision of the Tribunal of the Seine, which refused to grant her a divorce from Mr. Edward Parker Deacon, on the alleged ground of cruelty, and has ordered that the child, Gladys, abducted by Mrs. Deacon, shall be returned to the convent where she was formerly kept, until a decision of the suit now pending at Grasse and Aix.

This is virtually a triumph for Mrs. Deacon as Mr. Deacon's object was to get the child into his own possession for removal to America.

The child is now to be retained in France, where Mrs. Deacon may yet hope to obtain complete control of her daughter. Her bold move in abducting the child has therefore been successful in its object.

Certain members of the Abeille family are still at work doing all they can to assist Mrs. Deacon, and to obstruct Mr. Deacon in his litigation with his wife.

PETROFF MISSING.

Hinted That the Falsifying Russian May Have Committed Suicide.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Nothing has been heard of Ivan Petroff, the Russian Alaskan expert, who made false representations to the State Department, which were embodied in the case of the Government of the United States before the Behring Sea arbitrators, since the exposure of his duplicity was made.

He has disappeared utterly, and one of his friends has expressed the fear that he may have committed suicide.

A Woman Lottery Agent.

BUFFALO, Nov. 23.—A dashing young woman, giving her name as Mary Abele, appeared at Clifton, Ont., recently. She received so much mail that the curiosity of the Canadian postoffice authorities was aroused, and it was discovered that Miss Abele was an agent for the Louisiana State Lottery.

Editor Medill's House Burned.

PASADENA, Cal., Nov. 23.—The residence of Joseph Medill, editor of the Chicago "Tribune," with its contents, except a little furniture on the first floor, was totally destroyed by fire yesterday.

A Colored Ex-Lieut.-Gov. Convicted.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 23.—Ex-Lieut.-Gov. Antoine, (colored) has just been convicted of embezzling $500. He was President of the Senate under Gov. Kellogg.

Mississippi Navigation Closed.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 23.—Navigation has been closed on the Mississippi River for the year.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

—The steamship Saale is detained in Quarantine, New York, with a case of smallpox on board.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, Managing Editor.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
TRENTON, Nov. 15, 1892.

In accordance with the law and established custom in this State, the Executive each year sets apart a day of thanksgiving and prayer on which the people may rest from their labor and assemble in their homes and places of worship to acknowledge and return thanks to Almighty God for his goodness and mercy, and pray that He will continue to bless them with abundance and prosperity.

Therefore, I, Leon Abbett, Governor of the State of New Jersey, do hereby designate Thursday, the Twenty-Fourth Day of November, instant, as a day of public thanksgiving and prayer, and recommend that the people of this State on that day abstain from all secular avocations, assemble in their usual places of worship, and give thanks to God for his infinite goodness in the past, and invoke for the future his blessings upon the nation, the State and the homes of our people.

Given under my hand and privy seal, at the Executive Chamber, in the city of Trenton [L. S.] on this fifteenth day of November, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

LEON ABBETT, Governor.

Attest:—LEON ABBETT, JR., Private Secretary.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

Forecast Till 8 P. M. Thursday: For New Jersey, Generally Fair, Continued Cold, Northwest Winds.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Ball at the Crescent rink to-night.

—Order your ice-cream of Tier for to-morrow.

—The drug stores will close to-morrow from 1 to 6 p. m.

—You are wanted at the Bicycle Club house next Saturday night. See "wants".

—David Morning is the highest average bowler at Hope chapel, having beaten all previous records by bowling 226 Monday evening.

—The farce comedy of "Voodoo", and the company that played it at Music Hall, last evening, were probably the best that Plainfield has seen this season.

—Your Thanksgiving dinner will not be complete without oysters. Rogers, the sea food man of West Second street, has 20,000 of the finest to be procured.

—On Thankseging Day the public library, reading room and art gallery, will be open at the usual hours. The circulating department only will be closed on that day.

—In the Church of Our Saviour, Netherwood, the Rev. S. P. Simpson, rector, will conduct services on Thanksgiving Day as follows: Morning prayer and sermon, 10:30.

—The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum will give a second grand entertainment in Music Hall, Thursday evening. The play will be, "Eileen Oge, or Dark's the Hour Before Dawn".

—Trinity Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, conferred the order of the temple on two candidates Monday evening. Prominent Knights were present from New York and Somerville.

—Councilman H. A. Weber is having the sidewalk around his grocery store paved with flagging, and pedestrians should be thankful, for no longer will they have to walk through mud ankle deep.

—There will be a Thanksgiving service in Hope chapel, to-morrow morning at 9:30. The meeting will close at 10:15. All will be welcome who wish to spend three-quarters of an hour thanking God for a year's blessing.

—The Democrats will have 222, and perhaps 224, representatives in the next Congress, Republicans 125 and the Populists 7, giving the Democrats 90 majority as far as heard from, and 92, if they carry the election for Congressmen in Rhode Island.

—To-morrow afternoon at Campbell's club house, there will be a pigeon match for $25 a side, 10 birds each, Hurlingham rules to govern, between Lebbeus Ayres, of Metuchen, and Edward Campbell, of Plainfield; also two matches between Plainfield parties.

—The most remarkable victory of the campaign appears to be that of the Democrats in Illinois, where they have a plurality of 26,824, and a majority of 1,590. They gained 76,000 votes as compared with the election of 1888, while the Republicans gained 27,000. The total gain in the vote of the State since 1888 was about 100,000.

—The markets of Smalley Bros, on North avenue, Ulrich on Front street, G. H. Vanneet on Somerset street, Charles Arnold of Liberty street, and Lutkins on Park avenue, are fairly loaded this Thanksgiving season with the tenderest turkeys, chickens, ducks and game, and everything delicious for the table. Buy of any of them! You'll make no mistake!

—Arrangements are already making in Washington for the inauguration of President Cleveland, which it is proposed shall be upon a scale fully equal to those of any occasion of the kind in recent years. The inaugural procession will largely be composed of Democratic clubs from all sections of the country, some of which are already arranging for their entertainment while in the city.

—There is no use to worry about Mr Cleveland's Cabinet. He has plenty of hard-wood, straight-grained Democratic timber to choose from; and no man is a better judge of material.—Philadelphia Record. Very good; but let us suggest that New Jersey not be overlooked this time. How about Senator John R. McPherson for Secretary of the Treasury? We think he would fill the bill in a most worthy and able manner.

—A valuable setter dog owned and highly prized by Martin McComas, of Prescott place, Pondville, is supposed to have been poisoned the other night by some unknown rascal. The family noticed the dog acting strangely and therefore turned him out of his box, since which time he has disappeared entirely. It is said that this dog was never known to molest any one and all the boys liked to have him scamper with them in the evenings. He will be greatly missed from the family circle as he was always treated like one of the family.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Carl Pfender, formerly book-keeper at Packer's, is now in the office of C. Schepflin & Co.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Burke, of Netherwood, on Monday. This is the ninth.

Miss Lottie Morse will be married to Walter C. Walker this evening by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck.

Henry M. Maxson told the Somerset teachers "How to Save Time" at the institute at Somerville this morning.

T. S. Armstrong, wife and children, Fred and Helen, have gone to the home of his mother, Camden, for a Thanksgiving family reunion.

Miss Alice Plummer, formerly of Netherwood, with her fiance, Charles Milliken of New York, has been spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bowen of Broadway.

On the 13th of December W. E. MacClymont, organist, will give one of his popular organ recitals, in the First Baptist church, assisted by Walter Arnold Hudson, basso, and P. Conde, 'cello. These recitals have become so popular that they are looked forward to with considerable interest. Admission is free.

Mrs. Samuel Dreier has paid $5,000 cash for the large plot of land at the corner of New and Front streets adjoining the Leal school. The shrewd business woman made a good bargain. She sees that the street railway is improving property in that section of town, and she is anxious to have a hand in developing the real estate. The purchase was made from the Emmons brothers.

Thomas Hale, jr., of this city, was married at noon, on Wednesday, the 16th inst., to Miss Agnes Charlotte Helen Steinhauser at the home of the bride's mother in Jersey City. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Hennessey. The wedding was a private affair, only the near relatives and a few intimate friends of the neighborhood being invited. Many beautiful gifts were bestowed as tokens of affection and esteem. After the ceremony the guests were driven to the Hotel Washington, where bountiful refreshments were provided. The nuptial pair were conveyed to the Grand Central Depot, New York, where they took the cars for Boston and other points. They will return to Plainfield after their bridal trip, making their home in that city for the present. Mrs. Hale is a niece of the Verdons of North Plainfield.

Thomas Minford, who had been a sugar broker in New York since 1858, died of pneumonia at his residence, 35 West Fifty-sixth street, at 8 o'clock yesterday morning, after an illness of a few days. He was born in Belfast, Ireland, in 1825, and came to this country when he was 9 years old. He went into the sugar business in Philadelphia, and in 1858 came to New York city and became a partner of the late Francis Skiddy. Eventually the firm adopted the name of Skiddy, Minford & Co., and it has for many years been among the leading firms of sugar brokers in Wall street. Mr. Minford was a member of the Coffee exchange, of the Union League club, and of St. Thomas's church. The funeral will be at the residence Friday morning, at 10, and the interment at Woodlawn. Mr. Minford leaves four daughters and two sons. The elder son is at the head of the firm of L. W. Minford & Co., and the younger, Thomas Minford, jr., who was long a resident of this city at Broadway and Ninth street, is a partner in his father's firm.

You'll Enjoy Yourself if You Attend.

At the Crescent rink, this evening, will be held the fifth annual ball of the Twilight Social club, and the committee in charge have made extensive preparations for making it an occasion of enjoyment and pleasure for all who attend. Voss's full orchestra will furnish the music, and the grand march will begin at 9.

—The commissioners in the matter of connecting Duer street and Madison avenue are progressing rapidly, and a report will be filed at an early date, when all details will be made public.

Thousands sink into an early grave for want of a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. This great remedy would have saved them.

COUNCILMAN SEE AGAIN.

A Colored Man Elected to the Executive Committee.

The First ward Republican primary last night was quite spirited. It was the "boss's" own ward, but he did n't have everything his own way like he used to.

To begin with, there was a change in the personality of the officers of the meeting. That young and wide-awake Republican, J. Fred MacDonald, who is largely responsible for the gratifying new order of things, presided; and Richard R. Coriell was clerk. J. B. Coward, who has been First ward clerk from time immemorial, saw that he was to be turned down, and withdrew from the contest. C. H. Rugg was judge of election, and John Rowland inspector. So the primary was run by anti-ring men.

Wm. G. E. See was the unanimous choice of the voters for councilman, and was renominated by the secretary's vote.

Likewise Robert Mariner was nominated for constable.

For justice of the peace Lewis Peterson was nominated. He received 25 votes, Wm. H. Clum 8, and Thomas Price 6.

Especial effort was made by the anti-ringites to get J. B. Coward off the city executive committee, but there were so many candidates in the field that the vote was divided and he slipped in by a majority of two votes over C. H. Rugg. The other two successful candidates were J. Fred MacDonald and Wm. Douglass. The vote was:

MacDonald, 41; Douglass, 23; Coward, 22; Rugg, 20; E. E. Anthony, 13; S. P. T. Wilbur, 13; R. A. Meeker, 10.

MacDonald's popularity was shown in his large vote of 41 out of a total of 55 ballots.

The matter of selecting delegates to the city convention was a contest between two tickets. The successful ones are mostly "agin" ring rule. They and their votes are:

O. L. Jenkins, 57; C. Schermerhorn, 38; W. Addis, 48; C. H. Rugg, 57; Fred Dunn, 40; R. F. R. Huntsman, 41; A. Frazee, 35; L. Riggle, 38; J. Rowland, 39; W. Douglass, 37; George Cook, 36; L. Peterson, 37.

The candidates not elected were:

J. B. Coward, 18; Nelson Runyon, 19; U. B. Crane, 19; John Tier, jr., 17; Geo. Cole, 17; J. B. Probasco, 23; H. VanEmburgh, 17; John Johnson, 17; Wm. Stout, 19.

These were given the consolation of serving as alternates.

TO-NIGHT'S CONVENTION.

MAYOR GILBERT SETTLED ON TO RUN AGAIN.

City Judge Codington and Collector Johnson to be Turned Down, Unless the Present Programme is Altered—New Blood Getting a Grip on the Local Government.

The "boss" who has so long ruled the Republican party in Plainfield is not by any means altogether shorn of his power, but recent developments indicate that he has n't the grip on the voters that he once had. The ring still flourishes, but the young Republicans who clamor for "rotation in office" say they are in the fight to stay, and think that they will prevent a solid ring ticket at to-night's convention.

For Mayor, Alexander Gilbert will doubtless be renominated. Even the delegates who admit his weakness in certain quarters favor his candidacy. They are confident that even a weak Republican candidate is sure of election in Plainfield, with the big Republican majority that was rolled up at the late election.

The old ring office-holders of city judge and city collector are to be turned down. Judge Codington will undoubtedly be defeated for renomination by John Ulrich, and J. Fred MacDonald gives great promise of getting the collectorship nomination away from John Johnson.

City Assessor Hubbard and Treasurer Titsworth will be renominated.

They Call It a Boomerang.

The smoker at the Crescent League this evening is called a "boomerang". What a boomerang is may be judged from the following programme:

Tom, Tom, the Piper's Son.....Kendall
Crescent League Quartette.
What I want to say is this: "Are you wid us", Reed
Tenor Solo.....Selected
Mr. Chas. Foster.
Mr. Stevens will grease the facial muscles with a few remarks
Piano Solo—Paraphrase on a Strauss waltz, A. Venino. Shutt
Our Regular.
Tenor Solo.....Selected
Mr. Chas. Foster.
Old King Cole—
Crescent League Quartette.
The Boomerang.

Governor Werts's Bride.

Perhaps but few of our citizens are aware of the fact that the wife of governor-elect Geo. T. Werts was a near resident of Plainfield at the date of her marriage. Her maiden name was Emma Runyon, youngest daughter of A. Stelle Runyon, esq., of Piscataway township, and sister of ex-comptroller Albert Runyon, one of the oldest and most esteemed families of that section of New Jersey. The old homestead wherein the marriage was celebrated about eighteen years ago is situated just below New Market, and now owned by Joseph Field. In the ancient family graveyard near the house in which governor Werts was married, will be found the headstones over graves of grandfather and great-grandfather of his wife. Among the many guests at the wedding of governor Werts, were John P. Stelle and wife, who are now residents of this city, but who at that time lived on a farm near the old homestead. Mr. Stelle is the well-known liveryman of West Sixth street. The fact that the governor's wife's family were of strong Republican proclivities may account for the large increase of votes in his favor in Piscataway township.

Want Roads Like Plainfield's Everywhere.

[Elizabeth Journal.]

Now that electric roads have reached such a state of perfection, and now that a road is projected between this city and Plainfield, why would it not be a good thing to project an electric road running out Morris avenue to Union, thence to Springfield and Milburn and thence to Summit? The northern part of Union county has always lacked proper connection with its county seat, and its business, its commerce, its society and indeed nearly all its relations have, in consequence, been with Newark, Morristown and other places. An electric road running to Summit on the line mentioned would divert a large traffic to this city, and would bring the different sections of the county into much better business and social relations.

New Jersey's Favorite Son.

THE PRESS heartily re-echoes the sentiment of many prominent papers of the State who name the Hon. John R. McPherson for a cabinet portfolio. If loyal party service and distinguished ability are considered as qualifications for political advancement under the incoming administration New Jersey's senior Senator is entitled to the honorable distinction for which he is named. All Jerseymen would be proud to have one of her sons called into the councils of the chief executive, and Senator McPherson would represent the State with honor and ability. But in such an event there would be two United States Senators to elect and there is little likelihood that Leon Abbett could be kept out of one of them.

Don't Be Too Sure Even of Plainfield.

[Elizabeth Journal.]

Just think of it. Plainfield expects to win a Republican victory at the municipal election on December 6. And this after the unparalleled landslide on November 8. Hurrah for Plainfield!

THE PRESS'S One-Session Idea Grows.

(From The Courier.)

The members of the High School class of 1892 will have a Thanksgiving spread in Assembly Hall to-morrow afternoon at 5 o'clock. They hope to be thankful for the one-session system at an early date.

I have been troubled with catarrh for 10 years and have tried a number of remedies, but got no relief until I purchased a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. I consider it the most reliable preparation for catarrh and cold in the head.—George E. Crandall, P. M., Quonochawtaug, Rhode Island.

"A God-send is Ely's Cream Balm. I had catarrh for three years. Two or three times a week my nose would bleed. I thought the sores would never heal. Your Balm has cured me."—Mrs. M. A. Jackson, Portsmouth, N. H.

SCHOOLMARMS STORM SOMERVILLE.

A Hard-Hearted Critic Dilates on Their Foibles.

All of the school teachers, male and female, pretty, ugly and indifferent, are attending the institute of Hunterdon and Somerset counties this week in Somerset hall, Somerville. Bright and early Monday morning the first trains brought the initial installment of pedagogues and as they tramped up the street from the station their heavy eyes gazed wonderously around. Some looked neat, and a few looked sweet, and all were in their Sunday clothes. At 10 the institute met. Fully three hundred teachers of both counties occupied the body of the house. The two sexes were not seated apart, but the men were sandwiched in between the women in a most joyous way. This convention of teachers is supposed to be called for the education and enlightenment of the backwoods schoolmarms, but it is not—at least the teachers themselves say so. They claim that the idea is to promote sociability; in other words, to bring the teachers of both sexes together in a friendly companionship in order to get rid of any bashfulness which may linger in their minds. To that end everyone of the aforementioned pedagogues and esses make themselves agreeable and linger on the street corners and in the hall until a hop, skip and a jump is necessary to catch the last train. A glance over the hall would repay one, as the waving mass of bright-colored plumage arising from the head-gear of the self same schoolmarms reminds one of a paradise of peacocks. Then the gorgeous gowns that some of them wear—works of art, no doubt, that have occupied their waking hours since the institute one year ago. There are but two times during the year that a Somerset county schoolmarm wishes to look well—once at the Institute, and again when her best fellow, perhaps the one who teaches in the next school district to her, drives with her to the county fair with horse and whip decorated with waving ribbons. The majority of the teachers are young and fair looking, although they all have the chalky, tired look which comes from late hours. Some of them have passed the rubicon and are on the shady side of life. The older they are, the more dashingly they dress, thinking, perhaps, that "fine feathers make fine birds", and that age may be forgotten in the giddiness of attire. Two teachers living near Millstone who have attained the fiftieth mile post, were seen on the street this morning gowned in bewildering toilets of pale green and crimson. They were striking not only in appearance, but for two young men, who seemed attracted by the mass of color. In the evenings the teachers listen to a lecture on theosphy or something similar, and then go to their boarding places and dream oft in the stilly night. This is the last day. Until that time peanuts, soda and gum drops have bulled the market.

$330 THE PROFIT.

Creditable Result of the German Church Fair.

The fair held for the benefit of the German Reformed church came to an end Monday with an auction sale. It has been a great success. The net proceeds will amount to not less than $330. This, with another sum on hand from a previous fair, will help to reduce the church debt considerably.

All the workers who helped to realize this good result have worked with a heart and will from beginning to end, and deserve all praise, and even so the church people are thankful to their many patrons for the liberal gifts and general aid received.

Musin Recital.

Gratified by the kindly reception and flattering indorsement accorded him by Plainfield's highly cultivated and intelligent musical people, Ovide Musin has consented to give a violin recital in this city, Thursday evening, December 1, assisted by that eminent and admired pianist, Eduard Scharf, at Music Hall, under the management of Mr. Demarest.

This will be the opening of the musical season in this city, and although for that reason and because of Mr. Musin's appearance it will be an occasion of special interest and attraction, yet there will be no increase in prices. The sale of reserved seats at 50 and 75 cents will begin at the Central pharmacy, Monday morning, November 28.

New Market Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Z. P. Osmun, of New Market, celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of their wedding Monday night. A number of nice presents were bestowed, and a large crowd attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Platt, of New Market, will celebrate the anniversary of their marriage this evening.

A dance will be given at the home of Lloyd Nelson, New Market, to-morrow evening.

These Live to a Good Old Age.

Last Sunday Mrs. Jacob Thorn, mother of Edward P. Thorn, was 91 years old. This motherly woman retains all her faculties to a remarkable degree. In her family there are 20 living cousins, whose united ages are about 1,600 years.

Dr. Thomas A. Brown, brother of Mrs. Thorn, is now visiting his brother, Isaac P. Brown of this city.

—Entertainment will be provided and refreshments served at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-morrow evening. The admission will be free, and all men are invited.

All Dunellen Turns Out to Search for Him, But He Roams the Mountains All Night—Does n't Know His Name, Nor Recognize His Neighbors.

An insane man ran a commuters' train from New York to Dunellen last night, and ran it so well that no one ever dreamed that it was in charge of a madman.

The engineer was Jeremiah Dunham, of Dunellen. He is 50 years of age, and the third oldest engineer in point of service on the Jersey Central.

He has been given responsible runs, making a long day's work, and the care and worry, added to loss of sleep, were a great drain on his system. To add to the mental strain, he lost a favorite daughter, Mrs. Dealman, a year ago. It is supposed that his mind became gradually affected, and yesterday it gave way altogether.

He complained all day of not feeling well, saying he had strange pains in his head. His fireman noticed his queer actions on the run out from New York, and was much alarmed by them. He stood ready to take charge of the locomotive in case Dunham's reason forsook him altogether and left him incapable of his work, but Dunham performed his duties mechanically and got his train safely to Dunellen. Then he forsook it. He swung down from his cab with his dinner pail, and started swiftly across the fields in the opposite direction from his home.

The news of Dunham's "queerness" spread, and all the townspeople of Dunellen turned out to hunt for the man, fearing he might do himself some bodily harm.

He was not found till this morning. Peter Hurlick saw him from a train window, walking up Clinton avenue, Evona, from the direction of the mountains. The train was stopped there, and Dunham was taken home by Timothy McCarthy and other friends. He did not know his own name, and said he lived in McCarthy's barn. He expressed a jumble of insane notions.

His clothes were tattered, and his face and flesh were scratched and torn from bushes and brambles. He had evidently wandered about the woods and mountains all night.

He will be examined with a view of putting him in an institution for the insane.

MRS. FERGUSON GUILTY.

She Let Watson Use Her Against the City and Finds Herself in the Toils.

The trial of the City vs. Mrs. Winifred Ferguson, came off this morning before the city court. She is the person to whom Michael Watson was claimed to have sold liquor last July. On the trial of Watson, she was called as a witness by the city. She had refused before the trial to inform the corporation counsel whether she had bought the liquor of Watson or not. When she was put on the witness stand and compelled to testify, she declared that the whisky which she furnished to officer Ahlband did not come from Watson's at all, but from her own cellar. The city had no means of contradicting her story except by showing that she had told a different story at the time, and so the case was dropped. Mrs. Ferguson, however, was at once arrested on the strength of her own story, and to-day she was convicted of selling liquor herself without being licensed to engage in that business. The corporation counsel in summing up the case said she was hoisted by her own petard, and richly deserved the penalty which the law meted out in such cases.

INSTALLED THEIR PASTOR.

The Rev. Mr. Herring Officially Given Charge of His Church.

The Rev. Charles E. Herring was duly installed pastor of the First Presbyterian church, last evening.

A very large audience was present to witness the ceremonies, which were exceedingly interesting.

C. F. Smith presided at the organ, and a quartette consisting of L. S. Bond, tenor, Mrs. Robert Gorton, alto; Miss Blanche Fellows, soprano, and Robert Gorton, bass, sang several excellent selections.

The service opened with an organ voluntary, after which the quartette rendered an anthem.

The Rev. Mr. Nourse, of Elizabeth, made the opening prayer, which was followed by a selection from the hymnal.

The installation sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Teal, of Elizabeth, this able divine's discourse was full of practical thoughts and suggestion, and was listened to with great interest.

At the close of the sermon, the charge to the pastor was given by the Rev. Dr. Gillespie, of Elizabeth. He told the pastor his duties and what would be expected of him by his people. He said he should be faithful to his trust, and live up to his full privileges as a pastor.

The Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, of the Crescent Avenue church, "charged" the people in his usual forcible and impressive manner. He defined their duties in a simple and plain way, but laid stress on their being true to all the trust imposed on them.

The Rev. Mr. Parry, of Pluckamin, led in prayer, and after singing by the congregation the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Charles E. Herring.

During the evening Miss Blanche Fellows sang a beautiful solo.

The platform was handsomely decorated with choice flowers, which presented a pleasing appearance.

In the afternoon the Presbytery met and discharged the duties of their office in relation to Mr. Herring, and transferred him from the New York to the Elizabeth Presbytery.

A Dunellen Student Assaulted.

The students of Rutgers college at New Brunswick, who were mixed up in the conflict there on Thursday evening last between the Republican and Democratic students are on uneasy seats because of the probable expulsion of some of their number. The trouble arose through the participation of a body of Democratic students in the parade at New Brunswick on Thursday evening last. When the procession passed the Winant's Dormitory several students, presumably Republicans, attacked the paraders under cover of darkness, with a varied assortment of missiles, among them stones, decayed vegetables, etc. A hose was also turned on the Republican students, and in the general melee which followed many in the parade were hurt. J. Alfred Wilson, a student from Dunellen, was struck over the eye and had to be carried from the line. The affair caused quite an uproar in New Brunswick, and the students came in for no little censure. President Austen Scott has been away in New Orleans, so that no action was taken in the premises by the college authorities. Dr. Scott arrived in New Brunswick to-day. A meeting of the Faculty was held, and what will be the result is not known. The majority of the students do not sympathize with the offenders.

Ex-Chancellor Williamson Out Again.

The venerable ex-Chancellor, Benjamin Williamson, has nearly recovered from the stroke of paralysis he sustained a couple of months ago. Sunday, for the first time since he was prostrated, he was able to attend services both morning and evening in Trinity Episcopal church, Newark. Ex-Chancellor Williamson's recovery is looked upon as remarkable. He is eighty-four. His attack was exceptionally severe. He was unconscious for twenty-eight hours.

GENUINE WOMANHOOD.

It Characterized Every Act of Mrs Harrison's Life.

The Dead Mistress of the White House and Her Eventful Career—A Faithful Wife and Devoted Mother —Her Last Illness.

Mrs. Harrison was born in Oxford, O., in 1833. Her father, Dr. John W. Scott, professor at the Miami university at the time of her birth, was afterward president of the female college of the same town. Caroline L. Scott was educated at this seminary, where she passed happy years of her girlhood, although the amusements were of a most restricted and primitive character, dancing and card playing being tabooed. Primitive fashions were in vogue, and the girls were proud enough to await their diplomas at the graduation exercises clad in newly starched calico dresses and gingham sunbonnets.

In girlhood Mrs. Harrison was petite, and daguerreotypes made at that time show a slight girlish figure with an ideally handsome face, brunette of tint, set off with coal black hair. As with advancing years she became stouter and more matronly she retained still her beauty of expression, and the symmetry of her small hands and feet she never lost.

"Carrie Scott, as Mrs. Harrison was known in youth, was a beautiful girl," said a lady who knew her in girlhood. "She was always well bred, has a lovely disposition, makes friends everywhere, and changes in fortune never leave any mark on her. She is always dignified, yet cordial and sympathetic."

To Oxford came young Benjamin Harrison, the grandson of the famous hero of Tippecanoe, as a student at the university. Here he met and loved the petite, slender, vivacious daughter of the president of the seminary. His sentiments were reciprocated and, following their respective graduations, at the age of 21 years, they were married. The young bridegroom had still his profession to study and his sole available capital was $200, loaned him by his father. Settled at their humble, happy home, their living to make, the young wife proved a true helpmeet to her husband. She more than superintended all household matters well; she washed, baked, swept and sewed with her own hands. Prosperous times came to them in due course and the young couple were thriving in peace and happiness when at the call to arms in the civil war the husband marched with his regiment to the front, leaving the wife with her two children to endure with silent heroism that lonesomeness and anxiety which was the lot of those who must remain at home while their loved ones face the dangers of war in the field. At the conclusion of the war the husband, who had come back from the struggle as Gen. Harrison, entered upon that career of political distinction that after the honor of a six years' term in the senate saw him in 1888 elected to the highest office in the gift of the United States people.

MRS. CAROLINE SCOTT HARRISON.

At the modest two-story brick house in North Delaware street, their Indianapolis home, Mrs. Harrison made the place an abode of hospitality and a gathering point of literature, music and art and took, moreover, an active part in associations for education and amelioration of poverty. At Washington, during the six years of her husband's senatorship, she added to the natural grace of entertainment exercises at home that familiarity with the social usages of the national capital which made her, in her exalted position of "first lady of the land," so charming and tactful a hostess. Two children, a son and a daughter, were born to Mrs. Harrison. The daughter, now Mrs. Mary McKee, is the mother of two children; the boy, who was christened with much formality, is the ninth to bear in direct geneological measure the name Benjamin Harrison, and the daughter, Mary Lodge McKee. The son, Russell B. Harrison, married the daughter of Senator Saunders, of Omaha. After his marriage the couple settled upon a ranch near Helena, Mont., but afterward Russell Harrison bought a newspaper in Helena and, after his father's election to the presidency, a controlling interest in Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, which he made a republican organ.

Mrs. Harrison's delicate hand supervised the work of the household in the white house, and one story has it that she was often seen with a towel about her head when the dust was flying. Home was home to her at all times, and she realized the highest attributes of wife and mother.

The serious nature of her illness was not generally understood until some time after she had sought the rural repose of the countryside at Loon Lake.

President Harrison and her son Russell were at her bedside, which the husband refused to leave at the most critical times even long enough to take food. She left behind the memory of one who has proven equal to all vicissitudes of life, whether as the loving wife, sharing the fortunes of the poor, struggling Indiana lawyer or in the exalted place of hostess at the white house; but through all maintained that sweet and simple domestic and family life that no elevated position could outshine and no adversity depress.

GRANT'S OLD CABIN.

The Historic Relic Neglected and Worm-Eaten in Philadelphia.

The historic log cabin which was Grant's headquarters during the most important part of the civil war, and which now stands in Fairmount park, says the Philadelphia Press, is fast falling into decay and being carried off piecemeal by relic hunters and pocket-knife vandals. The hut stands amid a clump of trees at the top of an undulating grass-grown knoll not far removed from a great elevator and a hybrid settlement of razzle dazzles, soda water fountains and peanut stands.

Animated and turbulent as the adjacent acres of park territory are, when once the outskirts of the thin woods solitude which the hut is located are penetrated, all becomes still and lifeless so far as human agency is directly concerned. The park guard, if he ever strolls here, must make his visits short. The structure itself is wormeaten and uncared for. It has a door at the front and another at the rear. Each is hacked by the initial-carving fiend. There are windows on the two sides, but dust and grime have made them almost opaque.

GRANT'S HISTORIC HEADQUARTERS.

Nevertheless the story of which this neglected old hut was a part, will live in history forever. It was put up in 1864 and was occupied by Grant during the last four or five months of the rebellion. It stood on a bluff overlooking the James river, where were established the headquarters of the union armies from June, 1864, to March, 1865. During the summer and part of the autumn Grant had slept in a tent, but as the weather grew colder cabins were built for the officers.

Grant, as commander in chief of all the military forces, had a structure more pretentious than his staff, inasmuch as it contained two rooms, whereas the other officers' cabins had but one. Mrs. Grant spent a portion of the winter with her husband, and after her departure it became the resort of all the military lights on the union side of the conflict. The most historically important events in the history of this country were planned in this now moldering little shanty.

From it Grant issued his orders ratifying Sherman's march to the sea. From it he summoned Sheridan to the Potomac. From it he removed Butler after the failure at Fort Fisher. The celebrated dispatches to Thomas were written in it. Here Grant received the commissioners who came to treat for peace.

She Had Lived in a Village.

"Now," said the newcomer into the village, sitting down and confronting his wife, "let us see how our affairs stand."

"Well," said the wife, "you had better go out into the village and see, for the inhabitants know more of your affairs than you do."—N. Y. Press.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following ordinance has been introduced before the common council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the council to adopt the same.

F. W. RUNYON, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., November 16, 1892.

AN ORDINANCE

For the repair and permanent improvement of a portion of West Third street.

The inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, by the Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the roadbed of West Third street, between Madison avenue and Plainfield avenue be forthwith repaired and spread with broken stone for a width of eight (8) feet on each side of the centre line of said street for a depth of six (6) inches at the general expense of the city, to be paid for, after first applying the direct contributions of property owners, out of the money raised by tax for the improvement of streets according to the act of the Legislature in such case made and provided, approved May 13, 1884.

Section 2. That before any work shall be done under this ordinance the property owners along the line of the proposed improvement shall deposit with the City Treasurer a sum equal to thirty (30) cents per linear foot for the entire distance along West Third street covered by this ordinance.

Fees, $2.00.

We have just received a big shipment of Ladies' Dongola Button Kid Shoes which we have marked $1.90; they'll out wear any $2.50 shoe you have seen.

Just now we have some very good values in Men's Shoes at $2.50 and $3.

We would also remind you that our store is brimful of brand-new lines of footwear suitable for fall and winter wear and you will do yourself and your pocketbook justice by buying at

Call at the Crescent Cigar Store for fine cigars

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

Finding our present store space too small for our Holiday stock, we have removed the bulk of it up-stairs to the hall formerly occupied by the First Church of Christ. Here can be seen an excellent stock of first-class pianos. Agents for Chickering, Hazleton, Chase & Behning pianos, Story & Clark and Chase organs. The public is cordially invited to visit our rooms and examine these instruments. Open evenings. Tuning and repairing. Very respectfully yours,

INVINCIBLE YALEITES

Naught Heard but Encomiums for the Blue.

PRINCETON'S GREAT UPHILL WORK.

Her Eleven Played Bravely and Scientifically, and but for Two Unfortunate Errors Would Have Scored—Pluckiness of King and Bliss—The Greatest Football Contest in the History of the Game—Twenty-five Thousand Enthusiasts Witness the Struggle.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Once more Yale has defeated Princeton. One more the Tigers have failed to score and again the blue flag waves triumphant over the football field. Probably never before in the history of football has such a game been witnessed.

For brilliancy of play, unlooked for manœuvres and fine individual work, the game of '92 will stand pre-eminent. Nothing more heroic than the work of Laurie Bliss and of Capt. King of Princeton has been seen on the football field in years.

Bliss' neck was wrenched three times and his lame knee injured on four different occasions, but with Spartan courage he continued in the game and only gave up in the latter part of the second half, when he had to be literally dragged from the field. Graves took his place.

Plucky little King was injured six times, but stuck to the game throughout, amid the applause and admiration of friend and foe alike.

The score at the end of the game stood 12 to nothing. Princeton worked bravely and scientifically throughout, and would certainly have scored had it not been for the poor playing of Hall.

On two occasions he spoiled Princeton's chances—once through foul interference, and again through a fumble when the Tigers had the ball within 10 yards of Yale's goal. Had Hall done his work well Yale would not have had the pleasure of sending Princeton home with a goose egg.

The only thing to spoil the sport was the wind. It was a little too strong for football, but when the immense crowd of 30,000 people in Manhattan Field saw Princeton win the toss, give the ball to Yale and choose the favorite side of the field, they were satisfied, as it made matters more even.

Betting was 5 to 1 in favor of Yale before the teams appeared, but after the toss the odds fell to 3 to 1, and, strange to say, there were but few Princeton takers at that.

The gates to the grounds were not opened until 11 o'clock, but for an hour before that time the streets in the vicinity of the grounds were filled with a howling mob of college boys who made life miserable for store keepers in the vicinity by their noise.

The dark blue of Yale, the light blue of Columbia, the crimson of Harvard, the orange and black of Princeton and the carnelian and white of Cornell all were there and those who wielded the flags loudly demanded admittance. Inside the enclosure a busy scene was being enacted.

The field had been all prepared days before, but the last finishing touches were being put on before the admission of the crowd.

When the gates were opened, what a rush there was. At the admission gate it looked like a miniature Donnybrook fair. Hats, canes, coats and flags, to say nothing of buttons and chrisanthemums were broken and torn, but the boys did not mind at all. They were used to it; all they wanted was to get in and in they got, but not until they had been subjected to the by-no-means gentle caress of a dozen blue-coats who handled the mob with consummate skill, in squads of tens and twenties.

The crowd emptied itself into the grounds and made straightway for the best positions along the fences about the playing field. Inside of half an hour the front places at the fence were filled, and an hour later the boys stood four-deep, keeping themselves warm by frequent nips at suspicious looking bottles and keeping time with tooting horns and shouting themselves hoarse over the arrival of each tally-ho.

Shortly before the game was called the crowds on the grounds had swelled to an enormous size, there was not one vacant seat, and standing room was not to be had. The grand stand contained many parties, and gaily decked members of the fair sex entered with the boys into the enthusiasm of the moment.

A big blue umbrella caused plenty of excitement. It was carried by a stalwart Yale man who, with 25 fellow students, made a circuit of the field.

The noise that greeted this traveling crowd was deafening.

Fully 25,000 people were present when the game was called. The weather kept growing colder, and to keep warm it was necessary to keep moving. The wind increased and swept the field in gusts that carried everything before it.

The Princeton team, which was stopping at the Murray Hill Hotel, left the hotel very quietly for the field a few minutes before noon. The players kept strictly to their rooms all the morning and made their departure for the scene of conflict without any fuss or noise. Their arrival on the grounds was the occasion for a wild demonstration. Hats and canes were hurled into the air and for a time pandemonium reigned.

The Yale team left the Fifth Avenue hotel at about the same time and arrived on the grounds a few minutes after their rivals. As the carriages containing the Yale boys entered the grounds a scene equaling if not exceeding in noise that accorded the Princetons was enacted.

At 2 o'clock the Yale men appeared. There was a grand shout all over the area of the grounds and a roar went up from 30,000 throats. The cheering was prolonged, until the Princeton men followed a few minutes later. The cheering was renewed at the appearance of the Tigers and volley after volley of yells was returned by the opposing collegiates.

The teams lined up as follows:

Yale.	Positions.	Princeton.
Winter	Left tackle	Lea
McCrea	Left guard	Hall
Stillman	Centre	Balliet
Hickok	Right guard	Wheeler
Wallis	Right tackle	Harold
Greenway	Right end	Trenchard
McCormick	Quarter back	King
Bliss	Left half back	Poe
C D Bliss	Right half back	Morse
Butterworth	Full back	Homans

The average weight of the two teams is exactly the same, each being 169 1-2 pounds.

The average age of the Princeton team is just one year more than that of the Yale team.

The average age of the Princeton team is 20 years and 7 months, that of the Yale team 19 years and 7 months.

The average weight of the rush lines is: Princeton, 176 1-3 pounds; Yale, 177 pounds.

The First Half.

Before the spectators had finished greeting the teams the ball was put in play. Men were talking to each other, commenting upon the appearance of the players, ladies were still pursuing the conversation begun half an hour before, when suddenly a shout from the thousands on and around the field was heard.

Something had happened. But what? Only 1 minute and 57 seconds had elapsed, and surely nothing startling had occurred. But it had. Yale had scored a touch-down, and Butterworth was preparing to touch a goal.

It was an event that astounded the crowd. But when it was learned what had happened—that Yale, by a clever trick, had started off in the face of the wind with a score—the applause was deafening.

Two trials had been made and the ball advanced 13 yards into Princeton's territority. McCormick motioned to Laurie Bliss and in another instant Yale's captain had snapped the ball to Laurie, and that man, with the ball safe in his arms, started at a breakneck speed for goal. He ran around the right end and before the Princeton players could recover from their surprise, Bliss was burying the ball and Butterworth was getting ready to kick. Greenway had guarded the end well and "Pop" Bliss, Butterworth, and Hinkey had assisted to good effect.

Butterworth kicked the goal and while six points were being posted to Yale's credit on the same board, the air was darkened with Yale blue. During the rest of this half Yale acted on the defensive but kept the ball well into Princeton's territory. The half ended with no further scoring, the ball being left on Princeton's 30 yard line, Poe having just caught a clever punt of Butterworth's.

The Second Half.

During the ten minutes' rest between the halfs Heffelfinger, Rhodes, Harvey, Corbin, Beecher, McClung, and Gill, famous for their work for Yale in the football field, took occasion to tell all their friends that Yale was going to put up a big surprise in the second half. What the surprise was nobody ever knew, as Princeton was on her mettle and forced the play from the start.

After ten minutes' play Yale got the ball into Princeton's territory, and ten minutes later Stillman scored a touch-down for Yale, not through any brilliant play, but simply because he happened to be within ten yards of goal in time to follow up a punted ball.

Stillman was widely cheered by the Yale men, however, for his good judgment. Butterworth kicked the goal, and Yale had 12 points to her credit, while a dismal cipher marked the efforts of Princeton.

After the touchdown Princeton took the ball from centre and kept it in Yale's ground for nearly 30 minutes. Three times they had the ball within ten yards of goal, but on each occasion they failed to score. On the last trial Yale got the ball and it was rapidly pushed to the centre and into Princeton's territory.

Then matters grew hot. It looked as though Yale might score again at any time. Four times did "Pop" Bliss run, but thrice he gained naught and once but three yards. Butterworth forced the ball but to no effect. Princeton's interference was superb and the ball, when time was called, remained on Princeton's 15 yard line.

It was a good victory for Yale, as Princeton put up one of the best fights in the history of the game. The crowds of spectators brokk in upon the players at the close of the game and for ten minutes McCormick and the rest of the Yale boys had to submit to a vigorous handshaking.

Ingalf an hour after the game the grounds were deserted and the various street car lines and "L" roads were packed to their utmost capacity with the people hurrying to get home or to some dinner or theatre. The weather was bitterly cold, but no one complained. The sight was worth the suffering.

Games in Other Cities.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 25.—Three thousand people attended the Lehigh-Pittsburg athletic club football game. The Pittsburg A. C. team could make no headway against the splendid rushing and running tactics of Roderick, Ordway, and Hutchinson, of Lehigh. A goal from centre by Ordway was the feature. Score—Lehigh, 21; Pittsburg A. C., 0.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The football game for the District championship between teams of the Columbia Athletic Club and Georgetown University, resulted in 12 to 0 in favor of Georgetown. Georgetown made three touchdowns but missed kicking the goal each time.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 25.—The game between the University of Pennsylvania and the Wesleyan elevens resulted in a victory for the former by a score of 8 to 0.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Nov. 25.—At football here Binghamton high school defeated the Waverly High School by a score of 32 to 0.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—The football game between the teams of the Boston and Chicago Athletic Associations was won by the Bostons, they scoring three touchdowns, two goals and one safety, making a total of 18 points. Chicago made two touchdowns and two goals, a total of 12 points.

DETROIT, Nov. 25.—The football game between the teams of the University of Michigan and Cornell College was won by the latter; 30 to 10.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 25.—The deciding game in the Western Inter-collegiate Football League here between the elevens of the Kansas State University and Missouri State University, was a well played one and stubborn, Kansas winning by the score of 12 to 4.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 24.—The University of Wisconsin defeated the Northwestern University of Evanstown, Ill., at football yesterday by a score of 20 to 6.

Third Party in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 25.—It is apparent that the Third Party will hold the balance of power in the Legislature which will elect a successor to Senator Felton. The Democrats are five short of a majority while the Republicans require seven votes to control the Legislature on joint ballot. Seven Independents will therefore hold the balance of power.

Billy Mahan Defeated.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 25.—Jim Burge of Australia, defeated Billy Mahan of San Francisco, at Palo Alto Club, Wednesday night, in twenty rounds, for a purse of six hundred dollars.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

Business Generally Suspended Throughout the Eastern Country.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—The great home holiday of the nation—Thanksgiving Day—was more generally observed in this city this year than in a long time before. Business was almost totally suspended, and the Stars and Stripes floated over the tops of all public and numerous private buildings. The day was clear, with a crisp autumn air.

In the morning, services were held in nearly all the churches in the city, and many New Yorkers turned their thoughts from transient joys long enough to attend the services and return thanks to God for the blessings of the past year.

A feature of the day's observance was the number of parades by associations and societies.

Fishhorns, trumpets and long-abandoned silk hats had been resurrected for the day and the small boy did his best to make a pandemonium. He was only a trifle, however, when compared with his elder brother, who posed as a ragamuffin and cut up silly antics in the streets.

Of course, the great attraction of the day was the Yale-Princeton football game. It seemed as if everybody in town was moving toward Harlem, where the game was played, as if a new Oklahoma were about to be thrown open for settlement.

The sharp, frosty air imparted a spirit to the football cranks, and they were to be met on all thoroughfares decorated with their favorite team's colors.

SLATER DENIES THE RUMOR.

That He Married the Variety Actress Miss Van Tassel.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—In regard to the alleged Van Tassel-Slater marriage, in which a variety actress and a son of a prominent Washington business man were made the principal characters, statements are made here which entirely dispel the romantic features of the case.

Young Slater is a youth of 16, a friend of the manager of Harris' Theatre here. Instead of flying on the Royal Blue to the arms of a bride in New York, Mr. Slater was found in the box office of the theatre saying somewhat emphatic things last night which had been thrust upon him.

He had not married the actress, he said, and never entertained an idea of a Van Tassel alliance. He had met the lady last week, had been more or less in her society, and that was all.

Mr. Harris said the employes of the theatre corroborated this story.

His father said:

"The story is a malicious lie. My son was not married at Cobb's hotel—nor anywhere else. He could not have been married in the district without a license and none has been issued to him."

AFTER DETECTIVE M'HENRY.

He is Being Sought to Testify Before the Grand Jury in the Borden Case.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 25.—The Fall River police, under the direction of Marshal Hilliard, are making desperate attempts to induce Private Detective McHenry to go before the grand jury in the Lizzie Borden murder case. McHenry remains away from this State, where criminal proceedings have been instituted against him by a Boston diamond broker named Barrett.

It is believed he has been deceiving Marshal Hilliard all through and that it was upon alleged evidence which he claimed to have that the arrest of the unfortunate Borden girl was made.

The Fall River authorities distrusted McHenry and refused to pay for his work on the Borden case until they saw the evidence materialise before the grand jury. On account of the unpaid bill McHenry went to New York and refused to appear at Taunton.

Leading attorneys and judges are puzzled over the adjournment of the grand jury without definite action in the case.

WAS CORBIN THE DONOR?

Reported That He Gave the $500,000 to the Episcopal Cathedral, New York.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—The latest rumor in regard to the $500,000 gift to the Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine is that the donor is Austin Corbin, the millionaire railroad man and banker.

One man, who claimed to have knowledge of the facts, declared that Mr. Corbin had given the money. He added that the trustees of the Cathedral were refusing to talk of the gift at the request of Mr. Corbin, who did not wish it to appear as if he was seeking to glorify himself by noising his generosity abroad.

No Surprise at Princeton.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 25.—The outcome of the football game with Yale was received here with little or no excitement. The result had been expected ever since the announcement of Vincent's retirement was made. In fact, there were one or two remarks expressing surprise that the score against Princeton was not larger.

SURCEASE FROM CARE

Mr. Cleveland's Quiet Time at Broadwater Island.

OFFICE SEEKERS CANNOT REACH HIM

With Two Companions He is Exterminating Water Fowl—How He Spent Thanksgiving Day—Mrs. Cleveland's Narrow Escape at Lakewood, N. J.

EXMORE, Va., Nov. 25.—President-elect Cleveland is enjoying himself quietly on Broadwater Island, the beautiful but isolated resort which is owned by the Broadwater club. It is 19 and 8-10 miles from Exmore landing, which place is two miles from Exmore station on the New York, Philadelphia & Norfolk railroad. The private steam launch Sunshine plies between the landing and the island over a course which follows Machepongo creek for 5 and 1-2 miles. The island is 9 miles long and 3 miles wide, and contains a population of 21 families.

At the late election 31 votes were cast, and they were all for Cleveland.

The President-elect and his friends, Charles B. Jefferson and L. Clark Davis, are the guests of Joseph L. Ferrell, president of the club, at his cottage, which stands a short distance from the club house, the latter standing in a grove of pine trees half a mile inland. Mr. Davis is a member of the club.

Although the object of Mr. Cleveland's visit is to secure absolute quiet and much needed rest, he expects to spend some time in duck shooting.

A heavy north-wester, which has continued steadily for three days, has prevented gunning, and the party has remained quietly indoors. Mr. Cleveland is in excellent health.

A reporter of the National Press went to the island last evening and presented his card to the President-elect. He was received courteously, but Mr. Cleveland begged to be excused from submitting to an interview. He, however, expressed himself as being delighted with his surroundings, and said that it was his intention to remain on the island for five or six days. Then he will join Mrs. Cleveland at Lakewood, N. J.

It is probable, however, that if the President-elect's plans are interrupted by callers that he will remain several days longer.

It does not seem possible that a more isolated spot could have been selected where Mr. Cleveland might be free from the various annoyances to which he was subjected in New York.

The island's population with the exception of the crew of the United States Life Saving Station, are in the employ of the club.

Since Mr. Cleveland's arrival it has been remarkably cold for this locality. It is expected that the wind will fall sufficiently by noon to-day to allow the party to go duck shooting. The Sunshine will convey the guests opposite the blinds when row boats will be taken.

One-fourth of Broadwater island is covered with splendid groves of pines, hollys, sassafras and orchards of fig trees. This portion is a succession of mounds, but the remainder is level and slopes gradually to what is considered the finest beach in America.

Mr. Cleveland ate his Thanksgiving dinner at 5 p. m., the only persons present being his companions, Messrs. Davis, Jefferson and the host, Mr. Ferrell.

MRS. CLEVELAND'S ESCAPE.

While Out Driving With Friends the Horses Ran Away.

LAKEWOOD, Nov. 25.—Mrs. Cleveland had a most miraculous escape from being dashed down an embankment while out riding yesterday. The horses attached to the carriage in which sat Mrs. Cleveland, Mrs. F. P. Freeman, jr., and the Misses Freeman, became frightened and dashed away at a breakneck speed.

Mr. Freeman, sr., who held the reins, guided the enraged animals over the narrow road and by the deep chasm and finally succeeded in pulling them up without hurting any of the occupants.

The party were thoroughly frightened and immediately returned to the Freeman cottage where Mrs. Cleveland is stopping. Mrs. Cleveland made light of the occurrence later in the day when she became calm.

Miners' Wages Increased.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 25.—The miners of the Pine Brook and Capouse shaft of the Lackawanna Iron and Steel company, numbering 600, have been given an increase of 10 per cent. in wages, and for cutting cross headings they were increased from 50 cents per yard to $1.41. Laborers and all other employes about the mine and breaker of the company were also given an increase of from 10 to 30 cents a day.

Family Exterminated by Lynchers.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 25.—The peasants in the vicinity of Zastrzyki, Lithuania, surrounded the hut of a horse thief named Ivanski on Monday, with the intention of lynching him. Ivanski and his family defended themselves with guns, and wounded several of the lynching party. The peasants then set fire to the house, and Ivanski, his wife, and five children were burned to death.

Pardoned by Gov. Russell.

BOSTON, Nov. 25.—In accordance with an old Thanksgiving day custom the Governor pardoned two convicts from the State prison. The two fortunate men were John Taylor, sentenced for life in 1878 for wife murder in Boston and Antonio Joan, sentenced in 1874 for life for arson in Westboro, Mass.

Mr. Stevenson's Inauguration Escort.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Nov. 25.—A special train of cars has been secured by the Democrats in this vicinity for the purpose of escorting Gen. Adlai E. Stevenson to Washington on the occasion of his inauguration as Vice-President.

Gov. McKinley's Father Dead.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 25.—William McKinley, sr., the aged father of Gov. McKinley, died yesterday at his home in Canton. His death had been expected for a few days and all the family were in attendance.

President Italian Chamber of Deputies.

ROME, Nov. 25.—Deputy Zahardelli was elected President of the Chamber receiving 276 votes in 447. Crispi recived but one vote.

One rounded teaspoonful of Cleveland's Baking Powder does more and better work than a heaping teaspoonful of any other. A large saving on a year's bakings.

The best known writers on domestic science, as Marion Harland, Mrs. McBride, Mrs. Parker and Emily Hayes, and teachers of cookery, as Mrs. Rorer, Mrs. Lincoln and Mrs. Dearborn, use and recommend Cleveland's Baking Powder.

FIGHTING IN SAMOA.

Natives Killing One Another and Threatening the Whites.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 25.—Recent reports of trouble among the natives in Samoa is confirmed by mail advices from Apia which have just arrived by the steamer Monowai. A correspondent writing on Nov. 9, says:

"The natives are fighting in the bay. The towns are all destroyed. No native houses are standing. European property is safe as yet, but the natives are threatening to burn the white people out. Business is naturally at a standstill.

"All the natives have now left the Bay of Pago Pago, and are on the east end of the island. Hostilities commenced on Tuesday, Oct. 24. The Chief Leiato and his followers made a raid on the village of Aoa, killing four men and wounding one.

"On the 29th Fagatono and Aoa went to Pago Pago to endegvor to arrange matters peaceably between the contesting parties, but on their approaching the beach the Fagasaa people, who had joined the Pago Pago party, fired on the boats, killing two men and wounding three. Later the Fagatono and Aoa villages were burned down, and, indeed, the whole of the east end was destroyed."

A NEW WAY TO WIN A RACE.

Storage Electric Battery Applied to a Horse on the Track.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—Jockey Kuhn was caught stirring up Little Crete with an electric battery at Roby yesterday.

As the horses came to the post for the third race the attention of the judges was attracted by the unusual activity of the horse when he came in contact with Kuhn's heels.

The jockey was searched, and under his jacket was found a broad belt with cartridge shaped attachments, each of which contained an electric cell with wires running to the spurs.

Nothing could be done with Kuhn under the rules, but the judges immediately amended regulations so as to cover the case.

"LOT ONE—J. RIPPER."

Has the Whitechapel Fiend Gone to Victoria?

MELBOURNE, Nov. 25.—A bag containing two human legs was found in Hawthorne, a suburb of this city, yesterday. The members had evidently been recently severed from a man's body.

The bag was marked "Lot One—J. Ripper."

ONE HUNDRED ENTOMBED.

Blossburg Coal Mines on Fire and Many Miners in Danger.

RATON, N. M., Nov. 25.—The Blossburg coal mines are on fire.

There are 100 men in the lower workings. It is thought that some of them will be lost.

Three hundred families are affected.

American Mission Schools in Asia Minor.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 25.—It is officially stated, on behalf of the Turkish Government, that there is no truth whatever in the report that schools conducted by American missionaries in Asia Minor have been closed. The fullest liberty is and always has been allowed by the government in the management of such schools.

Another Jollification Accident.

JACKSON, Miss., Nov. 25.—At a political demonstration last night in honor of the election of Cleveland and Stevenson, Lee Daniel, a well-known young man, had his arm blown off and his face badly burned by the premature discharge of a cannon. John Cattlett also had a thumb blown off.

Rainmakers to Begin Work.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Nov. 25.—The indications being favorable to rain yesterday, General Dryenforth's party preferred to postpone their efforts to produce artificial precipitation, but a violent bombardment of the atmosphere will be the programme for to-morrow.

Broke Through the Ice and Drowned.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., Nov. 25.—Miss Lola Burnett and Mr. Geo. Kennecut, both popular young people and engaged to be married, fell through the ice, while skating yesterday and were drowned. The bodies were recovered.

Stabbed by an Unknown Assailant.

CORNING, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Edward Peterson, employed by the Fall Brook shops, was knocked down and badly stabbed by an unknown assailant while passing through a lumber yard in this city last night.

Injured in a Drunken Quarrel.

Forecast Till 8 P. M. Saturday: For New Jersey, Generally Fair, Warmer, Northwesterly Winds, Changing to Southerly by Saturday Morning.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION NOTES.

—Events transpiring in Republican ranks show that THE PRESS knew what it was talking about.

—Dr. Jenkins was proposed for school trustee, but withdrew. J. W. Jackson was named, but not seconded.

—Judge Ulrich's resentful battle against the men who inflicted personal wrong may not pan out as he expects.

—MacDonald's friends openly accuse Ulrich of cutting Fred to help John. The balloting for judgeship and collectorship was a great piece of jugglery.

—Various things helped defeat MacDonald. There was a bungle about putting his name before the convention, his personal presence was lacking, and he did n't seem to care much about it.

—Most all agreed that Johnson had had the collectorship long enough. Time was when he needed the position, but he has salted away good profits from it, and younger blood was demanded. But many thought that the selection of MacDonald was unfortunate. These urged that somebody more needy should be selected, and that Johnson was still more deserving than he.

—Some of the anti-ringites opposed Mr. Gilbert's renomination because they thought he was in with the ring. There never was a Mayor, except L. V. F. Randolph, freer from personal or factional connection with the "boss". But the fight goes merrily on. There are knives up men's sleeves.

—If the Hon. John Ulrich does n't already know whence to expect opposition [and he is too astute a politician not to study and weigh every circumstance], THE PRESS can tell him. Not that warning would avert the inevitable: in events now on and to come, there may be visible traces of the fine Italian hand of the "boss" and "de gang". The Hon. John has felt the sting of treachery; now he may not hope to escape the lash of those against whom he has rebelled. 'Tis a pretty fight, and all of the fur that will fly won't be from the hide of the Hon. John. Even the "boss" himself may have a few bald patches to rub, after election.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Stevenson R. Hope's grandchild is recovering nicely from her serious illness.

F. E. Kineman, of this city, has been granted a patent for an electrical device described as an insulating chair for rails.

Mrs. Edward Pack, of Park avenue, left last evening for Wellsville, Ohio, to visit relatives. She will return in about two weeks.

Samuel Moore and Harry Wheeler, of Poughkeepsie, and the Misses Bradshaw, of Plainfield, took Thanksgiving dinner at the home of ex-freeholder George W. F. Randolph.

Mrs. Tyler, Mrs. Edgerton, Mrs. VanBuren, Mrs. VanBoskerck, Mrs. Waring, Mrs. Huntington, Mrs. Cox and Mrs. Murphy are the patronesses of the amateur theatricals to be given in the Casino for the benefit of a poor crippled boy Thursday evening, Dec. 29. There are to be two plays. The performers are selected from the finest local talent, and are to be coached by Mrs. de Medina.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Thanksgiving Day in Plainfield was quiet, cold and restful.

—There will be a special sale of buttercups at Tier's to-morrow.

—Hill's celebrated Flemington sausage can be had at the United Tea and Coffee Growers' association store.

—The Y. P. S. C. E. of Warren Union Mission will hold a sociable in the chapel this evening at 8. An excellent programme has been prepared.

—Pete Peterson and Tom Henderson were ringleaders in a row at Jim Babbitt's pool room, yesterday. The city court extracted $6 from Tom, and $2 from Pete.

—The Thanksgiving sermons in Plainfield yesterday were unusually good and especially appropriate. That of Mr. Richardson was said to be the best ever delivered here.

—The union meeting of the Christian Endeavor societies held in the First Baptist church yesterday morning was well attended, most all present taking part. L. H. Biglow, jr., had charge and made a few excellent remarks in opening.

A Spanish Reunion.

A reunion of friends was held at the residence of C. Knust, 24 Putnam avenue, Wednesday evening. Dancing, singing and Thanksgiving supper were enjoyed. The guests were entertained by the Misses Maria, Louise and Elsie, who made charming hostesses. Among those present were A. Maertens and sister, of Jersey City; E. F. Schlaich and sister, of Jersey City Heights; Miss E. Cummings, of Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. J. de J. Costales, of Plainfield; G. Cayedo, of Plainfield; E. Pocaterra, C. A. Hillyer, J. A. Costales, and Misses B. and E. Schedler, of Jersey City Heights.

A Young Woman's Sudden Death.

Miss Mary E. Heidt died yesterday at the home of her uncle, E. H. Dobbs, 32 West Second street. She was an estimable young woman, and a member of Trinity church. Her age was 24.

She was at the play at Music Hall Wednesday night and was suddenly attacked by severe pain in the region of the heart. She had been laughing immoderately, and rupture of the stomach resulted.

Funeral services will be held this evening at 8. Interment will be made at Lake Cazenovia, Sullivan county, N. Y.

FACTIONAL TUG OF WAR

SHARP CLASHES BETWEEN RING AND ANTI-RING FORCES.

Mayor Gilbert Easily Gets the Renomination, But One or Two Candidates Have Hard Rubs—A Leader of the Anti-Ringites Hard Hit by the "Boss"—Judge Codington Retired to His Favorite Diversion of Rabbit-Hunting—The Funnel Still Intact, But a Little Battered—Only One Ring Incumbent to Go, the Rest to Continue to Incumber.

There was no mistaking the sentiment of the Republican city convention delegates, Wednesday night, towards the renomination of Mayor Alexander Gilbert. The brainy New York bank cashier received the unqualified endorsement of every one of the fifty-three men present in the Republican association rooms who were entitled to take a hand in framing the next Republican municipal ticket. To an innocent observer the convention was a perfectly harmonious affair—every man in love with his neighbor, and willing to help him to nominate his particular friend. But there was a strong undercurrent of opposition to "de ring gang" in the brains of the better half of the men present, and this opposition cropped to the surface in two instances, and was observable many times to a keen student.

For the nominations to the offices of city collector and city judge there were sharp clashes of ring and anti-ring forces, and the honors were about evenly divided when the tobacco smoke of battle had drifted out of the "funnel".

The First ward delegates advanced their claim for the public patronage in supporting for city collector J. Fred MacDonald in opposition to John Johnson, who for many years has grimly made change for tax-payers taking the trouble to climb his tollsome stairway. The friends of the "ring", and, incidently, Mr. Johnson, smote Mr. MacDonald a mighty smite, and the present collector will have a chance to fight for election.

The city judgeship row was a more bitter one, and resulted in the retirement of the present efficient incumbent, William R. Codington, and in the nomination of John Ulrich. Mr. Ulrich led from the first counting of votes, and came in a winner by three ballots. Judge Codington immediately left the hall when the result was announced.

ROUTINE OF THE CONVENTION.

John Ulrich called the convention to order, and was succeeded as chairman by John W. Murray. R. F. R. Huntsman was elected secretary; Rufus K. Case served as judge, and Henry B. Newhall and William Addis as inspectors.

The following nominations were then made:

For Mayor—Alex. Gilbert.
" Assessor—J. A. Hubbard.
" Collector—John Johnson.
" City Judge—John Ulrich.
" Commissioners of Appeal—J. F. MacDonald, William C. Ayres.
For School Trustee—George H. Babcock.

The vote for collector stood:

John Johnson	28
J. F. MacDonald	25

For city judge:

John Ulrich	28
W. R. Codington	25

TREACHERY IN THE CAMP.

How John Ulrich Labored, What He Wanted and Deserved, and How He Got It in the Neck.

[New York Evening Post.]

John Johnson, the present collector, has held that "fat" office for a long term of years, and it was thought by many Republicans that he ought to be ousted and replaced by a younger man, and one who has been more active than he in advancing party interests in local, State and national elections. J. Fred MacDonald, treasurer of the City Republican Executive committee, did splendid service in the recent campaign, and an attempt was made to reward him for this work by nominating and electing him as collector. Johnson's friends, however, were too strong for MacDonald's supporters, and the present collector was re-nominated, by a bare majority of three.

John Ulrich, State organizer of Republican clubs, lives in Plainfield, and he expected to receive recognition and reward for his arduous campaign duties in the nomination for Congress from the Eighth district. By the treachery of those who claimed to be his supporters, he was cheated out of the nomination, which the Plainfield Republican "boss" and his ring tried to shift to John W. Murray, a prominent New York insurance official, who lives at Plainfield, and who is hand and glove with the "boss". The bad treatment of Mr. Ulrich aroused a storm of wrath against the ring, and precipitated a bitter factional controversy. Mr. Ulrich served several terms as city judge in Plainfield; and his friends, and the foes of the "boss" and of the ring, demanded his nomination and vindication at the hands of the local Republicans. The present incumbent, Judge William R. Codington, made a hard fight for re-nomination, but was beaten by three ballots. He takes his defeat very sorely.

The Twilights Did Well.

The Twilight Social club covered itself with glory by its ball in the rink Wednesday night. The grand march was a fine sight. It was led by floor manager Fred. S. Moore and assistant floor manager Wm. H. Blimm, escorting Miss Josie Miner and Mrs. Blimm respectively. The attendance was large, and everyone heartily enjoyed the event.

"A God-send is Ely's Cream Balm. I had catarrh for three years. Two or three times a week my nose would bleed. I thought the sores would never heal. Your Balm has cured me."—Mrs. M. A. Jackson, Portsmouth, N. H.

I have been troubled with catarrh for 10 years and have tried a number of remedies, but got no relief until I purchased a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. I consider it the most reliable preparation for catarrh and cold in the head.—George E. Crandall, P. M., Quonochawtaug, Rhode Island.

THANKSGIVING DAY FIRES.

Two Unpleasant Incidents of an Otherwise Happy Holiday.

Fire yesterday forenoon started from a chimney in a heap of attic-rubbish, in the old Robert Brand house at West Third street and Central avenue, and got well started within the walls of the building. The fire department had to flood the house to prevent the spread of the fire. The house was occupied by Eden Boice and his boarders. Everything was soaked. The loss on household goods is $300; insurance, $600. The loss on the building is $1,000; insurance not known. The present owner of the dwelling is some man in Washington State, who bought of Mr. Brand.

During the fire, Geo. Studer of Arlington avenue, a member of Zephyr truck, was knocked down by a line of hose and had his right wrist disabled by a bad sprain. Robert Wood of Gazelle engine had an ankle badly sprained by a misstep.

Mrs. Boice's big turkey dinner was spoiled.

Fire started yesterday morning in one of the bed-rooms of Miss Sadie W. Stoll, 11 Elm street, which might have been serious only for the occupants of the house and the neighbors, who succeeded in putting out the blaze. It started in a bureau drawer, supposedly from matches, and burnt several dresses and many other articles. The loss is about $100, with no insurance. The fire burnt the back of the bureau all out, and broke the mirror. The heat also broke window glass in the room.

HYMENEAL.

Walker—Morse.

Miss Lottie Morse, who so long has graced the switchboard at the telephone exchange, and Walter Walker, who was once a star on the Crescent base-ball nine, joined hearts and fortunes, Wednesday evening. The telephone patrons have lost a voice that was pleasantly familiar. Mr. Walker has gained a good little woman, an estimable wife.

The marriage took place at the home of the bride's father, E. C. Morse, 37 Chatham street, at 7:30. The Rev. Cornelius Schenck officiated. The wedding was a most felicitous event, but was enjoyed by only the immediate relatives. The bride's gown was a becoming costume of tan-colored cloth and velvet. A choice wedding supper was served, and general sociability made the hours pass quickly.

Mr. and Mrs. Walker will keep house at 52 East Fifth street.

BOROUGH EVIL-DOERS.

The Fries Boys Sentenced—Other Offenders Punished—Bad Boys Beware.

Borough marshal Pangborn is after the wicked with a vengeance.

Yesterday he arrested Charles White, drunk and disorderly, and magistrate Crosley gave a 30 days' sentence.

John Kelly, not Tammany John but Phillipsburg, same offense, same dose.

George Harris, incorrigible boy, would n't go to school, procured a bicycle under peculiar circumstances, altogether bad; taken to Somerville and sent by Judge Bartine to Reform School. Example for other bad boys. All truants are to be treated likewise.

The Fries boys were sentenced at Somerville. Phil got 4 months in jail, and Fritz 6. They stole ex-Mayor Place's son's bike.

DUNHAM NOT INSANE.

Only an Attack of Biliousness that Made Him Wander Away.

A son of engineer Jeremiah Dunham, whose queer doings were recorded in these columns Wednesday, says that Jerry is n't insane. Dr. P. W. Brakely, he reports, diagnoses the case as an attack of biliousness. In getting off his engine, he adds, Jerry struck his head and that helped daze him. The night he spent on the mountain is all a blank to him. He has recovered his reason and senses, but is very stiff and sore from exposure.

Happy Young Men Enjoyed Three Things.

The attendance at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian association, last evening, was quite large, and the entertainment provided by the reception committee was greatly enjoyed. The programme consisted of gymnastic exercises performed by Charles F. Meyer, assisted by Charles F. Meyer, jr., George Meyer, Frank Keller and Louis Mensenbach.

E. L. Walz, jr., and Vincent Rockwell performed on the horizontal bar. Miss Carrie C. Dewey played a piano solo, and two flute solos were rendered by Fred. B. Newmar, who was accompanied by his brother, Louis, on the piano.

M. C. VanArsdale sang two solos, and A. C. LeBoyteaux, in behalf of the association, welcomed the men to the rooms at all times, made announcements and told of the privileges of the association.

The Ladies' nine officiated as usual in serving refreshments. The evening's entertainment closed with the singing of college songs and free gymnastics by the young men present.

A needy woman—the one who's overworked, nervous, and debilitated. What she needs is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It's made exactly to fit her case—an invigorating, restorative tonic, and a soothing and strengthening nervine, giving tone and vigor to the whole system. But it isn't a mere stimulant. It's a legitimate medicine, that an experienced physician has carefully prepared, for women's ailments. All the functional derangements, chronic weaknesses, and painful disorders peculiar to the sex, are corrected and cured by it. And because it's a certain remedy, it can be made a guaranteed one. If it fails to give satisfaction, in any case, you have your money back.

You pay only for the good you get.

The best pill costs less than any other. Costs less, but does more. They're smaller, too, and easier to take. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the best pills. They regulate perfectly the liver, stomach, and bowels.

PASTOR CLARK'S ATTACK.

HE SAILS INTO THE CREEDS OF TRINITARIANS.

Read This Lecture Through and See Where It Pinches Your Theological Toe—Is It Your Belief He Calls "Uninteresting, Unsatisfactory, Meaningless"!—Takes Modern Scholars, He Thinks, to Interpret the Gospels—All Denominations But Unitarians Grossly in Error—Popular Beliefs of Christ Are Myths, and Miracles Are Not True—Jesus Considered, Not as the Myth Who "Washed Away the Sins of the World", but as a "Sweet, Strong, Wise Brother", a "Pure, Brave, Tender Teacher", an "Exampler of Moral Truth and Spiritual Life"—Here's What He Says; See How You Like It.

An utterance that was meat and drink to Unitarians, since it clearly and powerfully defined their doctrine, but that is likely to be seized by skeptics and Bible critics as food for attacks savoring of infidelity and atheism, was the doctrinal sermon of the Rev. Hobart Clark in All Souls' church, last Sunday evening. There be many advocates of what is termed the "higher criticism of the Bible" who will delight in pastor Clark's careful and scholarly production. There be men of denser intellect, and irreligious, even blasphemous, tendencies, who will rejoice in the chance to quote how a good clergyman "sustains what we have always claimed". The sermon was delivered in lecture style, and is the second of the series of three. The first has already been published in these columns, exclusively, as is this now. The production is brainy and polished, and those who will dispute its theology will admire its beauty of sentiment and choiceness of language and respect the heartiness and force of its clever argument. The portion descriptive of Christ's wonderful every-day actual life is especially fascinating.

THE POSITION OF THE MODERN UNITARIAN CHURCH REGARDING JESUS THE CHRIST.

[Delivered by the Rev. Hobart Clark at All Souls' Church, Sunday Evening, Nov. 20.]

Very much indeed depends on the answer which men give to that old question, What think ye of the Christ? Because he who bore that office is the only man who ever lived about whom all other men are compelled to think something. He alone among all the actors in the world's history cannot be ignored. His life, his thought, his work, his character, command and receive the attention of every man born in Christian lands, or coming under the influence of Christian ideas and institutions. I shall not attempt to enumerate nor to describe the many varying and sometimes conflicting opinions concerning the person of Jesus, and the office of the Christ, which have been, and still are, held in the Unitarian church as well as elsewhere. I shall speak of our sentiments rather than of our opinions. In our feelings toward him, we are pretty unanimous; in our opinions about him we are still somewhat divided, as we are about other great men of the past. This is possible because ours is a church without a creed, with no dogmas that must be believed, and feeling the need of none, hard as it seems for the outside Christian world to realize this fact. Unitarians have many different conceptions of the work and character of Jesus, but the one point on which they all agree among themselves and on which they disagree with most other Christians has never been stated in a better way than this: They look on Jesus as a divine man, whereas trinitarians look on him as a human God. They do not deny his divinity; they affirm it; but they do deny his deity, and have always insisted that the distinction thus drawn is a most important one. They feel that it makes a great difference whether he is spoken as "God the Son", or as the "Son of God". And they find that Jesus never asked men to believe in some doctrine, or to accept some theory about him He asked men to believe in him as a man; in his spirit and his purpose; to love him and to obey him as disciples; and that is what the modern Unitarian church sincerely and gladly strives to to. We find no meaning, and take no satisfaction, in those familiar phrases which say that he was "God the Son, who for our sakes became man, and died upon the cross as a ransom for many, that by his blood he made an atonement for the sins of a fallen humanity, and satisfied the just wrath of an offended God." Such phrases seem to us quite meaningless, and even uninteresting—to represent the mythology of Christianity, not its historic facts. They bring us no nearer to the life and character of that carpenter's son who by the force of his own pure character, his marvelous genius, and the loving reverence which he won for himself, turned the whole current of the world's life and thought. As we read the Gospel narratives, we are utterly unable to identify the man Jesus of whom they tell, with the Christ of the creeds, the mythical hero of Augustinian and Calvanistic theology; and we are glad to be unable. We care nothing about the mythical Christ of the theologies; he seems to us a fictitious and unreal personage, worthy to rank with Prometheous, Hercules, Appollo, Osivis and the demigods of Pagan mythology. It is of course interesting to know that such myths grew up about the simple peasant of Galilee, just as they grew up about other great heroes of the ancient world. We do not call them false, because we find them in their origin to be the products of sincerity and enthusiasm, but we do call them unreal, and regard all such myths, whether Christian or Pagan, as childish superstition. Interesting, certainly; beautiful, in some respects; bearing important witness to the deep impression made by a godlike man on a credulous and ignorant age: but not to be taken literally. More interesting to us, far more interesting than the mythical Christ, is the man Jesus of Nazareth. We are quite prepared to admit that Jesus was the Christ, but we look to the man for the explanation of the Messianic office; not to that office, nor to the prophets of the Old Testament, for the explanation of the man. The man himself was greater, far greater, the office which he bore. It added nothing to his dignity, but he by the force of his genius took that old idea of his fatherland, and made it the type of pure human kingliness of character for all the nation, and all the ages; he exalted the office by accepting it, and gave to it all the meaning which it has in our modern thought.

The speaker touched on the question of miracles, and said that in the Unitarian church the question of their credibility was regarded as of historical and scientific rather than of religious importance. Our position towards Jesus Christ—he said—is in no way affected by our belief or disbelief that they took place as they are recorded. We look upon many of those stories as a part of the mythology which grew up about him, but we could not believe Jesus any more than we believe him already, nor love him any more than we love him now, were the record literally true. The speaker then referred to the character of the four gospels, and said that by reading them carefully and intelligently under the guidance of the ablest modern scholars we find in them the portrait of a real man and no mere fiction of the imagination. He is a real man, and no myth, who looks upon us from those ancient, blurred and scanty pages. We find him a child in his mountain home at Nazareth; a child like other children, thinking his own thoughts, obedient to his father and mother, growing daily in favor with God and man, bearing the common burden of work as he grew older, but always thinking great thoughts about the greater business of his Heavenly Father, learning of His law and love in a thousand ways, becoming ever more and more familiar with the presence of God in a world which heeded not that presence, and suffered great wrongs, and sins, and sorrows, because of its moral heedlessnes and spiritual blindness. We find him reading with deep interest in the sacred bible of his countrymen, of the great words and deeds and the glowing prophecies of mighty men of old, but studying a greater bible yet, the bible of nature, reading God's word incarnate in 'the lillies of the field', and the sparrows about the house-tops, hearing Him speak in the mysterious wind which 'bloweth where it listeth', over the hill-tops, among the trees, or through the narrow streets of Nazareth town, bringing alternate clouds and sunshine for the good man and the evil, for the just and the unjust alike; and finding at last God's law written in the commands of his own conscience, and God's love declared in the whisperings of his own heart; until, filled with the burden of his great message, he feels commanded to go and proclaim it without ceasing to a weary and heavy-laden world: and so we trace his footsteps as he wanders through the hills and valleys, by the river Jordan, or through deepised Samaria, down to old Jerusalem itself, doing all the good he can, but making both friends and enemies. We listen to his earnest voice in the village synagogue, on the mount above Capernaum, or in the little fishing towns about the lake. We see him correcting the old errors, raising the standard of daily life and thought for those who were in poverty, weakness, ignorance, or sin. We find him succeeding only too well for his own safety, provoking a conflict with those in authority which he sees can end only with his own life, but never hesitating, never retreating, never fearing nor doubting, until that end arrives; and making a final conquest of the world by dying as bravely as innocently, thus kindling a fire of enthusiasm for his holy thought and work which nineteen centuries have not extinguished but only made more bright and warm: all this by the force of his own unaided personal character and influence as a simple man among other men, with no outward advantage of any kind. Now this is all very simple and natural and human; but this at least we can find in the gospels, and finding it we have found the man Jesus very much as he really was, and this is enough for us. We have found him whom we really care for. We have not found the mythical Christ of the theologies who washes away the sins of men with his blood, but we have found our sweet, strong, wise, brother man Jesus, the Nazarene, and having found him we have found the true Christ also, that perfect ideal of manhood, that human word of God which in him first became incarnate. We have found him whose disciples we really wish to be.

The position of the modern Unitarian church towards Jesus the Christ is therefore the position of free, loving, reverent, thoughtful discipleship simply, towards one whom it recognizes as the purest, bravest, wisest and tenderest teacher and exemplar of moral truth and spiritual life, whose presence has blessed the world. We care not greatly what men believe about him. We only ask them, as he did, to believe in him. We dare to call ourselves his disciples, hoping and trusting that he will not find us utterly unworthy to bear his name.

"As when the valleys all in shadows lie,
And shadowy shapes of fear still haunt the night,
Some mountain-peak reflects the coming light,
And waiting lips break forth with joyful cry.
For gladness that at last the day is nigh:
So when some soul that towers afar is bright,
The souls that sit in shadow, at the sight
Grow sudden glad to know 'tis light on high!
And when these mountain-towering men can say
'We see though it be hidden from your eyes',
We can believe in better things to be:
So though the shadows still obscure our way
We see the light reflected from the skies
That crowns thy brow, O man of Galilee!"

The third and last lecture of this course will be given next Sunday evening, on the position of the modern Unitarian church towards other churches.

Shiloh's Cough Cure

This is beyond question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold; a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price, 50c. and $1. If your lungs are sore, chest, or back lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by A. D. Mallinson, 65 North Ave., opposite railroad station. 5-16-y

BIG TIME AT THE SMOKER.

Crescent Leaguers Enjoy a Lively Thanksgiving Eve.

The Crescent League club-house was a scene of joyous animation, Wednesday night. It was the rendezvous of nearly all the members, to enjoy a good, sociable smoker, such as are becoming so popular in Plainfield.

Nearly one hundred and fifty members and guests were present, and at about 9 p. m. all were assembled in the large parlor up stairs to witness the entertainment given by amateur members of the association and some of their friends.

After a song by the Crescent League quartette, which was much appreciated, president Charles P. Leggett opened the entertainment with a few remarks and introduced ex-president C. A. Reed to respond.

The subject taked by Mr. Reed was, "Are You With Us?". He first told the starting of the club, its appearance in Plainfield, how well it was organized and how prosperous, when that fire which has been the cause of a good deal of trouble broke out and burned everything. Since that time and in possession of the new club-house the Crescent League has been going on, hampered with a large debt to support at the beginning; they have been able to reduce it to two-thirds by good economical management, and the league has become so popular that to-day more than 100 members belong. Addressing the guests of the association, Mr. Reed said: Are you with us?—to join us in building a strong and interesting association in which all kinds of sports can be enjoyed? Are you with us to help us in doing what the Westfield Athletic club has done lately—that club which we called during the base-ball season the Westfield buckwheats, but which had shown its practicality in building a handsome club-house where everything is combined to give the members the most comfortable home.

C. A. Reed spoke at length of the plan that the board of trustees submitted a few weeks ago to sell shares, which plan has been accepted and very much encouraged. He hoped that every man present would very soon be a member of the association, and its supporter. Mr. Reed's address was greeted with much applause, and showed that his few remarks were appreciated by all the audience.

After a few songs by Charles Foster of Westfield, who possesses a very agreeable voice of light tenor, and who was given a very good greeting, the Plainfield Crescent League mascots were introduced and gave for fifteen minutes a most funny and hilarious time to every one present. The two little fellows showed during the short time they were before the audience a degree of science in their business which was very interesting for the real amateurs who witnessed the match

The splendid piece "Paraphrase de Concert", of Shutt, played on the piano, once more proved the talent of Mr. Venino.

After a few pieces played by F. Hallock on the banjo, William Runyon was introduced. For a half hour Mr. Runyon, who has a magnificent voice of bass, kept his friends laughing with songs and charisonettes, rendering them with all the life and verve to be found in an ex-Yale student. "When Hogan paid the rent", "Nellie Typewriter McGuire", "Take a day off, Mary Ann", and a few others, were his selections. Mr. Runyon was greeted with "encore", and only the close announced by the president could satisfy the audience that the voice of Mr. Runyon could not stand any longer. No wonder that most of the gentle sex are wearing the colors of Yale, knowing when they meet a Yale student they always find such entertainers as William!

The smoker was a great success and reflects a good deal of credit on Charles Leggett, president, who conducted the arrangements with his good friendly ways. It shows that good sociable entertainment at the Crescent League is what everybody wants and that the new management of the club has the appreciation of everybody connected with the league.

It it known that that kind of entertainment to which women may be invited will increase the popularity of the league, and bring members in larger number; a number which has greatly increased since the new management.

There is no doubt that with Charles P. Leggett as president; Clarence Teel, W. A. Coddington, George O. Stevens and "most genial" Charles H. Lyman, at the head of all good movements, the club cannot help itself to grow rapidly and will efface any other organization of the kind in Plainfield in popularity and splendor, and it is predicted that very soon as in Westfield the Plainfield Crescent league will have its own home.

Changes of Borough Property.

Real estate transfers recently recorded in Somerset county include the following of property in North Plainfield:

Elanor S. Kline to Lucy Ann Benedict, $3,050.

James A. Marsh to George S. McGinnis, $650.

Adam Horn to Louisa Austedt, $5,000.

Heirs of Richard Marsh to Abby H. Chase, $4,500.

—Judge, get out your gun.

Oh, What a Cough!

Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease, Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50c., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves croup and whooping cough at once. Mothers, do not be without it. For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by A. D. Mallinson, 65 North Ave., opposite railroad station. 5-16-y

Things They Were Thankful For.

Judge Codington—That he has a gun, and knows how to use it.

The "boss"—That even should he be ousted from political leadership, his many money-making irons in the fire, that politics helped him to get, can't be wrested from him. Excepting one.

Mayor Gilbert—That whatever may be the fortunes of politics, his moral worth and sterling integrity are unimpeachable.

Collector Johnson—For the nomination.

J. F. MacDonald—That 't was a cold night when he got left.

Ex-city clerk Coward—That there is much talk of a change in the clerkship at the hands of the new council.

Councilman Fisk—That running on the Republican ticket in the Third ward is such a snap.

Public-spirited station agent Haynes—That the freight-house is going to be moved.

Big-hearted Jerry Garretson — That there were n't any trunks to smash after dinner.

Assessor Hubbard—That his work is going to be divided, or his salary raised.

High school students and teachers—That THE PRESS's advocacy of the one-session plan is bearing such good fruit.

R. J. Shaw—That his reputation as a cold wave prophet was so ably sustained.

Sergeant Lynch—That he hadn't any prisoners to escape.

The Plainfield public—For local rapid transit.

Everybody—For the election of Cleveland and the triumph of Tariff Reform.

An Organ That Does n't Know Its Own Party's Doings.

The Courier, which boasts of being the organ of the "boss" and his ring, attempts to take THE PRESS to task for quoting G. A. R. criticism of Mayor Gilbert. THE PRESS has not as yet indulged in any criticism of its own, of Mayor Gilbert, despite the Courier's malicious villifications. THE PRESS has praised the good Mayor for his virtues, and was sincere in admiring and commending his exemplary qualities. It said, which is true, that in serving the city's best interests he had offended politicians; that G. A. R. men (whether unjustly or not) were sore against him; that there was opposition from various quarters. That opposition still exists, even if Mr. Gilbert did get the renomination. THE PRESS has suppressed more than it has told, and the Courier by its venomous frothings at the mouth shows that it is ignorant of much that disturbs the interior of its own party. Poor organ! It does n't seem to have the confidence of even the boss whose whip-lash directs its squirmings. As for Mayor Gilbert, THE PRESS is a particular friend of his. His enemies are in his own camp. THE PRESS has only pointed out in part who they are, and the thrust strikes too near home for the Courier's composure and equanimity.

ANARCHISTS AT HOME.

Secret Societies in Which Brainy Brutality Attains Its Ends.

The Omladina's Powerful Band — How "Bosses" Are Removed — A Hidden Factor in the Pennsylvania Trouble.

[COPYRIGHT, 1892.]

It is always an ill wind that blows nobody good, and the barrier which the cholera has unexpectedly set up against the inroads of foreign immigration has also put a temporary stop to the spread within our gates of the destructive doctrines of social conspiracy. It can hardly with truth be claimed that Americans are even one-half aware of the hidden fires forever smoldering in their very midst—fires fanned and fed from day to day, from hour to hour, by the remembered resentments and cherished vendettas perpetually being imported into the country. The secret societies peculiar in their origin to certain classes of the population of Hungary, Bohemia, Croatia, Dalmatia and Jewish Russia, are simply transplanted in their entirety when individual members of them settle here. To this fact are traceable the frequent mysterious murders which periodically startle the public, occurring in those districts especially where the lower class of immigrants congregate.

THE OMLADINA SECRET SIGN.

To instance this we will begin with the Omladina, a secret society which first spread southward from Bessarabia and westward to Hungary, Servia, Bosnia and Croatia. It is now the most powerful one among our Hungarian and Slavak population, and in their native lands its wide ramifications have long been known to the authorities. Information gleaned from special sources goes to prove that the Omladina's influence continues to prevail among its members long after they emigrate, for the same system of holding together and observing the traditions of their secret mutual bond is characteristic of the expatriated Hungarian working in the Pennsylvania coal mines, or in the great industrial concerns of that state, or still further west.

Here is the situation: A certain boss workman is obnoxious to a large number of his men and they resolve to "remove" him. The next question is how shall it be done. The conspirators being loyal members of the Omladina, proceed systematically, and after the secret session which has decreed the "removal" dissolves, a piece of red paper is sent to another village where members of the order are numerous. This contains the name of the victim and is addressed to one of the faithful selected by a majority vote to carry out the sentence. The latter knows the scarlet missive means bloodshed, so he forthwith arms himself with knife and revolver and proceeds to the village whence it came. Arriving there he goes to the residence of the local head of the order, and as he enters places the index finger of his right hand upon the Adam's apple of his throat—thus giving the secret sign of identification—following this up by the password, a peculiarly framed and lengthy sentence, the exact translation of which even the writer has been unable to secure. Then the two proceed to business; the chief arranges for the commission of the deed, and dispatches the murderous emissary upon his fatal errand. Nothing more is known until the community is aroused to the contemplation of the assassin's work. Suspicion may rest upon any one of the Hungarians or Croats dwelling in the immediate vicinity, but it is, of course, impossible to establish a case against them, because not only are none of them directly guilty, but, knowing beforehand the precise time the attempt would be made, they each and all have taken excellent care to be at that moment in other places and in the presence of persons whose evidence would suffice to clear them if accused. The alibi is thus their irrefutable defense, and, while the local police are vainly expending their energy and sagacity, the real murderer has returned to his safe retreat, as much beyond the danger of detection as if he had never been born.

Does the shadow of a doubt exist, I would fain ask the thoughtful reader, but that the several murders so lately committed in Pennsylvania, when American foremen in charge of Hungarian laborers were hurried into eternity, and the responsibility for which could never be placed, were actually accomplished by the methods I have described?

No less dangerous is the organization existing among the Poles, who are found in large numbers in the environs of Chicago, in Michigan and other northwestern states. It is the outcome of the revolutionary spirit which permeated Poland after the dismemberment of that unfortunate country, and had for its motive the protection of the oppressed natives against the tyranny of the conqueror. Banded together in self-defense under the watchword of patriotism, and largely recruited from the ranks of those gallant agriculturists who, under the leadership of Martin Langiewicz, defied with their scythes the sabers and bayonets of Russia's troops, the "Society of Scythemen," as it is called, while retaining in great part its original membership, altered its aims when transferred to a fresh sphere of action in the new world. When the scythemen, in short, left Poland for America they began to forget all about Polish independence and the memory of Kosciusko. They did not, however, cease to maintain the spirit of their secret brotherhood, and, carrying its general principles of organization with them, adapted the latter to their environment. Here the whole trouble lay, for these Polish-Americans failed to discriminate between the despotism from which they had fled and the free government which welcomed them as citizens. Anything which in their eyes took the form of legalized authority was at once to be condemned, and it did not matter that this authority took the form of capital employing labor, to them it was hopelessly suggestive of tyranny all the same. The scythemen, now grown communistic above all things, gradually developed into something infinitely worse. For the purer ideals of communism soon gave place to a theory and practice of absolute degradation. Secret lodges sprang into existence, and multiplied, being in reality nothing more or less than blackmail associations. The feasibility of utilizing the order for the purpose of blackmailing their more fortunate and thrifty fellow countrymen who had committed the crime of getting on well in the new world quickly became apparent. Well-to-do Poles have disappeared in several parts of the west within recent years with comparative frequency, and were, say many people who have the opportunity for inside observation, simply "removed" by the scythemen. I do not absolutely guarantee the correctness of this assumption, but it is certainly prevalent among the better classes of Poles with whom I have come in contact. The organization is radical throughout—radical in the most extreme sense of the word, including murder, boycotting and the destruction of the property of obnoxious persons.

There is yet another class of foreigners who like the Poles consider them selves an oppressed and down-trodden people. These are the Bohemians, who, never willing to be absorbed into the homogeneity of the Austrian empire, have always fretted under the Hapsburg yoke. This unwilling subjection on their part to an alien rule has produced the result familiar in all such cases—it has fostered the development of secret societies. Emigration, while not destroying this pristine instinct, has tended to badly demoralize it, as I will explain. The better class of Bohemians who come here are saved through their sturdy, staid qualities and the beneficent influence of American civilization from drifting astray, and it is only those of blunted moral perceptions who are found in the ranks of the pariahs. Secret organization among the latter may be called Bohemian brigandage, as far as its operations here are involved. In some ways it is less devilish than that existing among the other nationalities described above, for it does not include murder, resting content with a peculiar system of swindling and robbery, into which it has drifted from its former phase of blackmail.

Divided into two principal sections, this Bohemian society has intrenched itself most strongly in New York and Chicago. Its objects are attained by tactics both ingenious and simple. The steamers arriving in New York are regularly watched by detailed members of the local gang, who dress themselves in the garb usually worn by their countrymen when they first land. Arriving families are sharply looked out for, and their worldly degree of prosperity at once sized up. When they step ashore, if they are, in the estimate of the waiting shark, worthy of his attention, he approaches and introduces himself. Recommending his proteges to one of the lodging houses in Greenwich street, near the landing pier in New York, kept by Bohemians, the shark at once telegraphs to confederates in Chicago—should that be the place of his victim's destination—and if to some other point he so fixes it that his confederates have time to start on ahead and mature their plans. In either case the result is the same; if Chicago is the objective point the confederates stationed there, being advised by wire, at once engage rooms for the reception of the party. If it is anywhere else the New York confederates arriving there first secure quarters themselves. It is always easy for shark No. 1 to convince his prey that they had better adopt his suggestions. The western city, for such it generally is in these cases, once reached, the sequel is soon told. The first night the party pass in the house the business is completed and they are robbed of their cash. SERGE SUSCHENK

LYDIA PINKHAM:—"My son, I was just thinking how our little group of three generations so strongly demonstrates and illustrates my theory of the transmission of health from mother to child, and what can be more striking than the fact that my vigorous health is reproduced in your darling children."

The normal life, well-being, and happiness of mankind depend upon the physical health and perfection of Woman.

Thousands of women in all parts of the civilized world cherish grateful remembrance of the Vegetable Compound, and daily bless its discoverer.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Is the only Positive Cure and Legitimate Remedy for the peculiar weaknesses and ailments of women.

It cures the worst forms of Female Complaints, that Bearing-down Feeling, Weak Back, Falling and Displacement of the Womb, Inflammation, Ovarian Troubles, and all Organic Diseases of the Uterus or Womb, and is invaluable to the Change of Life. Dissolves and expels Tumors from the Uterus at an early stage, and checks any tendency to Cancerous Humor. Subdues Faintness, Excitability, Nervous Prostration, Exhaustion, and strengthens and tones the Stomach. Cures Headache, General Debility, Indigestion, etc., and invigorates the whole system. For the cure of Kidney Complaints of either sex, the Compound has no rival.

All Druggists sell it as a standard article, or sent by mail, in form of Pills or Lozenges, on receipt of $1.00. LYDIA E. PINKHAM MED. CO., LYNN, MASS.

MR. BLAINE'S HEALTH

Contradictory Rumors as to His Condition.

THE FAMILY REPORT IMPROVEMENT,

But It Is Whispered That the ex-Secretary's Illness Is Much More Serious Than Is Given Out—He Is Said to be Suffering from a Throat Affection.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—There are the most contradictory statements as to Mr. Blaine's condition. At the house it is stated that he is better, that he passed a comfortable night, and is doing well. It is further said that in a few days he will resume his customary occupation. That side of the family life which is exhibited to the public is bright and cheerful, as this view of Mr. Blaine's health would warrant.

But those who are admitted to the inner circle are credited with saying that there is no such feeling of confidence as is outwardly shown.

It is certainly true that Mr. Blaine has been "improving" long enough to have made him a perfectly well man by this time. Nevertheless, every few days the public is alarmed by stories of relapse, mental weakness, and, in some cases, desperate illness.

It is not supposed by any one who is fairly well informed that Mr. Blaine is in immediate danger of death, if he is in any danger at all. But that he is "improving," as so frequently stated, can hardly be believed.

Dr. Hyatt and Dr. W. W. Johnson, who are in attendance upon Mr. Blaine, are throat specialists, and his particular ailment this time is there. It has been mentioned that his family are considering a plan to take Mr. Blaine to some Southern health resort for the winter. However this may be, his health will have to be better than it is now before he can make the journey in safety or hope to derive much benefit from it.

From the best information at hand, it seems that Mr. Blaine's health has so long been precarious that his constitution has been injured, and he is not now so able to bear up under the seasons of illness, which recur much more frequently than they did ten years ago.

The present attack has a phase which is exceedingly discouraging to his family and physicians.

Heretofore Mr. Blaine has shown remarkable recuperative powers and has almost always responded readily to tonics and medical treatment. This time, however, he doesn't rally as he did formerly. So far as his mind is concerned it is as clear and bright as ever, except, of course, that in his periods of physical weakness his conversation is not so ready nor so entertaining as when he feels better.

The latest news from the sick room comes from the White House. The President sent his private secretary to Mr. Blaine's residence to inquire as to his health, and was gratified to learn that he was much better, and that he was "dressed and sitting up in a cheerful frame of mind."

PENNSYLVANIA HOUSE POSITIONS

Two Philadelphians After the Speakership and Chief Clerkship.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—United States Senator Quay will return to Washington next Thursday from his gunning and fishing sojourn at St. Lucie on the banks of the Indian river in the Florida Everglades.

When he visits Philadelphia all doubts will probably be removed regarding the Speakership and chief clerkship of the next State House of Representatives.

Present Clerk Voorhies is the choice of the Philadelphia delegation for chief clerk, and, although he will probably have the support of two-thirds of the Republican members throughout the State, Representative Walton has not abated his efforts to secure the same support for Speaker.

It is hardly probable that Philadelphia will be conceded these two positions, but Mr. Walton says he is not discouraged, and will remain in the fight to the end.

HOME RULE BILL DRAFTED.

It Provides for the Retention of the Irish Members and an Imperial Veto.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Parliament is to meet on Jan. 26. Mr. Morley has taken a draft of the Home Rule bill to Dublin to consult with the leaders of the Irish Home Rule party regarding the provisions of the bill.

The bill provides for an Imperial veto on acts of the Dublin Parliament, and for retaining all the Irish members at Westminster, with a vote on all Imperial questions.

Two Mud Run Suits Settled.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 26.—The Lehigh Valley railroad company has settled two of its famous Mud Run damage suits in this city. Andrew McGurren, who had a leg broken and suffered other injuries, which make him a cripple for life, was paid $19,000. The case of Patrick Devers, who sued to recover $20,000 for personal injuries, has also been settled.

Tackling the Gloucester Track Again.

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 26.—The Camden County Law and Order society, after remining quiescent for some months has resumed its crusade against the Gloucester race track. They are trying to stir Prosecutor Jenkins up to moving the indictment against William J. Thompson, President of the South Jersey Jockey Club and the reputed owner of the track.

Train Held Up by Robbers.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 26.—The over land westbound train on the Northern Pacific Railroad was held up last Thursday evening near Hot Springs by three masked men, who robbed all of the male passengers in the Pullman sleeper Wadena.

Diphtheria at Hobart, N. Y.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 26.—An epidemic of diphtheria is prevailing at Hobart, Delaware county. Several deaths have occurred. In one family three children died in 26 hours, and there are three more cases in the same family.

THE READING INVESTIGATION.

President McLeod Appears Before the Committee and Is Examined.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—President McLeod said during his examination before the Congressional Committee investigating the Reading coal combine, that in addition to being president of the Reading Railroad he was president of the Reaking Coal & Iron Company, capitalized at $8,000,000.

He said that the total number of acres of coal land controlled by the Reading through the coal and iron company was 113,317, two-thirds of it unimproved.

Leases of the lines of the Lehigh Valley and the Central Railroad of New Jersey to the Reading, dated Feb. 11 and Feb. 12, 1892, were offered in evidence.

Mr. McLeod admitted that since these dates contracts had been made by the Reading with individual operators along the lines mentioned to pay 60 per cent. of prices realized for coal.

Mr. McLeod said that at a meeting held either in June or July prices of coal were fixed and they were in advance of those prevailing previously. There had been no advance in prices since July.

WHERE IS O'CONNOR?

Mysterious Disappearance of Utica's Ex-Assemblyman.

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 26.—Where is O'Connor? He left Little Falls Saturday, came here, as he said, because his father was sick, and left his barrow at "Aunt Jo" Vosburgh's hotel, one mile east of Little Falls. Monday morning he left home and wife, saying he did not know whether he would continue his trip or not, as he must see certain parties first. One was his photographer. Since then nothing has been heard of him. His wife said to-day she had not heard from him and was anxious about him.

There are several rumors afloat—one that he left for New York Monday and would be found at the bottom of New York harbor. O'Connor's brother will neither deny nor confirm the above. The wife, a much liked young woman, whom O'Connor married about a year ago, seems much dejected. O'Connor is a lawyer, and, rumor has it, is so entangled in financial matters that it is convenient for him to be absent. The wife is domiciled with her mother.

THE PANAMA CANAL TRIAL.

Directors Charged With Breach of Trust and Malversation of Funds.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—The case of the government against the Panama Canal company was called in the Court of Appeals. The defendants are M. De Lesseps, chairman of the board of directors; Charles De Lesseps, his son, vice-chairman; M. Fontanes and Baron Cotta, directors of the company, and M. Eiffel.

None of the defendants was present.

The case was adjourned until Jan. 10, counsel for the defendants guaranteeing that they would then appear.

The charges are breach of trust and malversation of funds.

JUBILEE SINGERS GET NO DINNER.

Their Color Objected to and Now They're Going to Sue.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 26.—A party of colored jubilee singers from Philadelphia contributed to the Thanksgiving festivities at the Young Men' Christian Association here.

They went to a local restaurant for dinner, but were refused service because of their color.

It is said they will bring suit for damages against Shepard & Stout, proprietors of the restaurant.

Mr. Shepard said last night that the regular patrons of his restrurant would not come in if he entertained colored men.

DEATH OF ROBT. BARBOUR.

President of the Barbour Flax Spinning Company at Paterson.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 26.—Robert Barbour, president of the Barbour Flax Spinning Company, is dead of apoplexy.

Mr. Barbour was born in Ireland in 1834, and came to America in 1864. With his brother Thomas he established the big American industry, and was also interested in the monster linen works at Lisburn, Ireland.

He leaves a fortune variously estimated at from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000.

First Exhibit for the Fair.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—The first exhibit to be received at the World's Fair grounds can now be seen in the Government building at Jackson Park. It lies in sections near the dome of the building —an immense redwood tree, the Sequoya Gigantia, which was cut by the King River Lumber company near Sanger, Fresno county, California. The trunk measures 28 feet in diameter.

Strikers Get the Cold Shoulder.

HOMESTEAD, Nov. 26.—About a dozen strikers applied at the Carnegie mills yesterday for employment. They received but little encouragement. There have been about 1,700 men thus far who have applied for work, and less than 20 per cent. have been successful.

A New Bicycle Record.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 26.—In the 10-mile road race of the Denver Rambles Bicycle Club, Robert Gerading, an amateur of this city, broke the worlds track and road record for five miles by 45 2-5 seconds. His time was 12:07.

Purse Too Small for Ryan.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—Tom Ryan has declined the offer of the Olympic Club of New Orleans to fight Tom Williams for a purse of $3,000. He says the purse is not large enough.

The Kaiser Congratulates Caprivi.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—The Kaiser has extended his earnest congratulations to Chancellor Caprivi on his speech in the Reichstag in support of the Army bill.

"THE BREAKERS" IN RUINS.

Cornelius Vanderbilt's Newport Villa Destroyed by Fire.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 26.—Just before 5 o'clock yesterday evening Cornelius Vanderbilt discovered fire in the main hall of his beautiful villa "The Breakers," on Ochre Point. He at once sent an alarm by telephone to headquarters, but owing to a misunderstanding only the emergency wagon was sent.

Fifteen minutes later, when a general alarm was sounded, the villa was enveloped in flames. The family were just able to escape without saving anything.

The entire place is gutted to the ground, entailing a loss of $500,000 or $600,000.

When the firemen arrived there was only half pressure from the mains, the stream being perfectly useless. The servants saved some few articles of clothing, but even these were thrown out without regard to ownership. An immense crowd of cottagers and citizens gathered, and there were hundreds of willing helpers, but the flames spread so rapidly that all aid was futile.

TO SAVE THE MILITARY BILL.

Conditions on Which the Clericals Will Assist to Pass It.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—The Clerical party have decided to force Count Caprivi's hand by introducing in the Reichstag a bill providing for the return to Germany of the Jesuit orders expelled during the Kulturkampf.

Their object is to compel the Government to grant this concession so as to save the Military bill. They control about 110 votes in the Reichstag and with their aid the Government could pass the Military bill.

Count Caprivi's bargaining for their support recently has been shattered on his declaration that the Jesuit orders could not be considered for some time.

The Clericals now say that the Military bill and the bill for the return of the Jesuits must stand or fall together.

THEY WAITED TOO LONG.

Murderer Sullivan's Friends Cannot Now Obtain a New Trial for Him.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 26.—The time for filing the exceptions taken by counsel for the defense in the trial of "Yankee Dan" Sullivan, who was recently convicted of the murder of Anthony S. Haswell, of East Providence, expired Thanksgiving Day without the requisite steps towards a new trial being taken.

Sullivan's counsel says his friends did not attempt to make any arrangements for a new trial until Wednesday, too late for action.

Sullivan is liable to be sentenced at any time.

PANAMA COMPLICATIONS.

Injunction Secured Against the French Receiver of the Railroad Company.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Judge Truax, upon motion of Lawyer Edward Lauterbach, representing the Pacific Mail Steamship company, has granted an injunction restraining the American representatives of the French company, which has acquired possession of the Panama railroad, from granting through bills of lading from the Atlantic to the Pacific until the legality of the proceedings by which the Panama Canal company secured the possession of the railroad company can be determined.

Alderman Convicted of Bribery.

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 26.—The most dramatic series of trials ever known in this city came to an end last night, when Councilman George M. Doner, of the Fifth ward, was found guilty of bribery. The grand jury indicted seven members of the Council on that charge, six of whom are now under conviction.

Baseball Players Sentenced.

LANCASTER, Pa., Nov. 26.—George Warner and William Garret, Lebanon baseball players, pleaded guilty in court yesterday to robbing the jewelry store of J. M. Stauffer at Ephrata. They were each sentenced to the Eastern penitentiary for two years and three months.

The Weimar Released.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Acting Secretary Spaulding yesterday ordered the release of the steamer Weimar, which has been detained at the Lower Quarantine station, Chesapeake Bay, since the 10th inst., and she proceeded at once to Baltimore to land her 1,884 passengers.

For Kicking His Son to Death.

HENDERSON, N. Y., Nov. 26.—William Franklin is under arrest here and is having his preliminary examination on a charge of having, while drunk, kicked and beaten his son Milo, aged 12 years, in such a manner as to cause his death.

Mayor Dismissed.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Nov. 26.—John G. Meyer, who has been on trial here charged with robbing the Phœnix National Bank, on October 26, has been discharged, the authorities having failed to make out a case against him.

To Match Ryan and Williams.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 26.—The Olympic Club has telegraphed to Mr. Houseman of Chicago to match Tom Ryan against Tommy Williams, who is in England, for a purse of $3,000, the match to take place during March next.

Servant Perished in the Flames.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The St. Nicholas Park Hotel, a two story frame structure on 155th street, was burned at an early morning hour. Rosa Raubuhler, a servant, perished.

Cleveland Bags Eight Ducks.

EXMORE, Va., Nov. 26.—President-elect Cleveland shot eight ducks as the result of his first gunning since arriving at Broadwater Island.

MISS BORDEN'S CHANCES

Not Thought That the Grand Jury Will Indict Her.

NO NEW EVIDENCE WAS PRESENTED.

Believed That the Proceedings Are Delayed Because the Testimony Adduced Is Not Considered Sufficient to Warrant Bringing in a True Bill.

TAUNTON, Mass., Nov. 26.—The impression prevails that the grand jury will not indict Lizzie Borden for the murder of her father, Andrew Borden, but the public is no more certain of this than it was when the case first went into the hands of the jury, only by inference, since no member of that body has expressed himself in any way.

It is quite certain, however, that no new evidence of any importance has been given before the jury and that proceedings are delayed because the evidence is not considered sufficient to warrant the finding of an indictment.

There is yet a week nearly for unearthing fresh evidence and in that time enough may be gathered to make things assume an entirely different aspect. It is a fact, however, that as conditions are now the chances for Miss Borden's early release from confinement are bright.

If she is indicted and the jury at the trial fail to convict, there would be little hope of ever bringing her before the court again, even though she should be charged the next time with murdering the other member of the family, whose name was not mentioned in the warrant for her arrest.

If the grand jury sets her free it does not mean that she is forever cleared of any future action of the body, but on the contrary, she can be hauled up at any time on a new charge provided there is at the time fresh and convincing evidence against her.

It is felt that the Attorney-General realizes that it would be better for all concerned to make no error of judgment now, even at the risk of conjuring up false appearances, and to place Miss Borden in a position where she will not be beyond the reach of justice.

The probabilities are strongly in favor of no bill.

DR. SCOTT VERY ILL.

The Nonogenarian Father of Mrs. Harrison Likely to Die at Any Moment.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The Rev. Dr. John W. Scott, father-in-law of President Harrison, is lying seriously ill at the White House.

His illness is of but a few days' duration, having commenced with a fever, which was probably the result of a cold. The patient, while not in much distress, is suffering greatly from weakness. There are short periods of intermittant delirium.

The President's household realizes that his condition is such that it may terminate fatally. He is 94 years old.

He was reported worse last night and to be growing steadily weaker.

THE MINE STILL BURNING.

Escape of 100 Men Through an Abandoned Shaft.

RATON, N. M., Nov. 26.—The Blossburg coal mines are still ablaze. There were 100 men in the lower workings, but all escaped through an abandoned shaft.

All the mules and mine cars were destroyed.

The mines are operated by the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad, and are the largest in New Mexico, the average production being about 75 tons per day. About 500 men are thrown out of work.

Millionaire Crouse's Will.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 26. — The funeral of D. Edgar Crouse was held here yesterday afternoon and immediately thereafter the relatives of the deceased gathered at the house and his will was read. He disposes of his vast estate of between $6,000,000 and $10,000,000 by dividing $465,000 among his employs and the charitable institutions of the city. The residue of the estate is divided equally among relatives in this and neighboring towns and cities.

Arrested on a Clairvoyant's Tip.

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 26.—Arthur Sager, aged 17, is under arrest charged with stealing $204 from Richard McCormick, a Ferry street saloonkeeper. Sanger was a bartender at McCormick's saloon. McCormick told the police that he had consulted a clairvoyant and she told him that Sager had stolen the money.

Riot on an Ohio Train.

GALLIPOLIS, O., Nov. 26.—Six brothers, Williams by name, boarded an Ohio River train at Huntington, Wednesday night, and at once began to insult ladies in the car. A fight ensued with the trainmen and the conductor and a brakeman were seriously injured, and the William brothers were badly beaten and thrown from the car.

Fatal Quarrel Between Father and Son.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Nov. 26.—Michael Maloney, aged 17, known as "Fireball," struck his father, Michael Maloney, upon the head with a hammer, fracturing his skull. His father had been drinking, and knocked the son down and beat him. The son claimed that he struck his father in self defense.

Lasker's Great Performance.

MONTREAL, Nov. 26.—Herr Lasker finished his engagement at the Montreal Chess club with a simultaneous exhibition against 26 members of the club. Lasker finished the difficult task by winning 24 games, losing 1 to Cameron, and making a draw with Hurrier.

Immigrants Allowed to Proceed.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Nov. 26.—The Swedish immigrants held here several days at the instigation of the United States health authorities have been allowed to proceed to Boston. Their baggage has been fumigated.

Cornell's President to Speak.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 26.—President Schurman, of Cornell, has gone to Springfield, Mass., to deliver an address before the Massachusetts Teachers' Association.

St. Louis' Typhoid Epidemic.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 26.—The typhoid fever epidemic does not abate. Since yesterday 105 cases have been reported.

One rounded teaspoonful of Cleveland's Baking Powder does more and better work than a heaping teaspoonful of any other. A large saving on a year's bakings.

The best known writers on domestic science, as Marion Harland, Mrs. McBride, Mrs. Parker and Emily Hayes, and teachers of cookery, as Mrs. Rorer, Mrs. Lincoln and Mrs. Dearborn, use and recommend Cleveland's Baking Powder.

FOOTBALL AT WEST POINT.

The Annapolis Cadets and Their Friends Arrive for To-day's Game.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 26.—The Annapolis Naval Academy Football team, which will battle with the West Point Army team to-day, arrived here last evening.

The great army and navy contest is the all-absorbing topic here.

About thirty-five cadets, including substitutes, the manager of the team and senior cadet officers, accompanied by several ladies, compose the visiting party.

The West Pointers and naval cadets have each secured a game, and the coming contest will decide the superiority of the two teams. Mr. Crosby, of Yale, who has trained the Annapolis cadets, is of the opinion that they will surely win.

Georgians Examining Fair Matters.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—A party of representatives of the Georgia Legislature, headed by Gov. Northen, and accompanied by several newspaper men, are making personal observation of the progress made in World's Fair matters up to date, in order to report the same to the Legislature with a view to obtaining an appropriation for Georgia's exhibits.

The Election Cannot be Held.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 26.—Justice Reed, of the Court of Errors, has decided that the proposed election in Commercial township, Cumberland county, to vote on the question of fixing the license fee at $5,000, cannot be held.

Feeble Health of the Pope.

ROME, Nov. 26.—The low condition of the Pope's health is causing much speculation as to his probable successor. Cardinal Zigliari is believed at present as the likeliest candidate.

Actor Curtis on Trial Again.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 26.—The second trial of M. B. Curtis (Sam'l of Posen) for the murder of Policeman Grant on the night of Sep. 11, 1891, began in Judge Murphy's court yesterday. No important testimony was given.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—There are 20 prisoners in the county jail at Somerville.

—Doc Williams rolled 220 on the Crescent alleys yesterday afternoon.

—Seasonable sayings are those of Lederer in his advertisement to-day.

—A praise service will be held in the W. C. T. U. rooms this evening at 8.

—The sale of seats for the Musin concert begins Monday morning at the Central pharmacy.

—Ovide Musin will make his last appearance in this city, next week. Don't miss his farewell.

—The ordinance of baptism will be administered in the First Baptist church to-morrow morning.

—To-night is the last chance to see the Camera club show. This exhibit is pronounced the best one of the club's efforts.

—A small building has been erected at the North avenue station as a cold and wet weather protection for the expressmen.

—A lecture on Socialism is to be delivered at Odd Fellows' Hall, to-morrow at 3 p. m., with "a full illustration of the past election".

—A man can receive just the instruction he needs in arithmetic at the Y. M. C. A. rooms Tuesday evenings. $2 will entitle to this and other classes.

—As handsome show window display as ever was seen in Plainfield is that at F. M. Hulett's. Everyone is delighted with the pretty things on view.

—Wm. Reed was arrested by marshal Pangborn last night, for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. He got 30 days in the county jail from justice Crosley.

—The Nottingham Chemical company, under the management of A. F. Carpenter, offers inducements to those who desire lawn dressing phosphates, plants, etc. See advertisement in another column.

—Next Monday evening the Temple Builders of the First Baptist church will hold a literary meeting in the Sunday-school room of the church. The exercises will be of an unusually interesting character.

—Have you attended the Y. M. C. A. meetings lately? If not, go to-morrow afternoon at 4:15 and see for yourself. Last Sunday the attendance was even larger than usual. Live testimonies and hearty singing are special features.

—Edsall announces that he is now showing the largest assortment of elegant new bric-a-brac and Christmas souvenirs he has ever offered. He says a good many ladies who have seen them say the prices are lower than in New York.

—"Mugg's Landing", that funniest of all plays, with Miss Leola Belle as *Little Mugg*s, and Louise Burton, Alice Smith, Eva Selbie, Messrs. Robert L. Scott, Ren Shields and others in the cast, will be given at Music Hall next Monday evening.

—F. Linke has secured the sole agency in this city of the Bartholomay brewing company of Rochester. He is delivering the celebrated Bohemian and Apollo beers for family and table use, at your house, at prices as low even as are charged for inferior grades.

—Now that they have nominated Ulrich, they are going to knife him. A prominent Republican is of the opinion that such disruption is going to hurt the party. He holds that such differences should be settled in primary and caucus, and that all should stand by the ticket when made.

—The Union County Athletic club is a new organization formed for the perpetuation of manly sports. It has rented rooms in the Stelle building, Park avenue and Front street, and will welcome all respectable young mechanics to membership. Next Tuesday is meeting night. Those fond of light gymnastics and boxing should attend.

—The suit of Newhall against Moore before Justice Wadsworth and a jury this morning, was won by counselor McClure for the defendant. Newhall sued for rent that he claimed after Moore left his (Newhall's) house. The justice charged for Newhall but the jury found for Moore. Newhall has appealed the case to the higher court to be tried before three judges at Elizabeth at the next term.

THE CULPRIT FOUND OUT.

A Washington Park Resident Guilty of Illegal Sewerage Connection With the Brook.

The North Plainfield health authorities have at last discovered the identity of the guilty person who has been committing a public nuisance by emptying sewage into the brook conduit in the Rockview avenue neighborhood. After weeks of patient testing, they came to suspect D. N. Groendyke. Finally they accused Mr. Groendyke. He admitted that his laundry waste pipe was connected, but denied any other connection. Even that was ordered cut off, and to-day the borough is severing it. The report is that not only the laundry but the seas-pool is connected, and that this is the cause of the horrible and unhealthful smells of the outlet. The authorities are determined to put a stop to such illegal doings, and if necessary will prosecute offenders criminally.

"A God-send is Ely's Cream Balm. I had catarrh for three years. Two or three times a week my nose would bleed. I thought the sores would never heal. Your Balm has cured me."—Wm. H. A. Jackson, Portsmouth, N. H.

I have been troubled with catarrh for 10 years and have tried a number of remedies, but got no relief until I purchased a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. I consider it the most reliable preparation for catarrh and cold in the head.—George E. Crandall, P. M., Quonochontaug, Rhode Island.

ACTORS ARRESTED.

A Villian in a Play, Suspected of Being One in Real Life.

D. N. Messler, editor of the Somerset Democrat and manager of Somerville Hall, Somerville's only opera house, may find that he has got himself into hot water by causing the arrest of five male members of the Tom Sawyer theatrical company at Elizabeth on Thanksgiving night.

The company played in Somerville that night and after the performance Charles Dyas who is chief scene shifter at the Hall, missed his pocketbook containing $6 in money and a Central railroad pass. He at once jumped to the conclusion that some one of the show people had stolen it during the performance as they had been standing near where his coat was hanging. Therefore at his instigation, manager Messler wired to Elizabeth asking that the company be arrested and searched.

When the train reached Elizabeth the whole outfit was taken to the police station. Ten minutes before a telegram reached Somerville telling Messler that the company had been apprehended, Chas. Dyas's son, a boy about fifteen years of age, came into the telegraph office and handed the railroad pass to his father, telling him that he had taken it from the coat early in the evening in order to take a ride to Plainfield and back. The boy, however, disclaimed all knowledge of the money. Another telegram was then sent to Elizabeth asking that the show people be released. This was done early in the morning and the disgusted actors resumed their journey to New York.

Dyas said last night he had no doubt that one of the company had his "six bones", as the villian in particular stood near his coat nearly all of the time. Upon being asked whether or not the boy could have taken it, he said that was impossible or else his son would have told him. There seems to be good foundation for a suit for false imprisonment, as there were not the least grounds for suspecting the theatrical people. That they should have been compelled to spend the night in the police station, after being dragged off the train, is indeed an injustice. Some one should pay for it.

W. A. CODDINGTON FOR CITY JUDGE.

Counselor McClure Withdraws in His Favor—No Other Candidates Nominated by the Democrats.

John M. Dayton was chairman of the Democratic city convention, last evening, and Louis Brown was secretary, L. M. Stover judge of election, and A. Saltzman inspector. There were no nominations for mayor, assessor, collector, treasurer or school trustee, but a committee consisting of J. M. Dayton, J. Rafferty, W. K. McClure, F. M. Bacon and M. Watson, was appointed to find candidates for such offices if possible.

Both W. K. McClure and W. A. Coddington were named for the nomination for city judge, but the former in a few kind words withdrew in favor of the latter, and Mr. Coddington was nominated unanimously.

Jeremiah Manning and J. P. Taylor were nominated as candidates for commissioners of appeal.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Phillips of Jersey City is visiting friends in Plainfield.

Miss Carrie Mole of Freeport, L. I., spent Thanksgiving with Miss Kittie Blimm of Somerset street.

Mr. and Mrs. Hinkson will spend to-morrow at the home of Mrs. Hinkson's mother, Mrs. Carpenter, at Princeton.

Miss Katherine de Boer of this city has translated for the Sabbath Recorder the life of missionary Van der Steur of Holland, from the original Dutch.

Andrew G. Carpenter of this city furnished the fine music at the Spanish society reception Wednesday evening, an account of which was published in these columns yesterday.

Mr. and Miss Serrell have returned from the west, accompanied by George Serrell and children, all except the baby, which has been left in charge of a nurse. George Serrell will make Plainfield his home hereafter.

J. C. Townsend, the enterprising and reliable marble works proprietor of Somerset street, has purchased from Hand and Runyon a house and six lots at Lyman place, Evona. He will move in Jan. 1.

Cashier Frank S. Runyon of the First National bank again gives evidence of his enterprising and progressive spirit by deciding to put in another receiving and paying window, so as to handle more rapidly the crowds of depositors on "rush" days.

Walter Arnold Hudson, the famous basso from New York, whose reputation is already made in Plainfield, will, together with W. E. MacClymont, organist, give a free public vocal and instrumental recital in the First Baptist church, Tuesday, Dec. 13, assisted by P. Conde, violinist, and Mrs. B. T. Barnes, pianist.

Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease, Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50c., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves croup and whooping cough at once. Mothers, do not be without it. For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by A. D. Mallinson, 65 North Ave., opposite railroad station. 5-16-y

DIDN'T MEAN TO TREAD ON TOES.

Pastor Clark Takes Exception to Headlines Meant to be Written in Line with His Own Language.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I certainly intended to "attack" no one, in my lecture of last Sunday evening, but merely to state as frankly, clearly, and dispassionately as possible the position actually held by the Unitarian church today, and I somewhat fear that the rather startling headlines which are placed—in your issue of this evening—above your otherwise admirable report of what I then said may serve to confirm some of the erroneous impressions already existing in many minds, which the lecture itself was intended to remove. I fear this especially in the case of those persons who will take little pains to read the lecture itself after a glance at the headlines. Of course I did not say, or even wish to imply that "all denominations except Unitarians are grossly in error." The Unitarian church would be the very last to claim a monopoly of truth. As your report shows, I said of the mythical elements in Christianity "we do not call them false but unreal", and I explained the reason why. Of course no myth is a falsehood, and instead of presuming to say that the "miracles are not true." I merely said that their credibility was an open but unimportant question in our body. I sincerely tried to avoid a merely doctrinal or argumentative treatment of my subject; how well I succeeded those who heard must judge. I should be extremely sorry to give the impression that I would wantonly attack the sacred and cherished conviction of any man, although I may have wounded the feelings of some. I certainly tried to state my own convictions, and those of the church to which I belong, in an entirely considerate and respectful way; and I feel that in justice to my congregation as well as to myself I must ask you to kindly give this statement the same publicity which has already been given to the lecture.

HOBART CLARK,
Pastor of All Souls' Church.
Plainfield, Nov. 25, 1892.

The City Judgeship.

A most excellent nomination made by the Democrats of the city of Plainfield is that for city judge. The nominee, William Archibald Coddington, is one deserving of such a high honor. Starting in his young life in the practice of law in this city, he has made himself a name among the legal fraternity of Plainfield that is honored. He did not seek the present nomination, and therefore that is more commendable. Mr. Coddington has before this nomination had one more honorable—that of assemblyman from the Third district of this county, which, although overwhelmingly Republican, gave him a handsome vote, and he reduced his opponent's majority to an extent that evidenced he was a popular citizen.

THE PRESS heartily indorses his nomination, and trusts that the voters of Plainfield will elect him to the honorable position to which the Democrats have placed him in nomination. He can fill the bill in every way for the position of city judge of Plainfield.

Mr. Pope Invests a Bequest.

E. R. Pope has been commissioned by the American Sabbath Tract society, a national institution of the Seventh-day church, to invest and take care of a bequest of $3,000 from the estate of George Greenman. He has secured investment on bond and mortgage at 6 per cent.

The executive board of the society recently met in Plainfield, when it was voted that G. H. Babcock and E. R. Pope be a committee to look after and stop the leak in the society's treasury caused by sending Seventh-day publications to persons who either refuse them, or who have moved away, or are now dead.

The matter of arranging for a tract depository in Chicago was referred to L. E. Livermore, D. E. Titsworth and G. H. Babcock as committee with power.

L. E. Livermore and E. H. Lewis were among those asked to furnish articles to the Sabbath Recorder regularly, at $1 an article.

Brennan—Sherley.

The Dunellen Call says: "Miss Maggie Brennan, of this place, and John Sherley, of Plainfield, were joined in marriage at St. John's Roman Catholic church, Wednesday afternoon. The Rev. Father Bogard, of Somerville, performed the ceremony. A large number of friends of the couple were present at the church and witnessed the ceremony. The happy twain will make their future home in Plainfield. Mrs. Sherley is a native of this place, but has lived in Plainfield for some time, where she was employed. She is an estimable young lady, and the happy couple have the good wishes of all their friends."

Fixed just right—Liver, Stomach and Bowels, by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They do it in just the right way, too—by using Nature's own methods. That's why they're better than the dreadful, old-fashioned pills, with their griping and violence.

But they're better in every way. In size, for instance, and dose. They're the smallest and the easiest to take; only one little Pellet is needed for a laxative—three for a cathartic. They cleanse and regulate the system thoroughly—but it's done easily and naturally. Sick and Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels are prevented, relieved and cured.

They're the cheapest pill you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. You pay only for value received.

Something else, that pays the dealer better, may be offered as "just as good." Perhaps it is, for him, but it can't be, for you.

A COMING FASHIONABLE EVENT.

Society Amateurs to Play "Young Mrs. Winthrop".

Those who had the pleasure of witnessing the excellent amateur performances of "Esmeralda" given last year by members of the Union County Country club, will be glad to know that the energetic members of that fashionable organization have again prepared, for the entertainment of their friends, and of Plainfield theater-goers, a dramatic representation.

The piece selected is the four-act play of "Young Mrs. Winthrop", known as one of the masterpieces of its author, Bronson Howard. It is to be produced at the Casino on Saturday evening, Dec. 10, by special contract with manager A. M. Palmer, of Palmer's theatre, New York. The original manuscript of the famous play has been secured, together with the full acting-directions, incidental music, etc.

The rehearsing and preparation of the many details necessary to insure a performance complete in every respect, have necessitated two months of hard and faithful work. Under the direction of Henry S. Blake, of New York, (who has been so successful hitherto in guiding the efforts of our amateur Thespians) this preliminary work has now been successfully accomplished, and a smooth and enjoyable performance bids fair to be the result.

The cast, as revised and completed, will be as follows:

Constance Winthrop, a woman of society, Mrs. J. Parker Mason
Aunt Ruth, whose heart is still young, Mrs. Medina
Edith, a blind girl..., Mrs. William L. Saunders
Mrs. "Dick" Chetwynd, a bubbie of society, Mrs. Charles E. Brooks
Jeannette, a maid.....Miss Massett
Douglas Winthrop, a man of business, John R. Blake
Buxton Scott, his family lawyer William R. Cock
Doctor Mellbanke, his family physician Charles E. Brooks
Herbert Winthrop, a graduate from Yale, Harry Sargent
John, a butler.....Roger Erickson

A complete set of new scenery, representing a white-and-gold drawing-room, has been specially made for this production, which will also be made particularly attractive to the feminine portion of the audience by the display of some entirely new and elaborate evening and ball toilettes by the ladies of the cast.

The proceeds of the entertainment will be used to defray the cost of certain improvements and enlargements of the Casino stage, which have long been in contemplation by the Union County Country club, with a view to still further improving the accommodations of their cosy little play-house.

ENGINEER DUNHAM'S WANDERINGS.

Find His Dishes, and You'll Know Where He Went.

Jeremiah Dunham, the Dunellen engineer, is very much better, and Dr. Brakeley thinks after he has received some care and the required rest he will be all right and just as sound as before.

Besides his clothes being tattered and his face and flesh being badly scratched and torn from bushes and briars, when he was found, his feet were wet above his ankles, showing that he had been in some marshy place as well. He had a severe cut about his head which gave evidence of his having fallen against a tree or something standing. When found his dinner basket was still upon his arm, but some small dishes which had contained preserves were missing. If any one discovers these dishes it might furnish some clew as to the exact direction Mr. Dunham took. He do es not remember anything from the time he left his engine. At his home Mr. Dunham recognized his wife and the family and although he was dazed and not right in his mind, he seemed to know that he was at home.

Dr. Brakeley was called, and, the Dunellen Call says, after a careful examination pronounced Mr. Dunham's ailment as a slight paralysis of the brain producing aberration of the mind. Mr. Dunham had been overworked lately, making long hours upon his engine, besides his mind was largely taken up in plans for a barn which he was about to build. In fact, he had an engagement with a builder on that very night, and the barn seemed to be on his mind when he was found. To add to the mental strain he lost his only daughter two years ago and this is supposed to have gradually affected his mind.

Grand Democratic Demonstration.

The Democrats of South Plainfield last night celebrated the election of Cleveland and Stevenson and Governor Werts in a grand manner. There were some sixty horsemen and three hundred torch-bearers in line, with appropriate transparencies. The South Plainfield Cornet band headed the procession. Many prominent citizens illuminated their residences, among which was that of Mr. Faulks. The scene was a beautiful one when the procession passed over the roadway leading past the lake.

TRIBUTE IN VERSE.

Pastor Herring Welcomed by His Congregation.

The reception to the Rev. Charles E. Herring, new pastor of the First Presbyterian church, given in the church parlors last evening, was a very pleasant event. Between 400 and 500 enjoyed the festivities, most of them congregation members, but many newcomers. Among the prominent guests were pastors Yerkes, Richards and Schenck. The Rev. Mr. Herring was assisted in receiving by his sister, and his father also was present. The rooms were handsomely decorated with flowers and Japanese lanterns. The young people of the church provided refreshments. It was a general hand-shaking time, and pastor Herring charmed everyone by his geniality and sociability. He proved himself an accomplished musician by sitting down to the piano and playing and singing a sweet cradle song. During the evening the following composition from the pen of Theophilus Bond was read:

Once, led by Bethlehem's guiding star,
Shepherds and wise men came from far;
And gold and frankincense they brought
Unto the King a world had sought.

No frankincense nor myrrh we bring;
We hail thee, not as promised King,
But as His minister to preach
His gospel, and His will to teach.

As watchman, who shall vigil keep
On Zion's wall though others sleep,
As standard-bearer strong and bold,
As under-shepherd of the fold.

Successor to the saintly band
Who, faithful, stood where thou shalt stand,
Their watchword high is now thine own,
And thou shalt reap where they have sown.

We bid thee welcome in His name
Who bore our meed of sin and shame;
Our hearts and hands we pledge to thee,
And faith and love and loyalty.

Together let us onward press
In paths of truth and righteousness,
Trusting the loving Father who
Hath gently led us hitherto.

So shall we all in blest accord
Fight the good fight for Christ our Lord;
So shall we joy in victory won,
And hear His gracious words "Well done".

Worth $40,000 and a County Charge.

NEW BALTIMORE, N. Y., Nov. 26.—Edwin E. Shear, an old bachelor, of this place, became deranged some time ago, and, as his relatives were poor, he was committed to the Binghamton insane asylum as a county charge. He died last spring, and now it leaks out that he was wealthy, and had nearly $40,000 on deposit in the Albany bank.

Thompson to Succeed Abbott.

MONTREAL, Nov. 26.—A bulletin announcing that Sir John Abbott's resignation had been accepted by the Governor-General, and that Sir John Thompson had been called upon to form a government created considerable excitement here last night, and little else was talked about. The Conservatives generally endorse this selection.

Champion Yearling Sold.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 26.—Matt Dwyer has sold to Adam Zimmer, of East Buffalo, the champion yearling Vito, by Jerome Eddy out of Lou Wilkes. Vito holds the world's yearling record of 2:27, going a half in 1:08. She is also the New York State champion. The price paid was $5,000.

More Smallpox at Birmingham.

BIRMINGHAM, Conn., Nov. 26.—Three new cases of smallpox were discovered yesterday: Nina Russell, aged three months; Wilfred Taylor, aged 26 months, and Mary Cowley, aged 18 years. This makes a total of eight cases.

BALLSTON, N. Y., Nov. 26.—Sheriff Worden with murderer Fay in his custody has arrived here from California.

Even There.

On a bright and beautiful morning of eternal springtime a weary spirit knocked at the gates of paradise.

The golden portals swung open their hinges, and Saint Peter, standing upon the threshold, gazed upon the anxious face before him, and inquired:

"What were you in the flesh?"

"I was a book-agent," was the reply.

"I am very sorry," said Saint Peter; "but this is my busy day."—Puck.

By No Means.

"Dear me, Uncle Ephraim!" she exclaimed as she met the old gentleman in the hallway, "you don't know how surprised I am to see you. Did you travel all the way from Vermont alone?"

"Naw," he replied, deeply offended at the question, as he put his carpet-bag down. "There were forty or fifty people on the same train."—Judge.

Fashion Note.

"Great Scott! another hat!" exclaimed Mr. Harlem Flat when his wife threw out a hint. "You are the most extravagant woman in this part of town. I believe you have a different hat for every day in the week."

"Why, of course I have. That's just it. I have one for every day in the week, but none for Sunday."—Texas Siftings.

Their Nationality.

The reporter on a western newspaper timidly approached the city editor's desk, after the manner of western reporters.

"There's a delegation of foreign visitors at the Cornucopia hotel, sir," he announced.

"When from?" queried the city editor, jabbing a large blue pencil through a small local item.

"I don't know, sir. There's a whole string of Kellys, and Murphys and O'Hooligans, and McGinnises and Harrigans, and O'Rafferty's and Brannigans, and Mc—"

"That's enough," said the city editor, holding up his hand. "They're from New York city, of course. Go down and see what they're here for."—Life.

A Woman's Order.

"Have you any nice chicken?" asked the lady in the restaurant.

"Yessum," replied the polite waiter.

"Any roast beef?"

"Yessum."

"And well-done breast of veal?"

"Yessum."

"And croquettes?"

"Yessum."

"And all kinds of dessert, too, I suppose?"

"Yessum."

"Well, bring me a cup of tea and a piece of pie."—Chicago News Record.

PLEA FOR MORE SILVER

American Delegates Present Resolutions at Brussels.

THE PROPOSALS COLDLY RECEIVED.

Outline of the Plan on Bimetalism Which Was Offered—Most of the Members Declined to Consider the Propositions Without First Consulting Their Respective Governments.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 26.—The American suggestions for bimetalism were submitted by Senator Allison and Senator Jones to the International Monetary conference.

The American delegates presented a resolution declaring that, in the opinion of the conference, it is desirable that means be found for an increasing use of silver in the currency systems of the nations.

A document prepared by the American delegates and presented with the resolution explained that they wished that an opportunity be afforded to consider their plans. At the same time, they submitted a general plan on bimetalism offered by the United States, showing, first, that the re-establishment and maintenance of a parity between gold and silver, and the continued use of both as coined money of full debt paying power would be productive of important benefit to the whole world.

The document thus proceeds:

"These ends will be accomplished by the removal of the legal restrictions now existing, and the coinage of silver into full legal tender money, restoring by international agreement the parity of value between the metals at such a ratio as the conference may decide upon. The essentials of such an international agreement should be: (1) The unrestricted coinage of both gold and silver into money of full debt paying power; (2) fixing a ratio in the coinage between the two metals; (3) the establishment of a uniform charge, if any, to the public for minting gold and silver coins.

The American proposals were coldly received. M. Tirard of the French delegation, who speaks with authority as a former Minister of finance, declined to consider the proposals without first consulting the French Government, and in this position M. Tirard was sustained by most of the other delegates, who also declined to give consideration to the American proposals without consulting their respective governments. Thereupon the American delegates decided to withdraw their proposals provisionally.

Alfred de Rothschild of the British delegation, announced that he would propose to-day to create an international syndicate to purchase silver, with the view of effecting an appreciation in the value of the metal.

KING VERSUS KING.

An Interesting Divorce Suit to Come Up at Sioux Falls, S. D.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26. — A special from Sioux Falls, S. D., says: Rufus L. King vs. Mary Louise King, is the title of a case which will attract much attention.

According to the wife's statement, King has twice before applied for a divorce—once in Virginia, and once in Connecticut. He failed to obtain it in both cases.

The marriage occurred in Trenton, N. J., in 1876. Counter charges of desertion are made.

Mr. King does business in New York, and Mrs. King at present is living in Philadelphia.

THE MASSACHUSETTS RECOUNT.

It Shows that Gov. Russell is Elected by a Plurality of 2,696.

BOSTON, Nov. 26.—The recount at the State House shows that Gov. Russell is elected by a plurality of 2,696.

The plurality of Roger Wolcott, Republican, for Lieutenant-Governor, over James H. Carroll, Democrat, is 9,968. William M. Olin, Republican, has a plurality of 17,808 over Chas. S. Hamlin, Democrat, for Secretary of State.

George A. Warden, Republican, as State Treasurer, has a plurality over Jas. S. Grinnell, Democrat, of 23,946.

Evacuation Day Celebration.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The great feature of Evacuation Day was the reunion and dinner of the New York Society of the Sons of the Revolution at Delmonico's last night. Nearly 250 members were present, and enjoyed one of the most successful reunions in the history of the society. There were present, also, as guests, members of sister societies of Maryland, Massachusetts, and the District of Columbia.

Opera singers and public speakers can keep their voices clear and strong with the family remedy, Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

The Genuine and the Sham.

Every good thing has it hosts of imitators; every genuine article its counterfeits. The imitators always choose the most valuable and popular article to counterfeit, so that when they claim their sham to be equal, or as good, or the same as "So-and-So's," the public may depend upon it that "So-and-So's article is the best of the kind. The sham proves the genuine merit of the thing it copies and never has this been better illustrated than by the imitation of ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS.

ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS is the standard of excellence the world over, and its imitators in their cry that theirs is as "good as ALLCOCK'S" are only emphasizing this fact and admitting ALLCOCK'S to be the acme of perfection, which it is their highest ambition to imitate. The difference between the genuine and these imitations, which copy only general appearance, is as wide as that between copper and gold.

The only safe way for purchasers is to always insist upon having ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS. They are the only perfect plasters produced.

THE LEADING STORE OF PLAINFIELD.

Four of Our Leaders,

1. We are making special effort to reduce our stock of Underwear for Ladies, Gentlemen and Children, and to do it we have put prices down to quick-selling figures. $1.89 buys a handsome Chenile Curtain.

2. We have everything in Gloves and Mittens for Ladies, Gentlemen and Children. There are lined Kid Gloves and Kid and Wool Mittens. For the ladies we have Gauntlet Kid Driving Gloves, Cashmere Gloves and Mittens. And for the men everything from a heavy Buckskin to a fine Dress Kid Glove.

Arcadia Germantown Yarn 13c. skein.

3. Gentlemen, we have about 150 all wool Cardigan Jackets; were $2.50, to go for $1.50.

That $2.40 10-piece English Porcelain Decorated Toilet Set is a good one.

4. Coats for ladies and children have to go and you buy them this week at what they cost to manufacture. Nothing like it this side of New York.

ALMOST A MIRACLE!

Our City Electrified by a Wonderful Occurrence.

Something Which Will Marvellously Interest Our Readers.

And Also is of the Utmost Importance to Everybody.

[From the Syracuse Herald.]

Something little short of a miracle has taken place in our city, and we believe that its importance demands the publication of the facts far and wide.

It seems that a lady, Mrs. Hickok by name, who is 75 years old, was brought very low by disease, absolutely prostrated in fact, and, as all supposed, was upon her death bed, she having been given up as incurable by the doctors. Very suddenly she was restored to perfect health.

Her son, the well-known Charles F. Hickok, of 411 Taylor street, Syracuse, N. Y., when interviewed in regard to his mother's remarkable and sudden restoration to health, said: "It is a fact that my mother, 75 years old, was raised from her death bed and made a well lady. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy did it. She was weak and exhausted, her kidneys were very bad, her back very lame and her appetite was very poor. She got over her pains in a few days under the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and kept gaining, under the influence of this wonderful remedy, until she is now entirely cured."

Mrs. Charles F. Hickok, wife of Mr. Hickok, said: "I take great pleasure in testifying to the wonderful cure of my husband's mother by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy."

Mr. Charles Hickok, Jr., son of Mr. Hickok, spoke enthusiastically in regard to what he considers a most marvellous restoration to health after all hope was gone. "Why," he said, "the doctors had all given my grandmother up to die, but she is now well and strong, thanks to Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy!"

All the parties are well known residents of our city, and can be seen or written to at any time. The facts have come under our personal knowledge, and certainly the cure speaks volumes in regard to the efficacy of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, in overcoming disease and restoring the weak and suffering to health and strength. If it will thus save the life of a person almost on the edge of the grave, how much more surely and readily will it cure all the ordinary complaints which afflict humanity. Indeed, we have heard of a great many people being cured by this wonderful medicine, and the fact that it is the discovery of Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th st., New York, one of the most eminent and best known physicians in the United States, makes us unhesitatingly recommend its use to the sick.

Dr. Greene is probably the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, and can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

If you are weak, tired, nervous, run down and exhausted in nerve power or physical vitality, it will immediately restore you to strength and vigor. If you suffer from headache, insomnia, nervous debility, dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, constipation or kidney and liver trouble, do not fail to use it, for it will certainly cure you.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is the best remedy in the world to strengthen the nerves, invigorate the blood, regulate the action of all the organs and restore our strength and energies.

If our readers take our advice, they will take this wonderful remedy now—now when they most need it. You can buy it at any drug store for $1.00, and no one need fear to use it, for it is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless.

SCIENTIFIC NOTES.

THE latest word of science concerning shooting stars is that they are fragments of shivered comets.

TORNADOES originate in the tropics, and are chiefly found in five localities, the West Indies, Bengal bay and the Chinese coast, north of the equator, and in the South Indian ocean, off Madagascar, and in the South Pacific, near Samoa.

SOME one has estimated that twenty-two acres of land is needed to sustain a man on flesh, while that amount of land sown with wheat will feed 42 persons; sowed to oats, 88; to potatoes, Indian corn and rice, 176 persons, and planted with the bread-fruit tree, over 6,000 people could be fed.

PORTLAND cement will not do for caulking the joints of green case pipes. Alternate layers of oakum and red lead, well rammed in, is the proper stopping, and does not crack or shrink like cement would; and again, Portland cement, even if it answered in other respects, would give too rigid a joint.

SALT effects the freezing of ice cream by causing the ice to melt, on account of its own slight affinity for water. The ice in melting rapidly absorbs heat or renders heat latent, and hence reduces the temperature below that of ice, which simply melts by heat acquired from surrounding objects by conduction or convection of air.

THE introduction of electrically-driven coal-cutters and other mining machinery is making rapid progress in the bituminous mining regions of the central west. The importance of this line of work will be apparent from the figures of production, which show that last year 150,000,000 tons of this coal were mined in the United States, principally west of the Alleghenies.

THE German method of electrotytic bleaching, lately introduced, differs from all others, the textile or other material to be bleached being passed between rolls serving as anode and cathode respectively, the electrotyte being used for the purpose of saturating the fabric itself. According to this arrangement several pairs of rollers may be used, the anode and cathode being alternately the upper, so that both sides of the stuff are subjected to the action of the products of electrotysis.

THE results of a recent prolonged life and efficiency test of the incandescent lamps of ten different American makers, made in the electrical laboratory of the Ohio State university, showed that the mean candle-power of the lamps rated at 16 did not exceed 14.5, says the Engineering Magazine; that the candle-power falls off with use approximately at the rate of 10 per cent. for each 200 hours; that the life of 96 out of 127 lamps exceeded 1,100 hours, and that the average initial efficiency was 4.9; after 600 hours 5.6, and after 1,200 hours 7 watts per candle-power.

USEFUL APPARATUS.

It Develops Readiness of Perception and Mental Calculation.

The apparatus described as follows by Cassell's Family Magazine is easily constructed without much dexterity in the use of tools, and might afford, we should think, a great fund of really useful entertainment at home:

Mr. Kerr, head master of Allan Glen's school, Glasgow, has introduced a new method of teaching a class readiness of perception and mental calculation. The device employed, called the Allan Glen revolver, is illustrated herewith and consists of a revolving blackboard, having a shelf attached, on which an article can be placed. On the side of the board turned from the pupils, rows of figures, dots or letters are marked, and the board is spun round at different speeds. The pupils must brace themselves up to read the words, or figures and count the dots. The exercises are graduated and become more difficult. The board is also used in the free-hand drawing class to train the students in grasping and fixing contours in their minds. For example, a jar is placed on the revolving shelf, and the students are expected to draw its outline. Pictures are also shown for a moment in the same way. Lengths, areas and volumes are also estimated by exposing certain examples side by side with others of known dimensions.

When Reptiles Ruled a World.

There was a time "in the wide revolving shades of centuries past" when our globe was wholly in the possession of walking, swimming and flying reptiles. Being the dominant type, they divided, naturally, into three great classes. In the oceans they became gigantic paddling enaliosaurians; on dry land, or rather, wet land (for the whole face of the globe was doubtless a quagmire at that time), they became monstrous, erect dinosaurians, some of which had legs fifteen feet or more in length; those which inhabited the regions of the air were the terrible flying pterodactyls. For a vast, but unknown length of time, these awful creatures literally ruled the earth. Finally, after they had "seen their day," they began to grow less and less. One by one they died out in the face of the younger and more vigorous fauna, until at the present time only a few miniature alligators and crocodiles, a few toy snakes and skulking lizards and geckos remain as reminders of the enormous reptilian types that once crowded land and sea.

CHICKENS have been acting as gold collectors for J. A. McConville, of Butte, Mont. In one chicken's crop and gizzard he found some golden nuggets. He therefore killed the remainder of his brood, thirty-one in number, and found in them gold to the value of $387.

LITERARY CLIPPINGS.

HARDY, the English novelist, began as an architect. He is fifty-three years of age.

SIXTEEN of the thirty heroines of Sir Walter Scott were under twenty years of age.

THE well that prompted Samuel Woodworth to write "The Old Oaken Bucket," is still kept in good condition at Scituate, Mass.

JEAN INGELOW'S first poems were written on the window shutters, that folded back against the wall, in her old home. Her mother discovered them first, and her brother had them published.

THE "Poems of Two Brothers," when sold to a publisher, brought Charles and Alfred Tennyson just one hundred dollars. The manuscript has been carefully preserved, and is estimated to be now worth five thousand dollars.

THE book that sold for $1,850 at auction in Boston—Poe's "Tamerlane"—was a 16-mo. in paper covers and having forty pages. Nobody knows just how or when it was printed. The British museum has the only other known copy. Poe wrote "Tamerlane" when a boy and nameless.

COMET FAILED TO STRIKE

And Thousands Were Disappointed in Consequence.

GREAT ALARM IN PHILADELPHIA.

Three Cases of Insanity Through Fear of Destruction Reported from That City—False Alarm at Bridgeport—Astronomers Convinced That the Comet is Not Biela's.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—Great interest was manifested in this city last night on account of the promised appearance of the comet, and as the shades of evening began to gather hundreds of men, women, and children gathered on the streets for the purpose of witnessing the expected heavenly wonders.

Threatening clouds hovered over the city, and positions out of doors were rendered decidedly uncomfortable by the damp, chilly air, but the crowds maintained their positions until long past the hour fixed by the astronomers for the collision, when they were driven home by a drizzling rain which began to fall.

There were many who were afraid to venture from their homes and preferred to die by their own firesides if the expected death was to come. Three cases of insanity through fear of the destruction of the world were reported by the police and prominent physicians who were seen, predicted that many cases of nervous prostration and possibly death would result from the intense strain upon the nervous system of the weak and superstitious.

Mamie Haniford, 22 years old of 825 Wood street, became violently insane and by the advice of her physician was sent to the insane department of the Philadelphia Hospital to be cared for.

THEY LOOKED IN VAIN.

New Yorkers and Brooklynites Out in Force to See the Expected Smash.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Thousands of New Yorkers who spent the hour from 8 to 9 last night abroad, looking for the comet and awaiting the shock, were compelled to go home disappointed.

Instead of the comet there were acres of clouds covering the skies solidly in every direction. No comet could be seen, and, as no great commotion was felt, in this region at least, it was decided that the promised show was a failure.

At Columbia college Prof. Rees had everything ready, but as science could not penetrate the veil he made no observations.

The clouds cleared away for a moment toward midnight and Gilbert P. Serviss, the Brooklyn astronomer, was enabled to catch a glimpse of two or three fiery darts of minor importance. Some of these meteor's Mr. Serviss thought, came from Andromeda, and so were part of the advertised display. Others were traced back to Taurus and were classified as accompanying another comet of which the public knows very little and and cared less.

Bridgeport Rung Out of Bed.

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 28.—"It's the comet, sure!" was the exclamation on all sides at 9 o'clock last night when the fire bells sounded, it having been previously announced that the bells would ring in case of the appearance of the comet or a meteoric display. People hovered on the street to see the heavens in the east aglow and many were frightened and thought the city was doomed to destruction. The alarm was occasioned by the grass on Stratford beach being in flames.

Not Biela's Comet.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 28.—Although clouds somewhat hindered observation at Lordsell Observatory, what Drs. Payne and Wilson saw of the comet has convinced them that is not Biela's. They think that it is a new comet or one whose orbit has changed.

MISS HALL FOUND.

The Demented New Canaan Woman Discovered in New Rochelle, N. Y.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Miss Julie Hall became mildly demented on Thanksgiving Day, and left her home in New Canaan, Conn., to see the world. She is 33 years old, and the daughter of R. C. Hall, president of the New Canaan First National bank.

Seventeen leading men of the village organized a search party and went down to New Rochelle, where the last clue to her ended, and vainly ransacked the whole neighborhood for two days without result.

At noon yesterday the Misses Emmett, residents of New Rochelle, found the missing woman wandering about, smiling to herself. The search party took her back to New Canaan in triumph.

Progress of Indian Schools.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Mrs. M. A. Dorchester, special agent for the Indian School Service, reports an improvement in school buildings and their general comfort. While much remains to be done the tone of the Indian school service shows that an earnest effort is being made to bring it up to a high standard, industrially, intellectually and morally.

British Gunners on a Jamboree.

DUBLIN, Nov. 28.—The gunners of the 80th battery, Royal Field artilley, stationed in Limerick, left the barracks yesterday against orders, got drunk, and marched up and down Mulgrave street smashing windows. Six of the men were arrested, and will be courtmar tialed.

Thirty Special Land Agents to Go.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—About thirty special agents of the General Land Office, located principally in the Northwest, will be at once dropped from the rolls, on account of the decree made in the appropriation for that purpose.

The Steward Swept Overboard at Sea.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—Steamer Europe from Antwerp reports a most thrilling voyage. Storm after storm was encountered and everything moveable on deck was washed away. The steward was swept overboard and lost.

Senator Kenna Much Better.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Senator Kenna is so very much better to-day that his friends feel much encouraged and now entertain strong hopes of his speedy and permanent recovery.

EARTHQUAKE IN SALVADOR.

The Seaport Town of La Union Destroyed and Many Persons Killed.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 28.—A private letter from La Union, Salvador, gives details of the complete destruction of that city by an earthquake. The letter was received yesterday by the steamer City of Sydney, from Panama. It says:

"An earthquake laid low nearly all the houses in the city, and those left standing had their walls so cracked that it was not safe to remain in them. The residence of the agent of the Pacific Mail company, which was comparatively new and supposed to be earthquake-proof, was shattered by the shock. The people are living in tents, and are in mortal fear of another disturbance."

A passenger on the City of Panama, which called at La Union on the trip, and which was subsequently passed by the City of Sydney, writes that he went ashore and visited the ruins. The desolation was complete. The residents of the city were almost driven to frenzy, and processions were parading the streets ringing bells and headed by the priests, who prayed aloud to God to abate the disturbances.

A large number of persons were killed and many seriously injured. No mention was made of disasters to shipping, and it is presumed that there was no tidal wave. Neither had any information been received from other places, as the means of communication are slow, and the extent of the earthquake was unknown at the time the City of Panama called at La Union.

RELICS FOR THE FAIR.

United States War Vessels to Convey Them to This City.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Notwithstanding opposition in the Navy Department, it is certain that a U. S. Naval vessel will be assigned the duty of conveying to this country the exhibit of relics relating to the discovery of America loaned by the Vatican from its museum for the World's Fair.

Unless some well-founded reason should intervene the United States cruiser Newark will be given the assignment.

It has also been practically decided that the United States gunboat Bennington shall convey the Columbus caravels from Huelva to America.

Will Demand a Fire Station.

NEWPORT, Nov. 28.—As a result of the burning of the Vanderbilt villa, cottagers who yet remain here are preparing to demand that a fire station be built in the midst of the cottages and that it be equipped with a hook and ladder truck, a steamer and a hose cart, all manned by permanent men.

Seattle's Smallpox Plague.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 28.—Two new cases of smallpox were discovered in this city yesterday, a colored man and a girl. Both were removed to the pest house. Twenty-two patients still remain at the pest house suffering with the disease, twelve of whom are convalescent.

Veragua Will Lend Columbus Relics.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The Department of State has received from Madrid a formal note from the Duke of Veragua granting the request of the President for the loan of the Columbus relics in the possession of his descendants for exhibition at the World's Fair.

Egan to Return to Chili Soon.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Patrick Egan, Minister to Chili, is expected in this city to-morrow. He will return to Chili in a few days.

The Illinois Candidate for Printer.

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—M. B. McCabe of Chicago has the indorsement of many Illinois Democrats for Public Printer, and it is stated that his name will be presented to President Cleveland by the Illinois Congressional delegation.

Death of a Prominent Divine.

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 28.—Rev. Father Leonard, one of the most prominent divines of this place and noted throughout New Jersey and Pennsylvania for his eloquence as a preacher and missionary, is dead at his home here.

Democrats Seat a Colored Republican.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 28.—The State Board of Examiners (Democratic officials) have decided the contest in the 7th district by declaring George W. Murray, a colored Republican, the successful candidate.

Smallpox at Birmingham.

BIRMINGHAM, Conn. Nov. 28.—M. Hurley, aged 16, died of smallpox Saturday at the hospital. Bridget Crowley of Ansonia is very sick. Five more cases are in the hospital.

Dead at the Age of 101 Years.

SCHUYLKILL HAVEN, Pa., Nov. 28.—Mrs. Ann Davis, who died Saturday at the almshouse at this place, was born in Wales in 1791 and has been a widow for fifty years.

Cadets Rejoicing Over Their Victory.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 28.—There is great rejoicing among naval cadets here over the victory of the Annapolis boys in the football game with the West Point cadets.

No Division Intended for Kansas.

HUTCHINSON, Kan., Nov. 28.—Republican members of the Legislature deny that any meeting has been called to consider the question of dividing the State.

Ives Secures Control of a Railroad.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 28.—It is again asserted in railroad circles that Henry S. Ives has secured control of the Ohio Southern Railroad.

NATURAL GAS FAILING.

The Pressure in Ohio Greatly Decreased—Manufacturers Cut Off.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Nov. 28.—All of Ohio using natural gas is greatly aroused over the unmistakeable evidence that the supply is slowly failing. The pressure in the great Mercier county fields has fallen from 400 pounds to 75 and 80 pounds, and new wells are being constantly drilled in what has been a discouraging effort to fulfil contracts to supply cities on the big pipe line, such as Dayton, Springfield, Sidney, Troy, Piqua, etc.

To facilitate the distribution of gas, a new-fangled force pump is being used to hurry the gas through the mains.

All manufacturers have been cut off and nothing larger than a hotel is now supplied with the convenient fuel. The pressure is getting so unreliable and variable that hotels are taking out their burners.

The local officials of the company are discouraged over the prospect, and consumers fear that they will have to return to the use of coal. Some are inclined to think that the large flow from the big wells in Indiana and the largely increased use of it there have something to do with the pressure here.

The local franchise ordinarily requests a four ounce pressure all the time. For a week it has been below that daily.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

Opinion at Albany Against Holding One Next Summer.

ALBANY, Nov. 28.—There is not likely to be a constitutional convention here next summer, although the last Legislature ordained that there should be one. Diligent inquiry has been made among State officials and prominent politicians and the concensus of opinion is that the convention had better be postponed for at least a year.

Secretary of State Rice has finished sending the notifications of the special election ordered for delegates to this convention. Hardly a State official can be found who is favorable to the convention being held this year and the most general objection is that neither party desires to hold a State convention this winter, which they would have to do to name the delegates at large.

Among those who it is alleged do not favor the holding of a convention this summer are Senator Hill, Edward Murphy, jr., Richard Croker and William F. Sheehan, and one of the first actions of the Legislature will be to postpone the election until 1894.

LAW BREAKERS IN POWER.

The Bald Knobbers Again in Control in Taney County, Mo.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Nov. 28.—At the recent election the Bald Knobbers, who have been keeping quiet since five of their ringleaders were hanged three years ago, carried Taney county, and are again in control of affairs.

They are already becoming arrogant, and have served notices on several officers who helped to prosecute them that they must leave the county.

Lawlessness, which, for a time, was not so prevalent, has broken out again. Recently the only church in the county was burned, and neighboring counties have been suffering from depredations by horse thieves.

Taney county is probably the only organized county in the United States where the element recognized as lawbreakers constitute a political power.

ENGLAND TO DEMAND REDRESS.

A Britisher Arrested During the Idaho Mine Trouble Wants Satisfaction.

BOISE CITY, Idaho, Nov. 28.—The Cœur d' Alene riots of last summer seems destined to be productive of international complications. One of the foreigners arrested in July by the military authorities for aiding and abetting the rioters has prevailed on his government to demand redress from the United States.

The man in question is Alex. R. Cheholm of Warder, a subject of Queen Victoria. The British government has requested an explanation from this government, and the authorities at Washington have asked Secretary of State Piukham of Idaho for information.

Norway Will Send a Viking Ship.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Secretary of State Foster is in receipt of a despatch from W. W. Thomas, jr., United States Minister at Stockholm, stating that, in view of the great risks attending its transportation, it will be impossible to secure the Viking ship for exhibition at the World's Fair. But a fac-simile is being built in Norway, which, manned by a crew of Norwegians—the Vikings of today—will sail next spring.

Convict O'Brien Arrested Again.

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 28. — James O'Brien, an ex-convict, upon whom sentence was suspended a week ago for an assault committed upon Policeman Rowe, was arrested again last night for stabbing John Kelleher, alias "Whitey," in a River street saloon. O'Brien was about, celebrating his release, when he got in to a quarrel with Kelleher. The latter was stabbed in the left side and in the face, and is seriously wounded.

Killed on the Jersey Central.

JERSEY CITY, Nov. 28.—A New Jersey Central track walker yesterday found scattered along the track in the Montclare section of the city the remains of a man who had been cut to pieces by an engine. The remains have not yet been identified.

Myer Will Meet McAuliffe.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 28.—Billy Myer has arrived in this city. He says he will be in condition to meet McAuliffe as scheduled. These old-time adversaries will box ten rounds for scientific points in the 2d Regiment Armory on Dec. 10.

THE LAW A DEAD LETTER

Chinese Restriction Act a Complete Failure.

ONLY FIVE CELESTIALS REGISTERED.

And This Out of a Population of at Least 250,000—It Will Cost Over $10,000,000 to Carry Out the Provisions of the Statute Next May.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—It seems to be the unanimous opinion of those entrusted with its execution that the latest Chinese restriction act has fallen a dead letter.

The law was passed on May 5 last and required that within one year from its passage all Chinese laborers within the United States should take out registration papers before the Collector of Internal Revenue of their respective districts and furnish photographs of themselves for purposes of identification.

On July 7 the Internal Revenue office issued its forms of application for registry to all the officers having Chinese laborers residing in their districts, and distributed warnings in Chinese through all the Chinese quarters, enjoining every Chinaman who wanted to remain in the United States to come up and register and to bring his photograph with him to be ready to swear that it was a correct likeness.

Up to to-day just five Chinamen in the whole United States have complied with the law, and they are residents of far off Oregon. Two others offered to do so provided the certificates to be issued them covered the right to go to China and return, but as this was something distinctly forbidden by the law their conditional offers were rejected.

According to census figures there were 107,478 Chinese in the United States June 1, 1890.

These figures are, however, believed to fall far short of the truth. The difficulties of enumerating Chinamen are very great, and their evasive powers are far above the average.

Wong Ching Foo, Secretary of the Chinese Liberal Rights League, claims that there are not fewer than 150,000 Chinese in this country possessing qualifications which he contends should entitle them to the suffrage. This would make the total Chinese population double that number, or, at least 250,000.

The only penalty provided by the law for failure to comply with its provisions is deportation to China. Taking the lowest estimate—that given by the Census people—107,700, and the average cost of shipping each Chinaman from his present place of residence in the United States to some port in the Flowery Kingdom at $1000—a very moderate estimate—the enforcement of the law would involve the expenditure of $10,750,000.

The duty of carrying out this little programme is imposed by the statute upon the Secretary of the Treasury and the Attorney-General, and $50,000 is appropriated for the purpose.

The additional $10,700,000 required for transportation purposes must be paid by the next Congress if the law is to be enforced on May 5 next, for it is made evident that the Chinese now resident in the United States have not the slightest intention of attempting to comply with its provisions.

AFTER MATHER-HABERKORN-PABST.

The Actress Will Have to Settle for Breach of Contract.

DENVER, Nov. 28.—The trials and tribulations of Margaret Mather (in private life Mrs. Gustav Pabst) are about to commence.

Since she has seen fit to give her company a two weeks' notice, and to end her theatrical career at Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 10, she will have to contend with no less than one heavy suit for damages each week for six months.

Early last season Miss Mather secured bookings at the leading theatres throughout the country. At this late day it will be impossible to secure first-class attractions to fill her time.

In consequence, an arrangement has been made between the more prominent managers to hold her for the loss incurred in being compelled to close their respective houses.

Racine's Young Mayor Resigns.

RACINE, Wis., Nov. 28.—Jackson L. Case, the millionaire owner of Jay Eye See, and mayor of this city, tendered his resignation, it is now said, because he had become interested in a street railway, which the city forbids. The opinion of the city attorney is that the ordinance does not necessitate the mayor's retirement, and it is believed that the resignation will not be accepted. Case is the youngest mayor in the State.

Poisoned Her Brother-in-Law and Herself

LESUEUR, Minn., Nov. 28.—At St. Henry one day last week Joseph E. Haunder died suddenly. Strychnine was found in his tobacco. On Wednesday morning Miss Agnes Beer, his wife's sister, died in the same manner. She left a letter asking to be buried with Haunder. It is supposed that she poisoned herself and Haunder.

Suit for Money Lost Through Bardsley.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—The suit of the State against the city of Philadelphia to recover $800,000 of taxes collected by John Bardsley as city treasurer, and of which no return has been made to the State Treasury, will be heard in the Dauphin county court at Harrisburg early this week.

Plans of American Delegates.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 28.—There is a general belief among persons watching and participating in the Monetary Conference that the American delegates are treating with Alfred Rothschild to promote, in concert with him, some plan which will strengthen the silver market, while not necessitating a change in existing legislation.

Charged With Forging Cablegrams.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Edgar J. Vernell, an Englishman, aged 29, was arraigned in the Tombs police court yesterday, charged with forgery. He is accused by Chaplain Peart, of the Birmingham, Eng., prison, with swindling him out of 60 pounds by means of forged cablegrams.

Thought to Have Started for Mexico.

MEMPHIS, Nov. 28.—B. J. Martin, cashier of the Webster National bank at Europia, Miss., who absconded Friday with $50,000, is believed to be on his way to Mexico.

TO-NIGHT'S MILL.

Believed That the Costello-Greggains Fight Will Be a Long and Stubborn One.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—All preparations for the fight to-night at the Coney Island Athletic Club between Costello and Greggains have been completed.

The men are in the pink of condition, and the bout is looked forward to with much interest.

Mr. Eckhardt, the official referee of the club, informed a reporter this morning that although the men are not prominently known on the Eastern coast, he believed that the attendance would be fully as large as that at the recent fight between Choynski and Godfrey.

"The club," he said, "is in receipt of a large number of applications for tickets, and most all of the desirable seats have been bought up.

"That it will be a good, game fight, I have no doubt," he said. "I am trying to get the Yale and Princeton foot ball teams to attend in a body, but cannot say, just yet, how successful my efforts will be."

The consensus of opinion among the sporting fraternity is that the fight will be the longest and most stubborn that has ever been pulled off in the arena of the Coney Island Athletic Club.

Greggains is almost the counterpart of Bob Fitzsimmons in stature, standing six feet high, and only weighing when in condition 156 pounds. Like Fitzsimmons, his height and great reach has given him a big advantage over his opponents.

Costello, on the other hand, is no pigmy. He stands five feet, ten and a half inches. His weight, in fighting trim, is just exactly that of Greggains, 156 pounds. His three battles with Paddy Slavin shows him to be a man of no small capabilities and has earned him considerable respect not only with sporting men generally but even the pugilists themselves.

He is the favorite in the betting just now.

AFTER CROUSE'S WEALTH.

A New York Woman Claiming to be the Wife of the Millionaire.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 28.—Rumors are current here that a New York woman claims to be the widow of W. Edgar Crouse, the many times millionaire, who died on Monday night, leaving the bulk of his vast estate to be divided among his next of kin.

The only name given to the woman is Bertha, and everything with regard to her identity is shrouded in mystery.

A copy of the will has been sent to New York in compliance with the request of an attorney in that city, and in the public mind this circumstance gives plausibility to the story.

The copy was procured by Louis Marshall, the law partner of Chief Judge Ruger of the Court of Appeals.

Mr. Marshall declines to tell who the New York attorney is, and professes ignorance as to the object the latter has in view.

Mr. Crouse's valet, talking about the matter to-day, said that the name "Bertha" was not the right one, and that the woman referred to was married to another man.

Further than that he refused to commit himself.

The woman, it is reported, has a child of which she claims that Mr. Crouse was the father.

SENSATION AT WILKESBARRE.

Investigating the Mysterious Death of Mrs. Helene Roberts.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 28.—Miss Helene Roberts, proprietress of the most fashionable millinery store in town and moving in the best society, died yesterday morning under suspicious circumstances. The physician who was called in notified the authorities that he believed Miss Roberts died from the effects of a criminal operation.

The District Attorney tried to have the patient make a statement before she died, but she refused, saying she would carry her secret to the grave. The coroner is now investigating the case.

The affair has created a great sensation here. Miss Roberts came to Wilkesbarre from Chicago. She was 27 years old, a handsome woman, and, it is said, was engaged to be be married to a wealthy man.

Still No Trace of His Assailants.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 28.—Matthew Kohlick, the Pole, who was assaulted and shot in the head in West Hartford on Nov. 12, is dead at the hospital. The coroner's inquest showed that death was directly due to the bullet wound. This makes the offense murder. Nothing has been found of Kohlick's assailants, though the county officers are following out every shadow of a clue.

The President Preparing His Message.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—President Harrison has begun the writing of his annual message to Congress. He desires to give it his close attention until it is concluded, and so denies himself to as many callers as possible.

8,575 Fatal Cholera Cases.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—The Health Office reports that there have been in Germany this year 19,647 cases of cholera, of which 8,575 have been fatal.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

Forecast Till 8 P. M. Tuesday: For New Jersey, Fair To-Night and Tuesday; Winds Becoming Northwest.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—"Mugg's Landing" at Music Hall to-night.

—Have a good laugh at Music Hall this evening.

—Tickets for Musin's last appearance now on sale.

—The borough street lights were out again at 4 a. m. to-day.

—The Trinity church Christian Endeavor society will meet to-night at 8.

—A regular meeting of Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, will be held this evening.

—Carl Heimerle took one 1st, and three 2d prizes for Great Danes, at the Brooklyn dog show that closed Saturday night.

—Two men and one young woman were baptized in the First Baptist church yesterday morning, the result of Third street mission labors.

—Shareholders of the Plainfield Building and Loan association will meet in Liefke's room this evening at 7:30, for the payment of monthly dues.

—Those voters whose names may have been omitted from the registry list, will have an opportunity to register to-morrow from 1 till 9 p. m., at the polling places.

—The fine new grocery, fruit and vegetable store of Carty & Stryker at Central avenue and Second street is already a favorite with housekeepers. All orders receive prompt attention, and the goods are first-class.

—Don't get cross when a Republican offers to bet that four months after Cleveland's inauguration the stores and shops of the country will be closed. Just wink your off eye and remember that exactly four months after the inauguration the country will be celebrating Independence Day.

—F. M. Hulett, the enterprising piano man, finds such a large demand for instruments of various makes that he has added to his already large line the famous Kranich & Bach pianos and organs. His warerooms well repay a visit. There's no need of going out of town for an instrument while such a store as Hulett's is in town.

—The Y. M. C. A. has secured as teacher of a men's singing class, E. A. Embury of Washington avenue. Mr. Embury was formerly a pupil of Dr. Messiter, of Trinity church, New York, and is a teacher of over eleven years' experience in the training of male voices. A $2 membership in the association will entitle to this and other privileges. Young men who are interested are requested to enroll their names at once as members of this class. A class for boys under the same leadership, will, it is hoped, soon be organized.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

David Dreier has gone to Boston to visit his aunt, Mrs. Newman, for the winter.

Edward Young, formerly of this city, but now of Eden, Florida, is spending a few days at his old home, 243 South Second street.

J. S. Cutter of West Front street has gone to Chester, Morris county, for a hunting trip. He makes his headquarters at the home of A. DeCamp.

Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Barrows of Sandford avenue have the sympathy of the community in the loss of their only daughter, little Helen, aged 15 months.

Uncle Freeman Shotwell, father of ex-collector Wm. H. Shotwell of the borough, lies very ill at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. J. S. Garretson, Central avenue.

Chief engineer T. O. Doane left town to-day to attend a meeting at Bloomfield of the State executive committee of the Firemen's Relief association, of which he is a member.

T. T. Barrett, one of Plainfield's reliable milk dealers, now residing on South avenue, has leased the Eden Boice farm, now owned by Brokaw Bros. of New York, situated under Washington Rock, and will move there April 1.

Elizabeth D., widow of the late Joseph W. Vail, and mother of Joseph T. Vail the real estate dealer, died yesterday in her seventieth year. She had been ill only a day or two, and her family did not realize that she was seriously sick. Acute pneumonia, however, had entered her system, and she suddenly passed away. Her illness was painless. She was a much esteemed woman, and was personally known to all of the older generation in Plainfield.

Mr. Groendyke Promises the Health Inspector's Affidavit in His Behalf.

D. N. Groendyke explicitly denies that there is any connection from his house into Stony brook, except from his laundry tubs. It is claimed, however, that every sink, basin and waste pipe in his house is connected, and there is talk of a public indignation meeting to decide upon some way to punish him if he cannot be reached by law.

Mr. Groendyke promised THE PRESS for publication to-day, an affidavit from the North Plainfield health inspector, to the effect that he is innocent of the charges against him. Up to the time of going to press, however, it has not arrived.

Here's Hoping They Win.

The bowling team selected by the Crescent League to compete for the "Elizabeth Journal Trophy", is as follows, subject to such changes as captain Davis may think best: VanEmburgh, Wood, Lyman, VanAlstyne, Haven, Teel, MacIntyre, Vail, Davis and VanWinkle. The first contest will take place to-morrow evening.

FREIGHT HOUSE TO GO.

WITHIN A YEAR A PAVILION WILL OCCUPY ITS SITE.

New Yards Will Be Laid Out at Richmond Street and at Grant Avenue, and the Old Yard Will Be Made a Handsome Park.

THE PRESS is permitted to assure the people that the removal of the freight house has not only been determined, but already plans for the changes to be made about the station on the site of the present yards, have been considered and partially decided upon. Now the question is, what will the people themselves and the city itself do towards making the Plainfield station the most beautiful on the road, and this place the most attractive therefore to the new comers looking for country homes or suburban investment?

The railroad company proposes to lay out a handsome park, sloping from Fourth street up to the tracks. A beautiful pavilion will be erected for the comfort and convenience of those who approach by the South side. From this steps will lead down into a subway running under the tracks and opening out on the same level into North avenue, or by a stairway ascending into the waiting room of the main station. All this is to be done within a year.

The only obstacle to the company's making the park on the South side as extensive as could be desired, and beautifying it without limit, is the fact that so long as the property at the Peace street end of it is used as yards for lumber and coal, side tracks must run in there, and they would always circumscribe the dimensions and interfere with the embellishment of the park. If the city, or some of its philanthropic people, or a few of those whose property is to be immensely increased in value by the change, could come to some agreement with the owner of the yards by which they could be closed up or used for some other purpose, it would bring about a very speedy solution of all difficulties and inspire almost instant, satisfactory and generous action by the railroad company.

The new freight house and yards are not to be constructed on the Boice property and that adjoining it along the south side of the track from Park to Arlington avenue. The company will make use of its own ground near Richmond street, Grant avenue, or at both. There are many reasons why the Boice property has dropped out of the company's calculations. One is that it would cost the company $75,000 to get land alone in that location sufficient for its needs. Another reason, which the owners of horses will appreciate and thank the company for considering, is, that with the freight yards there the drill engine would be continually running back and forth or standing on the Park avenue bridge. So the new freight yards will go somewhere else with faith that the council will macadamize the streets approaching.

A Match in the Bath Room Starts a Blaze.

Box 25 called out the department at 11:15 a. m., yesterday to the house of Fred H. Wills, 9 LaGrande avenue. Mr. Wills had lighted a cigar in the bath room, using a match from a box on the wall over a hamper of soiled clothes. It is supposed that a portion of the head of the match snapped in among the clothes. At any rate, ten minutes afterwards a lively blaze was in progress. Some of the firemen were red-hot to run a hose into the house and flood everthing, but chief engineer Doane did a highly commendable thing in ordering the hose held back and sending for a patent extinguisher. By that time the Wills's own garden hose had put out the fire. The handlers of the big hose had to content themselves with deluging the lawn and tearing up holes in the turf. The hamper of clothes was burned, and the wainscoting and door were also damaged.

Jerry Found Good Samaritans.

It has been ascertained that the place where engineer Jerry Dunham of Dunellen spent the night of his wandering was at the farm of Benjamin E. Gavin, Greenbrook road.

At 2:30 in the morning the Gavins were aroused by the barking of their dog. They found a strange man in the engine room of their saw-mill. He said his name was Jerry Dunhan, and thought he was in the round-house. He asked Mr. Gavin's son if he had closed the big doors, and he admired the engine The Gavins gave him a nice warm corner to sleep in, and made him comfortable with blankets. In the morning they started him safely homeward. His family and friends feel very grateful to them for their kindness in caring for him. They say that he had $100 with him, and a watch and chain, which he might have lost had he not fallen into good hands.

Where Is Henry Barlow?

J. T. Sperling of 16 East Fourth street is anxious to know the whereabouts of a young man missing from Plainfield, whom he describes as follows: "25 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall, well proportioned, dark eyes, light brown hair, slight mustache; name, Harry Barlow, but has called himself Henry Jakes or Jacobs. His home is in Montreal, Canada." This is not the first time he has been missing.

Who Gets It in the Neck Now?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Allow me space in your valuable paper to contradict the statement in Friday evening's Courier, which said "Tracy Got it in the Neck." This is utterly false, for I was not near the fire Thursday morning, but was at work on the stone wall down at the brook. BERNARD TRACY.

"A God-send is Ely's Cream Balm. I had catarrh for three years. Two or three times a week my nose would bleed. I thought the sores would never heal. Your Balm has cured me." —MRS. M. A. JACKSON, Portsmouth, N. H.

I have been troubled with catarrh for 10 years and have tried a number of remedies, but got no relief until I purchased a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. I consider it the most reliable preparation for catarrh and cold in the head.—George R. Crandall, P. M., Quonochawataug, Rhode Island.

MR. NOEL A DEMOCRAT.

He Issues the Following to Those Whom It May Concern.

It having come to my knowledge that I am supposed to be a Republican, I take this means to disclaim such supposition. I have never at any time belonged to the Republican party or voted the Republican ticket. On the contrary, have always been a Democrat and expect to continue the same. I make this statement in justice to myself and the party I represent. Although having many warm personal friends and workers in my behalf on the other side, I cannot deny the fact of my being a Democrat. I ask the cordial support of my party in the coming election. CHARLES J. NOEL.

Shocking Death of a Horse.

A horrible accident occurred last Tuesday afternoon near the Fanwood station. A team of horses belonging to a farmer who lives on the Rahway road were hitched to a post in front of the feed store. The horses became restless and the off horse crowded his companion into the post. The animal struggled to free himself and in doing so his chest caught on the end of the post which had become so jagged from the gnawing of other horses that the sharp point entered the body of the horse. A frightful gash was made tearing open the horse's belly and the entrails protruded. The owner of the horse was attracted by its cries of pain and went to the rescue. As he released it the horse broke loose and yelling piteously went tearing down the county road in wounded condition. The animal was afterwards caught and shot.

Lindabury Against Runyon.

The legal existence of that ancient fossil known as the "East Jersey Proprietors" is to be settled, at last, it may be hoped, by a case now under consideration by the Court of Errors. Counselor R. V. Lindabury, who is one of Netherwood's summer residents, and whom Plainfield people frequently have the pleasure of meeting, appeared for the proprietors. He insisted in his brief that the grant of Charles II., to Duke of York and his assigns, and the release of the latter to Berkeley and Carteret in the year 1664, and especially the release of the Duke of York to the 24 proprietors, and the confirmation of this by the King in 1682, constituted the proprietors a corporation. Chancellor Runyon and Frederic Ward appeared on behalf of the Force estate They deny that the grant of Charles II. to the Duke of York constituted the proprietors a corporation.

Glen Gardner News.

A. E. Armstrong, of Hackettstown, entertained the audience at the M. E church with comic selections, Friday evening. The amount of money raised was $17.

Thursday night we had a parade and torch-light procession. Most of the Democrats illuminated their houses. The disappointed Republicans sat in the darkness with window blinds and doors closed. An empty jug between two candles was put on a Democrat's front stoop by one or several of the sick Republicans.

Lutherans held their harvest home and Thanksgiving service in their church Sunday morning. They will hold a church fair the 1st, 2d and 3d of December.

BEN BOLT.

The Monopoly Extending Its Grip.

The contract of the Adams Express company with the Lehigh Valley Railroad company is said to expire with the close of this year. It is probable that beginning with 1893 the United States Express company, which is closely allied with the Philadelphia & Reading interests, will have the Lehigh Valley trade as well as that of the Central and Reading, which it now possesses. This would give the "States" a monopoly of the express business at Bound Brook and all other points reached only by the Central and Reading systems, as it now has at Plainfield.

Good Time at the "BI" Club.

The "BI" club smoker Saturday night drew a crowd of appreciative young men. The entertainment was most excellent, as was to be expected from such high talent as Brooks and Denton, banjoists; Silberberg, accompanist, Casey, comic singer, and Ballantyne, story teller. These are all prime favorites, and the audience testified their appreciation of the feast of fun by hearty and frequent applause.

Hully Gee! An Editor with Boodle!

Burglars robbed the house of Wickfield Gibbs, in Short Hills, Saturday night. They carried off jewels, a gold watch and some money. Mr. Gibbs is editor of the Short Hills Item. Charles Hendrickson, suspected of being one of the cracksmen, was caught yesterday.

The Boy Played With Matches.

The Thanksgiving Day fire at the Stoll residence, 11 Elm place, turns out to have been started by a small boy of the family He stood by the bureau whittling matches, and the head of one of them snapped into a drawer and started the blaze. He was scared, and ran.

The turning point in woman's life brings peculiar weaknesses and ailments. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription brings relief and cure. It is a powerful, invigorating, restorative tonic and nervine. It imparts strength to the whole system in general, and to the uterine organs and appendages in particular. "Run-down," debilitated and delicate women need it. It's a legitimate medicine—purely vegetable, perfectly harmless. It's guaranteed to give satisfaction in every case, or money refunded. Nothing else does as much. You only pay for the good you get.

Can you ask more?

As a regulator and promoter of functional action, at that critical period of change from girlhood to womanhood, "Favorite Prescription" is a perfectly safe remedial agent, and can produce only good results. It is equally efficacious and valuable in its effects when taken for those disorders and derangements incident to that later and most critical period, known as "The Change of Life."

'TWAS TRUE PROPHET IN PLAINFIELD.

But Somehow It Would n't Work When New York Gamins Guyed It.

Miss Annie Eva Fay, who appeared in a spirit show at Plainfield, last season, lost her temper at her spiritualistic seance in New York the other night. The talking hand, one of Miss Fay's star mediums, also got its back up and refused to talk on account of the irreverent but airy persiflage which descended from the gallery gods.

Finally Miss Fay's assistant, a dyspeptic-looking man with a beard, snatched the hand up from the pane of glass on which it reposed while Miss Fay made her exit in high dudgeon.

"You can't talk to-night, dear!" exclaimed the lecturer in an apologetic tone. "We know you have some important messages to deliver, but the audience is irreverent and the gallery is too funny."

After this side remark to the hand the lecturer stepped up to the footlights and, holding it aloft so that all could see, exclaimed:

"LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: This is the hand that, one year ago, on the stage of Music Hall, Plainfield, foretold the election of Grover Cleveland. It has been a Democrat ever since."

By this time the audience was inclined to treat the hand with more respect.

"Just let me ask it one question," cried a fat old man in the balcony; "Is my watch in my pocket?"

There was a deathly silence for an instant. The hand seemed to be pulling itself together for a thinking spell.

Suddenly the silence was broken by a staccato voice from the gods:

"No, it ain't," cried the voice. "It's at the pawnbroker's."

Some one then asked who was going to win the football game on Thanksgiving, but by this time both the hand and the lecturer were in a passion, and they followed Miss Fay off the stage with their heads high in the air.

The two men chosen from the audience last night to watch Miss Fay during her manifestations were R. H. Lindsay, a six-foot man who wore spectacles, and Edward Harrigan, the actor. Mr. Harrigan had a bout with the spirits from which he issued rather the worse for wear. It was just such a bout as judge Wadsworth had on Music Hall stage. He was placed in the cabinet with a tin pail over his head and several musical instruments on his lap. The curtains were closed and instantly the audience was treated to an exterior view of a spiritualistic tussle.

The cabinet swayed now this way and now that; several spirits of a musical turn of mind played "Annie Rooney" on the instruments, while a spirit of a ribald nature played the "Devil's Tattoo" on the tin pan.

A moment later Mr. Harrigan issued from the cabinet looking very much dishevelled. He carried a piece of paper in his hand, on which he said was a message from Col. Funk, an old friend of his who had been dead some years. This experiment proved rather mystifying, as very few in the audience were aware that Mr. Harrigan is a spiritualist himself. The rest of the experiments were those cut and dried tricks of sleight of hand employed by all the spiritualistic operators.

Miss Fay's hand, however, had not lost its cunning since last she appeared in New York five or six years ago. She is still a good deal cleverer than any of the alleged spirits she employed. The seance was so extremely short that the gods had to take the rest of their money's worth out in hissing. Taken altogether it was a skeptical gathering, and the little group of spiritualists present could n't leaven the whole audience by any means.

The Official and the Small Boy.

[Bound Brook Chronicle.]

A prominent borough official returning one evening not long since from a meeting, was accompanied by a Bound Brook "small boy" who had been spending the evening down town. Thinking to find out more about the little fellow he questioned him as follows:

"Johnnie, do you chew?"

"Oh, no! My Sunday-school teacher says it is wicked to chew."

"Well, do you smoke?"

"Oh, no, sir! I used to, but my Sunday-school teacher says only naughty boys do it, and I have quit."

They continued on in silence for a short distance when coming to a gate that stood open the borough official was somewhat astonished to hear the model boy exclaim as he slammed the gate shut, "I never go by that house but what the blankety blank gate is always open."

The Sunday-school teacher should further enlighten her charge.

Want an Injunction Against the Noise.

Residents of Manning avenue threaten to go to the Chancellor to have him compel the North Plainfield electric light company to do away with the annoying rumbling or roaring sound caused by the exhaust of the engines. The noise used to be worse, and was slightly remedied by a muffler, but that is not sufficient. The noise in the Plainfield plant is effectually smothered, and the boroughites demand the same sort of a muffler over there.

Shiloh's Cough Cure

This is beyond question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold; a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price, 50c. and $1. If your lungs are sore, chest, or back lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by A. D. Mallinson, 65 North Avenue, opposite railroad station. 5-16-y

ILLEGAL SEWERS.

They Must All Be Closed, Say the Borough Health Authorities.

The North Plainfield health authorities are commendably active in the matter of keeping North Plainfield streams free from sewerage pollution. Having effected a remedy of the Groendyke trouble, they are now after the ex-Rev. Peck who owns the brick row on Grove street near the brook. Sewage from the Peck sess-pools oozes through into the brook. Peck has been ordered to remedy the trouble. He is dilatory. The board will give him one more notice and then if he does n't do the right thing they will correct the nuisance at his expense.

There is great indignation against Groendyke for his abuse of the brook. The sewer connection with his house and stable has been cut off, and borough counselor Reed is hunting up a law for prosecution. The many cases of illness and death in the neighborhood, especially among little children, are now laid at the Groendyke door. The residents attribute them all to the stench and poison of the sewage conveyed to the street catch basins and brook by the Groendyke secret connection.

The discovery of the connection was made by use of analine dyes, which when poured into the Groendyke basins flowed directly into the catch basins and brook.

The Plainfield health board should take action in the matter of emptying sewage into Green brook from the Plainfield side. The outlet of the North avenue sewer is particularly offensive, and inimical to health. It should be looked after.

OBITUARY.

Frances McKinley Gibby, relict of the late Judge William Gibby, of Rahway, and mother of Mrs. Newton Spencer of North Plainfield, died at her home in that city Thursday evening in her 78th year. She was born near Belfast, Ireland, in April, 1815, and came to America while yet a girl and resided in Elizabeth, where she was married in 1838. In that year she removed to Rahway with her husband. Mrs. Gibby was the mother of a family of eight children, five of whom survive her.

In 1888 Judge Gibby died, since which time Mrs. Gibby has been confined to her bed, suffering patiently and without a murmur. She was the oldest member of St. Paul's Episcopal church of Rahway, one of its first communicants, having gone to communion at St. John's church in Elizabeth before St. Paul's church was organized in Rahway. Alexander McKinley, of Marshall, Mich., her brother, is the only one of her father's family now living, and he has passed his ninetieth year. The funeral services will be held at her home on Factory street, Rahway, Monday afternoon, and the interment will be in Hazelwood cemetery.

FOR A LOVER'S DEATH

Eva Frear Wants $40,000 for the Loss of Her Betrothed.

KILLED IN THE HASTINGS WRECK.

He Was Editor J. R. Bagnall, of the Poughkeepsie "Star"—Jurists Say That There is No Reason Why the Plaintiff in Such a Case Should Not Recover.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Nov. 28.—The terrible collision on the New York Central railroad at Hastings on Dec. 24, 1891, which brought so much suffering and so much death, has resulted in a suit against the company for damages for the loss of a betrothed husband.

This is a somewhat rare proceeding in this State, but some jurists say that there is no reason why a plaintiff in such a case should not recover.

On the train which was telescoped through the blunder of the rear brakeman, Herrick, in not signalling the train behind it, was John R. Bagnall, editor of the "Evening Star" of this city. The escaping steam scalded him cruelly about the head and body, and when he was extricated from a mass of wreck and splinters he was almost dead.

He was taken to St. John's Hospital in Yonkers and the doctors found that he was seriously hurt internally. He lingered in great agony until death came to his relief.

The same train carried as a passenger Miss Eva Frear, also of this city, who was to all appearances merely a friend of Mr. Bagnall. They had met in the car apparently and were in conversation when the crash came. Miss Frear was slightly hurt and went to the same hospital of Mr. Bagnall.

The young woman now announces that she was engaged to marry the editor. She has instructed her lawyer to bring suit against the company for $40,000, claiming that in his death she lost a husband and was deprived of maintenance and support.

She has expressed a willingness to compromise the case for $20,000.

The defense of the railroad company, it is said, may be two-fold. In the first place, it will throw doubt on the engagement, and will deny any responsibility to Miss Frear, even if she and Bagnall were engaged, on the ground that the damage was too remote, and that as she is not a relative she can claim nothing.

But the plaintiff says she will have the evidence of a barber who shaved Mr. Bagnall before he took his fateful trip to New York. The man says the editor told him he was engaged to Miss Frear and that he meant to marry her. The woman's sister also declares that they were engaged. At the time of the accident there was some talk to the effect that they were betrothed, but it was denied.

The New York Central railroad policy has been not to revive memories of the Hastings disaster, which was confessedly the result of the recklessness of one of its employes. People who were entitled to damages, it is said, had their claims considered and paid. The company, however, takes the ground that its unwillingness to agitate the question of the disaster has made it peculiarly subject to unfair demands which it will not pay.

WRECK ON THE FITCHBURG.

The Paper Train Crashes Into a Freight—One Killed, Two Hurt.

FITCHBURG, Mass., Nov. 28.—The Fitchburg railroad train which carries the Sunday papers up the Cheshire branch to New Hampshire and Vermont crashed into the rear end of a freight train one mile east of Ashburnham at 5:15 a. m.

The front of the engine was smashed in, and the caboose of the freight was totally demolished above the floor, which, with the trucks, was driven under the car ahead.

Conductor Chapman and two brakemen were in the caboose. The former was only slightly injured, but, of the other two, M. F. Fallon was instantly killed, and John Coleman was badly bruised about the face and limbs and also scalded by steam, but he will recover.

Fallon' parents reside at Collinsville.

Resigned to Accept Other Positions.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—W. S. McGinnis, assistant superintendent of the Railway Mail Service, and C. W. Fisher and N. W. Leonard, postoffice inspectors, have resigned their positions in order to accept positions with the United States Postage Stamp Delivery Company of Boston.

To Divide Steuben County.

HORNELLSVILLE, N. Y., Nov. 28.—A bill has been prepared and will be introduced at the coming session of the Legislature to divide Steuben into two counties. The new one is to be called Lincoln, and it will include Corning, Canisteo and the south towns.

Killed by a Fall from a Loft.

NORWICH, Conn., Nov. 28.—Miss Mary R. Fitts, aged 66, sister of State Referee John D. Fark, accidentally fell from the loft of a barn on the old Park Homestead, Preston, striking upon her temple and crushing in her skull. She died instantly.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

—Bridgeport, Conn., is to have a $355,000 hotel.

—Eighteen miners were killed by a cave-in at the Borda Mine at Pachuca, Mexico.

—The Rev. Mr. McCree, the celebrated Baptist temperance reformer, is dead in London.

—Michael Fritz, a veteran of the war of 1812, is dead in Friedensburg, Pa., at the age of 96.

—In the past week 40,000 barrels of 1892 whiskey have been sold at Louisville to New York houses.

—Gen. Setelli, who, as a novelist, wrote under the nom de plume of "Paul Delucca," is dead in Paris.

—Aaron Belden, who had been town gunner of New Haven since 1834, died there yesterday, aged 80.

—The trustees of Ballston, N. Y., have offered a reward of $500 for the detection of the incendiary who has been operating there.

—William C. Dean, of Friendship, N. Y., has been sued for $30,000 damages for alienating the affections of Hotelkeeper Smith's wife.

—Over 1,000 cases of typhoid fever developed in St. Louis last week. Very few have proved fatal. Physicians claim that the germs are in the water.

—Francis Lingo, the central figure in one of the most remarkable murder cases ever tried in the courts of New Jersey, is now a dime museum freak.

—Burglars in East Worcester, N. Y., stole a large quantity of clothing, shoes and cutlery from two different stores and $175 worth of stamps from the postoffice.

—The adopted daughter of Charles Pepler of Bridgeport, Conn., has mysteriously disappeared. Pepler's wife was jealous of the girl and is suspected of abducting her.

PICKWICK'S OLD INN.

It Will Be Reproduced at the World's Fair.

The "Great White Horse" to Be One of the Features of the English Exhibit—Wealthy Britons Interested in the Enterprise.

Of the many interesting features of the world's fair, one of the most promising is the reproduction of the great White Horse inn of Ipswich, England. This inn is to be made the home of English visitors to the fair, and in case the prince of Wales shall visit Chicago he will be furnished special entertainment at the inn. This structure, so fully described in connection with the experiences of the Pickwick club as set forth by Dickens, is still standing, and many of the members of the board of directors who yearly visit England and the continent are familiar with the famous hostelry.

Many prominent citizens of Chicago are interested in this reproduction of the famous inn. They have partaken of its hospitality, and are more than gratified to be able to reproduce the historic structure. Englishmen and members of Pickwick clubs, the latter abounding throughout the United Kingdom, are expected to make their headquarters in the building. It is proposed by the projectors to make the inn of particular interest to wealthy English people. Among other things it is proposed that a register be kept for the benefit of English guests stopping in the city, showing their address, and the length of time they expect to remain and caring for the mail of English visitors who may wish to make the inn their headquarters. The inn will be located at the south end of Jackson park.

The site is picturesque and the building will be in harmony with its surroundings. It will be one hundred feet square, two full stories in height, with large slanting roofs. The first floor will be used for general restaurant purposes. The second floor, which will be reached by easy stairways, will be divided into private dining-rooms and banquet halls. There will be also toilet rooms, a ladies' parlor and a smoking-room, where guests may use the stationery of the house for correspondence, and where newspapers and periodicals of this country and Great Britain will be kept on file.

THE WHITE HORSE INN.

The open court, fifty feet square, in the center of the building, will have no roof. The surrounding structure will be high enough to keep out the sunlight, and persons may enjoy on the ground floor the privilege of smoking and drinking, as is customary in England.

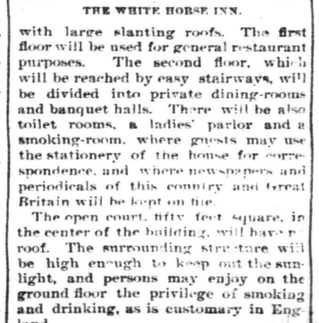
While there will be no bar in the building, the English barmaid will be in attendance as a waiter in the restaurants. The second floor of the structure will be devoted largely to banquet halls, and the one denominated "The Great White Horse" will be suitably ornamented with a statue of Pickwick. The horse which Dickens described as a "stone statue of some rampatious animal with flowing mane and tail, distinctly resembling an insane cart horse, which is elevated above the principal door," will be reproduced.

New so-called remedies spring up every day like mushrooms; but the people still cling to Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

For cure of rheumatism, neuralgia, cuts, sprains, burns, stings, chilblains, sciatica, and lumbago, use Salvation Oil.

Oh, What a Cough!

Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease, Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50c., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves croup and whooping cough at once. Mothers, do not be without it. For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by A. D. Mallinson, 65 North Ave., opposite railroad station. 5-16-y



It cures Colds, Coughs, Sore Throat, Croup, Influenza, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis and Asthma. A certain cure for Consumption in first stages, and a sure relief in advanced stages. Use at once. You will see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Sold by dealers everywhere. Large bottles 50 cents and $1.00.

QUEER CHINESE GAMES.

Fan-Tan, Pool and Lottery in Great Favor.

How the Games Are Played—A Chinese Pool Room and Its Habitues—How Lottery Winners Lose — The Game of Fan-Tan.

[Special Los Angeles (Cal.) Letter.]

On the opposite side of the plaza, facing the old cathedral, and where the aristocracy dwelt in the days of Mexican rule, is "Chinatown." The crumbling adobe houses where the dark-eyed senoritas and gay cavaliers made merry are now used as opium dens, and even for baser purposes. The Chinese quarter has a population of about 2,000, only about 200 being women. It requires ten lotteries and about twenty-five gaming houses to meet the demands of these inveterate gamesters. Fan-tan, the lottery and pool are the principal games. Fan-tan is the "gentleman's game," answering to our great American game of faro. The dealer empties from a bowl a large pile of Chinese checkers, or buttons, in the center of a large square table, around which are seated and stand the betters. There are four croupiers, each of whom rakes to his corner of the table a pile of the checkers. At each corner of the table a space of about four inches is marked off, into which the checkers are brought.

Then the spectators begin betting whether there is an odd or even number of checkers in a particular corner. After all bets are made, the checkers are told off two at each time until there remains either two or one—odd or even. As the pile decreases the excitement increases, and the confusion seems to the uninitiated to be the beginning of a riot. To a Caucasian this seems a long way round, very slow and very tame, but to the Chinese it is as exciting as is faro to the American. A person can bet on the odd or even number appearing at one corner, two, three, or four corners, and is paid in proportion to the chances. This is their national game, and the "bloods" often bet $50 or $100. A percentage, or commission, is charged for each game, according to the amount of the stakes, as in the American games of rondo and pool.

Chinese pool is a combination of pool and roulette. After going through a dark alleyway a dark room is entered; a sleepy Chinaman at the door admits the visitor. As soon as the smoke lifts, or the eyes become accustomed to the mass of mist which overhangs the dingy room, the visitor sees a "congress of all nations"—several types of the American, the young clerk, the loafer, the "hobo," the hoodlum, the bunko-steerer, and the tourist seeing the sights; also various types of the negro—the waiter in his check suit, the "sport" from "Nigger alley," with black slouch hat and braggadocia air; also the corresponding types of Mexicans, and Chinese of all degrees and conditions. Around an old billiard table which has seen much bad use, stand this mass of motley humanity — the Caucasian leaning against the darky from Nigger alley, and the Chinaman exchanging the cigarette of peace with the Mexican from "Sonoratown"—the Mexican quarter of the city. At the head of the billiard table stands the gamekeeper with a box of tickets—each about an inch in length, upon which is written Chinese characters.

A check costs ten cents and entitles the player to three shots. About the center of the table, jutting out from the head, is a board about two feet square, sloping downward. On this inclined board are twenty-five holes, scooped out large enough to hold a billiard ball. At the bottom of each hole is painted a number, ranging from one to twenty-five—the highest numbers generally adjoining the lowest. The player stands at the side of the dealer, and shoots the billiard ball to the opposite end of the table; it rebounds and rolls upon the incline, rolls around slowly as if hesitating which hole to take. During this trying moment the excitement is intense, and the noise deafening, until finally the ball hovers over a large number and settles upon a smaller one adjoining. And then everyone laughs and jeers, excepting the player. There are usually from ten to fifteen players, and usually some one wins the pot before the fifteenth man gets a shot. The highest number made of course wins.

When there are less than ten players the gamekeeper takes ten cents out of the stakes, which is one dollar or less; more than ten, he takes twenty cents. As it takes only from five to ten minutes to sell the tickets and play a game, this is rather good percentage. In three hours ten players would be "broke," and the gamekeeper would have all of their money.

There are ten lottery games in the Chinese quarters, which has about three thousand inhabitants. Each lottery has two drawings daily—afternoon and evening. The tickets are about four and a half inches square, each containing eighty Chinese characters, marked in green on thin light brown paper. At the front window of a combination store sat a benevolent-looking Chinese looking over the returns of the last drawing. I laid down ten cents and asked for a "ticket for to-night."

As I come "properly introduced" the ticket was issued without question. He handed me a marking brush, and I marked out ten of the eighty characters. These are the numbers I wanted to win. He marked out the same characters on another ticket, which duplicate he kept as a check against fraud.

The drawing is conducted by placing in a bowl eighty characters corresponding to those printed on the ticket. Twenty of these characters are drawn out, and are the winning numbers. As there are eighty characters on the ticket, the percentage would seem to be largely in favor of the game to begin with; but the player must have guessed five of the twenty drawn out in order to win twenty cents; six numbers wins $3; seven numbers, $11.50; eight numbers, $80; nine numbers, $177; ten numbers, $375; less the commission of ten per cent. which is deducted from all prizes over $5. There are numerous combinations, as in other games, and the pur chaser can mark out as few or as many characters as he wishes, and the prizes are about in the same proportion to the above, according to the risk. But the ordinary way is marking out ten numbers, at from ten cents to $1 a ticket. The ticket bears the name of the company selling it, printed in large red letters: "Wing Lee Yuen; night time." On the side of the ticket the seller marks the date of the drawing, as he sells it. The drawings are conducted in secret—which is another advantage in favor of the dealers. Eighty characters, similar to those printed upon the ticket, are placed in a large vessel, and, after being thoroughly mixed, twenty are drawn out. These are the winning characters.

These twenty winning characters are then painted out with red ink. The "returns" for winning numbers are posted up for the inspection of patrons. The purchaser compares his ticket with the ten numbers marked out, with the official returns, and he is paid in proportion to the number of characters he has guessed.

Ticket selling stops twenty minutes before each drawing, so as to allow the agencies time in which to make their returns to the main office. This gives the proprietors an opportunity of making a "rough estimate" of the run on particular characters, and they will thus know which ones not to take out of the bowl as winners. This is the reverse of not placing winning numbers in the American lottery wheel. Agents peddle tickets throughout the city, visiting places apparently seeking work. The ticket is made payable to the agent, which fact the innocent purchaser does not know, and should he, by chance win, he is somewhat surprised and mystified to learn, on calling at the office, that the peripatetic agent has drawn his money with the duplicate. So, the winner frequently loses.

J. M. SCANLAND.

He Was a Stout Pedestrian.

One morning in Glenorchy Prof. Wilson ("Christopher North") started out early to fish in Loch Tolla. Its nearest point was thirteen miles from his lodging. On reaching it and unscrewing the butt end of his fishing rod to get the top he found he had forgotten it. Nothing daunted, he walked back, breakfasted, made his rod complete and walked again to Loch Tolla. All the long summer day he fished, and after sunset started for home with a full basket. Feeling somewhat fatigued and passing a familiar farmhouse he stopped to ask for food. It was near midnight and he routed the family from bed. The mistress brought him a full bottle of whisky and a can of milk. He poured half the whisky into half the milk and drank it off at a draught. While his hostess was still staring in amazement he poured the remaining milk and whisky together and finished the mixture. He then proceeded homeward, having performed a journey of over fifty-two miles. — Manchester Times.

Can't Live Without Cooks.

On a celebrated occasion in Vienna, when there was much excitement in all the European courts over affairs of international moment, the French ambassador was suddenly recalled by his government. "It is a very grave affair, is it not?" Prince Metternich was asked by a lady at a court ball, "this recall of the ambassador?" "Not so grave, I assure you, madame," the prince responded, "as it would have been if it had been the French ambassador's cook who was recalled. The ambassador can easily be replaced, but not his cook."—Argonaut.

A Revolution In Eating

has been brought about by the introduction of COTTOLENE, the new vegetable shortening. The discovery of this product, and the demonstration of its remarkable qualities, has attracted the widest interest. Hitherto the common shortening has been lard, or indifferent butter. Every one has probably suffered occasional discomfort from lard-cooked food; while it is well known that thousands are obliged to abstain entirely from everything of that kind. To such people, COTTOLENE is of peculiar value, widening as it does, the range of what may be eaten and enjoyed. COTTOLENE is a cooking marvel. It combines with the food—imparts to it a tempting color, a delicate flavor, and an appetizing crispness. No trace of greasiness remains to offend the taste, or disturb the digestion.

COTTOLENE is worthy of the careful notice of all those who value good food, of itself or for its hygienic properties.

FRENCH CABINET OUT

Loubet Ministry Overthrown by the Panama Scandal.

EFFORTS TO SHIELD BARON REINACH

A Demand That an Autopsy be Held Upon His Body Precipitated the Defeat—Rumors That the Baron is Not Dead, But Has Fled to Avoid Arrest.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—While the resignation of the Ministry created some excitement, yet such a result had been expected for several days, as it was evident that the Cabinet could not long withstand the furious onslaughts that were being waged against it.

The vote against the government stood 804 to 219.

The favorite candidate to succeed M. Loubet is Henri Brisson, who is still in the prime of life, and has behind him the experience of Vice-President of the Chamber, President of the Chamber, President of the Budget Commission, besides succeeding Jules Ferry in 1883 as Premier.

When the Chamber of Deputies met, M. Brisson, Chairman of the Committee on the Panama Investigation, demanded of the Government that an autopsy be held on the body of the late Baron Reinach.

M. Ricard, Minister of Justice, replied that the law did not permit it. A division was taken as to sustaining M. Ricard, and the Government was defeated.

The resignation of the Ministry was at once announced.

There was a general disposition to exact more information from the Government regarding Reinach, who is supposed to have been the chief beneficiary of alleged Panama mismanagement, and of the vast sums contributed by Frenchmen toward the undertaking.

When questioned by M. Brisson, M. Ricard still showed a purpose to shield the Reinach estate, or at least to give no satisfactory assurance that the estate of the dead baron would be made to disgorge, should guilty complicity be established.

When this became evident a majority of the Chamber declined longer to support the Government.

The French Cabinet which has resigned came into effect on Feb. 28. It was as follows: M. Loubet, President of the Council and Minister of the Interior; M. De Freycinet, Minister of War; M. Ribot, Minister of Foreign Affairs; M. Bourgeoise, Minister of Public Instruction; M. Ricard, Minister of Justice and Public Worship; M. G. Cavaignac, Minister of Marine; M. Develle, Minister of Agriculture; M. Jules Roche, Minister of Commerce; M. Viette, Minister of Public Works.

IS BARON REINACH DEAD?

Said that He Has Fled to Escape Criminal Prosecution.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—The intense popular interest in the Panama canal scandal has been increased by the story of the "Gaulois" that Baron Reinach, the director, who was supposed to have died a few days ago, did not die a natural or unnatural death, but had fled to a foreign country to escape criminal prosecution, and had the report of his death circulated merely to blind those who wished ty expose the details of his connection with the company.

This story has found widespread credence, but is yet to be verified.

ROSS AND M'LUCKIE RETURN.

Missing from Homestead Since They Were Charged With Treason.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 29.—Hugh Ross and ex-Burgess John McLuckie, the Homestead strike leaders, who have been missing since the charges of murder and treason were preferred against them, returned to the city yesterday and surrendered to the sheriff.

They will make application for bail, and, pending a decision, will be compelled to remain in jail.

Ross has been in England, and McLuckie in Youngstown, O.

Bank Wrecker Ostrander's Trial.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 29.—In the trial of Bank Wrecker Ostrander for perjury, the prosecution has so far shown that the prisoner falsified books in order to cover his peculations. On March 30, 1889, $10,000 were taken and the entries appear in Ostrander's handwriting. The present trial for perjury is based upon his false verification to the report of the bank's condition, made on July 1, 1890, in order to conceal peculations of over $325,000.

Second Charge Against Smith Sustained

CINCINNATI, Nov. 29.—The Presbytery, by a vote of 44 to 17, sustained the second charge against Prof. Smith. The specifications were then voted on, one at a time, and all were sustained by a large majority except the last. On this a rising vote was necessary. Doctors Bryan and Roberts voted not to sustain this specification, but it was carried by a small majority. Charge three was next considered.

Georgia and Chicago's Fair.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 29.—An effort will be made by the Legislative committee, which has just returned from Chicago, to have the General Assembly appropriate $50,000 toward making a Georgia exhibit at the World's Fair. Gov. Northen, who was with the party, is strongly in favor of such action.

Sudden Death of a Collegian.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Nov. 29.—J. R. Moss of Carvington, Pa., a student of Eastman College in this city, died here suddenly yesterday. He had been ill with the measles but was pronounced well. He was 20 years old. His sudden death caused a sensation at the college.

Twelve Years for Murderer Adams.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Nov. 29.—In the Superior Court yesterday afternoon, Judge Dewey imposed a sentence of 12 years in State prison on Charles Adams, who pleaded guilty to manslaughter in killing Charles Lussier at Lenoxdale, Jan. 15.

MR. CLEVELAND INJURED

His Thumb Caught in the Lock of His Gun and Torn.

EXMORE, Va., Nov. 29.—President-elect Cleveland, Clark Davis, and Mr. Ferrel, president of the Broadwater club, were up by light of day to go duck shooting, but they were met by a drizzling rain, and, as Mr. Cleveland is suffering from a slight cold he returned to the cottage after a few minutes' walk.

About 10 o'clock the rain ceased, and the gunning party once more started for the boat.

Attempting to enter the boat Mr. Cleveland came near falling into the water by its dipping.

After getting under way Mr. Cleveland, in attempting to load his gun, in some way caught his thumb in the lock, badly lacerating it.

This and the constant rocking of the boat seemed to greatly annoy him, and he asked that the boat be headed for the island.

His wishes were complied with, and soon the party were quietly resting in the club house.

Mr. Ferrel, who is somewhat of a surgeon, dressed the wound, which is not a dangerous one.

LITTLE HETTIE IN A HOTEL.

Spirited from Her Home by the Woman Whom She Calls Mother.

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 29.—Little Hettie Peppler has been found. Yesterday her father went to Hartford, where she had been left at the Pratt street hotel last Friday, and brought her home.

When asked who left her there she said "Mamma." Mrs. Keppler at first protested her innocence, and said she did not remember what she did Friday, claiming that she had been drugged.

Hettie is an adopted child, and Mrs. Peppler claims that she received a request from a strange woman, who said she was the child's mother, to take her to the depot. She did so, and that was the last she remembers. Hettie's mother was known as Delia Pipam, and her death is reported as occuring in the hospital two years ago.

When confronted with the child's statement the only remark Mrs. Peppler would make was, "If the child says so it must be so."

Mrs. Peppler spirited the child away because she was jealous of the 5-year-old girl.

VERNELL REMANDED.

Believed that the British Consul Will Aid in the Prosecution.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—"Captain" Edward J. Vernell, the clever swindler, who has represented himself as T. Aubrey Peart, a young Englishman, now of Fresno, Cal., and son of Chaplain Peart, of Her Majesty's prison, Birmingham, Eng., was again remanded in the Tombs police court yesterday on a charge of swindling.

In the course of his career Vernell came to this country from England and settled in California, where he met young Peart.

From the young man he stole his letters of introduction and worked them with shrewdness in several places. He drew upon the chaplain for money, much to the latter's surprise, as the real son was writing glowing letters of his success.

It is believed that the British Consul will take a hand in the prosecution.

DROWNED IN A DITCH.

Two Residents of Johnstown, N. Y., Meet Death While Driving.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., Nov. 29.—While Cyrus Shultz and Theodore Van Duesen, two residents of the village of Johnstown, were driving from that village to Fonda last night in a single carriage, the carriage was overturned into a deep ditch by the road.

The men were drowned, the carriage holding them under the water. Each leaves a wife and children.

Van Deusen moved to Johnstown from Yonkers about three months ago. He was a builder and contractor.

House Appropriation Committee Meeting

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—A preliminary meeting of the House Committee on Appropriations was held yesterday, ten members being present. The estimates for the Pensions, Fortifications and District of Columbia Appropriation bills were referred to sub-committees and the committee adjourned until Thursday next.

Engineer Killed at Paterson.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 29.—Walter Allee, an engineer in the employ of the "Evening News" Printing and Publishing company, was caught in some unknown manner in the machinery used for operating the presses yesterday afternoon and was instantly killed, his neck having been broken and his face crushed.

Nineteen Counts Against Potter.

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—Judge Putnam sustains 19 counts against Asa P. Potter, ex-president of the Maverick bank, charging him with making false entries in the books. He quashes 11 counts, charging him with making false reports to the Comptroller. Mr. Potter will be tried by jury on Jan. 24.

American Public Health Congress.

CITY OF MEXICO, Nov. 29.—The delegates from the United States and Canada to the American Public Health association have arrived here. The congress convenes this morning. The programme consists of various medical subjects and discussions.

A Miner Burned in His Home.

MILAN, Tenn., Nov. 29.—The residence of Samuel Yates near this city was destroyed by fire early in the morning. Yates perished in the flames. He was a miner, and was reputed to have a large sum of money concealed in the house.

DR. BRIGGS HIT HARD

His Demurrer to the Allegations of Presbytery.

ATTACKED THE HERESY CHARGES.

He Declared That the Indictments Accused Him of Teaching Doctrines Which He Had Repeatedly Disclaimed — An Adjournment Saves His Inquisitors.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—In the Presbyterian heresy trial Dr. Briggs is ahead up to date. His was the victory yesterday, and he owes it to his logic. He led his accusers off into a side issue and confused them with his arguments. He mixed them up so that they failed in their answers. The merits of the case were not touched.

In a demurrer he attacked the two most essential counts in the indictment. In another moment Presbytery would have voted to strike out these two counts, but Colonel McCook saved his committee from total defeat by calling for time.

The issue yesterday was upon the substitution of the new indictment for the old. Dr. Briggs was in his seat beneath Moderator Bliss' chair. The court was assembled in the great auditorium of the Old Scotch Church.

Then began the response of Dr. Briggs to the amended charges. He objected to the amended charges as being insufficient in form and legal effect, and also to the regularity of the proceedings. He stated his objections in clear, concise, compact form.

Dr. Briggs laid bare the legal aspect of the case. But this did not stir up the audience. It was when he reached the evidence and the charges that interest was awakened. He found the indictment was radically changed by the amendments proposed by the committee, and that the evidence proposed as proof of the new charges was also radically changed.

The two counts picked out by Dr. Briggs as a centre of attack are numbered 4 and 7 in the indictment.

They are, respectively, that his address teaches that "many of the Old Testament predictions have been reversed by history, and that the great body of Messianic prediction has not and can not be fulfilled, which is contrary to the essential doctrine of the Holy Scripture and of the Standards of the Church, that God is true, omniscient, and unchangeable," and that "the processes of redemption extend to the world to come in the case of many who die in sin, which is contrary to the essential doctrine of Holy Scripture and the Standards of the Church, that the processes of redemption are limited to this world."

He warmed up in stating his objections to these charges. Not only were they entirely new, but they charged him with teaching doctrines which he had repeatedly and expressly disclaimed.

They were entirely without justification from anything taught in his inaugural address. They misrepresented and misquoted the doctrines of the address. He considered this an offense against Christian courtesy and an imputation on his veracity.

The Court heard these heated words in absolute silence.

The clerical and lay jurors listened with the closest attention as he went on to show how he had disclaimed any such teaching as second probation, or that the prophecies relating to the coming of Christ were not to be fulfilled.

The motion to quash counts 4 and 7 was laid on the table and adjournment taken.

What the committee will do cannot be said. They may muster up courage to stick for the two charges. These charges are the most serious, for they touch the gravest questions at issue in the higher criticism and the new theology, namely, the force of the prophetic writings and the future state of the dead.

The case continues to-day from 2 o'clock to 5 o'clock.

Suicide of a Cigar Manufacturer

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Nov. 29.—William O. Ogden, jr., a cigar manufacturer of this city, committed suicide yesterday at the family home in McDonald avenue, by cutting his throat with a table knife. His wife found him in the bath room with a knife in his hand and after a struggle succeeded in wrenching it from him. He regained possession of it, however, and quickly applied it to his throat.

Testimony Taken in Tom Burns' Case.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 29.—Testimony was taken yesterday in the case of Thomas E. Burns vs. the Pittsburg Baseball Club. Burns last season was engaged to play ball, captain and manage the Pittsburg club for a term of three years. The case is to come up in the Chicago courts on the 12th of next month.

Minister Potter Honored.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—A dinner was given Hon. William Potter in honor of his appointment as United States Minister to Italy at the Union League last night. One hundred and seventy-five of Mr. Potter's friends, most of them prominent in Philadelphia politics, were present.

Homesickness Made Her Insane.

TAMAQUA, Pa., Nov. 29.—Homesickness has made Miss Maud McFaddeu insane. For three months she was a governess in a family in Lancaster and constant longing for home upset her reason. She is now at home but recognizes no one of her family.

Well Known Shirt Manufacturer Dead.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Nov. 29.—Cornelius N. Finch died yesterday, aged 47 years. He was a member of the firm of Downs & Finch, the largest shirtmakers in the country, which failed three years ago. He had been sick only a week.

ROTHSCHILD'S PLAN.

He Submits a Silver Scheme to the Monetary Conference.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 29.—In the International Monetary Conference, Mr. Alfred de Rothschild, of the English delegation, proposed that the powers engaged in the Conference should form an association having for its object the collective purchase annually of five million pounds sterling, equal to one hundred and twenty-five millions of francs, of silver, this to continue for a maximum period of five years, under the express condition that the government of the United States should continue its monthly purchase of silver, similar to the purchases heretofore made by said government equal to about fifty million ounces of silver.

Also, that the collective purchases of the powers should be suspended if, in the course of the said five years, silver should reach the price of forty-three pence an ounce, the result desired being to consider how to obtain that rate.

The submission of Mr. Rothschild's plan was preceded by an explanatory memorandum, quoting his correspondence with the Governor of the Bank of England. In this correspondence the Governor says that he is always opposed on principle to bimetallism and that Mr. Rothschild's plan is merely a momentary palliative of the crisis which the fall in silver has provoked.

The Governor adds that nevertheless this expression of opinion is merely personal.

All other British delegates, except Bertram Currie, are known to approve the plan proposed by Mr. Rothschild, and it is now confirmed that Mr. Rothschild and the American delegates are working together.

HALLINGER MUST HANG.

The United States Supreme Court Affirms the Judge's Sentence.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—By a decision of the United States Supreme Court, Edward W. Hallinger, under sentence of death in the Hudson county, New Jersey, jail, will be hanged unless executive clemency is granted.

Hallinger was charged with murder and confessed the crime, leaving the court to adjudge the degree of his offense and to pronounce sentence. The court adjudged him guilty of murder in the first degree and sentenced him to death. This was in accordance with the New Jersey law.

The case was taken to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of New Jersey on an application for a writ of habeas corpus, and this court denied the writ. An appeal was then taken to the Federal Supreme Court, the ground for the appeal being that Hallinger had been deprived of life and liberty without due process of law contrary to the Fourteenth amendment in that no jury had acted on the case.

THE BIG WHEAT BLOCKADE.

Over a Million Bushels Stored Throughout South Dakota.

HURON, S. D., Nov. 29.—Chairman Rice of the State Railway Commission has gone to the southern part of the State to secure, if possible, a break in the wheat blockade.

He estimates that over a million bushels of wheat are stored in warehouses and elevators on various lines of road in South Dakota. The commission is deluged with complaints of insufficiency of cars, but are powerless to give relief.

The present blockade is worse than that experienced last November, and is likely to continue until the middle of February.

Buyers have given notice to farmers not to haul grain to market as it could not be received.

NINE YEARS FOR GARVIN.

Surprise Over the Sentence, as the Jury Had Recommended Leniency.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 29.—Frank Garvin, the newspaper artist who murdered his wife, Cora Redpath Garvin, on account of her supposed infidelity, was sentenced to nine years in the penitentiary.

Garvin's friends were surprised at the sentence, as the jury recommended the utmost leniency to the court.

Non-union Men Discharged.

HOMESTEAD, Nov. 29.—One hundred non-union workmen left the Carnegie mills yesterday in a body. It is presumed that they were discharged. The mill officials refuse to make any statement concerning them. This removal will make an opening for the employment of a corresponding number of men from the ranks of the strikers.

Whitney Knows Nothing of a Call.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Hon. William C. Whitney stated positively last night that he knew nothing of any call for a meeting of representative Democrats to be held in this city or elsewhere to arrange any plan of regulating the action of the Democratic party in the incoming administration.

Denounced as a Swindler.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—The officers of the University of Illinois deny any knowledge of the advertisements signed by Prof. Van Augelbach, which were alleged to have been printed in London, offering for sale degrees in the university. They do not know Angelbach, and say he is a swindler.

Post Gets Ten Years.

ALBANY, Nov. 29.—George W. Post, Bunco O'Brien's confederate, was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment in Dannemora. He was convicted of robbery in the first degree for buncoing John M. Peck of this city out of $10,000.

Debut of a Governor's Daughter.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 2.—Governor and Mrs. Pattison have issued invitations for a reception at the Executive Mansion on Thursday, Dec. 8. Miss Pattison will make her formal debut into society.

Coin Clerk Montieu's Theft.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 29.—Seven million silver dollars in the Sub-Treasury here are being counted in order to determine the amount embezzled by Coin Clerk Montieu.

To Succeed Rear Admiral Brown.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Commodore Skerratt, of the Washington navy yard, succeeds Rear Admiral Brown in command of the Pacific squadron January 1.

Stableman and Horses Perished.

BRADFORD, Pa., Nov. 29.—Fire destroyed two barns on Congress street. The stableman, Albert Arnold, and four horses perished in the flames.

THE HEIRS ALARMED

Crouse's Relatives Worrying Over His Alleged Wife.

ANOTHER POSSIBLE CONTESTANT.

Mrs. Ledlie, of Utica, a Cousin of the Dead Millionaire, the Latest—Claimed That Proof Exists That Crouse Was Married to Grace Wilson.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 29.—The mysterious "Bertha," who began to figure here a couple of days ago as a claimant, in behalf of her child, for the vast estate left by D. Edgar Crouse, has been partly identified as Grace Wilson, and certain people here are said to be in possession of indisputable proof of her marriage to the deceased millionaire.

All that is known as to her residence is that it is somewhere in New York. She has retained Howe & Hummel to look after the interests of herself and child, and it was they who telegraphed here for a copy of the will on the day of the funeral.

It is said that she appeared at the Crouse homestead on the day of the funeral, but was turned away.

Thus she has some sort of claim there can be no doubt, and the 19 relatives who believed that they had suddenly become rich are greatly alarmed over the probability that she will dispute their claims.

It is learned from a former coachman of Mr. Crouse that the millionaire frequently met this woman at Saratoga. He regarded them, he says, as husband and wife.

Miss Wilson is described as an exceedingly attractive woman, and as coming from a good family. She was first seen here about 10 years ago. She came from Chicago, and, after a short stay, went on to New York, where she lived at the Rockingham flats.

Another possible contestant has sprung up in the person of Mrs. Kate Crouse Ledlie, of Utica, a cousin of D. Edgar Crouse, who claims that she is the legally adopted daughter of his father, John J. Crouse.

GREGGAINS-COSTELLO MILL.

After 80 Rounds the Referee Decided It "No Contest."

CONEY ISLAND, Nov. 29.—The fight between Costello and Greggains last night at the Coney Island Athletic club was one of the longest and most stubbornly contested battles on record. At the end of the 80th round the referee decided "no contest," and ordered the purse to be divided.

Both men were in good condition at the close, and could have fought for an hour longer.

The preliminary bout was between McBride and Donovan, and was won by the former in the fifth round.

HENRY S. IVES MARRIED.

The Once "Young Napoleon of Finance" Wedded at Lockport.

New York, Nov. 29.—Henry S. Ives, the "young Napoleon of finance," who began business with nothing in 1886 and failed in 1887, as he reported at the time, "with liabilities $20,000,000, assets $21,000,000," was married in Lockport a week ago yesterday to Miss Helen Gertrude Sears, of that place. She is the daughter of Roland Sears.

It is said that he was engaged to marry the young woman before he made the grand smash in 1887.

The news of the marriage reached New York last night. Even Ives' most intimate friends knew nothing of the affair before.

COMET SCARES.

A Miser Gives His Money Away and a Woman Goes Insane.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Nov. 29.—The expected coming of the comet produced quite a scare hereabouts. A miserly farmer named Andrews gave all his money to his family to spend. Now he is about crazy owing to the failure of the comet to destroy the errth.

The wife of a farmer named Strubel went crazy in a religious way, and a negro boy, in the tunnel district of this city, was frightened by a gang of hoodlums into a chattering idiot.

The Delong Murder Trial.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Nov. 29.—The testimony in the Delong murder trial is nearly all in. The defense has been submitting expert medical testimony to the effect that, assuming a certain hypothetical group of conditions to be true, Mrs. Delong was insane when she killed her husband. The State called medical experts in mental diseases to prove that the conduct of the prisoner in the past did not indicate insanity.

Big Four Telegraphers May Strike.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 29.—The matters at issue between the Big Four railway system and its despatchers and operators will probably reach a crisis the latter part of this week. Recently the operators became restless because of the failure of the company's officials to respond to their demands for increased pay, presented some time ago, and rumors are afloat of a determination to strike.

No Clue to His Assailants.

BUFFALO, Nov. 29. — Bartholomew Shanahan, 40 years of age, is dead at the General Hospital from wounds received in a street brawl in the Seventh precinct on Nov. 13. There is no clue to his assailants.

To Simplify Voting.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 29.—To simplify voting at the polls with the new ballot, Pittsburg Republicans will nominate all city candidates at one convention instead of three as is customary.

Freight Agent Killed.

CANAJOHARIE, N. Y., Nov. 29.—Leonard W. Vosburgh, the Central Hudson freight agent here, was killed during the morning by a gravel train.

Hydrophobia Patients.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The hydrophobia patients from Danville, Va., have arrived at Dr. Gibier's Pasteur Institute for treatment.

Coal Combine Investigation.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Nothing new was brought out at the Congressional investigation of the coal combine yesterday.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, Managing Editor.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

Forecast Till 8 P. M. Wednesday: For New Jersey, Fair To-Night and To-Morrow; Northerly Winds. High on the Coast; Fair Thursday.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Musin seats now on sale.

—A donation party will be held at the residence of Israel Coon, Union Village, to-morrow evening.

—You can buy the genuine Philadelphia scrapple only at J. W. VanSickle's market 10 North avenue.

—To-morrow evening will be given the third of the Ragan course, at Music Hall. It will be the most interesting of all.

—A burst in the North avenue sewer pipe flooded the basement of the Chinese laundry next to Roberts's stables this noon.

—A fair for the benefit of the Children's Home of this city will be held at 46 East Second street, to-morrow afternoon and evening from 4 to 10. The patronage of all interested in that charity is solicited.

—A number of seats have been sold to New York people for the Musin concert here Thursday evening. It is feared that Mr. Musin and his company may not appear in New York before their departure around the world.

—Elm street is one of the oldest thoroughfares in town, yet it has never been properly flagged. Residents of the neighborhood criticize the councilmen of the district for not making improvements. Councilman Bird lives on the street, and councilman See only two blocks away.

—The old Rappelyea homestead, two miles from New Brunswick, was destroyed by fire Sunday night. The homestead was built in 1769. The building was of oak and the foundation stones were hauled from the Raritan river. A yoke of oxen could be driven through the hall, it was so wide.

—Edsall says he is trying hard to increase his trade this season to double of that of last season. In order to do this he has put in the largest assortment of new and beautiful souvenirs suitable for the holidays he has ever shown. The prices are lower than ever. See his new advertisement in THE PRESS to-day.

—The seven-year-old son of Henry Ruck, sexton of the M. E. church at Summit, and his fourteen-year-old sister, while passing a wood on Florida avenue in Summit, Sunday, were both shot by some unknown person. A quantity of bird shot entered the boy's face, completely blinding his left eye, and the girl was shot in the leg.

—Mr. Lusardi, the popular North avenue fruit dealer, gave striking proof of his honesty to-day. Arthur Stryker lost a pocket-book containing more than $100. Mr. Lusardi found it lying in his store, where it had been dropped, and the owner was rejoiced at Lusardi's voluntary restoration. Mr. Stryker wants to thank Mr. Lusardi thus publicly through THE PRESS.

—As was to be expected, the Courier valiantly takes up the cudgel for John W. Murray. It has to fight for the ring and all its supporters, whether it wants to or not. But as was further to be expected it has not a word to say for the nominee on the city ticket who is fighting the ring and who only by a close shave defeated the ring candidate for nomination. That nominee already knows of several sources of treachery. He need not be surprised to find more treachery at the hands of the ring organ.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mr. and Mrs Charles VanWinkle, of Brooklyn, will to-morrow move to this city, where they will live in the future.

The genial Freddy Jones will be missed hereafter from the Crescent League clubhouse. He severed his connection to-day.

Mrs. Eldridge Springmann and daughter, of Tottenville, N. Y., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. William W. Springmann, of Somerset street, North Plainfield.

Augustus Trust, Douglas Darby, Daniel Terry and John Darby, left to-day for the banks of the Rappahonnock, in Virginia, where they will enjoy ten days of sport.

Miss Delano, teacher of the Junior class of the High school, is ill with intermittent fever. Her place is being temporarily filled by Miss Morton, a former teacher in the school.

Shuttleworth Adair, familiarly known as "Shed", is dead. He had for many years been a resident of Scotch Plains, and lived opposite the old school-house near D. P. Hall's. The funeral will be to-morrow.

Tableaux "representing the back numbers of the Century" will be given by the King's Daughters of the Holy Cross church, Thursday evening at 8, in the Holy Cross chapel, for charitable purposes. Those taking part will be Miss Anna Murphy, Mrs. W. L. Saunders, Miss Kate Miller, Miss B. Miller, Miss Colton, Miss Long, Miss Woltman, Miss Helen Hasbrouck, pianist, Rosie Woltman, Louise Saunders, George Taggart, Carl Brown, Austin Davett, and Arthur Murphy.

'Twill be Plainfield's Greatest Improvement in Many Years.

The joint commission appointed by the city of Plainfield and the borough of North Plainfield to lay out and open Madison avenue to connect with Duer street, has practically completed its work. The final details are now being arranged in view of submitting a report at an early day. The opening of this new thoroughfare between the city and the borough, will be the most important street improvement accomplished here for many years.

I have been troubled with catarrh for 10 years and have tried a number of remedies, but got no relief until I purchased a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. I consider it the most reliable preparation for catarrh and cold in the head.—George E. Crandall, P. M., Quonochawtaug, Rhode Island.

PEACE STREET OPEN.

AT LAST THE "NORTH BROADWAY" PROJECT SUCCEEDS.

At a Joint Session of All the Authorities, the New Thoroughfare Is Officially Declared Open, and the Work of Tearing Down Buildings in the Way Will Now Be Begun.

The North Plainfield township committee and Plainfield common council met in joint secret session last Friday night, together with the commissioners in the Peace street project.

It was reported that all difficulties in the way, all differences between land owners and commissioners in the matter of benefits and damages, had been adjusted. The revised list of assessments was accepted, and the new thoroughfare was officially declared open.

Work will now be begun on tearing down the buildings in the line of the new street, and very soon North Broadway will be an assured fact.

The matter of widening the present Peace street is not yet consummated, but gives promise of speedy solution.

The two councils formally ordered the new street laid out, which will be done as soon as possible.

To the Music Lovers of Plainfield.

In presenting Ovide Musin and his company at Music Hall, Thursday evening, I can say with a good degree of modesty, that in the past ten years there has not been such a combination of artists gathered in one company to support a star; and it is thoroughly believed that those who listen to this coming concert will fully agree with me and say that the facts which I have stated about the company, have not been overestimated in regard to the true merits of each artist.

We are always particular in selecting the supporting artists because we wish to settle the fact that the Ovide Musin company is far superior to all other similar organizations and that the confidence of our patrons in the superiority of this company over all others cannot be changed by the solicitation of any would-be rival who is anxious to place his company under the same auspices, and that the standard of this company will always be kept up. Wherever this company has appeared in the past few seasons it has been acknowledged by both press and public as being the finest company of musical artists concertizing in America.

I could eulogize each artist in regard to their respective merits, but, not wishing to bore the readers of this column I deem it unnecessary to say more.

That Illegal Sewer Connection.

Dr. J. H. Carman, of the North Plainfield board of health, this morning stated that the board had not yet fully completed its investigation of the Groendyke matter and had nothing to say officially concerning it. He said that the matter in its present state might be considered as savoring of persecution, but added that in justice to all parties the board would make a full statement of the case when the investigation had been concluded.

A $3,000 Truck and Two New Alarm Boxes.

The committee on fire and buildings of the common council have decided to order a Hayes aerial fire truck, equipped with a 65-foot extension ladder and all other of the latest appurtenances and fixings of a first-class truck. It will cost about $3,000.

Two new fire-alarm boxes are also to be ordered. One at the corner of either Fifth or Sixth street and Franklin place, and the other at West Front and Albert streets.

Seeking to Restrain the Male Heirs.

The heirs of Job Male, who died some time ago at Plainfield, are charged with a desire to locate a mortgage on some part of the estate, and yesterday the administrators and receivers applied to Chancellor McGill for an order restraining them from taking any action in that direction until the final order of the court is filed and accepted. The Chancellor appointed Frederick Adams, of Newark, to take testimony.

Our Sergeant Lynch an Applicant.

(From The New York World.)

The Union County Board of Freeholders will be called upon next Thursday to elect a warden for the county jail, the term of the present warden, Charles W. Dodd, having expired. Among the candidates are Alexander Cummings, of Roselle; John McGrath, of Summit, and Patrick Lynch, of Plainfield. There are a dozen in all.

—Men are being laid off in considerable number at Potter's Press Works, and the balance put on short time. The cause is lack of work.

The Genuine and the Sham.

Every good thing has it hosts of imitators; every genuine article its counterfeits. The imitators always choose the most valuable and popular article to counterfeit, so that when they claim their sham to be equal, or as good, or the same as "So-and-So's," the public may depend upon it that "So-and-So's article is the best of the kind. The sham proves the genuine merit of the thing it copies and never has this been better illustrated than by the imitation of ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS.

ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS is the standard of excellence the world over, and its imitators in their cry that theirs is as "good as ALLCOCK'S" are only emphasizing this fact and admitting ALLCOCK'S to be the acme of perfection, which it is their highest ambition to imitate. The difference between the genuine and these imitations, which copy only general appearance, is as wide as that between copper and gold.

The only safe way for purchasers is to always insist upon having ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS. They are the only perfect plasters produced.

PARK CLUB VS. FANWOOD.

The Presence of the Fair Sex Inspired the Wrong Team.

The third serial game between the Park club of Plainfield and the Fanwood club was bowled on the Fanwood alleys last evening. Notwithstanding the disagreeable weather, a number of Fanwood ladies were present to inspire their favorites, but the inspiration was apparently advantageous to "The Parks"—they being the victors by a large majority. Owing to the tardy arrival of some of the bowlers, the game was divided—the first five men on each side bowling ten full frames, then the others followed. For the first half C. W. Smith of Fanwood umpired, and for the second half Jas. P. McQuaide of Plainfield acted. Fouls were made on both sides; that on the first half by Mr. Beeken, who landed on his side but quickly recovered, not, however, before the lynx-eyed umpire called him down. Of the second half, Heinrich, Darling and Warren were called. After the game refreshments were served and though the Fanwoods were badly defeated, as is usual when these clubs meet, the best of feeling was manifested. The ladies who braved the storm to lend brilliancy to the occasion were Mrs. Bradley, Mrs. George Miller, Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. Gibbs and Bainbridge. The score was as follows:

PARK CLUB.		FANWOOD CLUB.
McQuaide	121	Bradley	112
Thiers	139	Urner	114
Reed	124	Lawrence	137
Mathews	142	Moore	114
Hegeman	152	Beeken	120
Sandford	164	Smith	153
Heinrichs	152	Anderson	145
Brown	154	Miller	112
Worth	166	Warren	144
Darling	138	Stevens	145
	1452		1296

The Park club winning by 156 pins. This makes the third game this season, the Parks having won two. The next game will be bowled two weeks hence at Plainfield.

IDIOTIC JOURNALISM.

What Sort of Water Has The Courier on Its Brain?

The Courier, that organ of the ring which claims to own the colored people of the town, is poking fun at its own subjects. In a half-column of lurid sensationalism it tells how the negroes all flocked to the mountain and took refuge there for a day and a night, "in mortal fear that the comet would blow up all Plainfield". It adds "They held a protracted meeting, expecting every moment that the end would take place"—and lot more stuff in the same strain. The colored people of Plainfield are not the fools the Courier would make them out, and they are resentfully indignant at its falsehoods.

The editor of the Courier is the local correspondent of the notorious New York World, and sent the same fabrication to that paper, where it appeared this morning.

Talks by Messrs. Lenox, Brown and Others.

Considering the severe storm last evening, the meeting of the Temple Builders was fairly well attended in the First Baptist church. This society is composed entirely of young men of the church, and was organized recently, for missionary purposes. Already they are supporting a native preacher in a foreign land.

The meeting last evening was of an exceedingly interesting character. After a short devotional service, Geo. H. Batchelor, the president, announced that the "Empire of China" would be the subject considered, and in a few appropriate remarks mentioned its great stretch of territory, population and needs. R. W. Barnes gave an excellent talk on "The Government of China", full of interesting statistics. D. H. Lenox read a paper on "The Customs of the Chinese", and Chas. Brown an article on "The Religions of China". At the close a short prayer service was held for God's blessing upon the "mission work" in China.

Bowling.

The Casino bowling team of Roselle will go to Fanwood this evening on the 7:44 train, to bowl a friendly game with the Fanwood club. The result of the practice games lately have been very successful in bringing out the bowling talent in the club, and a strong team can be expected before the end of the season, if the members continue to improve in their bowling as they have started out.

The following notice has been posted in the Crescent League club-house: "No. 1 and No. 4 alleys are always open, and can be used while match games are being played, so won't everybody come and bowl?"

The Crescent League teams for to-morrow evening will be:

Tobin,	W. R. Codington,
Emmons,	D. C. Adams,
Ulrich,	Green,
McClurg,	J. A. Smith,
Barnes.	Thos. King, sr.

No match game was bowled on the Crescent League alleys last night.

At the opening tournament game on the Crescent League alleys this evening a large crowd is expected. No smoking or loud talking will be permitted during tournament games.

On the mend—the consumptive who's not bereft of judgment and good sense. He's taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It taken in time and given a fair trial, it will effect a cure. Consumption is Lung-scrofula. For Scrofula, it its myriad forms, and for all Liver, Blood and Lung diseases, the "Discovery" is an unequaled remedy. It's the only guaranteed one. If it doesn't benefit or cure, you get your money back. You only pay for the good you get.

"Discovery" strengthens Weak Lungs, and cures Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, and kindred affections. Don't be fooled into taking something else, said to be "just as good," that the dealer may make a larger profit. There's nothing at all like the "Discovery." It contains no alcohol to inebriate; no syrup or sugar to derange digestion.

As peculiar in its curative effects as in its composition. Equally good for adults or children.

"A God-send is Ely's Cream Balm. I had catarrh for three years. Two or three times a week my nose would bleed. I thought the scrofula would never heal. Your Balm has cured me."—Mrs. M. A. Jackson, Portsmouth, N. H.

A PASTOR'S PROPHECY.

ALL PROTESTANT CHURCHES EVENTUALLY TO COINCIDE.

The Unitarian Church Not a Sect, But a Movement Away From All Sects—In This Respect Its Position Differs as Much From That of Other Protestant Churches as Theirs Differs From That of the Church of Rome—It Has Been Called the Christian Side of Modern Science—Its Cardinal Principle is Faith in the Dignity of Human Nature—Its Name Unitarian a Mere Relic of Old Sectarian Conflicts, Not Chosen by Itself, but Thrust Upon It by Its Opponents—Believes That the Protestant Churches Must and Will Put Religious Truth Upon a Natural Basis, in Place of the Supernatural Basis, Which is Crumbling Away—Already Signs to that Effect—The Unitarian Church but the Forerunner of the Mightier Church of the Future.

THE POSITION OF THE MODERN UNITARIAN CHURCH TOWARDS OTHER CHURCHES.

[Delivered by the Rev. Hobart Clark at All Souls' Church, Sunday Evening, Nov. 27.]

It was said of Abraham, the friend of God, that "By faith when he was called, he obeyed to go out into a place which he was to receive for an inheritance, and he went out not knowing whither he went. By faith he became a sojourner in the land of promise as in a land not his own, dwelling in tents, * * * * for he looked for a city which hath foundations whose builder and maker is God". The same thing is quite true of those men who about a century ago, more or less, first began to be known as Unitarians, in America and England. Like Abraham of old, they had heard the voice of God calling them out of the house of ecclesiastical bondage in which they were born, and they obeyed not knowing just whither they were going, willing to abide for a time in the tents of uncertainty, determined to forsake all man-made superstitions, and to search unceasingly for a city of God built upon the foundation of eternal reality and truth. And so Channing and Lindsey became the first recognized leaders of that broad, liberal movement which is felt to-day in all the churches, but which is openly recognized and organized only in that small but influential fellowship known as the Unitarian church. This movement is of an entirely modern origin, and was from the first filled with the modern spirit, having no connection with, and but little sympathy for, those more or less ancient heresies with which it is sometimes confounded, known as Arianism, Socinianism, and Arminianism. It regards all or most of the questions involved in them as dead issues. It doubtless was in its beginning a new sect, just as Christianity was at the beginning a new sect of Judaism, but it has within the present century outgrown the ecclesiastical and dogmatic limitation of traditional Christianity, just as Christianity outgrew those of Judaism. It has long since ceased to be a sect, and now occupies a position differing as much from that of all other Protestant churches as their position differs from the church of Rome. The name Unitarian is itself a relic which has come down to us from our sectarian days. It was thrust upon us by our opponents, not chosen by ourselves. We shall never repudiate it, but we value it only for the sake of the tender association and heroic traditions connected with the men who first bore it; but Dr. Martineau, among others, while accepting all that it has been made to stand for, has always protested against its continued use by us as misleading to people not of our fellowship. As a church we do not and and never did exist simply for the purpose of denying the doctrine of the Trinity. "Not for the sake of a mere pitiful negation", as it has been called, did our forefathers withdraw or suffer banishment from other churches. The doctrine of the Trinity was only one among many old doctrines which they denied. It was to their opponents the most striking feature in that wider spiritual outlook which they sought and gained, and so it brought them the name which we still are known by, but it was merely incidental after all. It was not because those men had less faith in God, or in man, than their fellow-Christians, that they made these denials; it was not because they had less faith in Jesus Christ; it was because they had more, and felt compelled by reason and conscience to protest against the continued teaching of such doctrines in His name.

The one great point upon which the early Unitarians insisted was "the Dignity of Human Nature;" that was "the burden of Channing's message to his generation", and ever since his time that principle has been to us like "the cloud by day and the pillow of flame by night" which Israel followed from the land of her bondage. Under its guidance we have advaced steadily into a loftier truth, a deeper confidence in humanity as the child of God, and a broader freedom of thought and spirit, until, as one of our eminent observers and thinkers recently said, Unitarianism "has outgrown its old theological limits; and as it was once the liberal side of the old Congregational body" (in America, and the old Presbyterian body in England), "so now it must know itself as the Christian side of the broader scientific movement of our times".

The speaker then dwelt at some length on the relation existing between science and religion, claiming that no conflict was natural or necessary, and that such as existed was due to the narrowness of individuals upon either side. He defined carefully the attitude of the Unitarian church toward modern science and the scientific spirit, and said that "the two great memories of the human soul to-day are superstition on the one hand, and materialism, sometimes disguising itself as Agnosticism, on the other".

What we seek for ourselves and others, he declared, is that wider outlook upon the universe from which men may be able to see the essential Unity, and eternal one-ness of all truth. He continued as follows: I have taken all this time and been thus explicit in stating our position toward modern science and the scientific spirit of the age, because, in the first place, I want you to see that it is not only free, fearless and friendly, but also independent, and, what is more important to us as a church, distinctly religious. And also because it indicates and partly explains our position toward other churches who are not and do not claim to be free in this matter from those limitations imposed upon them by truth in a fixed and final revelation supernaturally given; and also because it shows what I mean by saying that we are not a sect, but the representatives of a movement away from all sects. * * * * Our position toward other churches is in no sense a hostile one on our part. We have the same ends in view, and exist for the same purposes; our motives are essentially the same, and our sources of inspiration are identical with theirs. We differ only in our methods, and those ideas of religion upon which our methods are based. We are striving with success to place the religious life and thought of men upon that natural basis where they belong, and of which the need is becoming daily more and more evident as the old supernatural basis crumbles away; and to which all other Protestant churches must sooner or later be compelled to come. We see signs that they will do so in the work of the higher critics of the Bible; and in the movement known as liberal or progressive Orthodoxy now engaged in fighting battles which we have already won. We recognize the good work in the service of God and man which the other churches have done and are doing. In their conflict with sin, sorrow and irreligion we would be glad to stand beside them if they would allow it. We do so to some extent as it is, and we look to them as friends not as enemies, waiting patiently for their recognition. We say to them, "Brethren, we do not think your faith is wrong in its origin, nor its essential elements; but we are convinced that it is not large enough for this new age in which you live. Ours is not lesser as you seem to think, but really greater than your own". We honor the sincere convictions of every man, but we believe that mental sincerity is as essential as moral sincerity, and that fidelity to God and loyalty to Christ demand that men should be true to their genuine convictions, whether they be popular or unpopular, Orthodox or Heterodox. The speaker concluded as follows: We ask not for unity of belief, but only for the unity of the holy spirit of love, and trust and helpfulness. Feeling sure that the essentials of religion are not creed or ritual, but character and conduct, we work and watch and wait and pray for the coming of that time when the only tests and conditions of Christian fellowship shall be those which Jesus himself proclaimed in the golden rule, the sermon on the mount, and the two great commandments of love to God and man upon which "hang all the law, and the prophets". Like every true follower of His throughout the world, we seek and find a gospel to live by, and to die by, knowing that "above us is Duty, stern daughter of the voice of God, and underneath are the Everlasting Arms". Abraham was right there in a city of the soul "whose builder and maker is God". We do not claim nor imagine ourselves to have reached it yet, but in our pilgrimage we seem to catch glimpses now and then of its shining towers. His promise greets us from afar, and calls us onward "toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Jesus Christ" which we have heard. And yet we are but as "a voice crying in the wilderness".

"A mightier church shall come
And be for all mankind, whose Covenant word shall be the deed of love. Not crede then,
Ame shall be the password through its gates.
Man shall not ask his brother any more
Believeth thou? but loveth thou? till all
Shall answer at God's altar 'Lord, I love',
For Hope may anchor, Faith may steer, but Love,
Great love alone is captain of the Soul."

Shiloh's Cough Cure

This is beyond question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold; a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price, 50c. and $1. If your lungs are sore, chest, or back lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by A. D. Mallinson, 65 North Avenue, opposite railroad station. 5-16-y

To Close Next Week.

The American Institute Fair will close on Saturday evening, December 10, after a success since October which has held satisfied audiences at the exhibition hall on Third avenue, near Sixty-third street, as an amusement which New York appreciates. Open day and evening, with concerts every afternoon and night, and a building extending from avenue to avenue, and full of exhibits, the Institute fair offers good return for the 25 cents asked for admission, and this year's success, as all those that precede it, is well earned.

TELEGRAPH MEN UNEASY

A DELEGATION CALLS ON PRESIDENT MAXWELL OF THE JERSEY CENTRAL.

D. G. Ramsay, Chief of the Telegraphers' Order, Goes with the Committee—Threats of a General Strike of Railroad Men.

A message, saying that a committee of telegraphers would call on President Maxwell of the Jersey Central railroad at 11:30 o'clock this morning, to demand a general increase in wages for the operators of that line, was sent to Mr. Maxwell this morning.

The committee was made up of five members. D. H. Gearheart is chairman. They had invited Chief D. G. Ramsey of the Order of Railway Telegraphers to be present and go with them into the conference with President Maxwell.

Chief Ramsay explains that the operators on the Central allege that they are not paid enough and are not treated right.

The Next Night of Fun at Music Hall.

Brinkley Brothers' "Pleasure Party" will present the musical extravaganza "Our Goblins" at Music Hall on Friday evening next. This is the oldest and one of the best entertainments of the season. It is sort of a romantic and musical fizz, well calculated to cool and refresh tired minds. "Our Goblins" will be presented by a cast of unusual excellence, among the members of which are Mrs. George S. Knight, whom everybody knows, Richard F. Carroll, late of the New York Casino, William Blaisdell, late principal comedian of the Pauline Hall Opera company, Miss Annie Southerland, Miss Clara Lavine and Oscar Girard.

One thing the management desires to say in connection with the presentation; the skit is more coherent than the "Brook", the "Tourists", or all the others of that class. The entertainment includes of all the latest and most popular airs of the day. Certainly such an organization as this, is sufficiently capable to make an evening pass away pleasantly. Seats are now on sale.

A Good Warden, and Will Be Welcomed Back as Plainfield's Chief.

The New York World says that "The candidates for the Union county jail wardenship are so many that there will be quite a scramble for the place, and it may be that their bitter rivalry will result in the retention of the present warden, Charles Dodd, who has made the best official in the place that the jail ever had. Mr. Dodd was for ten years Chief of Police in Plainfield, where he proved a most competent officer, and nothing but his politics would prevent him being his own successor as jail warden. Some of the Democratic freeholders, it is said, are much in favor of making no change, in view of the strife now raging for Warden Dodd's job."

TWO IN ONE FAMILY.

Very Interesting History of Husband and Wife.

Both Have Had a Very Sad and Serious Experience.

But All Is Joy and Brightness in Their Home Now.

Never to our knowledge has the old adage of a silver lining to ever cloud been so wonderfully exemplified as in the home of Mr. James Meehan and his excellent wife Mary.

The facts in the case are so remarkable that we shall give the whole matter in the exact words of the persons interested. It seems that Mr. Meehan, who resides at 57 Granite st., Quincy, Mass., was the first to be suddenly taken sick.

"I was taken sick with liver disease and ulceration of the bowels," he says. "My heart was also effected. I was confined to my bed three months.

"A consultation of physicians was held and I was pronounced incurable.

MR. JAMES MEEHAN.

"After that I stopped taking their remedies and began the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

"Previous to this I could not sleep, my nerves were excitable and spasmodic, my stomach would not bear food, vomiting almost constantly. Soon after beginning this remedy I slept better, and my stomach would bear light food.

"I continued to gain until I could get out. I now work all the time, and feel that Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy saved my life."

It is needless to say that his faithful wife Mary Meehan was profoundly thankful for the unexpected recovery of her husband to health and strength through the wonderful curative virtues of this great medicine, but even in the midst of her great joy, she herself was prostrated by an alarming attack of rheumatism.

"It is only just, and may be of great service to the afflicted," she says, "that I should state publicly my serious trouble and how I was cured.

MRS. MARY MEEHAN.

"I was sorely afflicted with rheumatism for more than six months, and it seemed to effect my whole system, pains and stiffness of muscles and joints to which was added the more acute pains of sciatica.

"It was with the greatest difficulty I could keep about my house. I tried many remedies without relief. Having in mind the great benefit my husband received from the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, I concluded to resort to it. To my great joy it was completely successful and by the use of only three bottles I was entirely cured, and my health has been perfect since."

There is no mistake about it, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is a wonderful medicine and effects some most remarkable and surprising cures. Every sufferer from disease should try it, for the chances are that it will just hit the trouble and restore the long sought health. All druggists keep it for $1 and it is purely vegetable and harmless to use. It is the prescription and discovery of the great specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th st., New York, who can in all cases be consulted free, either if you call or write him a description of your disease.

Salaries of Schoolteachers.

From statistics recently published it appears that the west is more liberally disposed toward teachers than any other section of the country. The average monthly salary paid to public schoolteachers in the United States is $42.43. The lowest sectional average is in the south Atlantic states, beginning with Delaware and ending with Florida. The average there is but $28.11 per month. Next comes the central southern division with an average of $40.59 per month. In the north central division the average is $42.43 per month. In the north Atlantic states it is $48.20 per month, and in the west it is $84.81 per month. The average cost of public education per pupil in the United States is 12.3 cents per day. In the south it is 7.8 per day. In the west it runs up to 21.6 per day.

Origin of the Term "Black Maria."

An old number of Chambers' Journal tells how the term Black Maria came to be applied to police wagons. Maria Lee, a negro woman of gigantic size and prodigious strength, kept a sailors' boarding house in the old north end of Boston during colonial days, and for years aided the watch in quelling disturbances. It is stated that she took to the watchhouse, at one time, three men who were engaged in riotous actions.

THE TOMB OF DARIUS.

Interesting Discoveries Made by Two Frenchmen.

History of the Persian Monarch Whose Defeat Added Glory to the Fame of Alexander the Great and the Macedonians.

A while ago Messrs. C. Babin and F. Houssay, of France, went to Persia to make antiquarian researches. One of the most interesting features of their work, says the New York Sun, was a visit to the tomb of Darius, where they spent a number of days. The tomb is in a condition of fine preservation. It has been described often, although it is visited seldom by tourists. The chief purpose the latest visitors had in view was to ascend to the top of the tomb and photograph the inscriptions that have been translated but had never been photographed.

Every schoolboy knows that Darius had the misfortune to live in the time of Alexander the Great, who took it into his head to put an end to the Persian dynasty and annex the enormous possessions of Darius. So it happened that Darius was the last of the Persian kings, and he had a very short lease of power, for he reigned only four years, beginning in 336 B. C. He deserved a better fate. He was remarkable for his personal beauty and his bravery. It is believed that he was a fine general, but his Persian hordes were no match for the disciplined troops of Macedonia under the command of the greatest military genius of the time.

In the campaigns Alexander made against the ill-fated king Darius brought from 300,000 to 1,000,000 men into the field. In comparison with these enormous forces Alexander's army was ridiculously small, but the soldiers of the Persian monarch were stampeded easily, and Darius was overtaken during the flight of his army and killed by a spear thrust. When Alexander came up he covered the body with his mantle and afterward sent it to Persepolis to be buried in the tombs of the Persian kings. In this respect Darius was more fortunate than Alaxander, for no one knows where the dust of Alexander reposes. Darius is one of the few famous ancients whose last resting place is known to this day. A little outside of the ruins of Persepolis is a chain of mountains which terminates precipitously, with a solid face of rock. Out of this abrupt face of the mountain the tombs of the kings were hewn.

The first thing the French explorers did was to build a scaffold, shown in the picture, to enable them to climb to the top of the facade. Wood is very scarce in that part of Persia, and it was six days before they secured enough to build the scaffold. When they had completed the work about 1,000 Persians flocked to the tomb to see what the foreigners were doing. It was a long time since the tomb of Darius had had so many visitors. Everybody brought provisions and intended to stay until they saw what fate befell the explorers, for they predicted that some terrible accident would happen to them. They told the Frenchmen that they were fools to attempt to study the tomb so curiously, and that they would pay with their lives for the sacrilege. Old men recalled the fact that a Persian once attempted to climb a column at Persepolis and the next day he was dead. The crowd seemed to be much disappointed when their sinister predictions were not realized. The wooden structure, however, was very shaky, and one of the Frenchmen at the top dropped his watch, which was shattered on the rock below. The incident was accepted by the natives as a sign something more sensational would happen.

The scaffold enabled the explorers to reach the top of the tomb, about eighty feet from the ground, and they succeeded in taking excellent photographs of the inscriptions. Like most Persian inscriptions found in southern Persia, they are in three languages. Some of the larger letters are visible from the ground, but the greater part of the inscriptions cannot be seen from below. The inscriptions tell the number of satrapies which were included in the empire of Darius, and sound his greatness and the praises of his royal line.

The illustration gives an excellent idea of the present condition of the tomb of the last of the Persian kings. It is believed that the dust of Darius has never been disturbed, and most of the figures cut in the stone are comparatively perfect, although some of the lettering on the inscriptions is almost obliterated.

Chinese Diplomacy.

In its war with England and France in 1859-60 China was easily conquered and forced into a humiliating peace. The Peking [illegible] of the government, [illegible] the following [illegible] of peace: "As the [illegible] have admitted the [illegible] solicited for [illegible] in his infinite [illegible] has granted their prayer, and moreover has made them a present of a large sum of money (in demnity of war) to enable them to begin anew their life, so that they may not again be driven to murder and rapine."

Status of the Mormon Church.

The Mormons have issued a report from which it appears that the church of the Latter Day Saints has a total membership of over 200,000, distributed over various portions of Utah, Wyoming, Colorado, Arizona and Mexico. At a recent gathering of the polygamous branch of the church, it was decided to dedicate the new temple at Salt Lake City on April 6, 1893. This edifice was commenced forty years ago, and has cost $2,500,000. Financially the Mormon church is in a prosperous condition. In other directions it is falling behind, however; a fact that cannot fail to afford unalloyed pleasure to every lover of morality and true religion.

BLACKWELL'S BULL DURHAM SMOKING TOBACCO.

I'm an old smoker, and have at one time or another tried all the different Smoking Tobaccos, but for a good smoke Bull Durham beats 'em all.

A leading characteristic of Bull Durham has always been the hold which it takes on old and fastidious smokers. What its excellence first secured, its uniformity has always retained, and it is, therefore, to-day as twenty-five years ago, the most popular Smoking Tobacco in the world.

IT WILL BE DELAYED

Mr. Harrison Cannot Complete His Message in Time.

FUNERAL OF REV. DR. SCOTT.

Services Over the Remains of the President's Father-in-Law Will be Held Tomorrow Afternoon—The Body to be Taken to Washington, Pa., for Burial.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Owing to his present affliction the President will be unable to complete his annual message to Congress in time for its submission to that body on the opening day of the session.

The present indications are that he will be precluded from making any progress whatever during the remaining days of the present week. Consequently it is more than probable that the completion of the message will be delayed until the end of next week or the beginning of the week after.

The President will probably send a brief message to Congress Monday next, explaining why the regular message is delayed.

It is learned on good authority that the regular message will be about the same length as that of last year, and will include a complete review of the work of the present administration. It will contain about 15,000 words.

REV. DR. SCOTT.

Death of the President's Father-in-Law—Funeral Arrangements.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Funeral services over the Rev. Dr. John Witherspoon Scott, the venerable father-in-law of the President, who died last evening, will be held in the East room of the White House to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Dr. Hamlin will officiate.

The funeral party will leave this city in the evening for Washington, Pa., where the body will be interred Friday morning as requested by Dr. Scott, beside his wife, who was buried there in 1876, and his son, Captain Horace Scott. The funeral party will return immediately to Washington.

Dr. Scott's illness was of short duration. He went to Indianapolis with the party accompanying Mrs. Harrison's remains. He bore the fatigue of the trip very well and returned to Washington in his usual health. On Nov. 18 he caught cold and was compelled to go to bed and place himself under the doctor's care. At 6 o'clock yesterday morning he held a short conversation with Lieutenant Parker. At 6:30 the family was called to the bedside, as the nurse thought he was passing away. He rallied, but at 3 o'clock he again began to decline and died at 4:10 o'clock.

The President, Mrs. McKee, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Harrison, Lieut. Parker and wife, Russell Scott, his grandson, and Dr. Tounis Hamlin, pastor of the Church of the Covenant, of which Dr. Scott was a member, were at the bedside. John W. Scott, the only surviving son, and Mr. McKee were the only members of the family absent.

The Rev. Dr. John W. Scott, the father-in-law of President Harrison, was born with the century on Jan. 22, 1800, at Hookstown, Beaver county, Pa. His father was a well-to-do resident of that place, and gave to his son a good education.

According to Dr. Scott's own account, he was the wildest boy in the county. He became a minister of the Presbyterian Church, and filled several pulpits acceptably, but in a few years his voice failed, and he was forced to give up his vocation.

After teaching in several schools, among them the Hanover university, Hanover county, Ind., he established the Western Female seminary, Oxford, O. Here was situated Miami university, where Benjamin Harrison received the finishing touches to his education, and became acquainted with his wife.

Vanderbilt Orders a New Yacht.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—W. K. Vanderbilt has given an order to the Messrs. Laird, the Birkenhead shipbuilders, for a 2,000-ton cruising yacht. The new boat is somewhat larger than the Alva, her length over all being something over 300 feet. She will have powerful triple expansion engines, and is expected to make at least 15 knots an hour. It is said that her interior decorations and cabin fittings will surpass those of the Alva.

The Monongahela Miners' Strike.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 30.—The strike of the 6,000 Monongahela river coal miners against a reduction of half a cent per bushel is still unbroken. A prominent coal operator said to-day: "It is hard to tell how long the struggle will last. I judge that not more than 100 miners have accepted the reduction. Owing to the cheap price prevailing in Southern ports, the operators are not in a great hurry to resume."

For a Greater New York.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 30.—There will be a big mass meeting of real estate men and private citizens to discuss consolidation with New York, on Dec. 7. The meeting will be held in the auction room of the Real Estate Exchange. Some of the chief disciples of the doctrine of the union will address the meeting, and it is the intention of the speakers to work up a tremendous sentiment in its favor.

Bishop Kenrickx' Clergy Object.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 30.—The Catholic priests of this diocese are almost in open rebellion against the venerable Archbishop Kenrickx because he insists upon appointing as his coadjutor Very Rev. P. P. Brady. The latter is not popular with a majority of the priests, who prefer that the honor should be conferred upon some one higher in the Church cabinet.

Cannot Have His Daughter.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Nov. 30.—Fourteen years ago John Esser, of Newburgh, gave an infant daughter named Lottie in adoption to John Kelso, also of Newburgh. Lottie is now a beautiful girl, and her father wants her back again. Judge Barnard yesterday denied the application.

Collapse of a Livery Stable.

DESTITUTION AT HOMESTEAD.

Families of the Defeated Strikers in Absolute Want.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 30.—Reports from Homestead are that a majority of the families of the defeated strikers are suffering seriously for want of the bare necessities of life. Aid must be forthcoming immediately, as the distressed condition is rapidly becoming more prevalent.

Homestead citizens are rendering every possible assistance, but are entirely unable to meet the fast increasing demands. Last night a citizens' meeting was held in the McKeesport Opera House and a relief organization effected.

James Powers of Chicago, one of the committee sent by Chicago labor organizations to investigate the condition of the Homestead strikers, addressed the meeting. He has been conducting a house to house canvass of Homestead and reports the condition of many of the once prosperous families as pitiable in the extreme.

He says that not over five per cent. of the total number of strikers have secured work and that there is much distress.

A committee to solicit aid for the needy Homesteaders was organized in this city.

REV. BRENSINGER'S TROUBLES.

Committed to Jail in Philadelphia on a Charge of Embezzlement.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 30.—The exchange of the pulpit for the position of pension agent and the organizing of a building association proved disastrous for the Rev. George J. Brensinger, who has been committed to jail by Magistrate McCarty in default of $1,000 bail on a charge of embezzlement preferred by Lawyer Elias H. White, representing sundry members of the Unique Building and Loan association, whose headquarters are at 1,301 Arch street.

The association was organized a year ago by Brensinger, who became its secretary.

The shortage is $1,400.

Ex-Chancellor Williamson Again Stricken

ELIZABETH, N. J., Nov. 30.—Ex-Chancellor Benjamin Williamson was again stricken with paralysis at his home in this city yesterday. Mr. Williamson is over 80 years of age and was slowly recovering from a paralytic stroke suffered some months ago. His recovery now is considered doubtful.

New Jersey State Board of Arbitration.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 30.—Under an act passed by the Legislature last winter creating a State Board of Arbitration, Gov. Abbett has appointed Lewis D. Robertson of Hunterdon, John P. McDonald of Passaic and Patrick F. Doyle Hudson, as commissioners to constitute the board.

To Reduce Puddlers' Wages.

POTTSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 30.—A notice is posted at the works of the Pottstown Iron company that from Dec. 12 the wages of puddlers will be reduced from $3 to $2.75 per ton. In 1866 $6.50 per ton was paid at the works for the same work that they are now to receive $2.75 for.

First Delivery Souvenir Coins.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 30.—It is believed that Senator Turpie will have clear sailing for re-election. J. G. Shanklin and ex-Governor Gray will likely not enter the race.

Zachariah Henry Dead.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 30.—Zachariah Henry, the slayer of five men, died at his home here Saturday. Henry was a bosom friend of Quantrell, the guerilla.

Discouraged With Rainmaking Tests.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Nov. 30.—It is said that the financial backers of Gen. Dyrenforth in his rainmaking experiments are greatly discouraged with the results.

Assaulted by an Unknown Man.

BOSTON, Nov. 30.—Elbridge P. Black, employed at McPhail's piano factory, while coming down stairs at the factory Monday evening, was assaulted from behind by an unknown man, who struck him over the head with a piece of gas pipe, fracturing his skull.

Strike at the Watervliet Arsenal.

TROY, N. Y., Nov. 30.—Seventy-three machinists who were employed in the gun factory plant at the Watervliet Arsenal struck yesterday because two of their number had been discharged when they refused to operate two lathes instead of one.

Coal Prices Unchanged.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—At the meeting of both the Eastern and Western sales agents of the anthracite coal companies it was decided that the prices agreed upon Sept. 1 remain unchanged.

Shipwrecked Sailors in Port.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Nov. 30.—Bark Emma Marr struck on Blonde Rock in the Bay of Fundy last Saturday and sank in an hour. The crew has just arrived here.

LEFT JUST AFTER THE WEDDING.

Mr. Morgan Gets a Divorce from the Daughter of Amelia E. Barr.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Nov. 30.—A divorce has just been granted to Frank B. J. Morgan at Cleveland, O., from Eliza H. Morgan, a daughter of Amelia E. Barr. Mrs. Barr is a writer, and has a pretty home at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson.

The marriage just annulled took place at Cleveland, Dec. 18, 1887.

Fours days later she left her husband, ostensibly to come to Cornwall and induce her mother to remove to Cleveland. She never went back.

The husband wrote and telegraphed his absent wife, and finally came on to Cornwall to urge her to return.

She frankly told him that she preferred her mother to him, and, as her mother objected to going to Cleveland, she would remain with her on the Hudson. This is the husband's story.

No one appeared in court to contest the case.

He and his wife were about 23 years old when they were married. She still resides with her mother at Cornwall.

HOW THEY WRECKED THE BANK.

Trumpbour Takes the Stand in the Ostrander Trial at Kingston.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 30.—To the astonishment of many Matthew T. Trumpbour took the stand on behalf of the people yesterday afternoon and testified in relation to the crime of himself and James E. Ostrander.

He fully and clearly explained the methods adopted by himself and Ostrander to falsify the books and cover up the defalcations that had been going on for several years. The way for covering up the thefts was suggested by Ostrander and then together the scheme was carried on until discovered.

With the damaging testimony already presented there seems no reason to doubt that Ostrander will accompany Trumpbour to prison.

ROSS AND M'LUCKIE BAILED.

The Total Amount for the Latter Fixed at $22,000.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 30.—The application of Hugh Ross and John McLuckie for release on bail was heard before Judges Kennedy and McClung yesterday afternoon. Neither of the prisoners was in court. They were each bailed in the sum of $10,000 on the charge of treason, no objection being made.

The application for the release on bail in the murder case of Hugh Ross was postponed till to-morrow, as the Commonwealth was not ready to argue the matter.

The bail in the murder case of McLuckie was fixed by Judge Magee some time ago at $10,000. This with the bail for treason and riot will make $22,000 bail.

Oliver Murphy and Oliver C. Coon went on the bond and he was released.

Bought by a U. S. Syndicate.

HALIFAX, N. S., Nov. 30.—The reported purchase of the Nova Scotia coal mines by a United States syndicate is confirmed. Horace Whitney, brother of the Hon. W. C. Whitney, is interested in the deal. He confidently expects the removal of the American duty on Canadian soft coal, thus opening the makets of New England to Nova Scotia fuel.

CRASHED INTO THE "FLYER."

A Rear-end Collision on the Shore Line Near Stonington.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 30.—A rear-end collision occurred on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad at 5:30 yesterday afternoon, half a mile from Noank station and five miles from Stonington. It was between the fast express, known as the "Flyer," and a Stonington special fast freight from New London.

Engineer Niles of the freight train was fatally injured. The dining car Thames was destroyed by fire and other cars on the two trains were more or less damaged.

None of the passengers was injured, although several were pretty badly shaken up.

Their Identity a Mystery Still.

HARTFORD, Nov. 30.—Two of the five persons burned in Hubbard's barn at Middletown on Saturday night were supposed to be William Young and his wife. Young has been found in Meriden and says his wife is living. The identity of the remains is therefore still a mystery.

Chewed His Tongue to Pieces.

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 30.—An examination of John Nolan, who died at his home in Cleveland county the other day in terrible agony from hydrophobia, revealed the horrible disclosure that he had chewed his tongue to pieces. He suddenly lost his speech a few days before his death.

The Thomas Iron Works Shut Down.

The Daring Bank Robbery at Allentown, N. J.

CLERKS COWED BY REVOLVERS.

The Thieves Secured $2,000 and Attempted to Escape, but Were Soon Captured—Threats of Lynching Made by the Villagers—The Stolen Money Recovered.

ALLENTOWN, N. J., Nov. 30.—The daring bank robbery at this place yesterday afternoon created the greatest excitement, and the occurrence is still the all-absorbing topic of discussion, even though the robbers were captured and the stolen money recovered.

At 2 o'clock two young men entered the bank, and with drawn revolvers demanded all the cash on hand.

Cashier Hutchinson and an assistant were the only employes of the bank present at the time. A weapon was leveled at the head of each, and one of the robbers backed up this forcible demand with the words: "We'll blow both your heads off if you don't turn up all your stuff at once."

Cashier Hutchinson quickly complied with this request, and handed over about $2,000 which lay on the counter before him.

Then one of the robbers compelled the cashier and the clerk to go to the wall and turn their heads, while the other robber walked backwards out of the door and into the street.

His accomplice quickly followed. In a moment the cashier's courage returned and he and the clerks rushed out into the street after the robbers.

The cashier had grabbed a pistol in the bank which he immediately began firing at the fleeing thieves. The robbers returned the fire and the exchange of the shots and the cries of Hutchinson and the clerks soon aroused the village, and almost immediately a score of persons were in pursuit.

About two squares from the bank the robbers were captured. Threats of lynching were made by the villagers and had the robbers not surrendered quietly they would probably have been very roughly handled.

They gave their names as J. B. Morris and Frederick Smith, and were at once removed to Freehold jail. The money given to them by Cashier Hutchinson was recovered.

A BOY OF 15 HANGED.

Just Before Going to the Scaffold He Asked if It Would Hurt Much.

MACON, Ga., Nov. 30.—The execution of William Bell, the 15-year-old negro boy, convicted of the murder of a deputy sheriff of Bibb county, took place yesterday in the jailyard.

Bell appeared to be indifferent to his fate almost up to the last moment. He said that he was going to heaven.

While being pinioned he repeatedly asked if it would hurt much to be hanged. After leaving the jail the tears flowed freely down his cheeks, and he trembled continually.

The hanging was private, only the sheriff, two assistants, the clergyman, and the relatives of the condemned being admitted. The neck was broken.

Bell was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Wilder on May 29 last on a charge of petty larceny. On the way to the jail he drew a pistol and shot the deputy sheriff through the head.

BRIGGS MEN WIN.

Two of the Counts Ordered Stricken from the Indictment.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Dr. Briggs followed up his advantage yesterday at the great heresy trial, and secured an order to strike from the indictment against him its two most essential counts. The sum of Monday's business was simply to postpone for 24 hours the vote by which this was done.

The end was at hand Monday night, but Col. McCook shrewdly secured delay, and it came last night instead.

To-day the case will proceed with references to the six remaining charges. The temper of the Presbytery is clearly seen by its action yesterday. In all probability these charges will be declared insufficient and the case dismissed.

To Consolidate Big Printing Companies.

BOSTON, Nov. 30.—Paul E. Werner, president of the Werner Printing and Lithographing Company of Akron, O., is now in this city completing details of a business enterprise which will consolidate the Werner Printing Company and the R. S. Heale Company of Chicago. It means a practical absorption of the Heale Company and the organization of one whose works will be located in this city. The capital stock will be $3,500,000.

Jersey City's Water Supply.

JERSEY CITY, Nov. 30.—The Jersey City Board of Trade met last night to consider the new water supply. The idea of awarding so important a contract upon the single bid submitted was condemned, and the Street and Water Commissioners will be asked to advertise for new proposals. Moffatt, Hodkins & Clark, who put the bid, say they will not submit a second one.

The Boiler Exploded.

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 30.—At 5:15 last evening the Japan furnace of the Weld Manufacturing Co., corner of Water street and South avenue, exploded, tearing away the side of the building. Six persons were in the building at the time, but no one was seriously hurt.

Memorial Library Dedicated.

BOSTON, Nov. 30.—The memorial library building erected by Mrs. M. L. Robbins, of Brooklyn, N. Y., in memory of her husband, Eli Robbins, who was a native of the town, was dedicated at Arlington yesterday. The cost of the building is about $150,000.

JERSEY CENTRAL TELEGRAPHERS.

They Present President Maxwell With a Long List of Demands.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—President Maxwell of the New Jersey Central railroad has received the following demands from the telegraph operators of the road:

That eight hours shall constitute a day's work for train despatchers and certain block operators, and twelve hours for all other operators. That extra pay at the regular scale shall be allowed for overtime and Sunday work. That reasons be given for suspensions or dismissals, a hearing permitted, and that if reinstatement follows that pay be given for lost time. That promotions be made accoring to seniority in the service, and that the minimum wages paid be $40 per month.

Smuggler Borst Held.

BUFFALO, Nov. 30.—D. John A. Borst, president of the Richmond Chemical company of Philadelphia, not Montreal as stated, who was arrested at Niagara Falls for smuggling a drug said to be phenacetine, has been held for examination Friday morning. He is in jail in default of bail.

Charged With Stealing Money Letters.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 30.—Thomas E. Burk, manager of the local office of the World Mercantile Agency, was brought before the city court charged with embezzling $200. His case was continued until Dec. 21. Burk has been appropriating money letters and not accounting for the same.

Nicaragua Canal Convention.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 30.—A large number of delegates to the Nicaragua Canal Convention have arrived. They are enthusiastic about the project, and say the canal will bring hither the trade of the Orient and be of incalculable benefit to the United States. The body convenes this afternoon.

Bagley Will Not Plead Guilty.

DAVENPORT, Ia., Nov. 30.—George I. Bagley, it is now believed, will plead not guilty when called to answer the charge of grand larceny by embezzlement of the $100,000 of the United States Express Company. He will make a hard fight on the ground of insanity.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

—Bliss & Koch of Toledo, Ohio, doing business as the Toledo Navigation company, assigned yesterday. Liabilities, $150,000; assets, $98,000.

—The Rev. Judson Swift, pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church in Oswego, N. Y., has been appointed field secretary of the American Tract company.

—Missouri has adopted the constitutional amendment to enable cities to pension disabled firemen and to provide for the widows of deceased firemen.

—Buck Alson is to be hanged to-morrow at St. John's, N. B., although another man has confessed to the crime for which Alson was found guilty.

—In a day or two the work of improving the harbor of Savannah, Ga., which was discontinued in 1891, through lack of funds, will be well under way again.

—Jeffersonville, Ind., is a Gretna Green for elopers, as not less than 500 Kentucky couples get married there yearly. The competition among runners for the magistrates became so keen as to threaten bloodshed, and a number of the runners have been arrested. New Albany may get the business as a result.

Weather Forecast.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 30.—For New England: Generally fair except showers on the coast; northerly gales.

For Eastern New York: Fair; northerly gales diminishing.

For Eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland: Light showers followed by fair weather; northerly winds with gales on the coast.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Don't miss the best of the Ragan course to-night.

—Hear the third of Ragan's illustrated lectures to-night.

—Evening prayer is held at Grace church at 4:30 each day.

—Single tickets for Ragan on sale at the box office this evening.

—That hustler Allen will interest you by his ad in THE PRESS and the goods in his store.

—The W. C. T. U. rooms will be headquarters for an evangelistic meeting to-morrow afternoon at 3:30.

—Extraordinary prices are ruling at the extraordinary sale at VanEmburgh & Son's. Take a look at their bargains.

—That essay on "Successfulness", of the Sherman Outfitting company, in to-day's PRESS, is full of wisdom and makes profitable reading.

—Ely M. Odam captured a 'possum in his back yard at 188 Arlington avenue, yesterday morning. The animal weighed about thirty pounds.

—J. Howard Leggett is receiving orders for a big lot of fresh Huyler's candies especially for Christmas. Hand in your order now. The goods will be made up especially for you.

—"Why are we going to have a cold period which we call winter? Why should we have a warm and a cold period alternately during the year? What is a year, anyhow?" Hear all about it at the Y. M. C. A. to-morrow evening.

—A nut was lost off an axle-end of Collins's stage running between Plainfield and Scotch Plains, last evening, when near Washington street, and the stage could go neither forward nor back. Blacksmith Ed. Flannery came to the rescue and remedied the trouble.

—G. R. Musgrove, the second-hand furniture dealer of Thorn's block, Somerset street, is meeting with such success as an honorable man to deal with, that he is compelled to take a larger store to display his goods. He has moved into the store at 33 Somerset street, formerly occupied by Ryerson.

—It is n't true, the story of the Courier, that sergeant Lynch had a hand bitten by a drunken negro and was in danger of death from blood poisoning. The big man only scraped the skin off his knuckle against a wall. It's an ordinary scratch, and he is n't going to die from it. The life insurance companies are not alarmed. If you see it in the Courier, you can't believe it till it's verified.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

The board of managers of the Plainfield Reform club have decided to offer the presidency of the club for the ensuing year to Charles B. Brown.

Mrs. Sidney Whittemore, of "The Door of Hope", New York city, will deliver an address on "City Missions", in the Congregational church, West Seventh street, Saturday afternoon, Dec. 3, at 1:45. All will be welcome.

P. Casey of this city was a delegate from the Plainfield Council, 244, to the annual convention of the Catholic Benevolent Legion at Jersey City yesterday. He was accompanied by Hugh McDonnell and Charles Schaeffer. All had a fine time.

A poor crippled boy will be the beneficiary of a children's fair, to be held at 110 East Front street, this week Saturday from 3 to 5. Willie Meechutt, Louise Wilbur, Georgie Derby and Lucilla Rockwell are the good-hearted conductors. Tickets will be only 2 cents.

Miss Virginia Dox, of the New West Education commission, will address the meeting at the Congregational church this evening. A tea will be given in her honor at Mrs. M. E. Dwight's, 95 Rockview avenue, to-morrow from 3 till 6 p. m. to which all the ladies of the congregation are invited.

Michael McMahon Bingham, of the Tea & Coffee Growers' association, announced yesterday that James E. Martine had offered him the nomination for mayor on the Democratic ticket. Others announce that James E. Martine did n't intentionally do anything of the sort. However, Mr. Bingham now announces in writing that he has declined.

Miss B. VanCleef, whose home is in Millstone, but who has been one of the leading telephone operators in Jersey City, is now installed as chief operator at the Plainfield "central". She is an expert at answering calls promptly, and making connections with lightning rapidity, and her courteous manners and gentle voice make telephoning a pleasure. She is quite a belle as well, and has already set many a stern heart to fluttering.

CRESCENTS LEAD.

Auspicious Opening of the Journal Trophy Tournament.

Bowling in the opening game of the Elizabeth Journal trophy tournament was begun last evening on the Crescent alleys. Neither team distinguished itself, but the victory was a close shave. The score:

HOW'S THIS FOR FINE WORK?

Plainfield Veterans Put Out a Borough Fire and Save a Woman's Life Half an Hour Before the People Get the Alarm.

Mrs. Ann Waldron, aunt of ex-chief Andrew Carney and of the inimitable John, had a narrow escape from death by fire, this noon. At 1 o'clock she stood at the kitchen sink at her residence, 37 Emily street, cleansing a garment with benzine, naptha, or some equally volatile and inflammable substance. The fire in the range ignited the fumes, causing a loud explosion, and setting fire to the fluid.

Andrew Love, an old Gazelier, and Charles Barry, heard the report and saw the flash. They rushed in and by hard, quick and scientific work put out the fire.

Mrs. Waldron was painfully burnt on the arms, and her hair was singed. The dress she was cleansing was destroyed, and considerable damage was done to the kitchen and furniture.

Half an hour after the excitement was over an alarm was sounded in district 5, on the borough gong. The recall was given soon afterwards.

A GRAND PROGRAMME.

Musin's Farewell in This City To-Morrow Evening, to Be a Most Enjoyable Affair.

The complete programme of to-morrow's concert by Ovide Musin, the violinist, assisted by Annie Louise Tanner-Musin, the American nightingale; Inez Parmater, mezzo soprano; Eduard Scharf, solo pianist, and Pier Delasco, basso, is as follows:

b. Mazurka.....Musin
Ovide Musin.
Trio For Soprano, Mezzo-Soprano and Basso, Normann
Annie Louise Tanner-Musin, Inez Parmater and Pier Delasco.

ANOTHER VICTIM.

The Police Still Chasing the Illegal Liquor Sellers.

James Muldowney was arrested yesterday on two separate charges of selling liquor without a license. Capt. Grant is complainant. The names of the prosecuting witnesses are withheld.

Muldowney pleaded not guilty before judge Codington, and Cornelius Guinee became his bondsman in the sum of $200 on each charge, for his appearance for trial.

SHE WAS WATSON'S SCAPEGOAT.

Will He Do the Manly Thing and Pay Her Fine?

Mrs. Winifred Ferguson, who was convicted by her own testimony of selling liquor without a license, was fined $50 by judge Codington this morning. She is the woman who was expected to convict Watson, but who in shielding him got herself in a scrape. The police think that he should pay his scapegoat's fine. If it is n't paid, to jail she goes, for 20 days.

Friday Evening's Musical Comedy.

The musical extravaganza "Our Goblins", which has been presented from Maine to California consecutively for the past ten years, will be seen at Music Hall Friday evening of this week.

It is seldom that a company visits the city which can boast of so excellent a cast of names, among whom are Mrs. George S. Knight, who everybody knows, Richard Carroll, late of the New York Casino, William Blaisdell, late principal comedian of the Pauline Hall Opera Co., Miss Annie Southerland, Miss Clara Lavine, and Oscar Girard. A serpentine dance is done by "Annabel". "Our Goblins" is one of those interesting absurdities of the "Tourist" and "Troubador" order and is brimful of mirth and provoking situations and song. In a word, it is just the thing for the time. All the scenery used in the production is carried by the company.

These Be Great Talks.

Again this winter there will be given in the Y. M. C. A. rooms a series of practical talks to the young men of Plainfield, by prominent professional and business men of the city. Franklin S. Smith, the science teacher in the High school, will give four talks on the subject "The Elements of the Ancients", which were Earth, Air, Water and Fire. The first of these talks will be given Thursday evening of this week, Dec. 1, and will be illustrated by specimens, experiments and lantern slides. Mr. Smith is a very interesting speaker, and it is hoped that the young men of the city will avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing him. The admission will be free.

The Hope Team Defeated.

Kilbride Demands Balm.

Cornelius Guinee, hackman, has been sued for $5,000 damages by Dennis Kilbride, also hackman. Guinee gave Kilbride a terrible beating some time ago, and laid him up for several days. Guinee was convicted and fined in the city court.

WHAT KIND OF WORK IS THIS?

Faulty Methods of the Present City Clerk—Intimation that He Deceived the Temperance People So that They Are Shut Out of Their Official Ballots.

The city clerk, in his correspondence to a New York paper this morning, gleefully says:

"Next Tuesday the Plainfield city election will be held. It was discovered by the city clerk that the petitions filed by the Prohibitionists were not in conformity with the New Jersey ballot law, and the petitions were returned. No further petitions can be presented. The carelessness of the no-license people has absolutely shut them out from breaking up the license element of the present council, as they have been boasting that they would. The Democratic candidate for council in the First ward, Charles J. Noel, was also informed to-day that his name could not be printed on the ballots on account of a defective certificate."

This is the city clerk's side of the case. What the temperance people think about the matter is shown in the following letter:

THE PETITION LAW A FREE-SUFFRAGE KILLER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The petition law robs thousands of voters in our State from voting their principles; from the fact that there is not one voter in one hundred knows how a petition should be made out according to law, especially in the rural districts and many wards of our cities. In our city the temperance people desired a temperance or prohibition ticket put in the field for our city election, and one was expected. There was not a lawyer in our league, but the members were told that they must make their nominations and get 5 per cent. of the number of voters that voted in each ward at the last election to sign the petition to make the nominations a legal ticket. The president of the league prepared the blanks. The nominations were made, and the petitions filled in each ward. I took one for the Third ward and had no difficulty in getting it filled, and took it to the city clerk to see if it was satisfactory. He said it would be necessary to have the street and number of each signer's residence in each ward. I asked him if we had a right to use any candidate's name without his consent. He said not. I immediately wrote to Mr. Opdyke, who was away, and got his consent; the balance were at home, and did not object. The name of street and number to each petitioner was obtained, and I presented the same to the clerk to see if the petition was satisfactory. He said he "did not see why it was not". I then returned the petition to the chairman, so that the other wards' petitions might be made out in the same way. They were all filled accordingly. Mr. Lunger, vice-president of the league, took all the petitions to the clerk on Saturday, the 26th inst. He raised no objections to the petitions. Mr. Lunger made inquiry as to what he would charge for printing extra tickets, etc., but it was not decided at that time, as I understand it; but he said he should commence printing tickets Tuesday and print the Republican first, Democratic second, and Prohibition third; so I understood Mr. Lunger. Mr. Lunger was further look after the ticket matter. We heard nothing more about the matter until Monday about noon, when I received a note from the clerk requesting me to call at his office that day, as there was some irregularity about the tickets. I called near 2 o'clock, but did not find him in. I left word that the notice should have been sent to Mr. Lunger, as I had no jurisdiction in the matter. I went to Mr. Lunger's house, but did not find him; but finally found him at Mr. French's mill about 4 o'clock, when we immediately went to the clerk's office to see what was the trouble. The clerk told him that each of the petitions would have to have the affidavits of five of the petitioners attached, of each ward, and a certificate of every city candidate of their acceptance attached to all the ward tickets, and all the ward candidates their certificates to their several wards. This was an unexpected demand; and Mr. Lunger inquired how much time we could have to correct the applications, and he said he closed his office at 6:30 o'clock, and the time would be up. As this was only for correcting the mistake, he, Lunger, asked if we could have until the next noon, as our tickets were the last to be printed; but this was refused. Then we asked if we could not have until midnight. This was refused, and we were left to about 2½ hours. We called on a lawyer to see if we could not get helped out; but as our candidates and petitioners were scattered all over the city, and some in New York, he thought we could not accomplish the thing intended, and we gave it up. I charge no intentional wrong on anyone; but let everyone judge for himself. If I have made any mistakes in my statements, I wish to be corrected. I thought the public would desire an explanation why there was no temperance ticket put in the field. ETHAN LANPHEAR.

P. S. The petitions were in on time; we only asked for a chance for correction. E. L.

Brimful of confidence in it—the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It's a faith that means business, too—it's backed up by money. This is what they offer: $500 reward for a case of Catarrh which they cannot cure. They mean it. They're willing to take the risk—they know their medicine. By its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties, it produces perfect and permanent cures of the worst cases of chronic Catarrh in the Head. It's doing it every day, where everything else has failed. No matter how bad your case, or of how long standing, you can be cured. You're sure of that—or of $500. You can't have both, but you'll have one or the other.

Here are some of the symptoms of Catarrh: Headache, obstruction of nose, discharges falling into throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody, putrid, and offensive; eyes weak, ringing in ears, deafness; offensive breath; smell and taste impaired, and general debility. Only a few of these likely to be present at once.

WHEN WILL OURS BE BUILT?

President Murray of the Y. M. C. A. Tells How the Japanese Set Plainfield an Example in the Matter of Erecting a Gymnasium Building.

The following interesting account of "Japanese Association Work" is from the pen of Wm. D. Murray, and appeared in a recent issue of the Young Men's Era:

Japan with an area of less than 150,000 square miles, only 12 per cent. of which is cultivated, has a population of over forty million, five million of whom live in thirty-two cities of thirty thousand or more population. The sexes are about even. Here, then, is a vast multitude of young men in a comparatively small space, offering an ideal field for the legitimate work of the Young Men's Christian association. My visit to this interesting people has convinced me that these young men are not very different from ourselves, but have the same needs and the same temptations as we, only made more intense by their environment. Many of them have the same ambitions as we, but with them tremendous obstacles have been interposed. If, as we have heard so many times, "the need is the call", Japan's young men cry aloud for help today.

In America we give as one reason for the existence of the association the well-known fact that young men do not go to church; that reason has ten-fold force here, and grand as is the opportunity of the Young Men's Christian association for opening to the young men of Christian America doorways to the church, it is grander far in heathen Japan. These men are approachable, too. Many can be reached through their desire to study English, the coming world language; many, I think, will be made Christians in Christian boarding houses, havens of refuge in a sea of vice. And so the need of the work and the possibility of successfully prosecuting it call upon us, in language not to be misunderstood, to do our part.

As everybody knows the International committee has had a secretary in this field for some years, and it is about this work as well as about the native work that I wish to write. Of course, a summer visit to a Young Men's Christian association gives quite a different idea from one made in the working season; and, so, while I have seen little of the work here, I write, nevertheless, in the hope that what I say may cause substantial interest on the part of some in the young men of Japan.

Associations existed in Japan before the International Committee sent its agent here. Two of these old associations I have had the pleasure of visiting. One was at Uagoya, an inland city, on the Tokaido railway, said to be the headquarters of Buddhism and prostitution. Stepping out of the Japanese hotel, in which we had passed a hot uncomfortable night, we were whirled along the willow-shaded main street, to a modest one-story Japanese house. There in three small rooms we found the Uagoyo Young Men's Christian association. At the doorway we took off our shoes, as is customary, and as I did so I could not but think of Ex. III, 5, "Put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground." Seated at the low table in the front room were a number of young men reading the files of papers. In the back room was a small library, and between the two was a sort of general room. One of the members, who is the librarian, has given much time to this association and it is now successful and self-supporting.

A few days later I visited the association at Osaka, a city of half a million people. Here is the first association building erected in Japan. Organized in 1882, they started a building canvass in 1885. Helped by associations and individuals in England, Australia and America, and by missionaries and native churches, they raised about $4,300. Their corner-stone was laid August 15, 1886, and on November 3, 1886, a day of joy to all loyal Japanese, the Emperor's birthday, they dedicated their building. This building, which has excited an influence for good, not only in Osaka but in other cities also, is not like our association homes. It is really a great hall, seating from 1,300 to 1,500 people. Built of brick, trimmed with stone, with its close fitting iron shutters, it lacks that external beauty which we think so necessary. A little to one side of the hall stands the reading room and janitor's quarters in a seprate building. The association has two good officers, Mr. Miyagowo, one of the Kuma moto band, its president, and Mr. Nakagawa, a government employe, its secretary. With the latter I spent a pleasant evening listening to the story of their work. They have 160 members whose dues are ten sen (seven cents) a month. They recently gave some lectures on the abolition of licensed prostitutes; they hold occasional prayer meetings, and jail meetings. Not long ago they received a letter from the mayor of the city thanking them for sending books and papers to the city prison. They are self-supporting and one of the missionaries told me that this association had done everything in promoting among the churches that harmony and unity of action which was so necessary in the midst of a foe strong and aggressive.

Thus far, about the work outside of Tokyo, to which city the efforts of the International Committee have been mostly confined. A few days ago Mr. Miller and I got into jinrikishas and inspected the plant of the Tokyo association. Rushing along Musaki Cho we were landed at the house, a little back from the street, where the association has opened a Christian boarding house. Started in January of this year, it has always been full. Here the men are under Christian influence, helpful talks are given, evening prayers are conducted, and the whole atmosphere is made to help towards a higher life. It has the honor of being the first Christian boarding house in Japan. But of this phase of the work I shall have more to say before I close. The heat of summer had practically closed the work of the association, but we visited the rooms. The building now occupied has a few modest rooms, upstairs and down, library, reading room and class rooms. Around the walls hang a number of strips of wood each bearing the name of a member. This is the Japanese membership roll and shows nearly a hundred. The spot of most interest, perhaps, was the newly acquired lot on Mita Shico, where the permanent building of the city association is to stand. The recent great fire burned diagonally across this lot, sweeping away all the buildings on the opposite side of the street. The authorities now propose to carry out the intended widening of this street, and the association will then have a prominent location in the heart of the city on a broad thoroughfare. The lot was staked out when I saw it, and I called on Mr. Suzaki, chairman of the building committee, who told me the contract had been signed, the first payment made, and work would begin in September. Later I saw the plans, which are the result of much study and thought on the part of Mr. Swift. Besides adapting the building to association purposes they have the additional troublesome problem of how to meet earthquakes and fires. These two things make the building long and flat, surrounded on three sides by an outer brick wall. It is necessary also that heavy walls shall run through it in both directions, cutting it up more than would be deemed right with us. It is to be built of brick, with two stories and a cellar. Part of this cellar may be used as an experimental gymnasium. On the first floor, a few steps above the street, will be the working rooms of the association, the class rooms, committee rooms, etc., being on the second floor. In the rear, level with the street, is the hall, which will seat ten thousand people. The necessary iron shutters which require the windows to be placed at regular intervals prevent the beautifying of the exterior. When finished it will be a building of which the members will be justly proud.

I had the pleasure, too, of meeting Mr. Nala, the first Japanese to enter the secretaryship. He seemed to me to possess the traits of a successful secretary, and after an hour's conversation with him I had no doubt of his singleness of purpose. He is a man of deep spirituality and great love for his fellows.

Others will tell about the interesting college work, and the work among the soldiers and on the railroad. Lack of time and space compel me to forego also the pleasure of telling about the results of association work. It is pleasant, however, to know that the heathen are imitating us, by organizing Young Men's Buddhist associations, and that our work is approved by the missionaries. In the report of the American board for this year I read: "We desire here to express our appreciation of the co-operation of the International Committee of Young Men's Christian associations. The scope of the work of this committee is widening and its value becomes more evident every year."

And now, as I close may I ask what are you, young men of America, going to do for your brothers in Japan? The work there does not now need more men. Mr. Swift has won the friendship and the confidence of the Japanese, he thoroughly understands the difficult problem he has before him, and he is competent to deal with it. Mr. Miller, his assistant, is rapidly learning the ways of the people and their language, and is entering upon the work with zeal and energy. It is thought that as needed secretaries will arise from the Japanese young men. Their need is not men; their need is money. The people are poor, the Christians are poorer. A pastor's salary is from $7 to $12 a month; professional men earn $25 a month; a jinaikisha man gets from $4 to $6 a month. They need what we have and they have not—money; money for educational purposes, money for church purposes, money for the running expenses of their association.

There is one other object that especially needs money; I refer to the Christian boarding house of which I have spoken. Ten thousand young men leave their country homes every year and come to Tokyo to school and college. For many of them this is the first absence from home. In the great city they must live in boarding houses where everything works not only against studious habits, but against purity and righteousness. Most of the servants in these houses are women of bad character; runners from the houses of ill fame solicit their customers here; the characters of thousands of young men must be destroyed in these places. Into this moral swamp the association was the first to go. Its modest little house was the first Christian boarding house in Japan; two more are now open, but what are they among so many? One thousand five hundred dollars will build such a building as the association in Tokyo now needs for this phase of the work, and I confess I do not know of a single investment which promises such rich returns as this. As we look upon the young men of Japan, how many Christians will say "Such as I have give I thee", and then give it?

Shiloh's Cough Cure.

This is beyond question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold; a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price, 50c. and $1. If your lungs are sore, chest, or back lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by A. D. Mallinson, 65 North Avenue, opposite railroad station. 5-16-y

THE PRICE OF COAL.

President McLeod Says He Could n't Increase It If He Wanted To.

The Congress sub-committee which is investigating the Reading combine met in the chamber of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at 11 o'clock at Philadelphia yesterday morning.

President McLeod of the Reading railroad, who was the first witness, promised to furnish the sub-committee with water rates on anthracite coal to New England points that are reached by the Poughkeepsie Bridge route, so that the respective water and rail rates may be compared. He was asked if the monthly tide-water meetings influenced prices. He replied that the demand for coal made the prices. Mr. Beach of New York, counsel of the committee, then asked:

"Is it a part of your scheme to make any further advance in the price of coal?"

"We regulate our business according to the conditions we find from month to month"—said the witness.—"We certainly have no intention of raising the price of coal for December."

"How about January?"

"I could n't raise prices in January if I wanted to."

Mr. McLeod disclaimed any co-operation toward the election of Reading electors in the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad, and said that the election had no connection with the Reading leases. Mr. McLeod further said that if there were no meeting to regulate the output of coal and every producer went his own way the smaller ones would be crowded to the wall and the more powerful would combine and raise the price of coal. Many producers who were on the verge of bankruptcy were saved by the Reading management, Mr. McLeod continued, and should the output of coal be uncontrollable labor would suffer. The wages of miners on the Reading system are on a sliding scale—when prices advance so do their wages.

Mr. McLeod said that the demand for coal and not the price regulates the output. It is the aim of the company to put the coal on the market at a reasonable profit. The coal business had been conducted at a loss. Prices are no higher than they have been, and no advances have been made to operators. He further said that the Reading Coal and Iron company had never paid a dividend, and that the Reading to-day is not getting a reasonable profit on the output of coal. "We want a reasonable price"—said he—"but we do not propose to go so far as in any way to injure our trade."

The Court Reserves Its Decision in the Bond Will Case.

The Bond will case came up again in the Orphans' court at Newark yesterday. As has been published in these columns, Mrs. Annie E. Bond willed the bulk of her property to the Home for Aged Women. The will is contested by her husband; her brother, J. Lott Marshall, of Park avenue, and her nephew, Harry Marshall, of East Front street, on the grounds that she was devoid of testamentary capacity at the time the will was signed.

At the last hearing of the case, two weeks ago, the contestants concluded their case. Yesterday the testimony for the defence was taken.

Dr. William J. Andrews testified that he had attended the deceased for fifteen years, and never considered her incapacitated for business. As to her alleged weakness for kissing and hugging strangers, he said he would concede that evidence of hysteria, not of insanity. He visited her daily from the middle of January to her death. She was suffering from incipient Bright's disease.

Miss Hattie H. Allen, a stenographer, testified again to having drawn the two wills for Mrs. Bond. She never considered her "right". She explained that Mrs. Bond told her over and over again about her husband's death.

De Forest P. Lozier, a neighbor of the deceased for about thirteen years, said that he never suspected her of insanity. She had consulted him about her property and had shown ordinary shrewdness. She told him of the will she had made, and said she made it as she had because her relatives were well enough off.

Henry Cook and John Wegie, neighbors, testified that they saw no evidence of insanity in Mrs. Bond's conduct.

Thomas J. Gray, a real estate dealer who had business dealings with Mrs. Bond, considered her of a sound mind, but could not swear that she was possessed of testamentary capacity at the time of making the will.

Mrs. Fisher, a cousin of Mrs. Bond, who lived with the latter a long time, was positive in her statement that Mrs. Bond was in good mental condition on the day of making the will. The testatrix told the witness that her folks had enough and that she had left them nothing. The witness admitted that Mrs. Bond had a habit of repeating things over and over again. She heard the testatrix say on one occasion that the money came from her first husband's people, the Dunns, and ought to go back to them.

The lawyers, one of whom was Craig A. Marsh, of Plainfield, then began the summing up.

The judge reserved his decision for one week.

Counselor Reed's Successful Suit Against a Powerful Corporation.

The Philadelphia and Reading railroad company to-day paid to lawyer Charles A. Reed, by check, $8,453.73, the full amount of damages and costs recovered by him for Miss Abbie Van Doren of Trenton for an injury received by her June 9, 1889. On that day Miss VanDoren was walking along the street in Bound Brook and was run over by a horse which had been frightened by steam escaping from a locomotive standing on the railroad track near the street crossing. Mr. Reed brought suit for her in the New Jersey Supreme court, but the case was moved to the United States Circuit court. It was tried last March, and resulted in a verdict for the girl of $7,975. The company appealed, but the verdict was sustained by a recent decision of the court. The horse stepped on Miss VanDoren's ankle and injured the nerve of the leg in such a way as to result in a permanent shortening of the limb.

Another Plainfield Will Contest.

Emma Bond, wife of Theophilus Bond of this city, and cousin of Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph and of Mrs. Henry R. Halloway, is one of the contestants of the will of the late Daniel Price in Newark. She was left a small share of 880 acres of pine land in Michigan and $1,000 in cash, out of a fortune of $150,000. The bulk was bequeathed to religious and charitable institutions. Mrs. Bond and the other grandchildren who are heirs demand more.

ABOUT PLAYWRITING.

The Peculiar Methods Pursued by Jerome K. Jerome.

The Hardest But Most Interesting Part of the Dramatist's Work—Wherein the Humorist Differs from Other Makers of Plays.

You ask me: "How I write a play?" and I know that my answer is to be published and widely circulated, and, in all probability, commented upon (severely) in the press. Under these circumstances, writes Jerome K. Jerome to the editor of the Pall Mall Budget, I am in doubt whether my better policy is to be "smart" or truthful. The latter course comes more natural to me, however, and I therefore adopt it. In the beginning an idea occurs to me that seems to me to promise drama. It may come to me out of a book, or from a scrap of overheard conversation, or from an after-dinner anecdote, or a human history near to me. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the idea fades from my memory, and I spend days trying to recall it, but cannot. It is always the best ideals that escape. The other idea (the very weakest of the hundred) remains to me, and roots itself securely in my thoughts and grows there in some mysterious way of its own accord; so that I find myself unconsciously pondering upon it and arguing with myself about it. Then, if I have nothing else better to occupy myself with at the time, I decide to set seriously to work and make a play out of it; and I seek among the people I have met or dreamt of for characters that will carry out the drama I now have pretty clearly sketched out in my mind. This is the wrong way to write a play, I know. I ought to conceive the characters first, and evolve the drama out of them. All the great dramatists work according to this method. I appear to be the only one who does not. With the characters and the skeleton of the story in my hands, I proceed to "construct," or, in other words, to arrange my story in the acts and scenes through which it can best be told. This I find both the hardest and the most interesting part of the work. One casts, recast, and casts again. One day your path seems to lie plain and clear before you to the end. By the next, impassable rocks have arisen across your path, and you can see no way out. You follow one road half the distance, then, finding it winds too much, go back and start upon another. With practice, maybe, a man can judge quickly his best course, just as an experienced trapper will scent by instinct his route through a new country; but a young author will sometimes sketch his play out in at least a dozen different forms before he feels that he has achieved the best of which he is capable. The structure decided upon, and the characters clear before your eyes, the writing of the dialogue is tolerably simple. All that you have to remember is that every word must be to the point; that every sentence must be interesting in itself, and at the same time fit and proper to the character into whose mouth it is put; that every speech must be apposite to the one that has gone before it and preparatory to the one to follow; that your conversation must be witty, crisp, and humorous (or your public will go to sleep over it); philosophical and deep (or your earnest student will rise up in wrath against it); natural, and also brilliant (or your critic will have none of it).

I would that those writers who spend so large a proportion of their three-score years and ten upon this earth in sneering at the drama and all connected therewith could be made now and again to sit down and write a play. If it did no other good it would at all events teach them to check their verbosity. When all is done it remains to persuade a manager (against his better judgment) to accept the play, and to add ten years to your life by a month's rehearsals. Then, if your work gratifies the gallery boy who has paid for his seat, and likewise satisfied the yearnings of the superior person who has come in with an order; if it pleases the middle-class party in the pit and the "smart" contingent in the stalls; fascinates the new school of playgoers and does not offend the old, you may hope to escape from a hooting; and the critic may earn a five-pound note by picking out and parading every fault the piece contains.

The Growth of Methodism.

The phenomenal growth of the Methodist church must be very gratifying to the members of that aggressive denomination. A recent report of the Church Extension society shows that last year there were 25,861 Methodist organizations in the United States, 22,844 church edifices, with a seating capacity of 6,302,708 for the accommodation of a membership of 2,240,334. In 26 years the society has disbursed $4,500,000, giving aid to 8,310 churches. Churches are now being built at the rate of three per day.

LORD MAYOR KNILL.

His Election the Cause of Great Excitement in London.

Alderman Stuart Knill, the new lord mayor elect of London, belongs to a branch of the old Catholic family of the Knills, for centuries rooted in Herefordshire. His father was the architect of his own fortunes, and in time became a wealthy wharfinger. His distinguished son was born in 1820, was educated at Blackheath school and the University of Bonn. He joined his father in his business of wharfinger, which is now his own, but in the description of his style he is named as "citizen and goldsmith." He is in the commission of peace for the city of London, and is a magistrate of Kent. He is a Roman conservative.

His election created a no-popery storm, in consequence of his refusal to promise that he will be present at the services at city churches and at St. Paul's cathedral, which it is customary for the lord mayor to attend.

It has been felt in unprejudiced circles that the newly elect has behaved in a straightforward and manly manner, and that, while preserving to himself his freedom of action in the matter of religious observance he will also observe the traditional liberties of the great city over which he will hold civic sway.

Dr. Parker, of the city temple, honors Alderman Knill for the part he has played, and adds: "I would rather trust a sincere Roman Catholic than I would trust a trimming and time-serving professor of Protestantism."

But the chief magistrate will have to be present at an Anglican place of worship in an official capacity, and this Archbishop Vaughan, who is an ultra-Romanist, concedes in these words, replying to a question in that direction: "There may be cases in which a Catholic might be present at a service in a non-Catholic place of worship in an official capacity" * * * but he "is in no case allowed to enter into communion with another religion * * * or even to appear to enter into such communion."

MEDAL FOR KLOEHR.

Chicago Bankers Remember the Brave Coffeyville Liveryman.

The bravery displayed by the liveryman in Coffeyville, Kan., who shot three of the Dalton gang of robbers a few weeks ago, is to receive a handsome recognition. The First national bank, aided by contributions from nearly all the banks in Chicago, has ordered an elegant badge, which is to be presented to the Kansas sharpshooter.

A semi-circular plate of gold bears the name of "John Joseph Kloehr." Below this is a gold ribbon on which is engraved: "The Emergency Arose. The Man Appeared." Suspended from this by three gold links at each end is the badge proper, a gold circle two and one fourth inches in diameter, with a narrow raised band on the outer edge. Next within this is an open scroll work, then another raised band of bright gold, and within this a laurel wreath. A third raised band of bright gold incloses an eight-pointed bright gold star, in the center of which is a large diamond, the star being three-quarters of an inch in diameter.

The entire badge is four inches in length and cost $350. On the reverse is the inscription: "Presented by friends in Chicago, who admire nerve and courage when displayed in defense of social order."

In Hock on the Ice.

Sixteen years ago a senator of the Italian parliament, while coming down an Alpine glacier at the height of 14,000 feet, dropped his coat in a crevasse. He was informed by the guides, knowing the annual rate of glacial movement, that it would probably come out from the mouth of the glacier in about seventeen years. Last August a party of tourists saw a coat in the moraine, and, on examination, it is claimed to have been the senator's

Higgs—are you following the horses now?

Briggs—Oh, yes.

Higgs—Find it pays you any better than it did before?

Briggs—Much. I'm driving a street car.—Judge.

TWO VISIONS.

Mrs. Cross—If you could see yourself the way I see you, you would be disgusted, too.

Chris. Cross—Ifsh you could shee your*self* th' way I shee you, you would be 'stonished, too!—Puck.

Discouraged Hospitality.

Drummer—May I offer you a little genuine old Bourbon?

Respectable Party—No, sir, you may not. Whisky is a curse.

Drummer (apologetically)—I admit whisky—

Respectable Party—I've no doubt you admit. The trouble of it is you admit too much whisky.—Texas Siftings.

From the German.

Hotelkeeper (to a friend)—What do you think? A fellow came here one day last week and ordered a bottle of wine. After he had taken a glass of it he said I manufactured it myself.

Friend—How ridiculous! Such a sour taste as your wine has got can't be produced by artificial means.
